Professor Syme says—"The effects of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa in obstinate cases of disease are as astonishing as perplexing."

Dr. Lankaster, the eminent coroner, says—"Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is calculated to entirely supersede iron, mercury, sarsaparilla, quinine, and cod liver oil."

Sir Philip Crampton says—"I believe there is no condition of the system that may not be benefited by Dr. Hall's Potassa."

Sir T. Lawrence says—"I have found Dr. Hall's Chlorate an excellent remedy in Skin Diseases. I presume it is by oxydization."

Sir T. Watson says—"I know that it is an invaluable remedy."

Sir Edward Brough, 9, Fitzwilliam-square, Dublin, certifies Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa has been of the greatest benefit to a member of his family.

The Earl of Clarendon certifies that Dr. Hall's Chlorate cured a case of indigestion of 15 years' duration.

Dr. HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA may be procured by order through any Chemist. Ask for "Dr. HALL'S Chlorate," and do not be imposed on with the common article. It is sold in Bolton by Priestley, Chemist, 12, Deansgate; or it may be had direct from Dr. Hall's successor, Dr. JOHN SUTTON, M.D., 15, Regent square, London, W.C., who undertakes the positive cure of all chronic diseases before payment.

Dr. HALL'S Chlorate is sold in MANCHESTER by JEWELL, Market-street; in Liverpool by PRIESTLEY, Lord-street.

N.B.—Dr. Sutton will shortly repeat his Lecture on this subject.—The Lecture sent for two stamps.

EACH Paper contains every item of intelligence, from Mail to Mail, specially affecting the country or colony for which it is published, with an exhaustive summary of home and continental politics, science, art, and social news, and a retrospect of commercial transactions in Great Britain and on the Continent.

Manufacturers and Merchants may command the greatest markets of the world for their products through the mediums of publicity afforded by the EUROPEAN MAIL. A demand may be created where none exists at present, or an existing demand may be sustained and increased against the most energetic competition.

The EUROPEAN MAIL gives such perfect mercantile information that it is the highest commercial authority in the vast and prosperous territories through which it circulates. It is therefore an imperative necessity to the merchant who orders goods in bulk, and to the wholesale and retail distributor; it is also the most complete newspaper despatched from England, and is eagerly sought by all classes; it thus, unlike merely commercial newspapers, reaches and leaves the great communities who are the actual consumers of all products, and who must be acted upon by advertisement to require a special article before the merchant will venture to order a consignment.

GLENFIELD STARCH

is the only kind used in Her Majesty's Laundry.

THOSE LADIES who have not yet used the GLENFIELD STARCH, are respectfully solicited to give it a trial, and carefully follow out the directions printed on every package. It is rather more difficult to make than other Starches, but when this is overcome, they will say, like the Queen's Laundress, that it is the finest Starch they ever used.

To the W. Masters and Secretaries of all Lodges under the Grand Lodges of Great Britain and Ireland.

We have forwarded two copies of this week's "FREEMASON" to every Lodge at home and abroad under the British and Irish Grand Lodges, and request the fraternal co-operation of the Masters and other Officers in making our Journal known to the brethren.

Inasmuch as we have received several letters from subscribers in the colonies who state that they heard of the paper by accident, we therefore take this opportunity of bringing it under the special notice of every Lodge in the British Dominions.

FOREIGN NOTES BY THE EDITOR.

General Mellinet, Grand Master of the Grand Orient of France, has resigned his post as Commander of the National Guard of Paris, and has been succeeded by General d'Antemarre d'Ervillé. Since his election as successor to Marshal Magnan, the General has greatly increased the prestige of the Grand Orient by maintaining order in the ateliers, and repressing the thoughtless attempts of a factious minority to override the landmarks of the Craft. We do not agree with his American policy, but on the whole his rule has been wise and judicious.

The General Regulations of the Rite Ecossais in France, are now being revised by a Commission who recommend in their report that the words, "Adoration of the Great Architect of the Universe," be expunged from the first article of the rules relating to the objects of Freemasonry, and that a clause be inserted to the effect that Freemasonry respects all beliefs relating to the Infinite Power designated under the name of T.G.A.O.T.U. They are careful, however, to retain the exploded lie about the Scotch Constitutions of Frederick the Great, who never went beyond the grade of a Master Mason, much less invented the degrees which are propounded in his name.

If the so-called Scottish Rite is to be deprived of its Christian character, it loses its raison d'être, and the sooner it collapses the better. The lodge "George Washington" at Palermo, another child of the Scottish Rite, publishes its rules, from which the cardinal doctrines of belief in a God and in the immortality of the soul have been studiously eliminated.

An interesting ceremonial took place recently in the lodge "Démophiles," at Tours, when eleven young lewises or lowtons, as the French call them, were Masonically adopted by the lodge, which also celebrated on the same day the fiftieth year of the Masonic career of Bro. Bazouge, Past Master and founder of the lodge, and Past Most Wise of the Chapter. Deputations from other lodges were present, and a large number of ladies likewise participated in the proceedings. The altar was covered with fruit and flowers, and we are glad to note that the Master, Bro. Meneu, commenced the ceremony by invoking the blessing of T.G.A.O.T.U. on the work of the assembly, and then delivered an admirable discourse to his audience.

A Masonic Congress was held at Rennes on the 25th July, the proceedings of which have only transpired within the last week. It was held under the auspices of the Lodge of Perfect Union, and nine other lodges, including "Mars and the Arts" of Nantes, "Rose of Perfect Silence" of Mons, "Star of two Worlds" of St. Nazaire, "Friends of Sully" of Brest, and the Lodge "La Cesarée" No. 590 of Jersey. Bro. Guillot, Venerable of "la Parfaite Union," presided, and the visiting brethren were received under the "Arch of steel." We note that our distinguished Bro. James Gallieune, P.D.P. Grand Master for Guernsey, headed the English deputation, and a better representative of our Craft could not be found, as he combines the desiderata of being a thorough gentleman and an accomplished Mason. The veteran Bro. Albert Schmitt, P.G. Secretary of Jersey, and a pillar of the Order in the Channel Islands, expressed the thanks of the English visitors for the kind reception accorded them. The discussion was well sustained by Bros. Guepin, Ionast, Gousault, Villiers, and Le Merre, and among other subjects broached reference was made to the forthcoming Œcumenical Council at Rome, and to the refusal of General Mellinet to permit the assembly of a Masonic Council in opposition, wherein we think the worthy General was right. Bro. Guepin passed in review the various systems of St. Simon, Fourier, and the Positivists. Bro. Jonast was presented with a medal of honor for his Masonic labours, and was further saluted with a "triple battery" of acclamations. At the banquet which followed, Bro. Gallieune humorously objected to the term "foreign brethren" used in the programme of toasts being applied to himself or the English brethren who accompanied him, and hoped his Breton freres would find another word in the French language which, having the same meaning, would express it in a better manner. The English brethren, we are informed, subsequently chanted their national hymn, "God save the King!" if this be correct our French friends' hospitality must have been potent, to make our countrymen forget the sex of their monarch. The entire meeting, however, was one of the most fraternal and joyous description, and we are indebted to our Jersey and Guernsey brethren for so nobly maintaining the entente cordiale which prevails between the French and English Freemasons.

It is announced that a general congress of the Craft will be shortly held at Berlin, at which 400 deputations from lodges will be present. Cui boni?

Another congress is to be held under the wing of the Lodge "Anglaise," at Bourdeaux, at the end of next month.

It may interest some of our readers to see a list of some of the principal lodges in Belgium, where our brave Volunteers are now being fêted. Antwerp, "La Persévérance et les Eleves de Themis"; Brussels, "Les Vrais Amis de l'Union et du Progrès réunis," and "Les Amis Philanthropes"; Ghent, "Le Septentrion et la Liberté"; Louvain, "La Constance"; Alost "Le Réveil"; Charleroi, "L'Avenir et l'Industrie" Mons, "La Parfaite Union"; Huy, "La Parfaite Intelligence"; Verviers, "Les Philadelphes"; Liege, "La Parfaite Intelligence et l'Etoile réumes"; Namur, "La Bonne Amitié"; Spa, "L'Avenir." New lodges will shortly be formed at Hasselt, Arbon, Malines, Ostend, Bruges, and Tournay.

BELGIUM.

A great Masonic banquet has just taken place at Liege, where the Tir International is now being held. Nearly 600 brethren attended, including representatives from the Grand Orient of France, the Grand Lodges of England, Scotland, Ireland, the Netherlands, Italy, and various bodies in Germany. Great enthusiasm prevailed, and the proceedings were entirely successful.

BRITISH KAFFRARIA.

KING WILLIAM'S TOWN.—The annual meeting of the British Kaffrarian Lodge, No 853, F.C. was held on St. John's day, when the following brethren were installed as officers for the ensuing year, viz.: Bro. Charles J. Egan, P.M., as Worshipful Master in the presence of Past Masters G. P. Perks, F. J. Lonsdale, and E. B. Chalmers, Bros. Jas. McIntyre, S.W.; George R. Street, J.W.; Thos. R. M. Cole, Sec.; Chas. Musgrove, S.D.; Thos Tidmarsh, J.D.; Jas. Wellbeloved, I.G.; W. H. Egan and J. Drayton, Stewards. A festival was afterwards held, and the brethren separated in peace and harmony,

GRAND IMPERIAL COUNCIL OF THE ORDER OF ROME & CONSTANTINE.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have great pleasure in sending you, by direction of Lord Kenlis, the accompanying extract from the minutes of the Executive Committee, and remain,

Yours fraternally,
R. WENTWORTH LITTLE,
Grand Recorder.

"At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Grand Council, held on the 14th September, the Grand Recorder informed the members that he had received from Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of England, a MS. ritual of the ceremonial observed at the installation of a Knight Grand Cross of the Order during the Grand Mastership of his late Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex, and which manuscript had been discovered by the Grand Secretary amongst certain papers in the archives of Grand Lodge.

"It was thereupon unanimously resolved—
"That the cordial thanks of this Committee, as the representatives of the Red Cross Order, are eminently due, and are hereby tendered, to the V.W. Brother John Hervey, Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of England, for the recovery of this important document, and for the truly Masonic spirit which actuated the V.W. Brother in so promptly restoring it to the custody of the Order to which it legally appertains."

INELIGIBILITY OF BASTARDS AND THE MAIMED AS FREEMASONS.

By CIPES.

We will now take up "Leo's" remarks, and repeat, simply, that we feel sorry that he, so good and promising a Freemason, should have taken wrong ideas, and in answering him we mean no offence.

"Leo" expresses himself very strongly, making up in big words for the want of facts and arguments. The question, however, is one of fact. Are maimed, mutilated, or deformed persons admissible as Freemasons, or are they not? Are bastards admissible, or are they not? We must look to the Ancient Laws and Landmarks of our Order; we need not care much what "Leo," or any other person, may think upon the subject. We have not to discuss the propriety of these laws and landmarks; we have only to consider what they actually are. Sentiment and feeling must be thrown out of account; we have only to inquire what is the state of the case.

"Leo" gives us no evidence that deformed, maimed, or mutilated persons can be received into the Order, or that bastards can be received, however excellent and honourable in character. He has nothing to say on either of these points, except to suggest considerations, which might be worthy of some attention if the laws of Freemasonry were now for the first time to be considered, or if there were a proposal and possibility of a revision of these laws. But the landmarks of Freemasonry are unchangeable, and "Leo" ought to know this. The whole system would be subverted, if one of these landmarks were changed.

It astonishes our brother "Leo" that a man bereft of an arm should be incapable of being received as a Freemason, "even although he be of good moral character," and he exclaims, "Just as if Freemasonry were made up of arms and legs!" It is a very pretty exclamation, but nothing at all to the purpose. Every Freemason ought to know that the landmarks of the order requires perfection, physical and moral, in so far as perfection is attainable, and that anything plainly contrary to it is opposed to the very principles on which the Order is founded, and to its symbolical teachings. It is not that we wish to deal hardly with men who, in the providence of God, have been subjected to great calamities, or have been subject to infirmities from which mankind are generally free, but we wish to maintain the ancient laws of our ancient and honourable fraternity, and those symbols which signify its great design, as well as its connection with the Jewish law, from which its laws are derived. One of the glories of Freemasonry is its origin, and anything which obscures its connection with the old Jewish law tends to deprive it of this, and to throw a cloud of uncertainty over its whole early history.

With regard to the ineligibility of bastards as Freemasons, we repeat our statement, that they have been held ineligible from the very earliest periods, and the Landmarks and the General Regulations from the year 926 exclude them. "Leo" says also that he is afraid that we do not well know what the real Landmarks of "Freemasonry or Speculative Masonry" are. And he goes on—"I may, therefore, be allowed to state that these are Brotherly Love, Relief, and Truth." We know not whence "Leo" has derived his authority for this astounding assertion. We have the Landmarks of the Order before us, and we do not find in them the words, "Brotherly Love, Relief, and Truth," nor any of these expressions. They are, indeed, the chief elements or principles of the Masonic Institution, but, as Landmarks of the Order, we defy "Leo" to point out where they are to be found. The Landmarks are all in accordance with them, but they are not set forth as Landmarks. "Leo," with great liberality, takes the bastard to his embrace; but we may ask him, if we would be prepared to give equal rights in all things to bastards and legitimate children—if he would for example, give up his inheritance to a bastard? He quotes, as of supreme authority, and as if determining this question, the words of our Saviour—"Whoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them;" and that other "golden sentence,"—"Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself." On this he triumphantly asks—"Is not the bastard, especially if he be a good and true man himself, our neighbour?" To which we answer—Yes; and if there is any good in our power to do him, we own ourselves bound to do it, aye, and even whether he be a good and true man or not. But what is this to the purpose? His position is a different one from that of a man born in lawful wedlock, and with all our feelings of compassion and kindness towards him, we cannot overlook this difference. The words of our Saviour are of as full authority with us as they can be with "Leo;" but we cannot forget, what he seems to have forgotten, that for admission into the Order of Freemasonry it is not requisite that a man should be a Christian. It is necessary, indeed, that he should believe in the existence of God, and in the doctrine of a future state; but Jews are, therefore, freely admitted into the Order, and there could be no objection to the admission of a Mahomedan. Men who are not Christians are members of the Grand Lodges both of England and Scotland. We present this to consideration only as showing the weakness of "Leo's" argument, although we ourselves fully acknowledge the authority of the words he has quoted, and desire to live according to them. But we cannot, even in this qualified sense, agree with him when he says,—"It is an entirely mistaken and spurious view of Freemasonry which would look out any honest bastard—a remnant of old Jewish legislation and selfish pride." We say nothing as to selfish pride, which has been evidently stuck in to give force to the sentence; but when "Leo" condemns Jewish legalism, he shows himself ignorant of the origin and very first principles of Freemasonry, and he seems to forget that the Jewish law was unquestionably the law of that God whom all Freemasons agree to honour.

The laws of ancient Freemasonry must be upheld in their entirety. Why do you uphold the practice of passing a shoe to one another? Why do you swear in a Jew with his hat on? Why do you leave out the name of Christ in the initiation of a Jew? It is surely reasonable that if you conform in so far to the custom of the Jews, from whom we derive Freemasonry, you must conform to the more important laws which formed part of the Jewish system. Moreover, to admit the bastard, is to admit the product of immorality, to which Freemasonry is utterly opposed; and we must remember the rule laid down by that authority which all Freemasons acknowledge, that the sins of the fathers shall be visited upon the children unto the third and fourth generation. The Jewish law, derived from the same authority, also forbade the admission of the bastard to the tenth generation into the temple. Against such facts as these, the sentimentalisms of Leo are vain.

We are not anxious to pluck laurels from the brow of a brother who merits them, but we think it is only fair that when a brother speaks for the whole of Scotland, he should do so on some authority, and that it is somewhat presumptuous in any one to assume to do so without. We also venture to say that Bro. D. M. Lyon is not an office-bearer of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, not having been installed into office since his last nomination. Further, we add, that there are thousands of Freemasons in Scotland who never heard of Bro. D. M. Lyon. The roll of the Grand Lodge of Scotland contained a little more than a year ago, the names of nearly one thousand members, nearly all of whom were present on the last evening when Bro. White Melville sat on the throne as Grand Master Mason of Scotland, and had Bro. D. M. Lyon stood up in the midst of them to speak, which he did not do, we are very sure he would not have been known to more than twenty of those present. So much for his claim to come forward as the representative of the Freemasons of Scotland.

The late Bro. Dr. Oliver has been acknowledged by all Freemasons throughout the world as the greatest authority on the subject of Freemasonry, and in conversation, about six years ago, he said:—"A bastard, even although he may have been initiated, cannot continue to act as a Freemason, nor receive the benefits or enjoy the privileges of the Order," and saying this, he referred to a copy of the landmarks then at his hand. This opinion is also to be found expressed in some of his published works.

"Leo" says "The pretended ancient landmarks," as he (Cipes) reads them, "are, I consider, both a lie and an imposition." What, we ask, is the meaning of these pleasant words? He cannot be so unbrotherly as to bring this charge against us? If he means that the "Landmarks" are of no value or authority among Freemasons, he ought to take some other way of saying so, and he would have a position to maintain, the maintenance of which would not be easy.

"Leo" states and would make the world believe, that Lodges in Scotland, and also the Grand Lodge of Scotland, recognise the regularity of initiation of maimed men as Members of the Order. Nothing of the kind has come up before the Grand Lodge of Scotland; and, in the case which he refers to, the Grand Secretary, simply in answer to a question, replied, that it was a matter for the Lodge to dispose of. The opinion of the Grand Secretary is not a decision of Grand Lodge. As a fact of quite a different opinion prevailing among Scottish Freemasons, in a Lodge (where one evening there was a small attendance), a man was initiated minus the hand, and the very next meeting of the Lodge, when the facts became known to the other members of the Lodge, they were so angry that they seriously contemplated expelling those present who took part in the irregular proceedings, and it was only after they had expressed themselves sorry for what they had done they forgave them. Facts are curious things to dispose of "Leo" will find. And this Lodge is within a cable, too, of "Leo's" residence.

We conclude this matter by saying—The person who desires to be made a Freemason, must be a man, no woman or enunch; free-born, no bastard; neither a slave nor the son of a bondwoman; a believer in God and a future existence; of moral conduct, capable of reading and writing; not blind, deaf, dumb, deformed, or dismembered, but hale and sound in his physical conformation, having his right limbs as a man ought to have.

Obituary.

BRO. WM. ALLATSON.

It is with deep regret that we have to announce the death of Bro. Wm. Allatson, of No. 68, Old Bailey, who departed this life, on the 29th ult., aged 67 years. The deceased brother, in the year 1851 became a joining member of the Lion and Lamb, No. 192, (from the Lodge of Hope), of which lodge he was a "Past Warden," and continued a subscribing member up to the time of his death. Bro. Allatson was much respected by the members of the Lion and Lamb, and more especially by the older members, who have had the pleasure of his acquaintance during the last 18 years.

THE LEVEL AND THE SQUARE.

By BRO. ROB. MORRIS, K.T.

We meet upon the Level and we part upon the Square—What words of precious meaning those words Masonic are!

Come let us contemplate them—they are worthy of our thought—

With the highest and the lowest, and the rarest they are fraught.

We meet upon the Level, though from every station come—

The Monarch from the palace and the poor man from his home;

For the one must leave his diadem outside the Masons' door,

And the other finds his true respect upon the Checkered Floor.

We part upon the square, for the world must have its due;

We mingle with its multitude—a cold unfriendly crew;

But the influence of our gatherings in memory is green,

And we long, upon the Level, to renew the happy scene.

There's a world where all are equal—we are hurrying towards it fast—

We shall meet upon the Level there, when the gates of death are passed;

We shall stand before the Orient, and Master will be there,

To try the blocks we offer by his own unerring Square.

We shall meet upon the Level there, but never thence depart;

There's a Mansion—'tis all ready for each zealous, faithful heart:—

There's a Mansion and a welcome, and a multitude is there,

Who have met upon the Level, and been tried upon the Square.

Let us meet upon the Level, then, while labouring patient here—

Let us meet and let us labour, tho' the labour seem severe:

Already in the western sky the signs bid us prepare,

To gather up our working tools and part upon the Square.

Hands around, ye faithful Masons! form the bright fraternal chain,

We part upon the Square below to meet in Heaven again:—

Oh, what words of precious meaning the words Masonic are—

WE MEET UPON THE LEVEL AND WE PART UPON THE SQUARE.

BREAKFAST.—EPPE'S COCOA.—Grateful and Comforting.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"The singular success which Mr. Eppe attained by his homœopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Eppe has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold by the Trade only, in $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb., and 1 lb. tin-lined packets, labelled JAMES EPPE & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, London.—ADVT.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Mount Lebanon Lodge, No. 73.—This lodge met on Tuesday evening, at Mr. Spencer's, Bridge House Hotel, Southwark, and was opened by Bro. D. Rose, W.M. The lodge was well attended. During the evening there were present Bros. T. J. Sabine, I.P.M.; F. Walters, P.M.; E. Harris, P.M. Treas.; J. Donkin, P.M. Sec.; M. A. Loewenstark, J.W.; F. W. Grace, I.G.; R. Stevens, D.C.; F. H. Ebsworth, S.W.; J. Trickett, C.E.; G. Free, S. Harman, J. Innocent, A. L. Dussek, H. Keeble, J. W. Dudley, and the visitors comprised Bros. Louis Alexander, P.M. (188); Chas. Williams (392 S.C.); J. West, W.M. (548); J. T. Trickett (954); and H. Bartlett (1178). The minutes of the former meeting were confirmed excepting one section of them, and the W.M. then passed Bros. Geo. Williams, Hurry, T. John and D. Barrett to the F.C. degree, and initiated Mr. Isaac J. H. Wilkins. The Secretary Bro. Donkin, read a circular from Bro. Morton Edwards (Lodge 144 and Chapter 186), informing the lodge that he had completed a bust of the Earl of Zetland, and soliciting the Mount Lebanon Lodge for its name on his list of subscribers. Bro. Donkin also made a statement of the forlorn condition of the widows and families of two deceased members of the lodge, and on the motion of Bro. Sabine, seconded by Bro. Walters the brethren voted three guineas to each widow. The W.M. then closed the lodge, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

PROVINCIAL.

WEST YORKSHIRE, HEBDEN BRIDGE.—Prince Frederick Lodge, No. 307.—The members of this lodge held their regular monthly meeting on the 20th inst.; present: Bros. F. Whitaker, W.M.; A. Roberts, S.W.; D. Heap, P.M.; J. W.; L. Crabtree, P.M., Treas.; W. Patman, P.M., P.P.G.P.; Sec.; R. Worsick, S.D.; W. Jackson, P.M., J.D.; J. Cockroft, P.M., I.G.; and other members. The visitors were Bros. Firth, S.W. 408; Bates, P.M., Cooke, P.M., Sead and Jessop, 448. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, a ballot was taken for Mr. Richard Whitaker (a younger brother of the W.M.) which was unanimously in his favour; after which Mr. James Hoyle (who had been balloted for at the previous meeting) and Mr. Whitaker were respectively initiated into Freemasonry by the W.M. in a very creditable manner indeed, especially considering this was his first initiation in open lodge since his installation, the working tools being given by Bro. T. Whitaker (another brother of the W.M.) and the charge by Bro. Roberts, S.W. The lodge was then closed in the usual manner, and the brethren adjourned to spend a couple of social hours together, the visitors being entertained in a manner every way creditable to the lodge.

Upton Lodge, No. 1227.—This flourishing lodge held their final meeting for the session, at the Spotted Dog, Upton, on Thursday, the 9th. The business of the evening consisted of two raisings, viz.: Bro. Dr. Levick and Calvery, which ceremonies were performed in a masterly style by Bro. Benj. Picking, W.M. assisted by his Wardens, Bros. Mather, S.W.; Morton, J.W.; Boltin, S.D.; and English, J.D. Visitors present were Bros. R. E. Barnes, P.M. 15 and 30, P.Z. 13; Bro. Cook, S.W. 65, and several other brethren. The duties of the lodge being ended, the same was closed in due form and the brethren adjourned to the Banquet prepared by "Mine Host" in his most recherche style, being adorned with the choicest Bouquets of the season. The usual loyal toasts were duly given and responded to, when Bro. Bellerby, P.M., gave "The Health of the W.M.," in recognition of the very able and efficient manner in which he had discharged the duties of Master during the year, the zeal he evinced for the welfare of the lodge, and the Craft in general, demanded their best and most cordial wishes.—Bro. Picking, W.M., in reply begged to assure the brethren that as one of the founders of the Upton Lodge he should now feel it his bounden duty to give his most strenuous support, he was very anxious for its welfare, and would use his utmost exertions to promote its prosperity, he begged more especially to call the attention of the brethren to the propriety of holding a weekly meeting, in order that the brethren might acquire a thorough knowledge of the duties necessary for the discharge of the duties attached to the various offices, in furtherance he would be most happy to give his punctual attendance.—The W.M. then proposed "The Health of the Visitors."—Bro. R. E. Barnes in returning thanks, assured the brethren of his due appreciation of the high compliment paid to him and his brother visitors. It was his first appearance in their midst, but his reception was of such a character that he was utterly at a loss to convey to them his gratitude for the truly kind and Masonic feeling manifested towards himself and visitors. As an old Mason and father of lodges 15 and 30, and chapter 13, opportunities had been given of visiting lodges and observing their "Modus Operandi" but he might be permitted to remark that in no instance had he witnessed the true principles of the Order maintained to their fullest extent—the grand principle of Brotherly Love was the true characteristic of the Upton Lodge, they were indeed a happy band—and hesitantly trusted that the observations made by the W.M., relative to the formation of a Lodge of Instruction, would have the support and co-operation of the members to fit them for the discharge of their respective duties. In conclusion he wished prosperity to the lodge and prosperity to its members.—The next toast given was "The Health of Bro. Bellerby, I.P.M.," in which the brethren united simultaneously in evincing their kindly feelings towards him for his unmitigated exertions on behalf of the lodge and the charities connected therewith.—Bro. Bellerby in reply assured the brethren that it was his most anxious desire to offer any information the brethren might require at his hands, in conjunction with the W.M., he would be most willing to further the interest of their meetings by rendering such assistance as may be necessary.—"The Health of the Officers" were severally given and responded to.—The harmony of the evening was greatly added to by the exertions of Bros. Bellerby, Barnes, &c. The session being closed in due form the lodge was adjourned till April next.

FOREIGN.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

Royal Alfred Lodge, 420, S.C.—On July 24th this lodge met at Cape Town to celebrate its anniversary. The lodge was opened in the first degree, a large number of visitors being present, chiefly naval brethren, as well as a large majority of the members. The business which was quite of a formal character having been transacted, the lodge was then opened in the 2nd and 3rd degrees, when Bro. E. Turner who had more than served his time, and had passed through the proper examination was raised to the sublime degree of M. Mason. The brethren repaired to the British Hotel, where a splendid spread had been provided, and of which they partook. The W. Master Bro. Williams 30° was ably supported by P.M., Dr. Rickard, R.N.; P.M., J. R. Black, D.M.; G. Lankester, K.T.; Dr. Hunter, R.N.; Bunnier, Eveleigh, Hadler, &c., &c. A most enjoyable evening was passed, several capital speeches were made and the usual toasts received most cordially, especially that of our patron the Duke of Edinburgh, after whom the lodge was named by permission.

ORDERS OF CHIVALRY.

RED CROSS OF ROME & CONSTANTINE.

PROVINCIAL.

MIDDLESEX.—Villiers Conclave, No. 9.—The first anniversary assembly of this conclave was held at the Northumberland Arms Hotel, Isleworth, on the 18th inst., under the presidency of Sir Kt. R. Wentworth Little, G.R. as M.P.S. After the confirmation of the minutes the following brethren were installed as Knights of the Order, viz.: Bros. Charles Swan, P.M., P.G.D., Herts; Rev. John R. Mac Nab, 165 Ayr; Edward T. Osbaldeston, J.D., 1194; and Edward H. Dalby 1194. The election and appointment of officers for the ensuing year, resulted unanimously as follows:—The Rt. Hon. the Earl of Jersey, M.P.S.; H. A. Allman, Depute M.P.S.; E. Clark, V.E.; T. Smale, S.G.; J. Trickett, J.G.; W. Hamlyn, H.P.; C. Swan, Treas.; R. Gurney, Recorder; F. Walters, Prefect; E. T. Osbaldeston, S.B.; E. H. Dalby, Herald; J. Gilbert, Sentinel. Sir Knt. Allman, was then enthroned as Deputy M.P.S. and the other officers were invested. Eight brethren of the Villiers Lodge were proposed for the next assembly, and the conclave was closed.

The companions then adjourned to the Refectory, where a really first-rate banquet was served—the menu was excellent and the various wines were of good quality. After the cloth was cleared, the usual ceremonial commemoration was observed, and the first toast given was "The Queen and the Christian Orders." "The Health of Lord Kenlis, M. Ill. G.S.," followed, and then "The Imperial Council," to which Ill. Knt. Col. Burdett, G.H.C., responded. The Rev. Sir Knt. J. R. Mac Nab, replied for "The newly installed Companions in Arms," in a feeling speech, in which he contrasted the happy gathering around him, with the condition of the Masonic Order in Costa Rica, where his life had been endangered through his connection with the Craft. Sir Kt. Little proposed "The Health of the D.M.P.S.," for which Sir Kt. Allman returned thanks. Sir Knts. W. H. Hubbard, G.T., and J. G. Marsh, G.A., responded for the visitors, and the Sentinel's toast concluded the proceedings at this very pleasurable meeting.

THE LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

On Wednesday evening the brethren of the Lodge of Benevolence met at Freemasons' Hall. The lodge was very numerous attended, and great interest was shewn in all the cases which came before it for relief. Every petition was thoroughly examined and the relief sought was liberal and prompt. The number of applicants was twenty-two, and of these fourteen received grants amounting in the whole to £205; the consideration of seven were adjourned, and one petition was dismissed.

THE FALL OF A BRIDGE AT KONIGSBERG.

FIFTY LIVES LOST.

A correspondent gives the following account of the frightful calamity which occurred at Konigsberg on the occasion of the festivities given in honour of the King, Crown Prince and Princess, and other Royal personages, on the 13th inst. Schloss teich, or lake, adjoining which the King, &c., were entertained by the inhabitants, is crossed by a wooden bridge, which was one of the principal attractions in the festivity, the same being brilliantly illuminated with gas; and forming a good place from which to view the fireworks, &c., going on in all the gardens surrounding the lake. Whether from a spirit of mischief or that it was really a fact I am unable to assert, but suddenly a cry was raised that the bridge was on fire. That the bridge was on fire either then or immediately afterwards I can assert to be the case. The pressure to get off caused the railings to give way, and some hundred people, I should say, were at once precipitated into the water. I do not wish to harrow your readers with the cries of the women, &c. Suffice it to say, that the music in the gardens continued, the fireworks went up, the people looked at one another and wondered what had happened, until, as if by magic, the music ceased, the brilliantly illuminated gardens became suddenly dark, the news spread like wildfire that really it was true that in the midst of all this rejoicing some fifty souls had gone into the presence of their Maker, and sadness came upon the scene. I cannot speak positively, but I believe, up to the moment of writing, forty-three corpses have been recovered. Some abler pen than mine will, no doubt, put you in possession of all the details of this most lamentable catastrophe, and record how the King, immediately on hearing of it, hastened to leave the Freemasons' Lodge where he was being entertained, and how the Crown Prince himself proceeded to the spot to render assistance, where, alas! assistance came too late; how the dead bodies were brought into the decorated rooms, and the anxious inquiries of one to the other, "Have you seen Franz: was he on the bridge?" and the father anxious to assure himself that his boy was not among the lost.

IMMEDIATE relief is an essential requisite to true charity. The Grand Lodge of England, in 1752, ordered that all foreign brethren, of whatever nation or vocation, when in distress, should after due examination, be relieved with a certain sum immediately.

CONSECRATION OF EARL OF DURHAM LODGE, No. 1274.

On Wednesday, September 8th, the above lodge, intended to be held at the Lambton Arms Hotel, Chester-le-Street, was consecrated by the R.W.P.G.M. Master for Durham, John Fawcett, Esq., assisted by Sir Hedworth Williamson, Bart., M.P., D.P.G.M., Brother V. A. Williamson, P.G.W. of the Grand Lodge of England, and the officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge. The lodge-room was most tastefully decorated for the occasion. At the head a platform was raised, and in the front were placed several choice exotic and other plants from the conservatory of Mrs. Fenwick, Southill, also several from Lambton Castle, which added considerably to the general effect. Suspended at the head of the room were engravings of three earls connected with the Craft, viz., the Earl of Zetland, M.W.G.M. of England, in full masonic costume; the late Earl of Durham, in the clothing of the Deputy Grand Master of England; and also the present Earl of Durham. Surmounting the two latter engravings were two ram's heads, representing the family crest of the Earl of Durham. On the left side of the room there was a very handsome decorative achievement, consisting of the "County arms," in blue and gold, with the "square and compasses" behind, on a red ground, the whole being encircled with a wreath of evergreens, interlaced with a narrow strip of variegated holly leaves, the latter being most elaborately manipulated by Mr. Stockley, gardener to Mrs. Fenwick. On either side were placed two geometrical figures, known as "the five points of fellowship," and surmounting the whole was an inscription of the cardinal virtues, in blue and gold letters, viz., "Temperance, Fortitude, Prudence, and Justice." Underneath the arms was a second inscription of "Brotherly love, relief, and truth," whilst on both sides were the initials "J. F." and "H. W.," representing the Prov. and Deputy Prov. Grand Masters. In the recesses of the windows were placed the Plumb, the Level, and the Five Points of Fellowship, on a blue ground, whilst several appropriate flags were judiciously interspersed throughout the room. Suspended in different parts of the room were three highly-prized and interesting illuminated addresses on vellum, kindly lent by request of the W.M. by the present Earl of Durham, one being presented (with a very valuable jewel) to the late Earl of Durham, as Deputy Grand Master of England and Prov. Grand Master, by the brethren of all the lodges in this province; another by the officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge, and the third by the officers and brethren of the Marquis of Granby Lodge, No. 124, held in the city of Durham. On the occasion of the presentation of the first-mentioned address, together with the jewel, the sentiments uttered by his lordship are so worthy of being reproduced that we now give them for the benefit of the Craft in general and of the younger brethren in particular. So highly do we approve of them, that we think they ought to be printed in letters of gold and hung up in every lodge. They are as follows:—"I have ever felt it my duty to support and encourage the principles and practice of Freemasonry, because it powerfully develops all social and benevolent affections; because it mitigates without, and annihilates within, the virulence of political and theological controversy; because it affords the only neutral ground on which all ranks and classes can meet in perfect equality and associate without degradation or mortification, whether for the purposes of moral instruction or of social intercourse."

The musical arrangements were under the direction of Bro. J. Walker, Prov. G. Organist, and Bro. D. Lambert, both of the Durham Cathedral choir; assisted by Bro. J. G. Penman, of Newcastle.

At three o'clock punctually the brethren assembled in the lodge-room, when the R.W.G.P.M., John Fawcett, Esq., took the chair; Bro. the Rev. J. P. De Pledge, P.M., P.Prov.G.C., and Prov.G.S.W., the S.W.'s chair; and Bro. G. Canney, M.D., P.M., and Prov.G.J.W., the J.W.'s chair, about ninety brethren being arranged throughout the room. The lodge was opened in the proper degree, and the brethren addressed by the P.G.M. on the nature of the meeting, after which he called upon the Prov.G. Secretary, Bro. W. H. Crookes, to read the petition for the new lodge, and the warrant from the M.W. the G.M., Earl Zetland.—The brethren of the new lodge having signified their approval of the W.M. Designate and other officers named in the petition and warrant, Bro. the Rev. Dr. Holden, head-master of Durham School—after first paying the W.M. Designate a high compliment for energy, perseverance, &c., whom he said he was well acquainted with from having been one of his pupils—delivered a most excellent oration on the beauties and principles of the Order, which was listened to with the greatest attention, and it required no small effort on the part of the brethren to abstain from manifesting their feelings of approbation; but they prudently did not, lest it might have impaired the effect. So highly was the oration appreciated, that a number of the brethren have expressed a desire to have the remarks of the reverend doctor printed and published for the use of the Craft.

The ceremony was then proceeded with according to the ancient customs of the Order, and most impressively rendered by the esteemed Prov. G.M., Brother Fawcett.—The installation of the first W.M. named in the warrant, viz., Bro. W. Brignall, jun., solicitor, of Durham, was then proceeded with, the Board of Installed Masters comprising the very unusual number of 25 Past Masters.—The brethren having saluted the new W.M. as such, the Prov. G. Master entrusted him with the warrant of the lodge, &c.—The election of Treasurer and Tyler then took place.

The appointment and investment of officers were next made, as follows:—Bro. W. Brignall, jun., First Worshipful Master, Bro. R. Linton (P.M., 427) S.W.; Bro. T. Robson, J.W.; Bro. W. Brignall (P.M., 124, and P. Prov. G.R.), Treasurer; Bro. A. Harkness, Secretary; Bro. John Gray, S.D.; Coxon, I.G.; and Bro. John Burnip, Tyler. The W.M. announced that he would appoint the J.D. and Stewards at the next lodge meeting.

We have seldom witnessed on similar occasions so numerous an attendance of brethren, many of them holding very high positions—Sunderland, Newcastle, Gateshead, and Durham being well represented. This fact, combined with the lively recollection of what the late Earl of Durham did for the Craft, added to the respect entertained for the present chief of this province, concurred much towards the interest attached to this important event in the annals of Freemasonry in this neighbourhood.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, the brethren adjourned for an hour, a number of them proceeding to inspect the engineering and iron works of T. H. Murray, Esq. That gentleman, although not a member of the mystic Craft, displayed the greatest possible interest in contributing to the success of the day's proceedings, by retaining the services of the excellent Chester-le-Street Rifle Volunteer Saxhorn Band, of which he is commanding officer, and who played during the banquet.

During the short interval between the closing of the lodges and six o'clock, the lodge-room was quickly transformed into a banqueting-room. It received a large accession of plants, flowers, ferns, &c., from the conservatories of Earl Durham and Mrs. Fenwick, and the dinner being a la Russe, the tables were tastefully arranged, under the superintendence of Mr. Wootton, from Lambton Castle.

As true chroniclers, we ought not to omit mentioning that in addition to the flowers, there was a liberal supply of champagne, game, and fruit, presented to the new lodge by the Earl of Durham, and that Mrs. Fenwick, whose husband (Henry Fenwick, Esq., M.P., deceased) formerly held the rank of D.P.G.M., also kindly contributed not only fruit and flowers, but all the edibles and esculents necessary for the occasion.

At the banquet the new Worshipful Master of the lodge presided, being supported on the right by the R.W.P.G.M., J. Fawcett, Bros. J. P. De Pledge, V. A. Williamson, H. J. Baker Baker, and others; and on the left by Bros. Sir Hedworth Williamson, Rev. Dr. Holden, B. J. Thompson, and others, at which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honored, being judiciously interspersed with appropriate glees and songs by the before-mentioned vocalists. The worthy host and hostess did their best to contribute to the comfort of the visitors. The whole affair passed off well, and will be noted and remembered by all true brethren as a red-letter day in their Masonic Calendar.

The thanks of the members of the lodge are especially due to Mr. William Wootton, Steward; Mr. Leighton, Architect; and Mr. Hunter, Head-gardener, all of Lambton Castle, for the valuable assistance they so kindly rendered in embellishing and adorning the banqueting room; also to Mr. Stockley, gardener, South Hill.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF SOMERSET.

The annual meeting of this Provincial Grand Lodge was held at the Royal Assembly Rooms, Weston-super-Mare, on Thursday the 16th instant, under the presidency of the R.W.P.G.M. the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon. The Local Lodge (St. Kew, 1222), met at high twelve, and the W.M. Bro. Capt. F. G. Irwin opened the lodge in the first degree, and received a number of visiting brethren from all parts of the province, together with others from the adjoining provinces of Bristol, Devon, Dorset, Wilts and Gloucester, numbering in all over 200; about one o'clock p.m. the R.W.P.G.M. and his officers, with many brethren of distinction, proceeded to visit the St. Kew Lodge, and were marshalled under the direction of the P.G.D.C. in the following order:—

The P.G.M. ascended the dais and the W.M. placed the gavel in the hands of the P.G.M. the Earl of Carnarvon, who thereupon immediately opened his Provincial Grand Lodge in ample form. The P.G. Sec., Bro. Else, having read the minutes of the meeting of the 12th of January last, the same was duly confirmed. The P.G. Treas., Bro. Payne, presented his yearly financial report, showing the affairs of this P.G. Lodge to be in a very flourishing condition, doubtless owing to the zeal of its excellent Treasurer, and the popularity of the Prov. G. Master. Bro. Payne expressed a hope that P.G. Lodge would establish a Fund of Benevolence, especially for the Province, confining its charity to distressed brethren belonging thereto. This was favourably received for consideration.

Other customary routine business having been transacted, the R.W.P.G. Master then nominated and invested his officers for the ensuing year as follows:—

Bro. Major-General Gore Boland Munbee, P.M., St. Kew Lodge, 1222, P.S.G.W.

The appointments seemed to give general satisfaction, there being great applause on the investment of nearly every officer.

After Grand Lodge business had been transacted at the Assembly-rooms, the brethren proceeded to the Town-hall, where a splendid banquet had been provided by Mr. Sheppard, the well-known confectioner, of Church-road. All matters appertaining to the feast—viands, cookery, waiting, and dessert—were of the most satisfactory character, and pleased the brethren of all grades. One of the splendid haunches of venison was presented by Bro. J. H. Smyth Pigott (Lord of the Manor.) The wines, supplied by Bro. F. Vizard, of Magdala-buildings, were much commended by the excellent judges who partook of them. The following was Mr. Sheppard's bill of fare:—

The outer tower of the Town-hall, as well as its interior, were gaily decorated with flags; and during the day the bells of the parish church rang out their merriest peals. The platform and widows of the banquetting room at the Town-hall were profusely decorated with flowers and plants in pots, for which, and the banners of the various civilised nations of the world, the committee of management were indebted to Bro. J. H. Smith Pigott, Bro. the Rev. J. C. Pigott, Walter Tucker, Esq., &c.

The speeches and general proceedings at the banquet were of a highly interesting character—the eloquence of the Grand Master being a treat of no ordinary kind—and it appeared (upon the authority of the Grand Treasurer) that Masonry is making great progress in this county, which in Masonic position, now only stands behind Lancashire and Yorkshire.

The various toasts of the evening were proposed and responded to, "The Queen and the Craft," "The M.W.G.M. of England," "His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, P.G.M.," "The R.W.D.G.M. and Grand Officers," "The R.W.P.G.M. of Somerset," "R.W.P.G.M. Capt. Adair," "The W.D.P.G.M. and P.G. The brethren generally expressed their sincere admiration of the great care and exertions which had been made by the local committee to ensure the arrangements of the day being so exceedingly satisfactory and complete.

A most interesting feature in connection with this meeting was the presentation of a Masonic jewel to Bro. P.P.G.M. A. W. Adair, the presentation being made by the noble P.G.M. in the presence of the assembled brethren, Earl Carnarvon, in making the presentation, conveyed, in language eloquent and graceful, the feelings of himself and the brethren towards one who had, during five years of office, faithfully and fraternally fulfilled, and used his best exertions to promote the welfare of the province over which he presided. P.P.G.M. A. W. Adair responded in feeling and appropriate terms, and in doing so, received the cordial and enthusiastic greetings of the brethren present.

BRO. HENRY WHITTLE, S.W. (Nos. 871 and 1275), has issued a circular to the Craft informing them that a meeting will be held at The Marquis of Granby Tavern, New Cross Road to-night at 7 o'clock for the purpose of forming a New Cross Branch of the South Eastern Masonic Association, to frame the rules, enrol members, elect officers and generally on the business of the association. The object of such an Association is to benefit all the Masonic Charities, and by the payment of the small sum of a shilling per week by its members to obtain for them life-governorships in one or other of the Eleemosynary Institutions established by the Craft. When the funds of the Association amount to ten guineas the governorship is drawn for, and the successful Brother becomes a life-governor of whichever Institution he may select. The scheme is a good one, and has the advantage of obtaining an expensive end by inexpensive means.

God, the great Father of all, has given no one of his children such property in the things of this world, but that he has also given to his needy brother a right in the surplusage of his goods, so that it cannot justly be denied him when his pressing wants call for it

EXTRACT

Bro. Jacob Norton has called our attention to an extract from the annual address of Illustrious Bro. Josiah H. Drummond, 33°, Sovereign Grand Commander of the Northern Supreme Council, and to the following comments upon it, which appeared in an American paper. We can only reiterate our conviction that the high degrees have no claim whatever to jurisdiction over Craft Masonry:—

We had always supposed that the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite, as finally organized in 1801, consisted of thirty-three degrees, commencing with that of Entered Apprentice, and concluding with the high grade of Sovereign Grand Inspector General 33°. If as stated in the address of Ill. Bro. Drummond, it has no control over the symbolic degrees, then is the series reduced to thirty degrees, and is not the Ancient Accepted Rite, as practised in all other portions of the world. It is true, for the sake of harmony, and to prevent conflict with the symbolic Masonry of the United States, the two Supreme Councils "waived" the conferring of the first three degrees, in bodies of their own, accepting those made Master Masons in their Sister Rite, known as the York, as material to work upon, but they never renounced their right to confer these degrees, should a necessity exist for doing so. It was a voluntary "waiver," but was never "renounced" in concordats or otherwise with the Masonic authorities of the York Rite of Symbolic Masonry.

If this be so, and we challenge a successful denial, then does the argument of the Sov. Gr. Commander Drummond—that the Lodge of Perfection consists only of eleven degrees, instead of fourteen, and that all above the third degree, are controlled by action had in the Symbolic Lodge—fall to the ground. If, however, the case be as stated by him, which we again deny, then is the whole superstructure of Ineffable Masonry at the mercy of the M. Mason's Lodge of another system.

We believe in every tub standing on its own bottom. If it has no bottom, then it ceases to be a tub. We are a lover of York Masonry, and will ever be ready to enter the lists in defence of all the rights it is lawfully entitled to, but as a Scottish Rite Mason, also, we do not believe in truckling to any other Rite, by surrendering beyond recall the ancient and time-honoured prerogatives which are the very foundations of the system.

In this argument we are fully sustained by the illustrious brother Albert Pike, 33°, Sov. Gr. Commander of the Southern Supreme Council; and hold that a Symbolic Lodge of the York or any other Rite cannot control a Supreme Council 33° A. A. S. Rite, nor deprive any member of the same of his high grade, until his peers of the 33° have sat in judgment on him, and consented to his degradation.

OBSERVANCES.—Almost all the circumstances attending the promulgation of the Jewish dispensations have been introduced into Freemasonry; and the particular observances incorporated with its ceremonial. The Divine appearance at the Burning Bush, the shoes, the rod, the serpent, and the Sacred Name, are equally embodied in the system. The plagues of Egypt, with the signs which attended the divine deliverance of the children of Israel from captivity—the pillar of a cloud and of fire, the mighty winds, the division of the Red Sea, the salvation of God's people, and the destruction of Pharaoh and his host; the wanderings in the wilderness, the delivery of the law, the building of the Tabernacle, and the establishment of the hierarchy; the order observed in the frequent migrations, led by the banners of each tribe, and other important events, all form parts of the complicated system of Freemasonry, and show its connection with the offices of religion.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Biliousness and Dyspepsia.—There is no organ in the human body so liable to derangement as the liver, food, fatigue, climate, and anxiety, all disorder its action and renders its secretions, the bile, more or less depraved, super-abundant or scanty. The first symptoms showed receive attention, a pain in the side, on the top of the shoulders, a harsh cough and difficulty of breathing are signs of liver disease, which are removed without delay, by friction with Holloway's inestimable Ointment. The pills should be taken without delay. For all diseases of this vital organ, the action of these conjoined remedies is a specific, by checking the over supply of bile, regulating its secretion and giving nervous tone.

TEMPLE CRUCIS.—We will send you a proof of your article, but the language used is too strong for our columns, and requires modification, especially as there are signs of improvement in the quarter indicated, and we have reason to believe, that the whole grievance has arisen in the first instance through a pardonable misconception of the facts.

CAN SUCH THINGS BE?

THE good, old-fashioned spirit of despotism is not yet extinct, on the contrary, it exhibits a charming vitality and irrepressible vigor in certain out-of-the-way localities. It deals still in the old description of arguments, albeit the clumsy arquebus of a Charles IX. is now exchanged for the more refined revolver, but the effect is mainly the same, and is decidedly the reverse of being pleasant.

To most Englishmen, the vast plains of central and southern America, bounded as they are by mighty chains of hills, and dotted here and there with trackless forests, are a veritable terra incognita, and the little we really know about the natives of those beautiful but barbarous regions is not calculated to increase our desire for a closer acquaintance.

All the fallacies of a grovelling superstition which they retain as mementoes of their Spanish descent, and all the evils of wild, uncurbed licence which they derive from their Indian blood, combine to render these half-castes the most despicable and blood-thirsty race on the face of the earth. Their government is an undisguised anarchy—their religion a caricature of Christianity—while their laws are an agreeable admixture of feudal savagery and modern fillibusterism.

In most of these happy communities, which are dignified with the name of republics, it is not unusual to find a small colony of civilized beings, who, it is almost unnecessary to state, are either Europeans or citizens of the United States, and these individuals form the connecting link between the semi-savages and the commercial world. Example and precept are, however, alike thrown away upon a people who are possessed with the seven devils, as Carlyle phrases it, of "Idleness, lawless Brutalness, Darkness, Falsehood—seven devils, or more." The healthful spirit of constitutional liberty—the glory of serving the common weal—are unknown in these so-called republics; nothing but the rule of the sword prevails, varied, as we have hinted before, with an occasional reference to the supreme arbitrament of a six-chambered Colt. Yet, even into these unhappy regions a ray of light has penetrated. Freemasonry, with her teachings of true "liberty," true "equality," and true "fraternity," has essayed to pierce the Egyptian darkness of the scene and to elevate those tyrants and slaves in the scale of humanity.

At present, we are constrained to add, the success of the attempt has been only partial, and to furnish an illustration, let us relate what happened in the most infinitesimal of those republics—Costa Rica, to wit—on the evening of St. John's Day, 1869.

In the town of San José there is a Masonic lodge, "Caridad," or Charity, by name, which was founded in 1865, and up to the date mentioned pursued its labours not exactly in peace, but still without open molestation, owing doubtless to the fact that its membership was chiefly confined to the principal foreign residents. But the malevolence of the Government at length burst forth; instigated by the priests, and moved even by paltry sentiments of personal revenge, the functionary who wields the baton of Minister of War determined to make a grand coup.

He assembled his myrmidons and sent them forth breathing fire and fury against Freemasons in general, and the lodge of Charity in particular, the members of which were then holding their Annual Festival under the gavel of the Rev. Brother MacNab, a British subject. The outrage which followed is thus described in the narrative sent by the Master and authenticated by the seal of the lodge. "On the outer door of the house being opened by some members who were leaving, three officers of the army, and the Chief Constable of San José, rushed in followed by a number of soldiers and watchmen; revolvers were pointed at several Masons, and all were ordered to leave the house at once; any natives (of whom none were present on that evening) were to have been conveyed to prison. Representations were made to the authorities by the respective Consuls at this place, and some apology or explanation demanded; nothing has been received except an intimation that a reply would be sent in due time. Bro. MacNab being about to proceed to England, is hereby empowered and requested to lay the facts herein referred to before the officers of any lodge he may visit, as it is considered desirable in the interests of Masonry that the utmost publicity be given to proceedings of this nature."

And so say we emphatically, although doubtless the revelation will not be peculiarly agreeable to the truculent official, the Minister of War of this model republic, under whose orders this outrage was perpetrated, and who, we are informed is at present in England seeking a loan to enable the anarchs of Costa Rica to lord it over their serfs with "six-shooters" for some time longer. Verily he ought to be supplied with British gold to buy British bullets for the slaughter of our countrymen, and especially we bespeak for him the good offices of all Masons who may be interested in the negotiation of loans, and who might be inclined to doubt the security offered by such an amiable bandit.

Those who recollect the reception, more warm than friendly, experienced by a certain warrior called Haynau, some years ago, would perhaps be inclined to suggest a like treatment for this nameless tyrant, but Freemasons are a more law-abiding and long-suffering class of the community. It is well, however, to remind these ruthless despots, that the whole Masonic brotherhood views their proceedings with abhorrence and protests against their lawless deeds.

It is well to remind them that although Freemasons fight not with carnal weapons, they can wield the mightier power of enlightened public opinion throughout the civilised globe—that the moral force of truth, the unconquerable instinct of right and justice, are enrolled upon the side of the Craft in this crusade against cruelty and fraud.

We can strike a blow against these violators of our Masonic sanctuaries in their most vulnerable part; they want money, and would fain persuade European financiers of the stability of their rule, and the security offered by their sway.

A deed like the atrocity committed at San José upon inoffensive and unarmed men, will go far to dispel the delusion that freedom exists in those priest-ridden lands; nay, it proves that not even the dread of reprisal can restrain the Costa Ricans from wreaking their vengeance on the citizens of powerful states. Let us also assure our persecuted brethren that their cry has been heard, and awakens mingled feelings of indignation and sympathy in the breast of every Freemason, and, we may add, of every honest man.

In our advertising columns there is a notice of the meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Jersey, to be held on the 29th inst.

We understand that deputations from Guernsey and Brittany will attend to witness the installation of Bro. E. C. Malet de Carteret, as Provincial Grand Master, and the procession will be joined, as a guard of honour, by the 1st North West Regiment of Militia, of which Bro. de Carteret is Lieut.-Colonel.

We are informed that the "Confidence Lodge of Instruction" has been removed to Bro. Forster's, "Railway Tavern," Fenchurch-street, and that the lodge will resume its meetings on Wednesday, the 6th of October, at 7 p.m., on which occasion Bro. Jas. Brett, P.M., P.Z., and A.G.P., will work the ceremonies of consecration and installation, and it is to be hoped the brethren will rally around Bro. Brett, who is ever ready to give his valuable services and time in imparting instruction to the brethren, whether in the Craft or Royal Arch degrees.

MASONIC HOSPITALITY.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER.—With reference to the letter from "A Member of the London Literary Union," in your last impression, permit me to state that I have had the advantage of a personal conference with Bro. Goodall, who informs me that the duration of his stay in London is now so uncertain as to preclude the possibility of his arranging to attend the proposed banquet. Bro. Goodall will, however, return to England before taking his departure for the United States, and it is therefore intended to defer the fraternal meeting until he arrives from the Continent.

The Committee will continue to receive the names of brethren desirous of promoting by their presence or influence, the object contemplated, and there is little doubt that with the time now before them, the result will be such a success as cannot fail to be gratifying to Bro. Goodall, and creditable to the English Craft.

Yours fraternally,
R. WENTWORTH LITTLE,
P.M. & P.Z., 975.

PAPERS ON MASONRY.

By A. LEWIS.

XXV.—MASONRY AND NATIONAL EDUCATION.

Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting, get understanding. Exalt her, and she shall promote thee: she shall bring thee to honour, when thou dost embrace her. She shall give to thy head an ornament of grace, a crown of glory shall she deliver to thee. PROVERBS, iv. 7, 8, 9.

Among the chief glories of the Masonic body has been its strenuous exertions to diffuse sterling, honest, genuine, and unsectarian education. While the hands of Masons are open to the needs of the indigent, and administer to the physical wants of the suffering, they have ever in honesty and nobility of heart promoted the great cause of knowledge, by which the stability of nations is ensured, and the private life of individuals solaced and adorned. Although the education provided in the Masonic schools has been limited to children of members of the Order, it may be very truly said, that this form of aiding the great cause which decides the good or evil future of so many, has not been, by Freemasons, for mere purposes of glorifying the Fraternity, confined to Masonic bounds.

Real Masons, while contributing with alacrity to the schools established by the Fraternity, have not been niggard in their contributions to the many other national establishments of an educational character existent in these islands. I need only cite the instance of the Licensed Victuallers' School, to which individuals belonging to the trade of publican, and who are, almost to a man, members of the Masonic body, have nobly and freely contributed with the greatest generosity. Some of these, however, have not as yet added their mite to the funds of the Masonic Schools, and, in extenuation of this, it is only fair to say that, although the trade may be a lucrative one, it has its difficulties and naturally cannot stand an undue strain upon its resources more than other trades. Hence it is that publicans and others, while supporting their own educational and other charities, though Masons, are somewhat to be excused from any apparent remissness towards the Masonic Boys' and Girls' Schools.

The time when the elections into these establishments takes place is now approaching, and I have therefore ventured on referring to this important subject, in order that as much may be brought about as may be before those elections take place. Of course, Masons all have an interest in seeing these establishments flourishing, and going forward towards a payment of the arrears outstanding on their several foundations; most Masons, too, have some child to recommend for election, upon grounds of more or less painful interest.

It has, however, been noticed that, in some, though not all, cases, the names of those recommending the candidates do not appear in the subscription books of the Masonic Institutions, which although it seems an anomaly at first, is explicable by the circumstances that, of late years, the influx of young members into the Order not of great, though of respectable, means, has been very considerable.

Some have entered through curiosity; some from an honest intellectual and moral motive; some—I deeply grieve to say—because it would extend their business connections, and get them on in the world. To these last, I can only indignantly give a look of contempt; those men are unworthy, not only of Freemasonry, but of any institution based on principles analogous to it, omitting any reference to their preliminary declaration. The class which joins from an intellectual point of view is seldom a rich class; this class has to labour for its daily bread, and seeks relaxation and mutual comfort in the cheerful seclusion of the Masonic lodge-rooms. But, when able to afford it, the literary section of the Fraternity is far from being ungenerous, or sparing of its efforts towards the general end of promoting the welfare of the Charities. I need only refer to Bros. Carpenter, Buckland, and a host of others, who have gratuitously, and almost unasked, given their exertions, time, and best thoughts to helping on these undertakings. The musical, theatrical, and literary bodies individually and collectively have been ever ready to do "with a will" what could be done.

A word as to those who join from curiosity. Curiosity, if restrained within due bounds, is by no means a quality of human nature to be despised or considered ignoble. All great discoveries have been made by men who have been "curious;" our useful arts owe their existence to this desire, but it hence does not follow that some men should not be Paul Prys. I have been not unfrequently brought into contact with Masons, who, prompted by an impulse of inquisitiveness, have entered into Masonry, and then, finding it not to their taste, or discovering that Masonry has its duties as well as its pleasures and privileges, have withdrawn themselves and become Masonic "waifs and strays" upon the ocean of society. These men would not be likely to contribute to the Charities, but, taken up with their own notions, they turn away, and butterfly-like, chase the next new novelty which chances to attract their attention, to be as idly relinquished when the novelty is past.

Some may exclaim on reading the above: "Why, this is very stale! we knew all this before, O! Cryptonymus, give us something new!" To which I reply with the Egyptian priest in Plato: "Aye, aye, ye Greeks are all children, and would ever be fain to hear and to tell something new." The Egyptians, however, built the pyramids and did a few things more, on the principle of sticking to what was old, and if you wish to make these schools pyramids of fame for yourselves and of utility for the future, you must submit to hear some of the old statements reiterated, without considering the iteration, in the Shakesperian phrase, to be "damnable," or in the Latin, to be ad nauseam.

There is one way in which you can obtain immunity from the repetition of these cries of "Give, give," and that is by giving enough to free these institutions from their accumulated debts, and not always looking for others to mount into the breach.

"Who would be free himself must strike the blow." A real policy of Masonic education, of general national education, can only be carried out by the enthusiastic efforts of an aggregation of individuals.

The words of the Proverb-maker are ever true: "Exalt wisdom and she shall promote thee: she shall bring thee to honour, when thou dost embrace her. She shall give to thine head an ornament of grace, a crown of glory shall she deliver to thee."

When all the world is endeavouring to remedy the fatal indolence of the last century and a half by promoting National Education, the brethren of the Mystic Tie should not be found malingering, and smelling the battle-field from afar off.

Only this very morning I received by the post a communication from a body now forming under the name of the "National Education League," the object of which is defined in this brief sentence to be, "the establishment of a system which shall secure the education of every child in England and Wales." The means proposed are:—1. "Local authorities shall be compelled by law, to see that sufficient school accommodation is provided for every child in their district." 2. "The cost of founding and maintaining such schools as may be required, shall be provided out of Local Rates, supplemented by Government Grants." 3. "All schools aided by Local Rates shall be under the management of Local Authorities, and subject to Government Inspection." 4. "All schools aided by Local Rates shall be Unsectarian." 5. "To all schools aided by Local Rates, admission shall be free." 6. "School accommodation being provided, the State or the Local Authorities shall have power to compel attendance of children of suitable age, not otherwise receiving education."

This is plain and straightforward enough, and is supplemented and supported by a powerful list of several hundred names of standing all over the country. I no sooner saw the prospectus than I enrolled myself under their banner, and I take this opportunity of naming it here that others may do the same.

Freemasons of England, Ireland and Scotland, men and common fellow-countrymen, while you continue your noble Masonic efforts, listen also to the call made upon you in the above programme.

Intellect and the privileges of using it for the benefit of mankind comes from T.G.A.O.T.U., and is it for man to rob the growing immortal of his natural God-given right?

CRYPTONYMUS.

Mulum in Parbo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

THE HIGH DEGREES.

I find the term "Most Excellent Master" as the 6th degree of the Ancient York Rite as amended in America. They stand as follows:—1, E. A. P.; 2, F. C.; 3, M. M.; 4, Mark Master; 5, Past Master; 6, Most Excellent Master; 7, Holy Royal Arch.

I also find "Super Excellent Master" was a degree formerly conferred in the Councils of Select Masters. Mackey gives the following classification of the Masons who wrought in the quarries of Tyre and in the forest of Lebanon:—

	In Quarries of Tyre.	In Forest of Lebanon.
Super-Excellent Masons . . .	6	3
Excellent Masons . . .	48	24
Grand Architects . . .	8	4
Architects . . .	16	8
Master Masons . . .	2,376	1,188
Mark Masters . . .	700	300
Mark Men . . .	1,400	600
F. C. . .	53,900	23,100
E. A. P. . .	—	10,000
Total . . .	58,454	35,227

He goes on to say that the "Excellent Masons" were divided into three lodges of nine in each, including one of the Super-Excellent Masons as Master.

Has the K.H.S. any relation to the 2nd degree of the Council of the Trinity, whose degrees are:

I. Knight of the Mark and Guard of the Conclave;

II. Knight of the Holy Sepulchre;

III. The Holy and Thrice Illustrious Order of the Holy Cross?

The I. degree is said to have been instituted by Pope Alexander IV. for the defence of his person, selecting for this purpose a body of the Knights of St. John. II. instituted by Saint Helena, mother of Constantine, A.D. 326, after having discovered the true Cross. J. D. M.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Could you inform me if a triangle with the five points in centre, can be worn as a Master Mason's Jewel. Some assert, that although the latter is all right, the Triangle pertains to a higher degree, and others are puzzled on the subject.

Fraternally,

MASTER MASON.

[In England we do not recognise M.M. jewels, but the five pointed star is generally accepted as an emblem of the third degree, although it is of modern origin. Most unquestionably the triangle appertains only to the R.A. and some of the Christian degrees, and cannot be worn by a Master Mason who has not obtained those grades. It would be as much out of place as to see a cavalry captain carrying a crosier instead of a sword.]—Ed. F.

LAYING THE FOUNDATION STONE OF THE DUMFRIES & GALLOWAY NEW ROYAL INFIRMARY.

The Foundation Stone of this Charitable Institution was laid at Dumfries, on Thursday last week, with due Masonic honors, by the R.W. Prov. G. Master of the Province, Lauderdale Maitland, Esq. The occasion was marked by general rejoicings, every trade being represented in the procession, and most of the shops being closed. The deputations from the various lodges were met at the station by the band of the "Scottish Borders," who played the "Entered Apprentice" to the Town Hall; the place of Meeting. The Provincial Grand Lodge was opened at 12:30, the following lodges being presented: Granite Union, Dalbeattie, No. 480; Neptune, Kilwinning, and Ardrossen, No. 442; Quhyte-wollen, Lockerbie, No. 258; St. John's Thornhill, No. 252; St. Peter's, Mouswald, No. 234; Caledonian, Annan, No. 238; St. John's Castle-Douglas, No. 189; St. Mungo's, Mauchline, No. 179; St. James's, Old Monkland, Coatbridge, No. 177; St. John's, Newabbey, No. 162; St. Stephen's Gatehouse, No. 161; Operative Dumfries, No. 140; St. Magdalena, Lochmaben, No. 100; St. Andrew Annan, No. 79; St. Michael, Dumfries, No. 63; Thistle, Dumfries, No. 62; St. Cuthbert's, Kirkcudbright, No. 41; The Provincial Grand Lodge of Dumfriesshire, James Rae, P.G. Marshall; Charles Saunders, P.G. Tyler.

The insignia were carried by operatives as follows:—The plumb, Joseph Irving; mallet, Thomas Dodds; level, William Fergusson; square, Edward Milligan. Cornucopia of flowers, Thomas Watson; cornucopia of corn, William Kirk; vase with wine, William McGeorge; vase with oil, Alexander Hume; trowel, Thomas Milligan; box with coins, &c., David Dickson. Then came the following officials: R. A. Dickson, President of P.G. Steward; A. M. McIntosh, Vice-President of P.G. Steward; J. A. Mitchell, P.G. Inner Guard; James Riddick, Acting G.P. Director of Ceremonies; R. Hellon, P. G. Jeweller; D. Mitchell, P.G. Bard; J. G. Gooden, P.G. Director of Music;—Brown (Thornhill) P.G. Bible Bearer; Thomas Dykes, P.G. Senior Deacon; James Halliday, P.G. Junior Deacon; the Rev. Donald McLeod, P.G. Chaplain; John Jones, P.G. Clerk; Robert Martin, P.G. Secretary; John Starforth, Acting P.G. Architect; James Sloan, P.G. Junior Warden; Henry Gordon, P.G. Senior Warden; William Martin, P.G. Treasurer; J. Kinnear, Sword Bearer; J. Lee Pike, Substitute P.G. Master; J. Lindsay Scott, Depute P.G. Master; Lauderdale Maitland of Eccles, Provincial Grand Master of Dumfries. Visitor: Bro. John Bowes, P.M., P.Z., Past. Prov. G. Registrar, Cumberland and Westmorland, whose "purple" shone conspicuous among the "green and gold" of the Scotch brethren.

After the opening of the Lodge, Bro. Riddick of the Thistle Lodge, Dumfries, said that the very pleasing duty had fallen upon him to present to the Acting Grand Master, Bro. Maitland, the silver trowel with which he was to lay the foundation-stone of the Dumfries and Galloway Royal Infirmary. He hoped their Right Worshipful Master would be pleased to accept it in the name of the brethren.

Bro. Maitland, R.W. Prov. G.M. returned his sincere and grateful thanks for the great kindness the brethren in the district had displayed on this occasion.

The lodge was then adjourned, and brethren were marshalled in processional order and proceeded to Greyfriars' Church, where Divine service was conducted by the Provincial Grand Chaplain, Bro. the Rev. D. McLeod, Montrose, formerly of Dumfries. Public admission was obtained by ticket, and the large and handsome church was speedily filled. On the platform with W. Bro. McLeod, were the Rev. Messrs Weir, minister of Greyfriars'; Bryson, St Michael's; Graham, Newhaven; Underwood, Irongray; Wallace, Traquair; and Dodds and Murdoch, Dumfries. Service was commenced by singing a part of the 93rd Psalm, after which an appropriate and impressive prayer was offered, and the 103rd Psalm, from the 8th verse, read as Scripture lesson. The congregation having again joined in song—giving the first four verses of the 103rd Psalm.

The Rev. Bro. McLeod proceeded to deliver an earnest and heart-stirring address, characterised by vital Christian sentiment, clothed in terse but graceful language, and finely adapted to the occasion. Looking around on this assembly, and considering the purpose for which they had met, he could hardly help feeling the scene to be solemn and interesting in no ordinary degree—an assembly of Christian men and women, resting awhile from their active duties, withdrawn for a little from the bustle of the world, to appeal by praise and prayer to Almighty God for a blessing upon the truly great and good work which had been so heartily and nobly undertaken, and which he trusted it would be their privilege and joy to see soon and successfully completed. The occasion was indeed one which might well excite the interest and call forth the gratitude of every right-hearted man and woman among them. The rev. gentleman then proceeded to speak in generous language of the sufferings which the poorer classes of society are subject to, and asked who that had in any degree realised how much the sufferings of humanity had been and were being daily lessened by means of our hospitals and asylums and infirmaries, but would hail with gladness such a day as this that witnessed the laying the foundation-stone of an institution among us, where the poor man might enjoy the same watchful care and skilful treatment which in the hour of sickness were experienced by their wealthier brethren. The suffering poor and sick were a special legacy which the Lord had bequeathed to his own people to tend and to care for in every way. "The poor shall never cease out of the land." He thanked God they never should, remembering what poverty did not only for the poor but for us all. We knew that poverty often arose from idleness and intemperance, but it often came where there was honest industry and in spite of every honest effort to ward it off; and he need not tell them how many a soul would have starved for eternity if it had not starved for time. He proceeded to point out how poverty was the means of disciplining our hard and selfish hearts for the eternal charities of heaven, and how, in the absence of poverty, there would be wanting the very chiefest element in the carrying on of our education for eternity; by learning to love the poor and do them good we were in the way of being restored to the Divine image from which we had fallen. In the voice of the poor the Christian recognised the voice of Christ—in their misery he saw the misery of Christ; and to him it was Christ who groaned upon the fevered couch of yonder fainting one—it was Christ who cried in the despair of yonder hungry one, who was naked and sought to be clothed, sick and must be tended. He then alluded to the mental agony which is felt by the honest artisan whose house has been visited by disease, whose neat little parlour has been slowly but surely dispossessed to furnish necessities for the sick ones, and who sees himself, the support on which his household leans, at last sink under, and then lays himself down to despair—perhaps to die. The sick chamber was dark and cheerless, even where every comfort was available; but in the home of the poor how much more so was it. To those who knew the anguish of sickness, even where there was everything that wealth could provide to minister to the invalid, he appealed for sympathy and support on behalf of the poor. Who, he asked, so callous to the voice of humanity as not to do all he could to secure that all which the skill of his fellow men could do to relieve his poor and stricken brother? Dared such a one call himself a man, much less a Christian, and yet in his churlish selfishness spare nothing, whether his brother had a pillow in his sickness or no. I plead then (he continued) with you to-day for your sympathy and kindness and prayers in the matter of this Infirmary. I plead with you for the suffering poor; I plead with you in the light of the good it will do yourselves, every act of generousness disciplining your own souls for heaven, and making you more Christ-like and more God-like; I plead with you, lastly, for Christ himself, who sees in the suffering poor what he was himself, and who regards what is done to them as done unto himself. Yes; let the charities of your lives be ever associated with the name and cause and glory of Christ; and then no mis-placed confidence, no mistaken kindness will ever affect them. Their memorial will be not on earth but in heaven, and their reward will be proclaimed when every other memorial will have perished like figures on the sea-sand when the wave dashes over them—when the proudest gifts on earth unconnected with Christ and His people will be for ever forgotten, they shall remain; and further, it will show that you are ashamed neither of Christ nor His cause, but reckon that cause the highest and sublimest thing on earth. Then it will be your noblest privilege to do anything that will either promote the cause of truth or help onward in their journey the pilgrims to a happier and better land, where the inhabitants never say "I am sick," and where there shall be no more suffering or pain, for there God himself will wipe every tear away from their eyes.

A collection in aid of the Infirmary having been taken, the benediction was pronounced, at half-past one o'clock.

At about a quarter to two o'clock the procession was again duly arranged by Bro. James Rae, who ably officiated as Marshall, and the expected signal having been given, off the marchers set by a well-devised circuitous route that made nearly the tour of the two burghs. Entering Irving Street, they passed consecutively into three leading thoroughfares—George-street, Castle-street, and Buccleuch-street—the whole line being thronged, and every "coign of vantage" occupied by delighted spectators. Very imposing the civic army looked when crossing the New Bridge, and fortunately at this stage it could be seen with advantage by crowds at a distance as well as by those nearer hand. Arrived at Maxwell-town, its main artery, Galloway-street, was passed through—next Glasgow-street, St David-street, Terregles-street, and then, retracing the route to the left bank of the Nith, Dumfries was again reached, and the mounted men and marchers were landed in High-street, whose picturesque outline was filled up with a multitude of people waiting anxiously for the arrival of the procession at this important stage.

On arriving at the site of the new building, the procession opened up into a double line, and presented an avenue along which the Provincial Grand Master and his office-bearers passed to the stone. Here a commodious grand-stand was already comfortably occupied by ladies and gentlemen, and vast numbers of people were grouping about the green, having obtained admission for a merely nominal consideration. In the immediate proximity to the stone a low platform had been erected, and formed, as it were, the nucleus of the area which had been reserved for the members of the Provincial Lodge—the grand-stand being the eastern side of the square. At the western line, a place had been set apart for the Magistrates, Town Councillors, and members of the Building Committee. On the Provincial Grand Master and his officers entering the enclosed area, the Architect (Bro. J. Starforth) walked up to the platform on the East, after whom followed the Provincial Grand Chaplain, the Provincial Grand Jeweller, Provincial Grand Deacons, Provincial Grand Clerk, Provincial Grand Secretary, Provincial Grand Treasurer, Provincial Grand Wardens, and Substitute; then the Provincial Grand Master and Depute Prov. Grand Master, followed by the brethren attendant, including Bro. John Bowes—all giving way to the Provincial Grand Master when on the platform, and the Substitute taking the right of the Provincial Grand Master. A powerful choir, under the direction of Bros. James G. Gooden and James Riddick was stationed opposite the grand-stand; and the lodge having taken up position on the platform, and the Provincial Grand jewels, the chalices of wine and oil, &c., having been placed on the Master's table, the choir, accompanied by a harmonium, sang the Queen's Anthem. The P.G. Chaplain then offered up a solemn and suitable prayer. At the request of the P.G. Master, the P.G. Treasurer, Secretary, and Clerk placed the metallic box containing coins, newspapers, &c., into the cavity of the stone—the box, which was of copper, being hermetically sealed with solder, and bearing this inscription: "This foundation-stone of the Dumfries and Galloway Royal Infirmary was laid on the sixteenth day of September, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, and of the Masonic epoch five thousand eight hundred and seventy-three, by the Provincial Grand Master of this district, Lauderdale Maitland, Esq., of Eccles, in presence of the magistrates and a large concourse of spectators. Architect, John Starforth." This was followed by the choir chanting Psalm xxiv.: "The earth is the Lord's," &c., and while the notes of praise and vocal adoration were ascending, the stone was gradually lowered into its resting-place, by means of a crane, three distinct stops being made in its downward passage. The P.G. Master then walked from the platform to the east of the stone, with the Depute on his right hand, the Substitute Master and Provincial Grand Wardens going before him to the west, having with them the level and the plumb.

The P.G. Master here said—"R.W. Depute Prov. Grand Master, you will cause the various implements to be applied to the stone, that it may be laid in its bed according to the rule of Masonry."

The Depute Provincial Grand Master accordingly ordered the Wardens and Substitute Provincial Grand Master to do their duty.

The Depute Provincial Grand Master then said: Right Worshipful Junior Provincial Grand Warden, what is the proper jewel of your office?—The plumb. Have you applied the plumb to the several edges of the stone?—I have, R.W.D.P.G.M.

Have you applied the level to the top of the stone?—I have, R.W. Depute Provincial Grand Master.

Right Worshipful Substitute Provincial Grand Master, what is the proper jewel of your office?—The square.

Have you applied the square to those parts of the stone that are square?—I have R.W.D.P.G.M.

The R.W.D.P.G.M. then said: M.W. Provincial Grand Sir, the various implements have been applied to the stone in accordance with ancient custom and usage.

The Provincial Grand Master thus expressed his satisfaction. Having, my R.W. brethren, full confidence in your skill in our royal art, it remains with me now to finish this our work. He then gave the stone three knocks, saying: "May the Almighty Architect of the universe look down with benignity upon our present undertaking, and crown the edifice of which we have now laid the foundation with every success;" to which the choir responded, "So mote it be."

The choir next sang the Mason's Anthem.

When earth's foundation first was laid.

When the music had ceased the cornucopia was delivered by the Substitute to the P.G. Master, who threw it upon the stone. Two vases of wine and oil were next handed to the Substitute, from whom they were received by the P.G.M., who poured them, first the oil and then the wine, upon the stone, where also he strewed the contents of the horn, symbolical of food, saying "Praise be to the Lord immortal and eternal, who formed the heavens, laid the foundations of the earth, and extended the waters beyond it,—who supports the pillars of nations, and maintains in order and harmony surroundings worlds. We implore Thy aid, and may the continued blessings of an all-bounteous Providence be the lot of these our native shores; and may the Almighty Ruler of Events deign to direct the hand of our gracious Sovereign, so that she may pour down blessings upon our people; and may her people, living under sage laws, in a free government, ever feel grateful for the blessings they enjoy."—the choir responding "So mote it be."

The PROVINCIAL GRAND MASTER then spoke as follows:—Mr. Provost and Members of the Buildings Committee, I have infinite pleasure in offering you my hearty congratulations on the successful termination of the proceedings of to-day. There is no duty more pleasing to the Masonic craft than to assist at a ceremonial intended to commemorate one of the chief, if not the chiefest, of the Christian virtues, for we are told that such is charity, and surely one of the most sacred of its attributes, is the relief of suffering humanity. The edifice to be erected on this spot is to be devoted to that noble object, and I cannot doubt that to every one who has assisted in this great work, the consideration that he has done so will be a life-long satisfaction. Gentlemen, one word more, I cannot refrain, and you would be disappointed if I did refrain, before the close of these proceedings, from alluding to the name of Mrs. Laurie of Maxwellton. But for her early and noble munificence, we should not have been here to-day; and certain I am, that there is not a heart here which does not beat in response to the prayer that she be long spared to the soothing knowledge, that her Christian generosity will be the means, under the providence of God, of saving much human life, and assuaging much human suffering. In conclusion, it is my pleasing duty to have to thank the R.W.M.'s and brethren of the various lodges, and the various trades who have given me their valuable support on this most interesting occasion. Many of them have come from a great distance, and to one and all of them I beg to tender my most sincere and grateful thanks. I have also, Mr. Provost, the great satisfaction of stating to you that everything has gone off in peace and harmony, and that there has been no disturbance of any description.

Mr. SYMONS, secretary and treasurer to the Infirmary, as representative of the Building Committee, replied: As one of the Building Committee and in their name, I have great pleasure in offering to you, right worshipful sir, to your lodge, and to their brethren, our sincere thanks for coming here to-day to inaugurate the building of the new Infirmary. Your presence here we recognise as manifesting a generous sympathy in the objects of our enterprise—namely, a permanent improvement of what I do not hesitate to say is the noblest and most catholic charity that Christian benevolence has planted in this district. (Hear, hear.) To yourself, right worshipful sir, we feel especially indebted, for the appropriate manner in which you have conducted this solemn and impressive ceremonial. (Applause.)

Provost HARKNESS then spoke as follows: Provincial Grand Master, Ladies and Gentlemen, as Provost of this ancient burgh I have much pleasure in being present on this very interesting occasion, and in taking part in the proceedings of the day; and I have to thank my brother Magistrates and Councillors for their company and support. The great event of this day is of vast importance to the town and shire of Dumfries and the adjacent counties, for there cannot be a doubt that having a first-class infirmary in Dumfries must be of vast benefit to the entire district. The medical profession in Dumfries has kept pace almost with that of the capitals of Scotland and England. In illustration I can give an example of my own experience, for while only three years old I was taken to London to have an operation performed on one of my eyes, which no medical man in Dumfries would perform, while for several years past the same operation has been performed in the Dumfries Infirmary by the skilful surgeons of that house. What an advantage must it be then to the poor classes of the district to have an Infirmary suited in every way to the proper treatment of the different diseases to which they are subject, when they have medical men competent to perform almost any operation or to treat any class of disease: for we all know that in their own houses the poorer classes cannot have justice done to their cases, and that when removed to the Infirmary every attention will be paid to the patients, for in point of classification, ventilation, agreeable prospect, and airing ground the building about to be erected cannot be surpassed. I therefore call upon every one to heartily support the present movement and sink all differences, as the building will be an inestimable boon to the poor, not of Dumfries only, but of the three counties. (Cheers.)

The 100th Psalm having been sung, the Chaplain pronounced a benediction, the choir sang "Rule Britannia," and the ceremonial at the stone was brought to a close with three cheers for the P.G.M. heartily given at the request of the Chaplain.

The procession was then re-formed, and proceeded, in an order inverse to that of their outgoing, along St. Michael's-street, into the New-roads, up South-Queen-street, Shakespeare-street, English-street, and High-street, the Masonic Body returning to the Town-hall, where the Provincial Grand Lodge was closed in due form, the Town Council and Building Committee going to the Committee Room, Town-hall, and dispersing, and the other bodies separating in the Academy Grounds.

AN ESSAY

Concerning the most productive and most useful method of Masonic activity most in accordance with the ideas of Freemasonry. By Bro. B. A. CRAMER, at Eichenbarleben, Member of the Lodge at Aschersleben.

It is evident that the lodge could not remedy all this without detriment to its solemn rites, and therefore the necessity of the free association is clearly demonstrated.

All religious and political discussions are of course most rigorously excluded from the proceedings; but it would be useful, distinctly to define the limits of Masonic jurisdiction with respect to church and state. This would form one of the first themes for a lecture. As soon as the association is somewhat consolidated and has reached a certain numerical strength, one of the first things should be, to project a plan for a continued series of lectures and to distribute the subjects for such lectures proportionately amongst the brethren.

At first we ought to ascertain our exact position, towards which purpose the above mentioned lecture may aid us, for in it there necessarily would be shown the principles of Freemasonry, and its claim to exist at the present time; whilst the various attacks on Masonry are specially to be taken note of, warded on promptly and conclusively, and turned to account by making them an incentive to our becoming more perfect.

After a short period it will be necessary to give historical lectures, that is a general history in clear outlines from the foundation of the Grand Lodge of England, and a special history of Masonry in Germany. Above all there is wanted for the purpose of spreading historical knowledge among the brethren, the publishing of a short comprehensive manual, giving a concise view of Masonry, the cheap price and small size of which would make it handy and acceptable to everyone, while it should agree with the larger work of Findel.

Treatises on other parts of Masonic science concisely written, would be of the greatest advantage, as is proved inter alia, by the success of Henne's treatise "Adhucstat." Materials for lecture are offered in abundance by the general handbook of Freemasonry by Schletter and Zille; other highly valuable hints for tastefully treating subjects are given by Mejer, in his treatise "Eutharos." With respect to this subject, we only wish to observe briefly that the principal aim of the education obtained by these lectures, should always conduce to the moral self-activity, while with this, moral law must be considered as the highest law and we must make it our duty to realise our moral obligations. Consequently the lodge has continually to keep in mind not to lose sight of the ideal objects in the pursuit of the moral ones, and further that in pursuit of the ideal, we should always remain on the firm basis of reality. We do not advance by means of obscure ideals, but by rational, unprejudiced acting we become enabled to approach the wished-for ideal.

Now, although it would be the duty of the President and that of the Masters to stimulate the brethren to compose treatises and to deliver lectures, we must however not forget that elaborate compositions cannot be attained by every one; neither ought we to forget that Masonic knowledge is far from being Masonic art, but only a preliminary step to it. Consequently the President ought not to expect too much from individual brethren; he has however to exercise his position as Chairman vigorously, whilst at the same time his impartiality will have to bear that opposition which contributes so much to the eliciting of truth. It might be useful to prepare from time to time extracts from the minutes, which would show the work that has been done. In this manner we should gain a knowledge of what the free associations might improve, and at the same time, suggestions could be made how this improvement may be brought about. In order that the various associations may mutually exchange their experiences, and that their progress may become uniform, we urgently recommend frequent reports being published by the Press, and moreover an increased number of spring and autumn fêtes.

We must not be considered selfish, if in the first place we take into consideration the position of our impoverished brethren, and afterwards that of their indigent relatives. As we do not possess great charitable institutions like those which our English brethren have been enabled to found through rich donations, there remains nothing else for us to do but to see that every lodge takes care of those that belong to it. It certainly should not happen at all, that a brother become so poor as to need relief by alms; travelling brethren should henceforth only be allowed to receive relief from their own lodges. The brethren without means, instead of wandering about, should be assisted to create for themselves an active sphere for their support at home. By so doing we foster the growth of morality and act in accordance with true Masonic principles; for the wretched pauperising alms-giving, is entirely contrary to the true spirit of Masonry. In like manner, we should provide for the widow of a brother; with respect to orphans, however, the guardianship is to be undertaken by some of the brethren, who would have to submit the case of their wards to the brethren, so that such cases might be considered by them, and the necessary relief afforded.

With respect to special benevolent institutions for the aid of brethren, it is the widows and orphan's fund that are worth mentioning, as enjoying a large extension; the object of such a fund being to procure to the indigent great advantages for a very small subscription, and which advantages are continually increasing by reason of the very small expenses for their arrangement. Such funds are consequently to be recommended, and books of rules may easily be procured. But benevolence with respect to brethren, in the more limited sense, lies too near at hand, so that it is not necessary to go into that matter more fully now, although this benevolence, we must say, is certainly only a very faint reflection of that of the old Brotherhood.

Benevolence in a wider sense, however, coincides generally with true activity. Whilst trying to accelerate the progress of the latter through our recommendation of free associations, we have no doubt that many a brother will at once find our plan simple and practicable, if we can only show him how the indifference, the vis inertia of the majority of the brethren may be so overcome as to render a participation in the free associations, lively and lasting. It is certainly true, there has penetrated from the outer world into the lodge, a feeling of estrangement, which stifles the genuine spirit of brotherhood. This spirit must be produced again, and can only be sustained by our practising brotherly love, instead of merely talking of it, and by making personal sacrifices. The lodge certainly requires of the brethren above all, the fulfilment of their respective duties towards their families, the community, and the State; but when one is possessed with good-will, then there still remains so much time unoccupied, and so much mental power, that without detriment to other interests, they might be employed for the benefit of the brotherhood and for furthering the purposes of our Order. But who are the brethren now-a-days who make personal sacrifices worthy to be mentioned? Generally speaking, only those Masters of Lodges and Orators who really prepare themselves for the duties of those most important offices in the Lodge, and none else.

Brethren occupying superior positions in the profane world, do not know how to behave to their inferior brethren out of the lodge, their behaviour however should be such, as clearly to show their connection with Masonry, and leave a favourable impression on the minds of their inferior brethren. Consequently a readiness to make personal sacrifices is the starting point necessary for the re-invigoration of Masonry. This readiness or spring cannot be replaced by anything else, nor produced by any written treatise. It is possible, even in lodges generally sterile, that some few and persevering brethren may cause this spring to flow. However, everything depends upon a beginning and going the right way to work. The success depends upon the steadfast pursuit of a well-laid plan, "only let us go forward," beginning within the smallest circle, without any expectations as to extraordinary results, and without fear on account of the progress being slow. But where no personal sacrifices are made, selfishness reigns, no true brotherhood exists, no productive activity, no true Masonic action, in fine, all hope must be given up.

The lodge seeks to develop the individual so harmoniously as to make him become a good moral character, and it expects that he will in his after life always prove himself as such. This is a great and noble aim, for the safe, general and complete attainment of which there must be added to the efforts of the lodge, an increased activity towards self-education, which we believe, can be more easily attained through the free associations we seek to establish. Now if the moral activity of the individual brother is to be transferred into civil society, then the want of institution makes

THE ROYAL ARCH JEWEL.

We have great pleasure in re-producing for the benefit of our "Royal Arch" readers the following explanation of the Jewel of the Order which has been furnished to a contemporary by the R. W. Brother Col. A. J. Greenlaw, P. S. G. W. of England, and District Grand Master for British Burmah. It is given, as he states, to illustrate the Jewel worn by the Companions, which by its intersections forms a given number of angles which may be taken in five several combinations and these being reduced to their amount in right angles will be found equal to the five regular Platonic bodies representing the four elements and the Sphere of the Universe.

The explanation, according to Bro. Greenlaw, is from the pen of the late Sir William Drummond, subsequently enlarged by the Rev. T. Haverfield, B. D., and its beauty will be prized by every Royal Arch Mason who essays to understand the Masonic Science of Geometry.

These combinations will be found respectively to correspond in geometrical value with the five regular solids contained under equal and equilateral triangles, equal squares, and equal and equilateral pentagons, viz., the Tetrahedron, Octahedron, Cube, Icosahedron, and Dodecahedron, which were used by the Platonists to express the four elements, and the sphere of the Universe.

It may be proper here to state that the Platonist theory was this, that the Universe itself, as well as its subordinate parts, both animate and inanimate, were created by the Deity from the four elements—fire, air, water, and earth. It was conceived according to this theory that all created matter must be both visible and tangible.

Now, considering fire as the source of light, it is plain that nothing can be visible without it; and since nothing can be tangible but what is solid, and that the earth is the most properly solid of all the four elements, therefore, all created matter was constituted of fire and earth.

Again, it was supposed by the Platonists that no two bodies could unite and cohere without some intervening medium "to consolidate them; that planes required one such medium, and solids two. Therefore the Deity constituted two intervening elements between fire and earth, viz., air and water, in such a manner that there might be an exact analogy between the four, i.e., as fire is to air, so is air to water, and as air is to water, so is water to earth; thus forming a regular and harmonious gradation from the lightest and most penetrating of the elements to the heaviest and most obtuse. Now all the elements except the earth are without form in themselves; yet, in order to assist the mind in arranging its ideas, it is necessary to attach some form to them.

Therefore, since the elements are bodies, and all bodies are solid, and bounded by superficies which consist of triangles either equilateral or otherwise, the Platonist theory assigned to each of the four elements the form of a solid, bounded by plane surfaces constituted of triangles; for although one of those solids is bounded by squares, and another by pentagons, yet it will be evident that equilateral rectilinear figures may be resolved into as many triangles as the figures have sides united by their vertices in a common centre. (See Figs. 1 & 2.)

Having thus stated the general outline of the Platonist theory, we proceed to show by the assistance of the Key π the jewel forms by its various triangles and intersections an equivalent in geometrical value for the five regular solids expressing the four elements and the sphere of the Universe. The hermetic T was a most ancient hieroglyphical representation of the Deity, and consequently the triple T denotes His triunessence, and in geometrical value is eight right angles, viz., two on each of the exterior lines, and two at the point of union in the centre.

In this figure (Fig. 3), which is similar to that in which the six lights are arranged, there will be found a geometrical value equivalent to the π , for since the interior angles of every triangle are together equal to two right angles, and thus the whole triangle here displayed resolves itself into four equal and equilateral triangles, that is three ($a b c$) on the extremities, and a fourth (d) by their union at the centre. It follows therefore that the triangle thus resolved is equal to eight right angles, and consequently to one π .

If you look at the jewel or on this figure, (Fig. 4) where it is represented, you will perceive that it consists of two larger equal and equilateral triangles A B C and D E F inscribed in one circle, and equally intersecting each other, and of a smaller triangle in the centre G H I, which divides or revolves the larger inverted triangle D E F after the manner explained in the former figure. First, then, the central triangle G H I, resolved into its elements according to the first figure, will be equal to eight right angles or π , and these are equal in amount to those contained in the Tetrahedron—a solid figure contained under four equal and equilateral triangles.

This body (each of the solid angles of which is formed by the union of three plane acute angles) on account of its lightness, as well as its acute and pyramidal form, are used by the Platonists to express the element fire.

2ndly. The two larger triangles A B C, D E F considered without regard to their intersection, and resolved upon the foregoing principle, will be $= 2\pi$, or 16 right angles, which are equal in amount to those contained in the Octahedron, a solid figure comprised of 8 equal and equilateral triangles.

This body (each of the solid angles of which is formed by the union of four plane acute angles) being next in lightness and acuteness to the Tetrahedron, was used by the Platonists to express the element air.

3rdly. The triangles A B C, D E F, and G H I (i.e., the two larger and the small central triangle) considered without regard to intersections, and resolved by the same rule will be found 3π , or 24 right angles which are equal in amount to those contained in the cube, a solid figure contained by six equal squares.

This body (each of the solid angles of which is formed by the union of three plane right angles) being the most substantial in its form, as well as the firmest and most immovable on its basis, of all the solids, was used by the Platonists to express the element earth.

4thly. Consider now the inverted triangle D E F, as divided into 4 lesser ones by the central triangle G H I, and add to these the other large triangle A B C.

These five triangles considered again without regard to intersections, and resolved in the same manner as before, will be 5π , or 40 right angles, which are equal in amount to those contained in the Icosahedron, a solid body bounded by 20 equal and equilateral triangles.

This body (each of the solid angles of which is formed by the union of 5 plane acute angles) being the heaviest of the solids contained by triangles, and the next in weight and substance to the cube, was used by the Platonists to express the element water.

Thus, 1st, the central triangle G H I $= \pi$, is equivalent to the Tetrahedron, which expresses the element fire.

2nd, the two large triangles A B C, D E F $= 2\pi$, are equivalent to the Octahedron, which expresses the element air.

3rd, the 3 triangles A B C, D E F, G H I, $= 3\pi$, are equivalent to the Cube, which expresses earth.

4th, the 5 triangles A B C, E G H, F G I, D I H, and G H I $= 5\pi$, are equivalent to the Icosahedron, which expresses water.

It now remains to find an equivalent in the R. A. Jewel for the solid expressing the sphere of the Universe, which is the Dodecahedron, a solid body bounded by 12 equal and equilateral pentagons. (See Fig. 5).

The 6 small triangles round the circumference of the jewel (formed by the intersections of the 2 larger triangles) together with the central triangle G H I, if resolved in the same manner as the former, will be found to be $= 7\pi$, or $\times 8 = 56$ right angles; to these add the exterior angles of the before-mentioned 6 triangles, formed by the intersections of the 2 larger triangles $= 16$ right angles. For since the exterior angle of every triangle formed by producing one of its sides is equal to 2 interior and opposite angles, and every angle of one equilateral triangle is equal to one-third of the 2 right angles, therefore each of these exterior angles will be equal to two thirds of right angles; and as they are 12 in number, their amount in right angles will be $16, \frac{2}{3} \text{ of } 2 = \frac{4}{3} = 1\frac{1}{3} \times 12 = 16$.

Then 16 added to the before-mentioned 56 right angles will make 72.

But by a corollary to the 32nd Prob. of the 1st Book of Euclid the interior angles of every rectilinear figure are equal to twice as many right angles — 4 as the figure has sides; hence the interior angles of the 5-sided figure called a pentagon are $10 - 4 = 6$ right angles; whence the solid figure called a Dodecahedron being contained by 12 equal and equilateral pentagons, its amount in right angles will be $12 \times 6 = 72$, corresponding with the number of right angles contained in the 7 triangles before mentioned, and the 12 exterior angles of intersections. Thus the Dodecahedron (each of the solid angles of which is formed by the union of 3 plane obtuse angles), approaching nearer to the form of a sphere than any of the other solids bounded by plane superficies, was used by the Platonists to express the sphere of the Universe.

Thus is proved by the assistance of the key π that the R. A. Jewel is equivalent to the five geometrical solids, which were used by the Platonists to express their 4 elements and the sphere of the Universe.

In conclusion, let our attention be directed to the fact that the R. A. Jewel thus presents us with an emblem of those great attributes of the Deity—his eternity and triunessence. The former is represented by the circle which surrounds the Jewel, the latter by the relation which its component parts bear to the π ; while by the equivalent which we find in those parts for the 5 solids expressing the 4 elements and the sphere of the Universe, we are further reminded of His Omnipotence and Creative power, who first formed the elements out of nothing, and from them constituted that mighty frame within whose comprehensive sphere are included myriads of worlds, each containing millions of animated beings dependent on His will and mercy.

The Jewel which every Companion wears on his breast should inspire him with profound veneration for that Incomprehensible Being at whose command the world burst forth from chaos into light, and all created matter had its birth; whose infinite wisdom directs, and whose unspeakable goodness preserves and blesses every work that has proceeded from His Hands.

District Grand Master for Burmah,
Hon. P. S. G. W. of Grand Lodge of England.

THE CASE OF WILLIAM PRESTON.

Bro. Preston was an expelled Mason, but as our Order is more indebted to him for the development of its beauties than any other man since the time of the "immortal three" who formed the first Grand Lodge at Jerusalem, our readers will excuse our making this article somewhat diffuse.

Bro. William Preston was a Scotchman by birth, but removed to London, where he took up his permanent residence, in 1760. He was entered, passed and raised among the "Antients," a society which had its origin in a schism and secession from the Grand Lodge of England. Preston's clear perception, however soon convinced, him that his party was not a legally-constituted one and he left them and applied for, and was received into, membership under the banner of the regular Grand Lodge of England.

With the utmost assiduity did he study the principles of our Order, and a bright and successful student was he. He saw that the hidden treasures of Freemasonry required a more general development in order to be fully understood by the ordinary mind. To effect this was the chief object of his life, and how successful he was every intelligent Brother knows.

At a certain hour, daily, he applied himself to the drawing of designs on his trestle-board, and so perfect were his plans that the Craftsmen, wheresoever dispersed, have been since engaged in executing them, and have never been at a stand for want of employment.

On Thursday, 21st May, 1772, in order to have the counsel and advice of the Craft, he gave a banquet at his own expense, at the Crown and Anchor tavern, in the Strand, London, to which he invited all the masonic wisdom and talent of Great Britain to be present.

According to his request, the Brethren assembled early, and he was not slow in announcing the object he had in view in convoking them. He said that "Freemasonry in order to preserve its standing must spread its roots and expand its branches far and wide, for the purpose of extending its capabilities to meet the exigencies of the times." He then laid before them the result of long and arduous labor; the present system of lecturing (a reconstruction of the old), as practised in England in the beginning of the present century; whence it was introduced to the United States by Bro. T. S. Webb. It was discussed seriatim, approved and adopted. Bro. Preston then became exceedingly popular and was employed as an Assistant under Bro. Heseltine, Grand Secretary who wished at that time to publish an improved edition of the Book of Constitutions, which would bring down the history of Freemasonry to his own time. Considering Bro. Preston the most eligible to prepare the work for the printer, he gave him the entire charge of it, and free access to all the documents and papers of the Grand Lodge. When the most laborious part of the work was performed, and it was nearly ready to go to press, Bro. Heseltine wanted to give an acquaintance of his, a Bro. Noorthouck, Treasurer of the Lodge of Antiquity, an interest in its publication, and appointed him to assist Preston in completing it. Bro. Preston having done all the work of selecting, arranging, etc., thought he was entitled to the individual honor of his labors and declined the offer, when the job was taken from him altogether and given to Noorthouck. Seeing that the honors he had so well earned were taken from him and given to another, who had no right whatever to them, he remonstrated warmly and threw up the office of Assistant Grand Secretary in disgust, and, some say, withheld a part of the material he had collected for the book. This displeased Bro. Heseltine, who was not long waiting for an opportunity of resenting the offence which Preston had given him, and the latter was arraigned for a violation of the laws of the Grand Lodge in attending a sermon at church in masonic costume; and in his defence, Bro. Preston said that this regulation of the Grand Lodge—the one which they said he had violated—was "the height of absurdity and could not be admitted by any person who professed himself a friend to the Society." He also said that "the Lodge of Antiquity had its own peculiar rights formally secured to it at the revival in 1717, and was determined to preserve them inviolate, and it was very questionable if the Grand Lodge was empowered to make laws binding on a Lodge which had acted on its own independent authority from a period long anterior to the existence of that body." On the 30th of January, 1778, he (Bro. Preston) was "expelled from the Grand Lodge and declared incapable of attending the same or any of its Committees."

In 1787, when the Duke of Cumberland was Grand Master, the case of Bro. Preston was submitted to the Grand Lodge, who then, in a better and more masonic spirit, reconsidered all its former proceedings and reinstated Bro. Preston to all the rights and honors of Freemasonry.

MASONIC FUNERAL IN SPAIN.

We are indebted to our excellent Companion José M. Pastor, M.E.Z. of St. John of Jerusalem Chapter, No. 203, Liverpool, for the following interesting note. Truly there is now hope for old historic Spain.

The following is a translation of a paragraph from the "Reforma," a newspaper published in Madrid:—The Correspondencia of the 30th August, in describing the burial of Major General Escalante, says that behind the hearse certain symbolical attributes were displayed of which the people did not understand the meaning, and which we proceed to explain. A servant carried behind the car containing the corpse, the insignia of the Masonic Order to which the deceased had belonged, followed by several brethren of the lodge of which he had been a member. We had the pleasure of seeing a deputation of the Mantuana Lodge, No. 1 of the Oriente of Madrid, forming a perfect and regular lodge, marching in procession according to ancient custom, the apprentices first, followed by the Fellow Crafts and Master Masons; the brother Secretary, accompanied by the Treasurer; the Worshipful Master, having his Wardens on either side, came next, and the Director of Ceremonies in the centre. The Grand Oriente of Spain and the Mantuana Lodge wished to honor the memory of a brother, although he was not an active member of any lodge on the Register of the Grand Oriente of Spain. This is, without doubt, the first public act of Freemasonry in Spain, which has labored so much and continues to labor in the interests of civilization and progress. Having now shown its existence, we are sure that it will not rest satisfied with that, but availing itself of the liberty which we now breathe, not only will give some more ostensible proofs, but, faithful to its magnificent constitution, it will be the firmest support of national liberty and of the progress of mankind.

YOUNG FREEMASONS.

(To the Editor.)

SIR,—Permit me space for a few remarks with reference to your excellent article on Young Freemasons and the Masonic Charities. I certainly object to the term charity applied to those institutions—looking upon them in the light of provident societies—and I think, on a mature consideration, it will be viewed in the same light. There are none allowed to become candidates without the parent having been a subscribing member a stipulated time—hence a claim follows as a provident society. The most affluent—those who stand on the highest spoke of fortune's wheel subscribe to-day, never anticipating the reverses to which all are subject in this world of change, but provide by their subscriptions against an emergency that may, and sometimes does, happen. And then with regard to their countenance and support, I unhesitatingly say that there is more than sufficient money paid by the members, if it were properly applied, to meet every applicant—and half as many more. Thus it will appear that I am making a grave charge, but no more grave than true. The charge is not against the managers of those excellent institutions, of whose honour there is not a shadow of a doubt; nor in the executive at the grand lodge, who are equally worthy of confidence. But the improper application rests with the private lodges, many of whom, instead of appropriating their surplus funds to the support of these excellent homes, improvidently spend them on refreshments, and thus some thousands are consumed annually that might be better applied. I have known some, and could point to them, who have spent 100l. on refreshments in the course of a year, whilst perhaps out of 30 or 40 applicants only 6 cases are met. Having subscribed for a number of years, and never dreamt that it was the intention for monies of the society to be thus applied, I ask, is it right? and appeal to the consciences of those brethren who know what I state to be true, begging them, in the name of all that is great and good, and for the honour of the craft, so to support the funds that every legitimate case may be met; they will thus do honour to the society, and have the blessing of many who need support. With best wishes for the prosperity of these institutions, I am, &c.,

SUPREME COUNCIL, NEW YORK.

REPORT OF ILL. BRO. ALBERT G. GOODALL, GRAND REPRESENTATIVE, ON FOREIGN RELATIONS.

To the Supreme Council of Sov. Gr. Ins. Gen. of the 33rd and last degree Ancient Accepted Rite, for the Northern Masonic Jurisdiction, U.S.A.

SCOTLAND.

The history of Masonry in Scotland, by Wm. A. Laurie, is accepted as the best authority, bringing it to the late period of 1859.

The Supreme Council of Scotland, 33rd and last degree Ancient Accepted Rite, was established at Edinburgh in 1848, by virtue of authority from the Supreme Council of the same Rite of France, and with power to work the degrees, from the 17th, or Council of Princes, to the 33rd. The only variation or addition which they make in the Rite, is by giving in connection with what they call the Royal Order of Scotland, R.H.M., of Kilwinning, being the old legendary degree, for which our Scottish brethren appear to have a deep veneration.

The word "Scottish," which has accidentally and improperly been incorporated with the Ancient Accepted Rite, appears to have no lawful origin as such; at least, not from the land of Scotia, as they are among the last who have thus far adopted that Rite, and hence receive the word Scottish from foreign Jurisdictions.

The Supreme Council is well organized, having J. Whyte Melville as the Sov. Gr. Com., and Alexander J. Stewart, Gr. Sec. H.E.; as yet they have made but little advancement in perpetuating the sublime degrees of the Ancient Accepted Rite.

IRELAND,

which, next to England, is the most identified with our own country, gives the brightest Masonic record of any other Jurisdiction where the Roman Catholic religion has such control over so large a portion of the inhabitants. The origin, interesting history, and progress of the Order in that island, has been given in detail by various Masonic authors.

Many prominent persons and patriots who have left an honoured name in the memory of their countrymen, were active members of the Order, whose education, enlightened mind and liberal views, enabled them to soar above the narrow ideas and petty dogmas of a jealous religious faith.

The Order as it now exists in Ireland, is more united, and, in my opinion, better regulated and systematized than any Jurisdiction I have yet visited; all the different Bodies and Rites being under one able management and governing head, as follows: The Grand Lodge of Ireland, Grand Royal Arch Chapter, Grand Conclave of High Knights Templar, Grand Council of Rites, and Supreme Council, 33rd and last degree Ancient Accepted Rite. The Duke of Leinster has for many years presided over these Bodies, and the systematic arrangements, harmonious and prosperous condition of the Order, is the best evidence of his able administration.

During the past few years, the higher degrees of the Ancient Accepted Rite have advanced rapidly; especially the Chapters of Rose Croix, known as Prince Masons, and the Consistories of S.P.R.S. When and where the authority was obtained to constitute the Supreme Council, 33rd degree, I was unable to ascertain, and strange to say, it appears there was only one person who could give that important information, and he was absent at that time from Dublin. From published records, it appears that Rose Croix Chapters, Order of Heredom and Knights of Kadosh, were in successful operation prior to 1807, as during that year Ill. Bro. Dalcho, of the Southern Supreme Council at Charleston, S.C., delivered an oration relative to the principles and workings of Masonry, which was republished by the Bodies in Ireland, with the interesting correspondence between them and Bro. Dalcho. The following is the title-page: "Orations of the Ill. Bro. Frederick Dalcho, Esq., M.D. Reprinted by permission of the Author, under the sanction of Ill. the College of Knights of K.H., and the Original Chapter of Prince Masons of Ireland, Dublin, 1808."

My visit to, and reception by the Grand Lodge of Ireland, and the fraternal courtesies extended to me by the Duke of Leinster, Sov. Gr. Com., and other members of the Supreme Council, was all that could be desired for a permanent renewal of relations of amity with our brethren in that truly loyal Masonic Jurisdiction.

GRAND INSPECTORS-GENERAL, 33°.

From my observations in South America and Europe, I find in most instances that the many difficulties, dissensions, separations and formation of spurious Masonic Bodies, especially in the Ancient Accepted Rite which is now so universal, have to a great extent, resulted from an improper exercise of imaginary power of members of the 33d degree, a large number of whom I have met abroad being totally ignorant of the laws, usages and principles of the Order, and not able to pass a correct examination in the three first degrees of Masonry; having, as a general rule, received all their professed knowledge of the mysteries by communication, and with an occasional reference to certain philosophical publications, imagine they are proficient in the secret work, and have full power to exercise their selfish, and, too often, personal ambitions and corrupt aims, by the power granted in the ancient constitutions; and I feel that I cannot be too urgent in bringing this important subject to the serious consideration of the Council, in the hope that this growing evil may receive the prompt attention of this and other Jurisdictions, as it is necessary that there should be mutual co-operation between the legitimate Grand Bodies to assist each other in the enforcement of their prerogatives, and prevention of at least the recognition of spurious and irregular assemblies, and imposition now so much practised on the Fraternity at large.

GRAND REPRESENTATIVES OF AMITY.

This class of Ill. members of the Order have been, in the past, and are still, as a general rule, far more ornamental than practically useful; and in many instances are a serious detriment to the Grand Bodies they mis-represent, so far as their devoting the time and attention to correspondence, or the proper exchange of information between the respective Bodies; and the same remark may, to a great extent, be applied to Grand Secretaries, most of whom appear to consider their Masonic duties are confined to their local Jurisdictions, and hence the remarkable fact to any inquiring travelling Brother, how very deficient of proper information are Grand Bodies in general of each other's operations, especially from foreign countries. Grand Representatives in Masonry correspond with ambassadors in the civil or political world, and as their duties and powers are not definitely specified in the ancient constitutions or other Masonic law, they sometimes claim peculiar and exclusive privileges, and thus create difficulties that are injurious to the peace and harmony of the fraternity. It is my opinion, that while Grand Representatives may be necessary and proper for relations of amity and any special negotiations, their positions and privileges should be clearly stated, and all regular communications sent to the Grand Secretary of each Body, that prompt attention may be given and replies received direct.

SPECIAL TREATIES OF ALLIANCE.

During the past half century, many peculiar circumstances and questions appear to have arisen that necessitated the making of treaties of alliance between various Grand Bodies of the New and Old World, which treaties are still in full force; and, however important they may have been at that time, the age of progress has so materially altered the condition of affairs between men and nations, that many points in those treaties are now objectionable. I therefore call the attention of the Council to the consideration of the subject, and those foreign Grand Bodies with whom they have such treaties of alliance.

A MASONIC CONGRESS.

The divided condition of Masonry in the different Rites, and great want of uniformity in the Rituals and more essential parts of the secret work, has long convinced the active members of the fraternity of the necessity of remedying the same, and a general congress of all the regular Bodies of the Ancient Accepted Rite has been twice proposed for this purpose, to meet in London or Paris. The desire for such a union is evidently on the increase, and until then we cannot reasonably expect to make the much-needed reforms, settle the many disputed questions, and absorb or legalize the spurious Bodies.

In conclusion, I beg to state that the extensive field over which I have travelled, while affording unusual opportunity for obtaining correct information, has required much time and labor to accomplish what is recorded in this report. If the information should prove of any value to this Supreme Body or the Order at large, my object will be accomplished; and with the hope that others, more gifted in Masonic knowledge, may be induced to follow in giving a correct historical record by which we can all unite in the universal bond of brotherhood, is the earnest desire of,

Most fraternally yours,

ALBERT G. GOODALL, 33°.

Grand Rep. of Foreign Relations.

The New Vade Mecum (invented and manufactured by Charles H. Vincent, optician, of 23, Windsor-street, Liverpool) consists of a telescope well adapted for tourists, &c., to which is added an excellent microscope of great power and first-class definition, quite equal to others sold at ten times the price. Wonderful as it may seem, the price of this ingenious combination is only 3s. 6d., and Mr. Vincent sends it (carriage free) anywhere, with printed directions, upon receipt of post-office order or stamps to the amount of 3s. 10d.—ADVT.

itself immediately felt, for it would take under its control and utilise the activity of the individual brethren, and thus conduce to a useful aim. The Freemason cannot rest satisfied by interesting himself only individually in the spread of humanity, and thus merely performing what is done likewise by educated non-Masons. Besides, our symbols lead to that which is methodical, and also to a concentration of separate powers, by the organising of them all. This organisation must be created by the brethren, through the means of the free associations. As soon as such an association is progressing satisfactorily, as soon as the brethren perceive apathy and powerlessness far behind them (like visions of phantoms), they must take into consideration in what manner the desire to do good can be converted into a general and useful activity.

To the brethren that are deputed to report on this subject, we shall devote the following chapter.

CONSECRATION OF THE BURDETT COUTTS LODGE, (No. 1278).

The consecration of the Burdett Coutts Lodge (1271), whose meetings are to be held at the Approach Tavern, Approach-road, Victoria Park, took place on Thursday last, Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary, performing the ceremony.

Among the brethren present we noticed—R. H. Marsh, W.M., 1196; Wm. Sawyer, S.W., 1196; J. Showbridge, 158; C. Lacey, W.M., 174; E. Davies, P.M., 228; J. H. Harmsworth, W.S., 1178; John Dyer, 22; C. Gompertz, W.M., 869; Stanley Balcombe, 1072; J. Lockley, P.M., 757; A. G. Goodall, Rep. G. L. New York; W. B. G. Key, P.M., 198, P.S.G.W. for Kent, and P.P.D.C. for Suffolk; A. Schurboom, 931; A. Wentzell, 511; Kemble Smyth, 55; John M. Morley, 742; Charles Ireland, 860; H. Massey, P.M., 619; John Saunders, S.W.; W. J. Shenton, J.W.; H. Lloyd, Sec.; F. G. Farrant, S.D.; W. Gathercole, J.D.; James Long, I.G.; T. Lloyd, Sen.; and H. G. Bass.

At the ceremony of consecration the S.W. chair was occupied by Bro. W. Farnfield, P.A.G. Sec., and the J.W. chair by Bro. W. Young, P.G.S.B., Bro. F. Walters, P.M. (73), acting as I.G.

The lodge was opened in the three degrees, and the installing officer addressed the brethren.

The petition and warrant were afterwards read by Bro. Lloyd.

Bro. Hervey constituted the brethren into a regular lodge, and the Rev. Bro. D. SHABOE proceeded to give the following oration:—

W.M., Officers, and Brethren, having been requested to officiate as chaplain on this occasion, the time has now arrived for me to address a few remarks to the brethren present. First, I congratulate the lodge on its name. I trust that like her whose name it bears, this lodge will have great, glorious and laudable objects always in view. She

In maiden meditation, fancy free, hath denied herself from participating in the joys as well as the cares of a wedded life, and though deprived of that most holy love, a mother's affection for her offspring, still with an open hand, a noble heart, and an unrestrained love for her poorer brethren, she hath made them her children by adoption, and always is thoughtful for their wants. So may this lodge manifest during the many years it is destined to flourish, a similar feeling towards those who may come within its benign influence. To you, W.M.-elect, and brethren, who are the founders of this lodge, permit me with all the earnestness of my order to inculcate upon you the necessity of strict care in admitting candidates for the mysteries of our society. Tell them Masonry is not a shop for profit or sale, but a rich storehouse for the greater glory of our God and the welfare of our fellow man. Teach them, when you comply with the predominant wish of their hearts, when they are made and you admit them into Light, that for them as Masons there is no more shadow, tell them to Take this thought as they gaze abroad,

That in heaven and earth
Shades owe their birth
To Light: and Light is the shadow of God.

And that when the three grand principles on which Masonry is erected,—brotherly love, relief, and truth,—are daily carried into practice, no earthly joys or pleasures to them can be more perfect. You, W.M. elect, we cordially felicitate on the acceptance of this great and responsible position. Here, by precept you are so well and thoroughly competent to inculcate, by example so gloriously to enunciate, the beauties of our noble Order, founded on the purest principles of piety and virtue, I hope that T.G.A.O.T.U. will for many many years spare you to witness the prosperity of your work this day. May open hands and cheerful hearts spring up around you lodge-night of after lodge-night. Hearts are like God's meadows, some, it is true, like the green ones of the external world, are barren and unproductive from want of a genial nature and the sympathetic irrigations of a thoughtful one, but when they are rich and fertile, like yours for instance, their hearts are troops of friends; and though like the sweet clover of the field these may be and are mowed down by the inevitable scythe, it is only to be succeeded by fresh ones, who following the example of their predecessors and encouraged by the same, shall bring forth their fruits yet still more abundantly. And to every member of this lodge who is present here this day, and to those who shall be happily admitted to the same, I admonish with all the impressiveness the subject demands, to let your light so shine that when those who are not within the Order, shall view with admiration your brotherly love, your charity, and above all truth, they may exclaim

"See how these Masons love one another."

After this followed the anthem "Behold how good and joyful a thing it is," which was beautifully chanted; to which succeeded the first portion of the Dedication prayer by the Chaplain; then the Sanctus; and the Grand Secretary, after the usual ceremony of consecration had been completed, dedicated the Lodge to Masonry, and the second portion of the dedication prayer was then delivered.

Bro. Marsh, by desire of the W.M., recited next an ode written by Bro. Sawyer, the delivery of which was enthusiastically cheered. The Constitution of the Lodge was the next step in order, and the ceremony was completed by the singing of the anthem, "Glory to God in the highest."

The lodge was then resumed in the second degree, and Bro. James Terry was presented by Bro. H. G. Buss for Installation.

The Grand Secretary formally installed the worthy Brother in the chair of K.S., and the Installation being completed the W.M. appointed as his officers:—Bro. John Saunders, S.W., Bro. W. Isaac Shenton, J.W.; Treasurership vacant till next meeting, Bro. Hy. Lloyd, Secretary, Bro. F. Tarrant, S.D.; Bro. Gathercole, J.D.; Bro. Long, I.G.; Bro. Gilchrist, T.

The Grand Secretary concluded the ceremony with the customary charges, the applause which succeeded being both loud and long.

Bros. Hervey and Col. Burdett were elected honorary members, and severally returned thanks.

The W.M. informed the brethren that having obtained the warrant from the Grand Master, it was thought right to obtain the permission of Miss Coutts to use her name for the lodge, and he (the W.M.) had written to her on the subject. The answer he received was as follows:—

Chrenberg Hall, Torquay, Sept. 20th, 1869.

Sir,—I received a very gratifying communication from you, about ten days since, to the effect that it had been the wish of a number of the Freemasons resident in the neighbourhood of Victoria Park to connect my name with their new Lodge, and that they had obtained the permission of the Grand Master of the Order. It is difficult for me to express how much I value the mark of regard which your act indicates, but how very deeply it impresses me with the conviction how dear those objects are (which I have feebly yet consistently endeavoured to promote) to the hearts of Englishmen, and I earnestly pray that God's Holy Spirit will guide your Lodge in all its members may undertake in the sacred cause of charity, whether in your private or public relations. I cannot conclude my brief and inadequate expression of the sense I entertain of the honour you confer upon me without explaining the cause of a delay in answering your letter, partly due to two causes—first, my absence from home, and secondly the large amount of correspondence I have been engaged in since an effort I have made to interest the public in the introduction into public and other schools of systematic education in regard to the treatment of animals, and of the inculcating not simply of humane feelings, but feelings of duty and obligation towards creatures sharing God's great gift of life equally with ourselves—dependent upon us, whilst the Creator gives them into our charge—but upon whom we depend, not for our luxuries but our necessities. Could I venture to hope your Lodge would specially take up this great branch of charity? May I also depend upon your offering in my behalf my sincere thanks to every member of the Lodge, and to beg them to believe that I remain their grateful, and, if I may so co-join myself with the object of their Order, their fellow-worker?

I am, Sir, faithfully your obliged,
ANGELA G. BURDETT COUTTS.

Bro. HERVEY read a letter from the G.M. and also one written to the G.M. by Miss Coutts, wishing to know what she should present to the lodge, and the brethren unanimously decided that the Lodge Bible would be the most acceptable present she could make, especially if she would write her name in it.

The W.M. announced that Bro. R. Spencer of Gt. Queen-street, had presented the lodge with its Tyler's jewel of office, and then the lodge was closed.

The brethren afterwards sat down to a most elegant banquet provided by the host of the Approach Tavern. The customary toasts were given and honored, and some charming singing assisted to make a delightful evening.

Bro. GOODALL, the representative of the Grand Lodge of New York, returned thanks for the foreign visitors, and Col. Burdett having been associated in the toast, responded also.

Bro. HERVEY proposed "the W.M." in very flattering terms, and

The W.M. returned thanks and hoped that the brethren would pursue that great object which was always in the mind of that lady who gave the name to the lodge—charity.

The other usual toasts followed and were drunk with great enthusiasm, and the brethren separated rather late at night.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE, The Great Cure for Cholera and Consumption.

A Newly-discovered principle residing in Gum Benjamin (Styrax Benzoin), the chief chemical product of which has hitherto been Benzoic Acid, well known and highly valued by medical practitioners. The great difficulty which the discoverer encountered in bringing out this important remedy was the form in which to present it to the faculty and the public, the new chemical being amorphous and incapable of crystallization. It has therefore been deemed advisable to prepare a highly-concentrated solution of the product, combining it with such adjuncts as are considered natural auxiliaries. PRICE'S BENZODYNE is stimulant, anodyne, and mechanically astringent, arresting fluxes and hæmorrhages of all kinds both external and internal, possessing singular efficacy in the following diseases:—Ague, Bronchitis, Consumption, Colic, Cholera, Cold, Cough, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Debility in all its various forms, Fevers, Influenza, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Spasms, Ticdolereux, &c., &c. PRICE'S BENZODYNE has been tried repeatedly in these cases and has never failed to cure.

It immediately relieves all pain, actually sheathing the organs with a protective matter, which defies the action of the most virulent blood-poisons, and thus PRICE'S BENZODYNE acts as the most powerful styptic now known to science, being the only effective external application for cuts, bites of insects, and all open wounds. In Cholera, as in Consumption, its effects are astounding, while Chronic Cough yields to its curative influences in a few hours.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is acknowledged by the highest Medical authority to be the most wonderful medicine yet introduced to the public; it may be taken at any time by both young and old with the most beneficial effects in all cases, leaving no bad effects like Laudanum, Chlorodyne, or any other poisonous and imperfect preparations, and can be given when no other could be tolerated.

In Consumption and Cancer its peculiarly soothing properties render it a boon to the sufferer in allaying the cough, mitigating night perspirations, and in relieving pain, &c.

In every stage of those dire diseases it gives an amount of ease not attainable by any other remedy.

In all cases of Chest Affections, as Asthma, Bronchitis, Winter Cough, Palpitation, &c., PRICE'S BENZODYNE is a very valuable medicine, producing a composed and tranquil state of the system, and quickly relieving the cough, assisting expectoration, and in a few days removing the most distressing symptoms.

In Hysteria, Epilepsy, Gout, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nerve Pains it is justly valued, as it is given with immediate benefit, relieving pain and suffering however violent the attack.

In Diarrhoea, Cholera, Alvine Discharges, spasms and colics of the intestines, &c., its effects are signal, as it never fails to check the disease.

CONSUMPTION IN ALL ITS STAGES CURED.

Coughs, Whooping Cough, Asthma, Bronchitis, Fever, Ague, Diphtheria, Hysteria, Rheumatism, Diarrhoea, Spasms, Colic, Renal and Uterine Diseases are immediately relieved by a dose.

During the period of Dentition of Children it will be found invaluable, and in curing Whooping Cough, Spasms, dispelling Flatus, preventing Convulsive Fits, Heats, &c., to which they are so liable.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is specially adapted for Naval, Military or Traveller's medicine chests, and for Hospitals and Dispensaries everywhere.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 14d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s. and 22s., by all chemists

THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.

Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills, are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary Diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL.

Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says:—"I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued Cough, Pain, and Irritation of the Chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."

This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers, in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. CROSBY, Chemist, Scarborough.

* * Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.

THE AMERICAN FREEMASON

is Monthly, of sixteen double-column quarto pages of entirely original matter, and translations from the French Italian, and German Masonic papers and periodicals of the day. It is devoted to the discussion of the rights of Lodges and individual Freemasons, in contradistinction to the assumptions of Grand Lodges, and the un-Masonic doctrines and arrangements of "high degrees." Its motto is—Belief in the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man. Its price is Five Shillings a year—a sum so small that no Freemason, for pecuniary reasons, need be a non-subscriber to it.

Trans-Atlantic Subscribers to the AMERICAN FREEMASON will receive it Post-paid from the Office of Publication direct, at their respective Post-offices, upon payment of the subscription to

BRO. GEORGE KENNING

3 & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN, LONDON, E.C.

All Subscriptions begin with March 15th, 1869, and end with February, 1870.

The AMERICAN FREEMASON is not the organ of any Grand Lodge; but speaking the words of truth, manhood, and independence, advocates freedom for Masonry in America, and the rights of Freemasons in their Lodges—rights which, by our Grand Lodges, in their subservency to high degrees, have been invaded, until at present they are nearly obliterated.

Subscribers in the British Colonies will please address all Subscriptions and Correspondence to J. FLETCHER BRENNAN, Editor, 114, Main-street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

TO THE NERVOUS & DEBILITATED EPILEPTIC SUFFERERS AND OTHERS.

HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA, discovered, introduced, and extensively prescribed by the late eminent Dr. MARSHALL HALL, has proved an infallible remedy (by oxydizing the blood and supplying its saline constituent) for Indigestion, Debility, Coughs, Asthma, Consumption, Skin, Liver, Stomach, and Nervous Affections, more especially Epilepsy, Apoplexy, and Paralysis. The successful results of this new chemical preparation are beyond all precedent, and the extraordinary cures effected by the late discoverer, and by his successor (Dr. Sutton), in the above maladies are without a parallel in the annals of medicine; and it is confidently believed that in no case need the sufferer despair, for practical experience has demonstrated, and signal success warranted the assertion, that in 99 cases out of every 100 complete cures may be relied on.

Sold in Bottles at 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and Cases of £5 each, by

DR. SUTTON, M.D., 15, REGENT SQUARE, LONDON, W.C.,
 and in BOLTON by PRIESTLEY, Chemist.

The following are a few Testimonials published by privilege.

Sir Charles Locock, Physician-Accoucher to Her Majesty, stated at a meeting of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society, that in sixteen cases of Epilepsy he had effected permanent cures by the use of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa.

"September 8, 1868.—The Editor of the Bury Gazette returns thanks to Dr. Hall for the great benefit he has received from his Chlorate of Potassa treatment in a severe nervous disease."

Sir J. Ferguson, King's College Hospital, London, says—"I have repeatedly prescribed Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa and found it an agreeable and beneficial remedy."

Extract from the Lancet, April 1, 1867—"In conclusion, we are of opinion that Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is a far superior remedy to the ones in general use for Nervousness, Indigestion, and Liver Complaints, when judiciously prescribed."

Sir Benjamin Brodie says—"What Chloride of Lime is to the foul sewer, Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is to the blood."

Professor Syme says—"The effects of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa in obstinate cases of disease are as astonishing as perplexing."

Dr. Lankester, the eminent coroner, says—"Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is calculated to entirely supersede iron, mercury, sarsaparilla, quinine, and cod liver oil."

Sir Philip Crampton says—"I believe there is no condition of the system that may not be benefited by Dr. Hall's Potassa."

Sir T. Lawrence says—"I have found Dr. Hall's Chlorate an excellent remedy in Skin Diseases. I presume it is by oxydisation."

Sir T. Watson says—"I know that it is an invaluable remedy."

Sir Edward Borough, 9, Fitzwilliam-square, Dublin, certifies Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa has been of the greatest benefit to a member of his family.

The Earl of Clarendon certifies that Dr. Hall's Chlorate cured a case of indigestion of 15 years' duration.

Dr. HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA may be procured by order through any Chemist. Ask for "Dr. HALL'S Chlorate," and do not be imposed on with the common article. It is sold in Bolton by Priestley, Chemist, 12, Deansgate; or it may be had direct from Dr. Hall's successor, Dr. JOHN SUTTON, M.D., 15, Regent square, London, W.C., who undertakes the positive cure of all chronic diseases before payment.

Dr. HALL'S Chlorate is sold in MANCHESTER by JEWELL, Market-street; in LIVERPOOL by PRIESTLEY, Lord-street.

N.B.—Dr. Sutton will shortly repeat his Lecture on this subject. The Lecture sent for two stamps.

CRYPTONYMUS has the honour and pleasure to announce to the Masonic and general public that he has in active preparation a Complete Exposition of all the Degrees of Freemasonry including the Highest Degrees, With several unknown to the M. W. the G. M. and Cardinal de Ségur.

The revelations made by Barruel, Bernard, Carlile, Clavel, Fellowes, Finch, and Monseigneur de Ségur are nothing to this, which, without the permission of Grand Lodge, will now illuminate the Masonic East.

The whole to be copiously adorned with illustrations, comprising tracing-boards, insignia, and emblems such as the world has never seen as yet.

Ample notice will be given of time of publication, but those who have seen some fragments declare this really to be a restoration pur et compit of the original intentions of the Founder of Freemasonry—Adam, the Father of the Human Race.

EACH Paper contains every item of intelligence, from Mail to Mail, specially affecting the country or colony for which it is published, with an exhaustive summary of home and continental politics, science, art, and social news, and a retrospect of commercial transactions in Great Britain and on the Continent.

Manufacturers and Merchants may command the greatest markets of the world for their products through the mediums of publicity afforded by the EUROPEAN MAIL. A demand may be created where none exists at present, or an existing demand may be sustained and increased against the most energetic competition.

The EUROPEAN MAIL gives such perfect mercantile information that it is the highest commercial authority in the vast and prosperous territories through which it circulates. It is therefore an imperative necessity to the merchant who orders goods in bulk, and to the wholesale and retail distributor; it is also the most complete newspaper despatched from England, and is eagerly sought by all classes; it thus, unlike merely commercial newspapers, reaches and leavens the great communities who are the actual consumers of all products, and who must be acted upon by advertisement to require a special article before the merchant will venture to order a consignment.

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the Cannon-street Post Office, London.

FOREIGN NOTES BY THE EDITOR.

To the "Monde Maconique" we are indebted for much valuable information. Its September number is replete with interesting articles which we will briefly notice:—

The work of revising the regulations of the "Rite Ecossais" in France is being actively pursued, and with one contemplated reform we heartily concur, namely, the modification of the plenary authority at present possessed by the members of the Supreme Council 33°; powers which are described by Bro. D. Bagnaux as "dogmatic, administrative, and juridical." The wave of this reform will doubtless reach England, where, if the statements of our correspondent "Temple Crucis" may be relied on, it is essentially required. The advanced spirits of Ecossisme (we use the word for want of a better) have resolved to support the principle of universal suffrage in this respect, and to claim for every member of the Rite a voice in the election of its rulers. This is a fair solution of the difficulty, and will tend to the advantage of Rose Croix Masonry on the Continent. The knell of exclusiveness is thus sounded, and the vicious policy of isolation has received its "crowning mercy," the coup de grâce.

The Grand Orient has published its calendar for 1869. The total number of Masonic bodies, on its roll is 372, of which 272 are lodges, 62 chapters, and 16 councils, the other two being styled a "Consistory" and a "Grand College." There is an increase during the past year of eight lodges, against which there is a decrease of five chapters and two councils. The Grand Orient possesses 39 Ateliers in foreign countries, and has accredited representatives to most of the Grand Lodges in the world. Let us hope that the two great bodies of Freemasons in France will soon become one, and that the "Mother" Grand Lodge of England will before long be added to the list of those with whom our French brethren interchange orthodox Masonic relations.

The Lodge "Jérusalem des Vallées Egyptiennes" held a meeting on the 24th ulto., to present a medal to Bro. Boubée, honorary officer of the Grand Orient, in recompense of his long and valuable services. Bro. Boubée has attained the patriarchal age of 97, and has been a Mason since 1794! A great number of visitors attended to do honor to this remarkable veteran, who was one of the founders of the lodge. Bro. Boubée is the author of a "Manuel du Franc-maçon," of a poem called "Misraim," and of an historical notice on the establishment of Freemasonry in France.

The Lodge of "United, inseparable Brothers" at Paris, is doing a noble act by taking charge of orphan children who have lost both parents or the father only. The lodge provides for their maintenance and instruction, and finally apprentices its protégés to useful trades. May God speed their labour of love.

A Brother Alavoine writes to our esteemed Frere Favre, the editor of the Monde Maconique, complaining that the members of a spurious lodge at Jersey, called the "Friends of the Future," were not invited to a recent réunion of lodges at Rennes, although the lodges under the "biblical" Grand Lodge of England in the Channel Islands received invitations. We were well aware, and reiterate our conviction, that the authorities of the Grand Orient would never countenance such a Lodge, which was erected by the French Supreme Council of the 33° in direct violation of the right of Masonic jurisdiction which governs all well-regulated bodies in the Craft universal.

An interesting Masonic fête took place at the Camp of Chalons on the 30th July. It was organized by four sub-officers, Bros. Fabre, Horry, Farcy, and Villeneuve, assisted by Bro. Perrine. Lieutenant Rip presided, assisted by Lieut. Godefroy, and Serjeant-Major Poinot as Wardens. Among the toasts were "Fraternity," "Progress," "The Abolition of War," and "Peace universal." The last toast was saluted with unanimous bravos, and a collection for the poor terminated this truly Masonic meeting.

A circular has been issued by Bros. Colfavru and Massol respecting a proposed Masonic Council at Paris on the 8th December, in opposition, we presume, to the Papal Council at Rome. A declaration of the principles of Freemasonry is appended to this document. As the Craft have nothing to gain from such an assembly, we are tempted to repeat with reference to these Masonic congresses, cui bono?

Bro. Caubet writes a masterly article on the action taken by the Grand Orient of France respecting the pseudo-Supreme Council of Louisiana, but all his arguments, clever as they are, fail to convince us of the right of M. Chassaingnac to erect symbolic lodges in a State where a recognised Grand Lodge exists. That is the real question after all, and it has not been satisfactorily answered by any of the partisans of Chassaingnac either in Europe or America.

This number of Le Monde Maconique is very interesting, and we commend it to the attention of our readers.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—The Best Friends.—When bad health overtakes mankind, what would not be given to be freed from it? Holloway presents to all invalids the means of recovering their health, and renewing failing strength for a mere trifle. His Pills invariably produce the most satisfactory results where the digestion, circulation, nervous powers or other vital actions are at fault. The Pills purify the blood, balance its circulation, regulate the liver, stimulate the kidneys, and strengthen the stomach and intestines, on which they gently but effectually operate as aperients. Illness of the most alarming character which have withstood all other treatment, have gradually yielded to a course of Holloway's Pills, which will ever prove the invalid's safest friend.

Bro Yarker states in "Notes on the Temple," (page 12), that the "Knight of the Tabernacle, or Temple Priest," is a degree of 1686. We should be glad to hear on what grounds this statement is made, not for the purpose of mere curiosity, but as one anxious to know and accept the truth, and the truth alone, whatever that may be. We are quite ready to admit the existence of Masonic Knights Templar in the seventeenth century when the proof is forthcoming, but no such evidence occurs in the admirable notes by Bro. Yarker, neither have we been able to discover any elsewhere. No Encampment possesses records anterior to the latter part of the last century, and certainly none have documentary proof of the existence of the Templar Priest degrees before that of the Templar degree itself. At least none have been offered, and we speak only of what is known.

The subject of the origin of Masonic Templars is involved in mystery, and so much is this a fact, that one of the most accomplished historians of the Ancient Order, (Bro. Richard Woof, F.S.A., &c.), expressly observes in his valuable "Sketch of the Knights Templar," that those who read the work "must draw their own inferences, as no opinions have been offered." This learned writer seems to favour the idea, that the present Masonic Templars "are not entitled to be considered Knights by succession from the early Order." This is quite our opinion, although we believe the modern society is destined ultimately to become almost as powerful as its predecessors, and may achieve no end of good, under competent leadership and carefully-selected Knight Companions, who would unite (as Bro. Woof well remarks), "to perpetuate in its full integrity that grand principle which has ever been, and we trust may ever continue, the shining light and watchword of these time-honoured Orders—the great virtue of Charity."

Without doubt, it is the chief of all Masonic chivalric degrees beyond the Craft, and has progressed as Masonry has progressed in connection with the grand key-stone of our Order, The Royal Arch. The history of the "Jerusalem Encampment," Manchester, commences in 1786. The "Baldwyn," Bristol, about 1780, and the "Ancient York Conclave," Hull, also about 1780. These three Encampments have so far the distinction of proving their right to assume the first rank as respects antiquity in England. Should others possess earlier evidence of constitution they have only to produce them to secure a ready acknowledgment, but until such is done, whatever may be the present numerical arrangement, these three will still remain virtually ahead of all others as respects priority of existence. While we mention the "Ancient York Conclave," it is scarcely necessary to do more to express our meaning. To prevent error, however, it may be well to state, that it is not the "Ancient Ebor" at York, which is most inappropriately termed "Ancient," although only just constituted! Why such a title has been selected we know not, but it is clearly a most absurd one. It tends still further to complicate the history of the Order when Encampments of to-day are permitted by the authorities to unfurl their new banner, as if it had been carried in many a campaign and seen extensive service in defence of the Order.

If the "Ebor" must have a prefix, let it be Modern, but surely not Ancient. We mention this fact, also, because we understand this Encampment is one of the last constituted, and to take this opportunity to advise moresuitable titles for subsequent branches. No other modern Encampment is similarly designated.

Bro. Yarker's notes to the "Notes of the Temple" are most valuable, and most suggestive. Those at page 14, respecting Operative and Speculative Freemasonry, especially are well worthy of reproduction, and we hope to see a more exhaustive review of the work in these pages before long.

METROPOLITAN.

William Preston Lodge, No. 766.—On Thursday, 23rd Sept., Bro. Dr. Wilkinson, of Sydenham, Past Master of the Universal Lodge, No. 181, was installed W.M. of the William Preston Lodge, No. 766. The ceremony of Installation was most ably rendered by Bro. Garrod, P.M., of the Belgrave Lodge. During the installation, Bro. Wilkinson closed the lodge down in the third and second degrees, when these several charges were given. After which, the lodge being resumed in the second degree, Bro. Cragg was asked the usual questions prior to raising. The lodge was then resumed in the third degree, and Bro. Cragg was raised to the sublime degree of M.M. The banquet was of a very excellent character, and was served in the large room of the Clarendon Hotel, and this being a Banner Lodge, the setting out of the presiding W.M.'s, and of all the P.M.'s banners had a most pleasing effect, and added much to the decoration of the room. The visitors were, Bros. Hyde Clark, D.D.G.M. of Turkey; Garrod; Layton, J.W. Universal Lodge, No. 181; Rev. Haycroft, No. 181, and S.D. of the John of Gaunt Lodge, Leicester. The William Preston Lodge has lately been removed from Putney to Anerley, and has every prospect of success in its new locality.

PROVINCIAL.

ALNWICK.—Lodge No. 1167.—This lodge held its regular meeting at the Masonic Hall, Market-place, in the old county town of Northumberland, on Tuesday the 28th ulto.,—the last Tuesday in the month being the day of meeting—when the W.M. Bro. James Heatley (who has eminently worked this vigorous and prominent young lodge during its second year) in eloquent and sincere terms proposed the R.W. the Hon. Earl Percy, M.P. G.S.W. of England as Master of the Alnwick Lodge for the year ensuing. The S.W. Bro. H. H. Blair proposed Bro. Sec. Edward Thew Turnbull as Treas., and the J.W. Bro. Burn proposed Bro. Thomas Pickard as Tyler for the same period. The proceedings were most unanimous and carried out in true Masonic spirit by all present, and the room, which is being heightened and otherwise improved, was filled on the occasion. The installation will no doubt be well attended, and carried out as becomes so beautiful and imposing a ceremony, and especially when Northumbria's Son will be hailed as the worthy successor of K.S.

SCOTLAND.

Lodge Sterling Ancient, No. 30.—Taking advantage of the presence of Bro. the Rev. Dr. Chas. Rogers, of Lewisham, Kent, a P.M. of No. 30, who was in Stirling in connection with the inauguration of the National Wallace Monument, a special meeting of this Lodge was called for the purpose of congratulating Bro. Rogers on the completion of the Monument, and in acknowledgment of his services in furtherance of the movement for its erection. The R.W.M. presided, and in addition to a full attendance of the brethren of No. 30, a considerable number of visiting brethren from other Scottish Lodges were present. During the course of the evening the Junior Warden said: It ever gives us pleasure to meet once more any of our brethren whom the business of life calls from amongst us, but who are able again to visit the home of their Mother. There is a brother amongst us to night whom we have pride in meeting, as well as pleasure; and here in the bosom of our old mother, away from the cares, the struggles, the petty jealousies, and the miserable strifes of the outer world, we may freely indulge our feelings. He long was "honored with the chief command" here, and filled always with honor to himself and profit to the brethren, our most important office. As an office-bearer, he, in this very ancient and well-ordered lodge of Freemasons, was able so to impart his instructions, that they acquired new beauties by his handling, and I have often heard the brethren adverting in affectionate terms to the lessons of morality and wisdom they have received from him. I allude to Brother Rogers. Independently of our admiration of him as Masons, we as citizens of Stirling are under deep obligations to him for the public spirit which in him seems inherent. No well-considered scheme for the amelioration of the condition of the inhabitants, or for the beautifying of the town itself, was originated but had in him a hearty supporter, and many such schemes he originated himself. As Scotchmen, he claims our very highest admiration for the zeal, the energy, the determined bravery with which he originated and pushed to fruition his noble conception of a fitting monument to "Wallace Wight." (Cheers.) On first broaching his idea he was "pooh, poohed!" Nearly six centuries had elapsed since Wallace passed from the scene, and except a patriotic, free, happy, and contented people, there was no monument—I mean no actual embodiment in stone and lime—of the reverence, awe, and admiration with which we regarded the virtue, the wisdom, the genius, the valour, the patriotism incarnated in Wallace. Six centuries had passed, and the cold, the half-hearted, the satirical, had some show of excuse for asking, Who is this Dr. Rogers, who will make us build a monument, whether we wish or not, and which our forefathers deemed unnecessary. With a zeal and energy which nothing could tire, he proceeded to teach such people that although this matter had been neglected long, no reason existed why it should be neglected longer; and he used such convincing arguments, conveyed in such winning language, that he at last succeeded in imparting some share of his own enthusiasm to even the most frigid. (Applause.) At the time he was so exerting himself, I was far distant from Scotland, away in the highlands of Asia, but amongst many Scotchmen, and I tell you, brethren, we felt our patriotic feelings excited to something like ecstasy under the stirring appeals of Dr. Rogers. I mention this as an instance of the power he has of exciting enthusiasm. (Hear, hear, and applause.) The Rev. Dr. Gillan (at the banquet after laying the foundation stone of the monument), gave a very striking illustration of Dr. Rogers' zeal, energy, and bravery. The postage of Dr. Rogers' letters and circulars for the Wallace Monument amounted to £160, and during the five years of his secretaryship he wrote about twenty thousand letters. During that period he was attacked by ten periodicals, and bravely and successfully resisted them. Successful we know he was, because the necessary funds to begin with were subscribed. Brave and able he approved himself, because he dealt fearlessly with all opposition, and in the opinion of Scotchmen, must have done so successfully, because money still came in. (Applause.) We have him, then, with money ready, the site of his own choosing, but his difficulties not yet surmounted. There were numerous designs for the monument. Many of them showed talent, but though not altogether suitable, were preferred by gentlemen pretending to taste, and who had influence, who persistently advocated the claims of the designs of their choice. Bro. Rogers, with an eye for beauty not unworthy of our original Grand Master, selected, and successfully advocated the design we now have. In speaking of beauty, I do not mean delicate shapes and exquisite tints. He who would hang up a Murillo amidst the smoke of a Highland shieling, would show little appreciation of the fitness of things. A full meal girdle, fat braes, and plenty of them, would be the best beauties of such a dwelling. The monument, then, is upright, tall, strong, square, gray, massive, placed on a picturesque hill, in the midst of majestic scenery, overlooking a field of fame that will live in the hearts of Scotchmen for ever, and is a fitting type of the grandeur of character of the heroic leader whose virtues it is meant to hand down to all time. (Great applause.) I have endeavoured, however imperfectly, to sketch the reasons why we have pride as well as pleasure in the company of Bro. Rogers. He has approved himself a leader of men, and is one of the most distinguished sons ever "Stirling Ancient" sent forth. Brethren, I am sure you will all unite with me in heartily praying that the attributes of his mind may always be in the future what they have ever been in the past—wisdom, power, and beauty. (The Junior Warden resumed his seat amidst much cheering and applause.)—Bro. Rogers on rising to reply was received with renewed rounds of applause. In the course of his reply, he said that he had entered very earnestly into the project of a monument to Wallace, and when one goes earnestly about any work in Britain, he was sure to meet with opposition; opposition became detraction, which at length degenerated into personal abuse and obloquy, not even desisting such low depths as impugning the personal honesty of the person attacked. He had, in connection with the monument, met much of this sort of thing. But that which made him feel it most bitterly of all, was that which proceeded from Stirling, so well beloved. Stirling, where he had formed so many friendships, spent so many happy years, where not a tree, a stone, a foot of land, or a drop of water, but had entwined itself in his heartstrings. That from Stirling he should have met with the most malevolent misrepresentation, was very bitter indeed, and all because he could not approve of an allegorical design for the Wallace Monument which would have been insulting to England, and would in no way serve to enhance the memory of the great Scottish hero. At one time he had nearly sunk under the opposition and misrepresentation he met with. But friends, knowing his inmost thoughts, his most secret aspirations, stood by him, told their knowledge of him to the world, and infused new life into him. Not such friends as were fair to the face and false to the back, not such as would take his hand at the entrance to the monument, and stab his reputation in the armoury; but friends, who, from peculiar facilities knew the truth, and knowing it, stood by it, despite all that could be said by interested opposition, or malevolent foes. Such friends were the brethren of his Mother Lodge. He went on to say that his experience of Freemasonry wherever he had gone was just this, that it was Christianity, not dormant, but of an active, large Catholic spirit, thinking no evil until evil was proved. The Doctor during the course of his remarks, which extended to considerable length, was much cheered by the brethren. One statement especially so. He had heard that the enterprise was likely to prove abortive. Had such proved to be the case, he had arranged to buy the building plant. Then giving up his then pursuits, he had determined to go to America and to the colonies to raise sufficient funds to complete the monument, should it require to have been piled stone by stone with his own hands.—From the frank, hearty, enthusiastic character of the Doctor, the brethren were perfectly sure he would have done so had circumstances demanded it. Some other toasts followed, and we must not omit to mention that two songs, "Tis but a little faded flower," and "The Battle of Stirling Bridge," given by the bard, were beautifully rendered and rapturously applauded. The meeting separated at an early hour.

MARK MASONRY.

METROPOLITAN.

Cotterbrune were, on ballot, declared to be unanimously elected honorary members. Bros. Henry Massey, S.W. and W.M. elect, was duly installed W.M., and he appointed as his officers, Bro. A. D. Loewenstark, S.W. and Treas.; R. Ord, J.W.; W. Noaks, M.O.; T. H. Meredith, S.O.; E. Harris, J.O.; J. Terry, R. of M.; M. A. Loewenstark, Sec.; S. Harman, S.D.; G. W. Wheeler, J.D.; W. J. Walters, for his past services rendered to the lodge, as Secretary, during the past eight years. A letter of condolence was ordered to be sent to the widow of the late Bro. H. N. Goulty, of Brighton; the lodge was then closed and the banquet followed. Visitor, Bro. E. Kimber, Kent Lodge.

PROVINCIAL.

BIRKENHEAD.—Joppa Lodge, Mark Masons, 5, G.L.S.—The annual meeting of this lodge took place at the Masonic Rooms, Birkenhead, on the 27th inst., the officers being in attendance in full. The minutes of the preceding lodge were read and unanimously approved. The M.M.'s having retired, the board of P.M.'s was formed, and Bro. Stephenson was installed in the chair of K.S., according to ancient custom, and saluted in the presence of a goodly number of P.M.s. He then invested his P.M. and the board was duly closed. The M.M.'s were then admitted, and the W.M. was proclaimed and saluted, &c. The W.M. then proceeded to appoint the following brethren officers for the ensuing year, D.R.W.M. W. Bulley; Nosworthy, S.W.; Ambler, J.W.; Sillitoe, M.O.; Barclay, S.O.; Lambert, J.O.; Moore, Conductor; Howell, S.O.; Lewis, J.O.; Scott, T.K.; Hignett, Registrar J. Platt, P.C.P.J.W., Treas.; Mills, P.S.W., Master of Ceremonies; Friend Sec.; Robinson, Tyler; Sayers, Org. The business being ended, the lodge was closed in due form and harmony, when the brethren retired for refreshment, and Bro. P.M. W. Bulley was presented with a gold P.M.'s medal, in token of the respect and esteem evinced towards him by the brethren, and acknowledged in very suitable terms. The cloth having been withdrawn, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and the evening enlivened by some very excellent harmony from the brethren present.

IPSWICH.—Albert Victor Lodge, No. 70.—At the quarterly meeting, on Monday 20th inst., Bro. Thompson was elected W.M., and Bro. Golding, Treas. The brethren passed a code of bye-laws one or two brethren were proposed for advancement, auditors appointed, and the lodge closed in harmony.

THE BLOOD IN OLD AGE.—As age advances, the blood becomes thin and cloudy—or, in a full habit, thick and cloudy. The failing of the powers of life requires extra nutrition and support, and the blood yielding the excess required is soon overcharged with carbon, which gives to it the cloudy appearance. Being then impure, day by day the vitiated matter increases, and the body suffers from a thousand ailments. "The Blood Purifier"—Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla—supplies the extra nutrition to the blood, and restores to it its florid hue, and then the progress of decay is arrested, and the ailments disappear; man lives out his days, and the sunset of life is unattended with suffering. Testimonials with each bottle from the Hon. the Dean of Lismore, General Wm. Gilbert, of the Indian Army; and Rev. Francis Monck, of "The Gospel Evangelist." Ordered also by the Apothecaries' Hall, London. Sold by all Druggists, in bottles 2s. 6d., 4s., 4s. 6d. 7s. 6d., 11s. Pills and Ointment each in boxes 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d.—Caution. Get the red and blue wrappers, with the Old Doctor's head in the centre. No other genuine.—ADVT.

FREEMASONRY IN WILTSHIRE.

Not very long since we had the pleasure of reporting an interesting meeting of the Freemasons of Wilts held under the presidency of Lord Methuen, the Provincial Grand Master, at Chippenham, on the occasion of his appointment, as his Deputy, Bro. S. Wittey (who for several years had been the Treasurer of the Province), and also of presenting to Sir D. Gooch, Bart., M.P., as a testimonial from the Wiltshire brethren, the regalia of his office as Provincial Grand Master of Berks and Bucks; and likewise to Bro. Wittey, a testimonial from the brethren of the Devises Lodge.

We have now to record another assemblage of the Craft at the Town Hall, Chippenham, on Tuesday last week, on the occasion of the installation by Bro. Wittey of Bro. Parfitt, F.S.A., C.E., and P.P.S.G.W. of Somerset, as W.M. of the Lansdown Lodge of Unity, 626.

This lodge was for some time established at Calne, where latterly it had got somewhat in abeyance, and but for the exertions of Bros. Burt, Weaver, Biggs, and a few others of the brethren, the warrant would have been lost. It was therefore thought desirable to transfer it to Chippenham, and the change has been attended with very beneficial results. Eighteen new members have recently been added, and others are waiting to be elected.

The installation was very numerously attended, more than fifty brethren being present, many from Bath and other places, in compliment to the new W.M., who has long been an active member of the Craft in Somersetshire. Amongst the number, besides Bro. Wittey, the D.P.G.M. for Wilts, were the Rev. Bro. Davey, P.G. Chap. for England, the Revs. J. M. Dixon and F. H. Huyahe, Bro. G. Goldney, M.P., G. P. Goldney, F. Goldney, R. Bradford, P.G.S.W. for Wilts, W. C. Merriman, W. Simpson, W. Thompson, H. Weaver, P.G.S.W., Joseph Burt, P.G.S.W., John Spencer, P.G.S.W., J. Ellington Gill, G.S.B. and P.P.G.S., J. Randle Ford, P.G. Secretary, G. S. Barter, P.P.G.S.D., J. Kelway, P.J.G.W., S. G. Mitchell, P.P.J.D., Wm. Biggs, P.P.S.G.W., Charles Beckett, P.P.G.S.B., Wm. E. Reeves, P.P.G.O., James H. Pyne, Frank Phillips, Geo. Reynolds, Fred. W. Dowling, Francis S. Wilmot, Joseph Lane, F. V. Holloway, M. McHugh, P.M., 663, James Collins, with many others.

After the installation, the W.M. elected the following brethren as his officers:—W. Simpson, S.W.; Wm. Thompson, J.W.; J. M. Dixon, Chap.; Joseph Lane, Treas.; F. S. Wilmot, Sec.; J. Graham, S.D.; F. H. Goldney, J.D.; W. C. Merriman, D.C.

The W.M. then passed a high eulogium on Bro. Wittey, the installing master, and said it was his pleasing duty, as a recognition of his services to the Lodge, to present him with the volume of the Sacred Law; and also to present Bros. Biggs and Burt with jewels of office for their assistance in reusculating the Lodge. After each of these gentlemen had returned thanks, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to the Angel Hotel, Chippenham, where a banquet, served by Bro. Lawes in his usual excellent manner, awaited them—some beautiful haunches of venison being presented by the newly installed W.M., Bro. Parfitt, and a splendid dessert by the worthy M.P. for the Borough. The company were much indebted to the Stewards—Bros. W. C. Merriman, G. Goldney, M.P., W. Thompson, Joseph Burt, J. Goldney, W. Simpson and F. S. Wilmot—for the excellent arrangements which were made; and also to several brethren for some capital songs and music (between the toasts), led by Bro. Pyne, of Bath Abbey, who sung the "Old English Gentleman" in splendid style.

The following is the inscription on the Bible presented to Bro. Wittey:—

"This volume of the Sacred Law was presented by the brethren of the Lansdown Lodge of Unity, No. 626, to the V.W. Brother, S. Wittey, D.P.G.M., Wilts, on the occasion of his performing in that capacity his first ceremony in the installation of Bro. G. J. Parfitt, M.P. and P.P.G.S.W., Somerset, in the chair of the Lodge, and as a special mark of their appreciation of his high Masonic virtues and services rendered to the Lodge. Sept. 21, A.L. 5869, A.D. 1869."

The bible is a splendid specimen of the book-binder's skill, and is beautifully illustrated.

Mr. Wittey's services in connection with Masonry appear to have been highly appreciated by the Craft, for not only has he received the above present, as well as the gift adverted to at the last meeting at Chippenham, but also a jewel of office from Sir D. Gooch, Bart., M.P., which had been worn by the honourable baronet for many years, besides a valuable jewel, set in diamonds, by another friend, on his being appointed Principal in a Chapter in the Royal Arch; and a casket to contain the Masonic jewels from another brother.

We understand the annual provincial meeting will be held in Devises in about three weeks time, when a large attendance of the Craft is expected.

ROMANISM AND MASONRY—NOW AND THEN.

The Abbe de Segur, one of the dignitaries of the Roman Catholic Church at Amiens, France, having promulgated a document in denunciation of Freemasonry as antagonistic to church communion, M. Houssaux, by the way of rejoinder, publishes some very curious historical documents, exhibiting the good estimation in which, a century ago, the priests of Amiens held the Fraternity, in common with other good Catholics. In the first place, he quotes from the official narrative of the commissioners appointed on July 24, 1774, to install the lodge at Guise, in that district; "We arrived at the Orient of Guise, at ten in the morning, and alighted, in accordance with a gracious invitation extended to us, at the convent of the Minime Fathers, whose Superior received us with a hearty welcome. He made known to us, by words and signs, the fact of his being a Mason, and we subsequently recognized him as the Venerable (Master) of the aforesaid lodge at Guise." Among the charter members of the new lodge appears the names of Charles Françoise Cavarines (Superior of the Minime Monks), W.M.; Father Loth (Minime Friar), Orator; Louis Descorion (Minime Friar), Father Menechet (Canon of Oigny). Father Loth, the orator of the lodge, celebrated the installation with an eloquent address, during the course of which he said: "Such is the spirit of constitutional Masonry, its temple is the emblem of wisdom, of which discretion is the base, charity the crowning stone, liberty the device, equality its support, into which the spirit of domination has never entered, and into which no such pretensions can be admitted. May the spirit which animates me influence the heart of each Mason to extend and propagate the glory and benefit of Freemasonry."

Father Loth was no ordinary monk, but a respected and celebrated preacher.

Dispatched by his superiors, in 1776, to Paris, to assume charge of the Convent of the Place Royale, his Masonic brethren credited him as representative of the Lodge of Guise to the Grand Orient, where, being a zealous Mason, he faithfully discharged his duties. His celebrity as a preacher caused him to be sent to Brussels to officiate during the season of Lent. He excuses his departure to the Grand Orient in a letter which evidences as well his respect for his Masonic as for his ecclesiastical superiors.

His letter is dated "in the 12th month of the year of True Light, 5775," rather a remarkable confession for a Roman Catholic pastor, and says: "My position and civil engagements call me to Brussels, there to preach during Lent, at the court of Prince Charles. My position and my Masonic engagements demand that I should not quit the Orient of Paris without making you aware of the fact, begging of you, most illustrious brethren, to regard the motives of my absence without diminishing, in any degree, the zeal and fervor which I ever take glory in showing the Royal Art, nor the fraternal regards for those with whom I had the good fortune to be, and the honors which are due to you."

Contrary to usual custom, the Grand Master of France, the Duke of Chartres (Louis Philippe's father), considered this letter, from a preacher of Loth's reputation, worthy of special response, which was composed by an equally famous man, De Lande, the mathematician, who replied to the fashionable clergyman as follows:—

"We would experience poignant regret at your absence, during Lent, had you not forewarned us that you go, through the sweetness of your eloquence, to reawaken and vivify faith and evangelical light in the heart of a great prince and his court. It belongs only to a pure orator, zealous, and of the first order, to fulfill so honourable a mission. Hence the selection of you, for this holy task, announces, sufficiently, your worth and our temporary loss, in not having you among us to enlighten our works. You go forth, the same as in our Orient, to labour for the glory of the Great Architect of the Universe."

The authenticity of these documents is thoroughly verified, and their reproduction, at this date, may serve to enlighten ignorant and famous fanatical zealots declaring Masonry incompatible with true religion, as to the estimation in which our Fraternity has been, and still is, held by the intelligent and reputable professors of pure Christianity. The correspondence above given shows that a man of Father Loth's talents and celebrity, faithful and able to discharge his clerical functions, was far above the narrow bigotry which appears to actuate preachers of a lower degree, both Romanists and Dissenters.—Progress

PRUDENCE.—"Prudence teaches us to regulate our lives agreeably to the dictates of reason." It is an argument of great wisdom to do nothing rashly; nor to be obstinate in our opinions. Advise in your affairs with wise and good Masons; and think it more for your reputation to be instructed by those who understand better, than to act upon your own head. A virtuous life makes a man prudent, in God's esteem, and gives true conduct and experience, MASONIC ODE.

The following is the ode, written by Bro. W. Sawyer, which was recited by Bro. Marsh, on Thursday week, at the consecration of the "Burdett Coutts Lodge," held at the Approach Tavern, Approach-road, Victoria-park:—

I.
Obedient to one rhythmic law,
The universal forces tend
To one harmonious end,
As in the mystic lyre the Samian saw,
Girt with all the spheres of heaven,
The chords albeit seven
Did in a single strain consenting blend.

II.
In perfect union, concord true,
The planets in their orbits sweep,
Their single impulses pursue,
Yet inter-linking courses keep;
The trailing clouds in angel guise
Circle the ocean when they rise
And the sunshine and the rain,
Shape the leaf and tint the flower;
Kindred influences yield
Herded flock and hoarded grain,
Forest tree and grass of field:
All receive to give again,
Rendering threefold amplest dower.
There is no flaw in the mysterious chain,
Of common influence for common good,
But perfect is the law of love and brotherhood.

III.
And man? Shall he from this high order fall,
Mistrust his truer instincts, and control
That holiest dictate of his soul, --
Not each for each, but all for all,
Contending for the individual gain, and so Working the general woe?
The hopes of all the ages answer—No!
Man has no part with Him,
Whose place is high above the cherubim;
God only on the thunder-girdled throne,
Self-centred lives and reigns, and lives and reigns alone.

IV.
The task each Brother shares,
To-day its protest bears;
As in a temple we our voices raise,
To celebrated another victory won,
Over the selfish creeds;
Of individual needs,
Over the strifes that darken human days,
Over the discords mingling with the praise
Of heaven, in lives chiming in unison.

V.
Calm in the ample triumph that attends
Lives sanctified to great and generous ends,
We share the fruits of bloodless victories gained,
Of higher altitudes of life attained;
New light, new thought to hasten on the time,—
Slow ripening, as fruits ripen to their prime,—
When in the bonds of brotherhood, mankind
In mutual help shall mutual solace find:
When Truth and Error shall contend no more,
When Peace the reign of Plenty shall restore,
And in the sunset gleam
Of earth's perfected splendours, love supreme,
Shall sway the hearts and minds of men for evermore.

THE WIFE.—The following applies to Masons as well as to other men. Only let a woman be sure she is precious to her husband—not useful, not valuable, not convenient, simply, but lovely and beloved; let her be the recipient of his polite and hearty attentions, let her feel that her cares and love are noticed, appreciated and returned; let her opinion be asked, her approval sought, and her judgment respected, in matters of which she is cognizant; in short, let her only be loved, honored, and cherished, in fulfillment of the marriage vow, and she will be to her husband, her children, and society a well-spring of happiness. She will bear pain, and toil, and anxiety; for her husband's love to her is a tower and fortress. Shielded and sheltered therein, adversity will have lost its sting. She may suffer, but adversity will dull the edge of sorrow. A house with love in it—and, by love, we mean love expressed in words and deeds, for I have not one spark of faith in love that never crops out—is to a house as a person to a machine; one is life, the other mechanism. The unloved woman may have bread just as light, and a house just as tidy as the other, but the latter has a spring of beauty about her, a joyousness, a penetrating and pervading brightness, to which the former is an entire stranger. The deep happiness of her heart shines out in her face. She gleams over. It is airy, graceful and warm, and welcoming with her presence. She is full of devices and plots, and sweet surprises for her husband and family. She has never done with the romance and poetry of life. She herself is a lyric poem, setting herself to all pure and gracious melodies. Humble household ways and duties have for her a golden significance. The prize makes her calling high, and the end sanctifies the means. "Love is heaven, and Heaven is love."—New York Dispatch.

THE ECUMENICAL COUNCIL AND FREEMASONRY.

ON the eighth day of December, 1869, a remarkable meeting will be held in Rome. Remarkable in many respects, though not so important as the ultramontane adherents of the Romish faith would fain have us believe. It is, we opine, tolerably well known that a General Council of "The Church" has not been convened since 1545, when the Council of Trent was called together to combat the wide-spreading doctrines of Luther and his fellow-heresiarchs.

Warned by the inutility of that supreme effort, and conscious of the inherent weakness of the Papacy, over three hundred years have passed away without any attempt on the part of successive Pontiffs to clothe with factitious flesh and bones the naked skeleton of Papal supremacy.

Europe—nay, the world at large—has witnessed since that period great and mighty convulsions. Society has been shaken to its base by warfare and revolution, but the seed of the religious reform first scattered by Luther, Melancthon, and Calvin, has never ceased to fructify, and to bless mankind. In thus expressing ourselves we have no desire to touch the theological bearings of the question; we view the result purely in its civilising and humanising aspects, and from this standpoint we are free to confess our conviction that the advent of the Reformers was the dawn of civil and religious liberty throughout the world. Without doubt, the invention of printing and the various advances in science, contributed to the spread of liberal and truly Christian opinions, but the impulse came from those men who were ready to dare opprobrium, torture, and even death itself, in the desire to free men's souls from the chains of superstition and mental slavery.

What sublimer spectacle can be presented to our minds than that of the "solitary monk, who shook a world," when we see him presenting himself boldly before emperor and priest with the bold but suggestive words, "God help me, here I stand alone!"

Thus it has ever been with the pioneers of every movement which recognises the rights of man.

Calumny, hatred, and oppression are the dower of the heralds of liberty, and if no other proof of the immortality of the soul were forthcoming, the splendid self-abnegation of Freedom's fallen martyrs would demonstrate that man must be endued with an undying principle—a deathless consciousness of Right—which enables him to triumph over the transitory fear of pain and death, and to breathe with his last sigh a prayer, which is a prophecy, for the cause in which he suffers. It is precisely with this eternal idea that Rome has to contend, and it is for this reason that we contemplate the assembly of an Ecumenical Council at "St. Peter's," without the slightest perturbation. Nor, indeed, should we have noticed the circumstance, were it not for the fact that some of our continental brethren seem to attach greater importance to the forthcoming Council than we are willing to concede. We do not endeavour to disguise our conviction that Freemasonry has nothing to fear from the deliberations of the conclave of priests about to be assembled at Rome, and we are firmly assured that the stability of the Craft is not to be affected by any manifesto which may proceed from such a body. Our glorious Order owes nothing to the Church of Rome, and we can anticipate its verdict with the greatest equanimity. The convention of a Council from which one-half of the Christian world—the Greeks and the professors of the Reformed faith—will studiously hold aloof, is certain to prove a more palpable sign of weakness than of strength to the Romish Church; and if it be true that such preposterous doctrines as the personal infallibility of the Pope are to be affirmed as articles of faith, we can only say that the pyre of Romanism will be lighted by its own hand. There is a spirit now abroad which is not to be overcome by sophistry and Jesuitism; men are no longer a nose-led race who are willing to follow where priestcraft leads, and the dogmatism of Rome is but a poor substitute for free thought and rational belief. The mitred old gentlemen who are called upon to meet under the dome of St. Peter, may flatter themselves that they are about to rule the world, but they are more likely to lose it, if the utterances of a surpassingly eloquent preacher like Father Hyacinthe, or the more subdued remonstrances of other French priests, are to be taken into account. Far from feeling disturbed at the supposed results of the Ecumenical Council we are satisfied that it will prove only a means to an end, and that end, the downfall of an illogical, oppressive, and soul-destroying superstition.

We believe that the world in general, and Freemasonry in particular, will have cause to rejoice at the inane and unaccountable folly of the septuagenarian priest who now wears the triple crown, in directing such a Council to assemble. The last link which binds the antiquated traditions of the Church to modern civilization will thus be snapped; men will awaken as from a hideous dream, and shudder at the abyss of slavery from whence they have escaped.

True Christianity—the doctrines of One whose teachings, if followed, would render earth a paradise—will then have a fair field, freed from the bigotry, the casuistry, and the inhumanity of those contending creeds, which have so long obscured its grand and God-like simplicity.

Religion, no longer a cloak for enormous vices, will then be based upon non-political and unsectarian foundations, and it is this object which Freemasonry keeps in view; it is this principle which renders her obnoxious to the powers of darkness; it is the avowal of this brotherhood of man which causes her to be dreaded by tyrants in every land.

We have no fear of the future; humanity is not to be driven back; the souls of men cannot again be compressed within the cages formed by priests; our conceptions of truth and of the Author of all truth are not to be defined by the will of unreasoning dotards. Light is unconfined, it forces its luminous way into the peasant's cottage as into the prince's palace, and relying upon this everlasting truth, we may rest assured that all the efforts of the reverend senilities of the approaching Ecumenical Council will prove unavailing to restrain the progress of Enlightenment, Freedom, and True Religion.

Obituary.

BRO. DAVID BINGHAM DALY.

Last week it was our painful duty to record the death of Br. David Bingham Daly, of the Temple, Barrister-at-Law, who departed this life on the 29th ult., at the early age of 44 years. Brother Daly was a member of "Dalhousie Lodge," No. 865, and was much respected by all who knew him, he was also eminent both in his profession and private life as a painstaking and conscientious adviser. We regret to hear that by his premature death he leaves an afflicted widow and a numerous young family to mourn their irreparable loss.

BRO. WILLIAM SPONG.

We have this week to record the death of Bro. Wm Spong, of the Talbot Hotel, Scarborough, for many years a member of the Old Globe Lodge, No. 200, Scarborough, and Royal Arch Chapter; he was also a member of the Mark Lodge, No. 95, E.C. Although Bro. Spong took no active part in the working of the lodges or chapter, he was very highly esteemed by all the brethren. He was a member of the Council of that ancient borough, and for some years a Guardian of the Poor, in whose welfare he always took a deep interest, and frequently relieved the deserving from his own purse. As a proof of the high esteem in which he was held, we may state, his funeral was attended by the W.M., officers and members of his late lodge; the Worshipful the Mayor (Bro. J. W. Woodall, P.M., P.P.G.S.W., and G.M.O.), the Aldermen and Councillors of the borough, and about 200 of the leading tradesmen of the town; and as a further proof of his worth and respect, we may state, that all the shops in his late neighbourhood (Queen-street), were closed for some hours on the day of his interment, 27th Sept.

Reviews.

General History, Cyclopedia, and Dictionary of Freemasonry, by Bro. ROBERT MACOY, 33°, P.D.G.M. of New York, &c. New York Masonic Publishing Company, 432, Broome-street; 1869.

This is a truly splendid contribution to Masonic literature, and bears the impress of sedulous research, and great ability. The name of Bro. Macoy, is widely and favourably known as a Masonic author, but in this compilation he has surpassed his previous efforts, and produced a work which must find a place in the library of every intelligent Mason.

The information it contains, embraces such a vast area of rare and curious knowledge, that a review, however copious, could give but a faint idea of its Masonic value. We shall, therefore, content ourselves by stating that this great work must be considered as the text book of the Craft, and its interest to Masonic students is enhanced by the fact, that upwards of 300 choice engravings are interspersed throughout the 700 pages of the work. We shall give our readers an intellectual treat from time to time, by quotations from the book, in our "Mulum in Parvo, or Notes and Queries."

Mulum in Parvo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

We select the following from Bro. Macoy's magnificent Cyclopedia of Freemasonry, which will show the wide range of its definitions:—

AMALTHEA, The name of the horn of the Cretan goat.—It is the mythological horn of plenty, "Cornucopia," and which signifies an abundance of things necessary to life. It is the jewel of the stewards of a Lodge of Master Masons.

DEMIURGE, A Handicraftsman.—The name given in the cosmogony of the gnostics to the creator, or Former of the world of sense. He was conceived as the archon, or chief of the lowest order of the spirits, or acons, of the pleroma; mingling with chaos, he formed in it a corporeal animated world. He created man, but could impart to him only his own weak principle—the pysche, or sensuous soul—therefore, the highest, the really good God, added the divine rational soul, or pneuma. But the power of evil in the material body, and the hostile influence of the merely sensuous demiurge, prevented the development of that higher element. The demiurge, holding himself to be the highest God, could not bring his creatures to the knowledge of the true Godhead; as the Jehovah of the Jews he gave them the imperfect law of Moses, which promised merely a sensuous happiness, and even that not attainable; and against the spirits of the hyle, or world of matter, he sent only a psychical, and therefore powerless, Messiah.

LUX E TENEBRIS, Light out of Darkness.—This device teaches that when man is enlightened by reason, he is able to penetrate the darkness and obscurity, which ignorance and superstition spread abroad.

AHIMAN REZON.

Dr. Mackey says these words are derived from the Hebrew ahin, brothers, manah, to prepare, and ratzon, the will or law; and signifies therefore "the law of prepared brothers." Others contend that the derivation is from achi man ratzon, "the opinions of a true and faithful brother." It was the title adopted for their Book of Constitutions, by the section which split off from our Grand Lodge about the year 1740, and denominated themselves, by way of distinction, Ancient Masons.

BALLOT.

Balloting frequently takes place in a lodge, more particularly in admitting a candidate, which is never allowed to take place unless he has a majority of votes in his favour, according to the rules of the lodge; some lodges requiring perfect unanimity, others admitting the candidate when there are not more than three black balls against him. In exercising this privilege, every member ought to give his vote perfectly free from any influence from either the officers of the lodge or from personal or private motives. He ought at all times to remember that this privilege is given to men who ought to think and act for themselves, with this one sole object in view, viz: the credit, honour and welfare of the Craft in general, and of his own lodge in particular.

CHIEF POINT.

The chief point in Masonry is to endeavour to be happy ourselves, and communicate that happiness to others.

CRUX ANSATA.

This sign, originally signifying life, was adopted as a Christian emblem, either from its similarity to the shape of the cross, or from its being considered the symbol of a state of future existence.

VENERABLE

is the title of the Master in French Lodges, equivalent to Worshipful in England and American Lodges.

BLUE.

This durable and beautiful colour was adopted and worn by our ancient brethren of the three symbolic degrees, as the peculiar characteristic of an institution which has stood the test of ages, and which is as much distinguished by the durability of its materials and principles, as by the beauty of its superstructure. It is an emblem of universal friendship and benevolence, and instructs us, that in the mind of a Mason these virtues should be as expansive as the blue arch of heaven itself.

RUTH.

This book receives its name from the principal character given in it—Ruth, a native of Moab. By marriage with Boaz she bore Obed, the grandfather of King David. She lived in the days of the Judges. As part of the sacred canon, its principal importance consists in its giving the origin of David's family and his descent from Judah, but as a picture of suffering patience and devotedness to God's service, it is unexcelled in all ancient and modern history.

METROPOLITAN LODGE OF INSTRUCTION.

On Friday, the 24th ult., at the weekly meeting of the above popular lodge, which is held at the George Hotel, Aldermanbury, the ceremonies of consecration and installation were admirably worked by Bro. James Brett, P.M., Asst. G. Purst.

The worthy brother was supported upon this occasion by a large number of brethren, amongst whom we noticed the following, viz., Bros. E. Gottheil, Worrell, Carey, Oliver, Ashby, Atkins, Shay, D. R. Hill, R. W. Little, Dorsey, Green, G. A. Smith, Coles, Wintle, Harvey, H. Whittle, E. Mackney, Kelso, Savener, G. F. Cook, A. Robbins, Alcock, H. T. Thompson, West, Hubbard, Mortlock and Grant. The whole of the ceremony of consecration, including the oration, was worked by Bro. Brett, who afterwards installed Bro. Gottheil, who is well known as a zealous and rising Mason, into the chair of K.S. The officers were then appointed, and the lodge was closed down to the first degree, when Bro. Little, P.M. in a brief but appropriate speech, proposed that the cordial thanks of the members be awarded to Bro. James Brett, for the Masonic ability he had evinced in working the two beautiful ceremonies of consecration and installation. This being seconded was carried by acclamation. Bro. Brett acknowledged the compliment and the lodge was closed. We may add that the meetings are held every Friday evening at 7 o'clock.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

On Thursday last, the ordinary monthly meeting of the General Committee of the Girls' School, assembled in the Board Room, Freemasons' Hall, Bro. Udall, V.P., presided. There were also present, Bros. J. M. Clabon, W. Young, W. Farnfield, Edward Cox, J. R. Sheen, T. W. White, H. Massey, W. J. Adams, and James F. Corben. The minutes of the former meeting were read, and a recommendation to the Quarterly General Court was carried unanimously. Other small matters which fell within the powers of the General Committee were transacted, and a little candidate for election gave satisfactory proofs of her fitness for admission to the school, and her name was ordered to be placed on the list for the April election. The Committee then adjourned.

INELIGIBILITY OF BASTARDS AS FREEMASONS.

To the Editor of The Freemason.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—We all admit that Freemasonry is of Jewish origin.

Allow me to remark that it seems to me the arguments of Bros. "Leo" and "Cipes," with regard to admitting bastards into Freemasonry is also in some respect of Jewish origin.

In order to prove this, I must trouble your readers to look at the subject:—

1st. Judaism as observed in the time of the first Temple built, by King Solomon.

2nd. Judaism observed in the time of the second Temple, built by Ezra.

The Judaism of the first Temple. We all must admit that King Solomon observed the common

לא יגאממו כקהל יהודה

"a bastard shall not enter the congregation of the Lord."

The Judaism of the second Temple, which caused our Lord to say to them, ("Ye made the commandments of God of none effect by your Traditions," gives bastards the preference to the highest man in office the Mosaic Law bestowed on mankind.

This we see from the following well known sentences in the Jews' tradition:—

ממור תלמורתכם קודם לכהן גורל

"A learned man, though illegitimate, goes before a High Priest;" and in another passage, when the subject is argued as to a High Priest and a bastard being taken into captivity, the question is asked, who is to be redeemed first? the reply is

אבל אם היה כהן גורל עם הארץ, וממור

תלמוד תכם, תלמוד חכם הודם

"But if the High priest be an unlearned man, and the illegitimate be a wise man, the latter is to have the precedence."

I consider the opinion of Bros. "Leo" and "Cipes" amounts to the same thing. Leo expresses a wish to observe Freemasonry to the traditions of the second Temple. Well does our Bro. "Cipes" caution him not to make "void" the Ancient and True Freemasonry which dates from the first Temple. I must thank Bro. "Cipes" for his able argument of Freemasonry of the first Temple as observed by King Solomon, "a bastard shall not enter the congregation" of our holy Order.

I remain yours respectfully,

D. STOLEZ,

Of the Yarbrough Lodge, No. 554.

We are informed that the "Confidence Lodge of Instruction" has been removed to Bro. Forster's, "Railway Tavern," Fenchurch-street, and that the lodge will resume its meetings on Wednesday, the 6th of October, at 7 p.m., on which occasion Bro. Jas. Brett, P.M., P.Z., and A.G.P., will work the ceremonies of consecration and installation, and it is to be hoped the brethren will rally around Bro. Brett, who is ever ready to give his valuable services and time in imparting instruction to the brethren, whether in the Craft or Royal Arch degrees.

EPILEPSY OR FITS.—A sure cure for this distressing complaint is now made known in a treatise (of 48 octavo pages) on Foreign and Native Herbal Preparations, published by Prof. O. Phelps Brown. The prescription was discovered by him in such a providential manner that he cannot conscientiously refuse to make it known, as it has cured everybody who has used it for Fits, never having failed in a single case. The ingredients may be obtained from any chemist. Persons desiring a copy may address Prof. O. Phelps Brown, No. 2, King-street, Covent-garden, London, enclosing stamp. Six copies, three stamps.—ADVZ.

FREEMASONRY AND THE NEW SYNAGOGUE AT QUINCY.

We have great pleasure in reproducing the following thoroughly Masonic letter, which has been addressed to our esteemed contemporary, the Jewish Chronicle. It is a matter of importance that the public acts of Masons, as such, should not be confounded in the minds of the public, with the positions they may happen to fill, in what we may term the secular world.

"A Master of a Lodge," has done the Craft good service in this instance, and we hope to hear more of him :

To the Editor of the Jewish Chronicle.

SIR.—In your paper of the 10th inst., appears an account of the laying of the corner-stone of a Jewish synagogue at Quincy, Illinois, from which it appears that a clergyman of the Unitarian Church of Quincy delivered a prayer previously to the stone being raised to its position. Appended to the notice, you, Mr. Editor, make the following observation: "It is singular that a Christian clergyman should assist by prayer in the laying of the first stone of a Jewish synagogue. But 'Minhag America' is very advanced."

It will be naturally implied from this ironical remark that you disapprove of the proceeding. I venture to surmise, Sir, that you are not a Freemason, and to suggest that owing to your not being a member of the Craft you have misunderstood the account of the proceedings. It appears from the narrative that the ceremony commenced by hymns and psalms being chanted by a choir, and a prayer in German being delivered by the Jewish minister. It is also appears that after this the corner-stone was laid with Masonic rites by the M.W.M. and the grand officers of the order; the prayer, therefore, recited by the Rev. Mr. Hunting was delivered in his capacity of Grand Chaplain to the Grand Lodge of Masons, and not in his capacity of minister of a Christian church. Now, there not existing any authorised Jewish Minhag for the ceremony of laying the foundation-stone of a synagogue—such ceremony being always partly secular—whatever may be the purposes for which the intended building is being erected; it follows that there cannot be the slightest impropriety in the fact referred to in your editorial comments; nor ought it to be deemed displeasing to the most orthodox Jew, for the stone having been laid with Masonic rites, the delivery of the prayer was part of those rites, and not part of the Jewish ceremony. You admit, Sir, that the prayer was beautiful and appropriate. This would naturally result from its being a Masonic prayer, and therefore from its very nature not possible to contain any anti-Judaic sentiments. But to have objected to its delivery by the Grand Chaplain because he was not a Jew, would have been anti-Masonic; and it is to avoid any misapprehension amongst Masons (which your remarks may unintentionally occasion) as to the feelings and opinions of Jewish Masons on this cardinal point, that I have ventured to address you.

At the laying of the foundation-stone of the New Portland-street Synagogue a speech was delivered by Baron Rothschild, gold and silver coins and copies of newspapers were placed under the stone, and the ceremony concluded with three hearty cheers. You, sir, would term this "Minhag English," and undoubtedly you would be correct in so designating it. But the matter you animadvert upon is the universal Minhag of Masons, and can only cause surprise amongst those who do not know that one of the fundamental principles of the Craft is the non-recognition of difference of creed. If my views be erroneous, it is gratifying to me as a Jewish Mason to know that as the ecclesiastical head of the Sephardic Congregation in London is a distinguished Mason, they can be corrected ex-cathedra, and we could learn from him whether there is any impropriety in laying the foundation-stone of a synagogue with Masonic rites.

I have the honour to be, sir, your truly,
THE MASTER OF A LODGE.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—Grateful and Comforting.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"The singular success which Mr. Epps attained by his homoeopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold by the Trade only, in $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb., and 1 lb. tin-lined packets, labelled JAMES EPPS & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London.—ADVT.

SAINT ANDREW, THE PATRON SAINT OF SCOTLAND.

By CIPES.

St. Andrew the apostle is the Patron Saint of Scotland. His festival is on the 30th of November, being the anniversary of the day on which he died, after two days' suffering on the cross. It is still observed by Freemasons in Scotland, and by many Scotchmen in foreign lands, as well as a number of Scottish Lodges in various places. The Grand Lodge of Scotland, since its formation, now over a hundred years ago, has also always celebrated it with a festival, and on St. Andrew's Day, as it is termed, her Office-Bearers are elected and installed. Those who have witnessed the Installation Service in Grand Lodge of Scotland must have been impressed with its solemnity, and its teachings of purity and morality.

St. Andrew was a native of Bethsaida, a town of Galilee on the shore of the Lake of Gennesareth. He was the son of Jonas, or John, a fisherman, and was himself a fisherman. He was the brother of the apostle Simon or Peter, but whether an elder or younger brother is not exactly known. He was supposed to have been the younger brother, but Epiphanius says that he was the elder. At the time to which the gospel history chiefly refers, he resided with his brother at Capernaum, and Jesus sometimes lodged in their house. He became a disciple of John the Baptist, but for a time continued to attend to his calling as a fisherman, until Christ sent him forth to preach the gospel unto men. He was one of the two disciples who were with John the Baptist, when, as we read in the Gospel according to John (John i. 35-37)—John "looking upon Jesus as he walked," said, "Behold the Lamb of God!" and the two disciples "followed Jesus." The remainder of the narrative may be best given in the simple words of the Evangelist:—"Then Jesus turned, and saw them following, and said unto them, What seek ye? They said unto him, Rabbi (which is to say, being interpreted, Master,) where dwellest thou? He said unto them, Come and see. They came and saw where he dwelt, and abode with him that day, for it was about the twelfth hour. Andrew soon found his brother Simon, and told him of the great discovery which he had made, saying:—"We have found the Messias;" and "he brought him to Jesus." From this time forth Andrew was a disciple of Jesus.

Like the other disciples he afterwards baptized by authority of Jesus. The gospel narrative does not inform us if he accompanied Jesus to Jerusalem, and was present when the sellers of oxen and sheep were driven out of the temple, and the tables of the money-changers were overthrown; and the next thing we read of him is that when Jesus returned from Jerusalem to Galilee, he found Peter and Andrew fishing upon the Sea of Tiberias, where he fully satisfied them of the greatness and divinity of his person, by the convictive evidence of that miraculous draught of fishes which they took at his command. And he then told them he had other work for them to do; that they should no longer deal with fish, but with men, and called them to be fishers of men; whereupon they left their nets and followed him, from that time more closely and constantly than before.

It was at the house of Peter and Andrew in Capernaum that Jesus cured Peter's wife's mother of a fever. Andrew was present when the multitude, "in number about five thousand," were miraculously fed. For we read (John vi. 8, 9), that it was he who said, "There is a lad here, which hath five barley-loaves and two fishes: but what are they among so many?" Again we read of Andrew (John xii. 20, 22), that he took part with Philip in introducing to Jesus certain Greeks who desired to see him.

St. Andrew took Scythia and the neighbouring countries for his province. He travelled through Cappadocia, Galatia, and Bithynia, and instructed the people in the faith of Christ, passing all along the Euxine Sea (formerly called Axenus, from the barbarous and inhospitable temper of the people thereabouts, who were wont to sacrifice strangers, and of their skulls to make cups to drink in at their feasts and banquets), and so into the solitudes of Scythia. He first came to Aminsus, where, being entertained by a Jew, he went into the Synagogue, discoursed to the people concerning Christ, and from the prophecies of the Old Testament proved him to be the Messiah and the Saviour of the world. Having here converted and baptized many, ordered their public meeting, and ordained them priests, he went next to Trapezus, a maritime city upon the Euxine Sea, whence after many other places he came to Nice, where he stayed two years, preaching with great success, thence to Nicomedia, and so to Chalcedon, whence sailing through the Propontis he came by the Euxine Sea, to Heraclea, and from thence to Amatrias, in all which places he met with great difficulties and discouragements, but overcame all with an invincible patience and resolution. He next came to Sinope, a city situate upon the same sea; here he met with his brother Peter, with whom he stayed a considerable time at this place; the chairs made of white stone wherein they were wont to sit while they taught the people, were long shewn as a monument to his memory. The inhabitants of this city were mostly Jews, who partly through zeal for their religion, partly through the barbarousness of their manners, were quickly exasperated against the apostle, and contriving together attempted to burn the house in which he dwelt; however, they treated him with all kinds of savage cruelty, throwing him to the ground, stamping upon him with their feet, pulling and dragging him from place to place, some beating him with clubs, others pelting him with stones, and some the better to satisfy their rage, biting off his flesh with their teeth, till apprehending they had fully dispatched him, they cast him out of the city. But he miraculously recovered, and publicly returned into the city, whereby, and by some other miracles which he wrought amongst them, he reduced many to a better mind, converting them to the faith. Departing hence, he went to Aminsus, and thence to Trapezus, thence to Neocæsarea, and to Samosata, whence, after having baffled the acute and wise philosophers of the place, he purposed to return to Jerusalem. After some time he betook himself to his former provinces, travelling to the country of the Abasgi, where at Sebastopol, situate upon the eastern shore of the Euxine Sea, between the mouths of the rivers Phasis and Apsarus, he successfully preached the gospel to the inhabitants of that city. Hence he removed into the country of the Zecchi and the Bosphorani, part of the Asiatic Scythia or Sarmatia, but finding the inhabitants very barbarous and intractable, he stayed not long among them, only at Cherson, or Charonesus, a great and populous city within the Bosphorus, he continued some time, instructing and confirming them in the faith. Hence taking ship he sailed across the sea to Sinope, to encourage and confirm the churches which he had lately planted in those parts, and here he ordained Philologus, formerly one of St. Paul's disciples, bishop of that city.

Hence he came to Byzantium (since called Constantinople), where he instructed the people in the knowledge of the Christian religion, founded a church for divine worship, and ordained Staehys, first bishop of that place. Nicephorus, who had at that time usurped the government in Constantinople, banished him out of the city, but he fled to Argyropolis, a place near at hand, where he preached the gospel for two years together with good success, converting great numbers to the faith. After this he travelled over Thrace, Macedonia, Thessaly, Achaia, and Epyrus, in all which places for many years he preached and propagated Christianity, and confirmed the doctrine that he taught; at last he came to Patræ, a city of Achaia, where he gave his last and great testimony to, and laid down his own life to ratify and ensure it.

Ægeas, Proconsul of Achaia, came at this time to Patræ, were, observing that multitudes were fallen off from Paganism, and had embraced Christianity, he endeavoured by all arts, both of favour and cruelty, to reduce the people to their old idolatries. To him the apostle resolutely made his address, calmly put him in mind that he, being but a judge of men, should own and reverence Him who was the supreme and impartial judge of all, that he should give Him that divine honour that was due to Him, and leave off the impieties of his false heathen worship. The Proconsul derided him as an innovator in religion, a propagator of that superstition whose author the Jews had infamously put to death upon the cross. Hereat the apostle took occasion to discourse to him on the infinite love and kindness of our Lord, who came into the world to purchase the salvation of mankind, and for that end did not disdain to die upon the cross. To whom the Proconsul answered, that he might persuade them so that would believe him; for his part, if he did not comply with him in doing sacrifice to the gods, he would cause him to suffer upon that cross which he had so much extolled and magnified. St. Andrew replied, that he did sacrifice every day to God, the only true and omnipotent Being, not with fumes and bloody offerings, but in the sacrifice of the immaculate Lamb of God. The issue was, that the apostle was committed to prison, whereat the people were so enraged, that they would have broken out in insurrection had not the apostle restrained them, persuading them to imitate the mildness and patience of our meek and humble Saviour, and not to hinder him from that crown of martyrdom that now waited for him.

PAPERS ON MASONRY.

By A. LEWIS.

XXVI.—MASONRY AND SECULARISM.

And what did I unthinking do?
I took to arms undaunted too;
Assumed the corslet, shield and spear,
And, like Pelides, smiled at fear.

MOORE'S Anacreon, Ode xiii. lines 15-18.

My attention has been drawn to the fact that Mr. Charles Bradlaugh, erewhile known as "Iconoclast," and the editor of the National Reformer, has recently, on the 19th Sep. 1869, delivered a lecture on Freemasonry at the New Hall of Science in the City-road. The National Reformer is intended, I believe, with all sincerity, to defend a peculiar phase of thought and to advocate an especial line of conduct. The motto of that paper is sufficiently plain and straightforward to be worthy of reproduction here. It is as follows:—

"I conceive it to be the duty of students in every science to uphold nothing dogmatically, but simply to find out what is true, no matter what existing theory they may demolish. For so only can science be built upon a firm foundation, and truth be glorified."

No one can blame the conductors of a newspaper for adopting such a motto, but its adoption implies the necessity for a loyalty to the principle so enunciated. I may, however, ask whether there is not a dogmatism of materialism equally at variance with common sense as the dogmatism of infallibility? There is a marked animus—mistaken occasionally by some for outspoken honesty or frankness—itsself as irreconcilable with the spirit of true candour as are the brazen invectives of the Vatican. And such a method of seeking truth, I must individually opine, is even more offensive than the a priori arguments urged by the sandaled surrounders of monkish traditions. It seems to say, we, not they, are the true light; we tell you that we know—we, the destructives—you of the tiers état, the third estate, are bound to "listen to our lay." Now, human knowledge, such as it is, can only be confined to the promulgation of things within the scope of material cognition; and to decide upon things beyond such cognition in a summary manner is to push speculation beyond its legitimate bounds. To disprove a matter, whatsoever its tenour, by mere logic, is to employ the same inefficient weapons that the antagonist uses. Candidly speaking, we can only by inference approach T.G.A.O.T.U. We infer His existence from the multiplicity of created forms, and, granted all the theories put forward on either side, we only at last arrive at the Lucretian plane of thought.

Matters historical we can subject to definitive criticism; matters ulterior must ever remain metaphysical to us. That of which we have no knowledge, is, as it were, non-existent as far as we are concerned, and is it not reasonable to leave such problems alone for time and circumstance, working on each individual consciousness, to solve?

Such is the position assumed by most thinkers in other departments of intellectual inquiry. Where we are ignorant we should not dogmatise in any direction. The spirit of human investigation leads us into many fields, and when we can say nothing it is our duty to pause. This is as applicable to the dim legends of Freemasonry as to anything else, and Mr. Bradlaugh in stating his views of this subject is bound by the same rules that should be the guide-line of us all.

Although we may reject, as many do—and none can so more emphatically than myself—the literal construction of the Old Testament; although we may impeach the authority by which a number of puerile and obscene legends have been fastened upon society, it is still our clear duty to endeavour to see what remnant of verity remains hidden amidst the fog of traditionary narrative. Should it be proved that the legends respecting the Tower of Babel—the building of King Solomon's Temple—nay, the very existence of a Jewish polity itself are legends and nothing more, still there lurks in the background some intelligible groundwork on which such legends are founded.

In Science, pure and simple, we may justly exclaim with old George Herbert,

"Nothing hath got so farre

But man hath caught and kept it as his prey—
His eyes dismount the highest starre;"

but in Theology and mental science generally the case is far different. It is not too much to ask that, at this point, a confession of our inability to account for our actual presence as organised beings may, not only safely, but wisely, be made. Our beliefs, as such, go for nothing—our knowledge becomes naught. Yet I cannot but think that we have a right so to formulate, classify, and use our materials that they may tend to the ultimate benefit and elevation of human races. In the short report of Mr. Bradlaugh's lecture I find a spirit otherwise than fair. As a lecturer he speaks ex cathedra of what he scarcely can know, or knowing should not utter.

Is it true, by the researches of modern Masonic historians, that the history of the order or Fraternity may be fairly shorn of its mythical glories; still it has been superimposed and founded upon a much older system. In its essence it is no new invention, any more than the saint-worship of Papal Rome is other than a revival of the polytheism of Classical Rome. Admit that it possesses a symbolical value, and that value in itself is enough to merit at our hands due consideration.

Mr. Bradlaugh says that in England Freemasonry is not of high importance. True it is that the world could have got along in some fashion without the institution, but still those who are attentive to its silent action cannot deny it a social significance. Though the lecturer is reported to have said that it has not wielded a great power or influence, such a statement is, after all, a mere assertion, or a matter of opinion. There, I think, Mr. Bradlaugh and myself must agree to differ. Taking it as a non-political and extra-religious institution, it has fulfilled its functions very well. It proposed to symbolize certain things with a view to reformation of individual conduct, to control human passion by definite principles, and to inculcate virtues of the very highest order—and it has, in this, succeeded. The same office was fulfilled in antiquity by the Eleusinian and other mysteries, in accordance with the spirit of the times in which they existed. The position of Freemasonry at the present day has an exact analogy with those ancient rites. The statesmen, warriors, and philosophers—the leaders of action and thought—the poets and orators—show everywhere that they were affiliated to some great and secret body which inspired them with patience, hope, mutual forbearance, and charity; and thus this tie enabled them to look with equanimity upon the varied events of life. If this be not a conspicuous part to play in the efforts of a nation for social, mental, and political freedom, I am at a loss to conceive why such institutions should not have fallen by inherent weakness or public condemnation.

This is not a question of Christianity, for Freemasonry and the Mysteries alike are and were independent of any special forms of religious belief. The Masonic lodge-room is open to all faiths in which a Great First Cause is either proximately or remotely confessed.

I have frequently said, and I now repeat it—that in nations politically free, as England and the United States may in limine be said to be, any admixture of politics becomes unnecessary. Not so among nations who have still their Freedom to achieve. Such nations have a sacred right to employ secret associations for the attainment of similar advantages. I cordially coincide with Mr. Bradlaugh when he says, or is reported to have said: "Religion has ever been narrow and sectarian; Freemasonry broad and cosmopolitan." As to religion, we may exclaim with Cowper:—

Religion should extinguish strife,
And make a calm of human life;
But those who chance to differ
On points which God hath left at large,
How freely do they meet and charge—
No combatants are stiffer.

Even in Freemasonry—as facts unhappily prove—there may be discussions and errors, but these are curable, and the efforts of the wisest of the Fraternity are ever directed to the elimination of these mistakes. The Freemasons certainly inculcate love of humanity, national freedom, and individual justice. They would be unfit to exist as a powerful and growing body were this not the case. That broad view of human society which "esteems naught common or unclean" is surely right; and whether it is approached in one way or the other—by a general conformity to the religious aspirations of the era, or by a thrusting aside of the religious element altogether—matters little. At a table where the Christian, Mohammedan, Buddhist, Parsee, and Confucianist can equally meet as sons of one common Creative Cause, there need be little real quarrelling or acerbity of feeling; the one tie serves to hold Humanity together, and to promote the object of social harmony and good-will.

Very few associations have effected, or ever can be expected to effect, this. Priestcraft and Kingcraft, as understood by the tyrants of either class, can only thus be combatted. The priests are no longer the humble followers of their Prophet and Prince, the kings are no longer the ablest men of their nation; but by some subtle influence they sway the minds of the great multitude of men, and maintain themselves in their high places. But patience, my friends, the night is breaking, and the dawn of real Freedom is at hand, when men need not glance uneasily each at the other in timid fear lest the chance passenger should prove a monster of misrule, or a wolf in sheep's clothing.

Before closing this article, I cannot refrain from quoting a few sentences from a learned, thoughtful, and singular book, yet fresh from the press—one which is well worthy of the serious attention of philosophic Masons and non-Masons alike. I specially commend it to the notice of Mr. Bradlaugh. It is the recent contribution of Dr. Inman, entitled "Ancient Faiths illustrated by Ancient Names." The passages will be found on page 560 of the second volume. After alluding to the accidents that sway men in the choice of a religion, and also to the fact that his medical profession had in the course of a long career brought him into contact with almost every form of religious creed advocated among us, he thus continues:—

"Having thus been able to see and study all divisions of our Christian Church, I have come to the conclusion that all are alike worshippers of the Almighty and of the devil. They pay homage to the first by the practice of every Christian grace, except the charity that suffereth long and is kind. They pay homage to the latter by indulging in 'envy, strife, railings, evil surmisings, perverse disputings (or trumpery discussions) about words,' &c., and by exalting their own leaders so that they, 'as God, sit in the temple of God, showing themselves to be God.' (2 Thess. ii. 4.)

"Now, as Paul exhorted his followers not to be troubled by such as these, so does the thoughtful philosopher of to-day decline to join them; not that he loves Cæsar less, but Rome more. A man is not irreligious because he does not assist strenuously to uphold a particular section of Christianity. Nor is he infidel because he refuses to see in human inventions the finger of God. The observer who recognises the fact that human frailties are the damnable spot in all our current religions, may well be excused for not leaning on a human power, preferring rather to feel that 'underneath him are the everlasting arms.' (Dent. xxxiii. 27.)"

This fact was well illustrated to me by a young friend of mine—now many thousands of miles away, in India—an amiable and consistent Mohammedan—who observed on the occasion of a chance conversation on religious matters, in which a fanatical sceptic took part, "What does it matter? Are we not all seeking the same God, but each according to the faith of our several fathers?" This was much to be said, indeed, by an individual known to belong to the faith of Islam, so long cruelly and unjustly deemed to be intolerant of all other faiths, and violently opposed to the creeds respectively professed by the followers of Moses Ben Amram Ben Levi, and of Joshua Ben Miriam Ben Jesse.

Freemasonry in the broad and universal sense aims at a reconciliation of these unhappy differences, and, bending before T.G.A.O.T.U., we may, like Pelides, smile at fear. CRYPTONYMUS.

MASONIC ORPHAN BOYS' SCHOOL, IRELAND.

The usual half-yearly meeting of the Board of Governors of this Institution was held on Monday morning at the New Freemasons' Hall, Molesworth-street, Dublin. The brethren and pupils breakfasted together in the dining-hall, after which the governors adjourned to the board-room, when the chair was taken by Bro. William Edward Gumbleton, P.G.D. Eng., Vice-President.

The Secretary, Bro. Cap. Harte, read the report of the scrutineers of the ballot for the election of two pupils, as follows:—

We, the scrutineers, beg to report that we have examined the voting papers, 346 in number, and the following number of votes have been duly recorded for each candidate, viz.:—

George William Macartney	179
Robert A. Robertson	173
Despard S. Humphreys	169
Hugh John Wilson	111
Ernest C. Thornton	98
John Sayers	73
John Samuel Rourke	21

(Signed) WILLIAM ALLEN, P.M. 94,
ROBERT COURTNEY, P.M. 6,
A. VESSEY-DAVOREN, P.M. 728.

The Chairman then declared George, son of the late Bro. William Macartney, Sub-Inspector of Royal Irish Constabulary and Chief Superintendent of Police in Ceylon, of Lodge 107, Colombo, and Robert, son of the late Robert Cockburn Robertson, Accountant of Cork, late of Lodge 68, Youghal, being the two boys for whom the greatest number of votes had been recorded, duly elected pupils of the Institution.

A vote of thanks to the scrutineers was moved by Bro. Stephen Gordon, V.P., seconded by Bro. William Thompson, and suitably acknowledged, when, after some remarks from Bro. the Rev. Henry Westby, P.G.C., as to the steady and satisfactory progress which the Institution was making, the proceedings terminated.

The healthy and contented appearance of the boys was commented upon in a manner that must have been highly gratifying to Bro. Dr. Engledow and their other preceptors and guardians.

The New Vade Mecum (invented and manufactured by Charles H. Vincent, optician, of 23, Windsor-street, Liverpool) consists of a telescope well adapted for tourists, &c., to which is added an excellent microscope of great power and first-class definition, quite equal to others sold at ten times the price. Wonderful as it may seem, the price of this ingenious combination is only 3s. 6d., and Mr. Vincent sends it (carriage free) anywhere, with printed directions, upon receipt of post-office order or stamps to the amount of 3s. 10d.—ADVT.

THE LESSON OF PYTHAGORAS.

Pythagoras, the great and good,
The Mason's craft well understood,
And over came to British land
To let the Druids understand
The secrets of the Noble Art,
That they might share therein a part.

The Druids 'neath the mistletoe,
Oft laid the human victim low,
And stained with blood their sacred tree,
In token of the mystery,
With which they worship'd Odin, Thor,
And gods of peace and gods of war.

And as their knives sank in the breast—
But erst, perchance, in love caress'd—
From out the mystic groves so dim—
Arose the sacrificial hymn,
In praise of gods of wood and stone;
The only God was then unknown.

Pythagoras, though great his grief,
The Druids taught in lessons brief,
The secret words, the grip, the sign,
The knowledge of the God Divine,
The Architect who formed the earth,
And gave the rolling planets birth.

With joy they hailed the Master, then Revealed the light to darkened men.
With rule and chisel, plumb and square,
They built a temple wondrous fair,
A temple of the human mind,
Where ignorance might knowledge find.

And since that day the art divine,
Has flourished like a healthy vine,
The Masons sacred temples build,
And honoured is their mystic guild,
With all their love of human kind
The jewel of charity enshined.

MASONIC EXHORTATIONS.

FROM THE GERMAN.

VII. Cultivation of One's Self.

By making thus the prosperity of mankind the object of thy labours, do not lose sight of the necessity of forwarding thy own perfection, and do not neglect the concerns of thy immortal soul.

Oft unvail and examine thy heart to discover its most secret dispositions; the knowledge of one's self is the sum of all Masonic precepts.

Thy soul is the rough ashler which thou must labour to polish; thou canst not do homage more worthy of the Supreme Being than when thou offerest up to him regularly desires and inclinations, and restrained passions.

By strictness and modesty in thy moral conduct acquire the esteem of the world.

Distinguish thyself by discipline, rectitude, love of truth, and humility.

Pride is the most dangerous enemy of mankind, and the source of all their evils.

Do not look back to the point from which thou proceedest, this would retard thy career; let thy eye continually be cast towards the goal; the short time of thy journey will hardly afford thee the hope of arriving at it.

To compare thyself with those that are possessed of inferior faculties, would be a dangerous flattery of thyself; rather let a virtuous emulation animate thee when thou perceivest superior talents.

Let thy tongue be a faithful interpreter of thy heart. A Mason who could abandon candour, and hide himself behind the mask of dissimulation and deceit, would be unworthy to sit amongst us; he would sow upon our peaceable soil the seed of distrust and dissension, and soon become the abomination and the scourge of our assemblies.

May the sublime idea, that thou walkest before the eyes of the Omnipresent, strengthen and support thee.

Review daily the vow of mending thy life. Watch and meditate, and call to thy recollection at night a noble action, or a victory over thy passions; then lay down thy head in peace, and gather new strength.

Finally, study eagerly the meaning of the hieroglyphics and emblems which the Order lays before thee; even nature does not always unveil her secrets; she must be observed, compared, and frequently watched with attention in her operations.

Of all the sciences on whose extensive field the industry of men gather useful illustrations, none will afford thy heart heavenly satisfaction, but that which instructeth thee in thy relation to God and the creation.

VIII. Duties towards Brethren.

Among the numberless inhabitants of the earth, thou hast chosen, by a voluntary vow, the Freemasons as Brethren.

Therefore never forget that every Freemason without distinction of the profession of his faith, country, or rank, the moment he offers thee his right hand as the emblem of brotherly confidence, has a sacred claim upon thy assistance and friendship.

Equality was the first lot of nature, but was soon swerved from.

The Mason restores the original rights of mankind; he never sacrifices to vulgar prejudices; the sacred Plumb-rule amongst us puts all ranks on level.

Nevertheless, honour the distinctions of rank in civil life, which society has introduced or permitted.

Oft are these gradations the production of pride; but pride it would be in thee to struggle against or to disavow those distinctions which civil society acknowledges.

In our assemblies, step behind him who is more virtuous and more enlightened; the dignity which distinguishes thee in the world remains unnoticed here.

Be not ashamed of an insignificant, but honest, man out of the lodge, whom thou hast acknowledged a short time before as a brother; the Order would then be ashamed of thee also, and send thee back to the profane theatre of the world, there to exercise thy pride.

Is thy brother in danger—haste thou to his assistance and hesitate not to endanger thy own life for him.

Is he distressed—open thy purse to him, and rejoice in having found an opportunity to make so benign a use of thy gold.

Thy obligation compels thee to be benevolent to mankind, but in particular to thy brother.

Is he blinded by errors, and hastens towards a precipice—take up the brotherly arms of rational representations, and stop him.

Reconduct the wavering creatures of God to the path of virtue, and raise up the fallen.

Hast thou an animosity against thy brother, on account of real or imaginary offences—let not the sun set before thy reconciliation.

Call in an unprejudiced arbitrator, and invite him to brotherly meditation.

But never step over our threshold, unless thy heart is clear of hatred and vengeance.

In vain would thou attempt to supplicate down into our temples the Eternal, if they were not ornamented by the virtues of our Brethren, and consecrated by their unanimity.

IX. Duties towards the Order.

By having admitted thee to partake of the advantages which are the consequences of our alliance, thou hast resigned a part of thy natural liberty.

Fulfil with religious strictness all those moral duties which the Order prescribes thee.

Follow its wise precepts, and honour those, who, by the confidence of the brethren, have been made the Guardians of the law, and the interpreters of the universal union.

Thy will is subordinate, in the Order, to the will of the law and thy superiors.

Thou wouldst not be a true brother, if thou wouldst resist this subordination, so very requisite in every society; and nothing would remain for us then, but to banish thee from among us.

In particular we have a law, the inviolable compliance with which thou hast promised before the face of Heaven; it is the strictest silence concerning our rites, ceremonies, signs, and the form of our alliance.

Do not imagine that this obligation is less sacred than that which thou takest in civil life.

Thou wert free when it was administered to thee; but it is not now at thy option to violate it; the Eternal, whom thou hast invoked to witness it, has ratified it.

Tremble at the punishments of perjury; never couldst thou escape the gnawing reproachings of thy own heart.

Thou wouldst lose for ever the esteem and the confidence of a numerous society, who would have an undoubted right to declare thee to be a perjured and infamous being.

Conclusion.

Should these Precepts, which the Order communicates to thee, to make the path to truth and happiness smooth, imprint themselves deep into thy heart, open to the impression of virtue; shouldst thou make those excellent principles thy own, which distinguish each step of thy Masonic career, and render them the plumb-line of all thy actions—O Brother! how great would be our joy! Then wouldst thou answer thy exalted destination; thou wouldst resume that resemblance with God which was the share of man in his state of innocence, which is the object of religion, and the principal end of Masonic initiation; thou would be once more the favourite of Heaven; the abundance of its blessings would be poured over thee, and acquiring the title of a wise, free, happy and firm man, thou wouldst run thy terrestrial career as—

The Benefactor of Mankind, and the Pattern of thy Brethren.

PROPHETIC.—As the sacrifices of the ancient Jews pointed to that great atonement whereby man became reconciled to God; so the mysteries of Masonry direct the enquiring mind to that period when the sun of righteousness shall arise, and, with healing on His wings, dispel the mists which overshadow the nations of the earth, and the Trinity in unity shall be universally acknowledged and adored. And as the principles of our ancient institution, in the earlier days, prepared the mind for the reception of this great truth; so will the mind be improved by the moral influence of those principles, and rendered fit for the enjoyment of the full blaze of light, when it shall be revealed in all its majesty and glory.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE,

The Great Cure for Cholera and Consumption.

A Newly-discovered principle residing in Gum Benjamin (Styrax Benzoin), the chief chemical product of which has hitherto been Benzole Acid, well known and highly valued by medical practitioners. The great difficulty which the discoverer encountered in bringing out this important remedy was the form in which to present it to the faculty and the public, the new chemical being amorphous and incapable of crystallization. It has therefore been deemed advisable to prepare a highly-concentrated solution of the product, combining it with such adjuncts as are considered natural auxiliaries. PRICE'S BENZODYNE is stimulant, anodyne, and mechanically astringent, arresting fluxes and hemorrhages of all kinds both external and internal, possessing singular efficacy in the following diseases:—Ague, Bronchitis, Consumption, Colic, Cholera, Cold, Cough, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Debility in all its various forms, Fevers, Influenza, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Spasms, Tiddletox, &c., &c. PRICE'S BENZODYNE has been tried repeatedly in these cases and has never failed to cure.

It immediately relieves all pain, actually sheathing the organs with a protective matter, which defies the action of the most virulent blood-poisons, and thus PRICE'S BENZODYNE acts as the most powerful styptic now known to science, being the only effective external application for cuts, bites of insects, and all open wounds. In Cholera, as in Consumption, its effects are astounding, while Chronic Cough yields to its curative influences in a few hours.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is acknowledged by the highest Medical authority to be the most wonderful medicine yet introduced to the public; it may be taken at any time by both young and old with the most beneficial effects in all cases, leaving no bad effects like Laudanum, Chlorodyne, or any other poisonous and imperfect preparations, and can be given when no other could be tolerated.

In Consumption and Cancer its peculiarly soothing properties render it a boon to the sufferer in allaying the cough, mitigating night perspirations, and in relieving pain, &c.

In every stage of those dire diseases it gives an amount of ease not attainable by any other remedy.

In all cases of Chest Affections, as Asthma, Bronchitis, Winter Cough, Palpitation, &c., PRICE'S BENZODYNE is a very valuable medicine, producing a composed and tranquil state of the system, and quickly relieving the cough, assisting expectoration, and in a few days removing the most distressing symptoms.

In Hysteria, Epilepsy, Gout, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nerve Pains it is justly valued, as it is given with immediate benefit, relieving pain and suffering however violent the attack.

In Diarrhoea, Cholera, Alvine Discharges, spasms and colics of the intestines, &c., its effects are signal, as it never fails to check the disease.

CONSUMPTION IN ALL ITS STAGES CURED.

Coughs, Whooping Cough, Asthma, Bronchitis, Fever, Ague, Diphtheria, Hysteria, Rheumatism, Diarrhoea, Spasms Colic, Renal and Uterine Diseases are immediately relieved by a dose.

During the period of Dentition of Children it will be found invaluable, and in curing Whooping Cough, Spasms, dispelling Flatulency, preventing Convulsive Fits, Heats, &c., to which they are so liable.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is specially adapted for Naval, Military or Traveller's medicine chests, and for Hospitals and Dispensaries everywhere.

CROSBY'S

BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.

Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills, are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary Diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL.

Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says:—"I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued Cough, Pain, and Irritation of the Chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."

This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers, in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. CROSBY, Chemist, Scarborough.

THE AMERICAN FREEMASON

is Monthly, of sixteen double-column quarto pages of entirely original matter, and translations from the French, Italian, and German Masonic papers and periodicals of the day. It is devoted to the discussion of the rights of Lodges and individual Freemasons, in contradistinction to the assumptions of Grand Lodges, and the un-Masonic doctrines and arrangements of "high degrees." Its motto is—Belief in the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man. Its price is Five Shillings a year—a sum so small that no Freemason, for pecuniary reasons, need be a non-subscriber to it.

The AMERICAN FREEMASON is not the organ of any Grand Lodge; but speaking the words of truth, manhood, and independence, advocates freedom for Masonry in America, and the rights of Freemasons in their Lodges—rights which, by our Grand Lodges, in their subservency to high degrees, have been invaded, until at present they are nearly obliterated.

Subscribers in the British Colonies will please address all Subscriptions and Correspondence to J. FLETCHER BRENNAN, Editor, 114, Main-street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

TO THE NERVOUS & DEBILITATED EPILEPTIC SUFFERERS AND OTHERS.

HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA, discovered, introduced, and extensively prescribed by the late eminent Dr. MARSHALL HALL, has proved an infallible remedy (by oxydizing the blood and supplying its saline constituent) for Indigestion, Debility, Coughs, Asthma, Consumption, Skin, Liver, Stomach, and Nervous Affections, more especially Epilepsy, Apoplexy, and Paralysis. The successful results of this new chemical preparation are beyond all precedent, and the extraordinary cures effected by the late discoverer, and by his successor (Dr. Sutton), in the above maladies are without a parallel in the annals of medicine; and it is confidently believed that in no case need the sufferer despair, for practical experience has demonstrated, and signal success warranted the assertion, that in 99 cases out of every 100 complete cures may be relied on.

Sold in Bottles at 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and Cases of £5 each, by

DR. SUTTON, M.D., 15, REGENT SQUARE, LONDON, W.C., and in BOLTON by PRIESTLEY, Chemist.

The following are a few Testimonials published by privilege.

Sir Charles Locock, Physician-Accoucher to Her Majesty, stated at a meeting of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society, that in sixteen cases of Epilepsy he had effected permanent cures by the use of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa.

"September 6, 1868.—The Editor of the Bury Gazette returns thanks to Dr. Hall for the great benefit he has received from his Chlorate of Potassa treatment in a severe nervous disease."

Sir J. Ferguson, King's College Hospital, London, says—"I have repeatedly prescribed Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa and found it an agreeable and beneficial remedy."

Extract from the Lancet, April 1, 1867—"In conclusion, we are of opinion that Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is a far superior remedy to the ones in general use for Nervousness, Indigestion, and Liver Complaints, when judiciously prescribed."

Sir Benjamin Brodie says—"What Chloride of Lime is to the foul sewer, Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is to the blood."

Professor Syme says—"The effects of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa in obstinate cases of disease are as astonishing as perplexing."

Dr. Lankester, the eminent coroner, says—"Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is calculated to entirely supersede iron, mercury, sarsaparilla, quinine, and cod liver oil."

Sir Philip Crampton says—"I believe there is no condition of the system that may not be benefited by Dr. Hall's Potassa."

Sir T. Lawrence says—"I have found Dr. Hall's Chlorate an excellent remedy in Skin Diseases. I presume it is by oxydization."

Sir T. Watson says—"I know that it is an invaluable remedy." Sir Edward Borough, 9, Fitzwilliam-square, Dublin, certifies Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa has been of the greatest benefit to a member of his family.

The Earl of Clarendon certifies that Dr. Hall's Chlorate cured a case of indigestion of 16 years' duration.

DR. HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA may be procured by order through any Chemist. Ask for "Dr. HALL'S Chlorate," and do not be imposed on with the common article. It is sold in Bolton by Priestley, Chemist, 12, Deansgate; or it may be had direct from Dr. Hall's successor, Dr. JOHN SUTTON, M.D., 15, Regent-square, London, W.C., who undertakes the positive cure of all chronic diseases before payment.

Dr. Hall's Chlorate is sold in MANCHESTER by JEWELL, Market-street; in LIVERPOOL by PRIESTLEY, Lord-street.

EACH Paper contains every item of intelligence, from

 and a retrospect of commercial transactions in Great Britain
 and on the Continent.

Manufacturers and Merchants may command the greatest markets of the world for their products through the mediums of publicity afforded by the EUROPEAN MAIL. A demand may be created where none exists at present, or an existing demand may be sustained and increased against the most energetic competition.

The EUROPEAN MAIL gives such perfect mercantile information that it is the highest commercial authority in the vast and prosperous territories through which it circulates. It is therefore an imperative necessity to the merchant who orders goods in bulk, and to the wholesale and retail distributor; it is also the most complete newspaper despatched from England, and is eagerly sought by all classes; it thus, unlike merely commercial newspapers, reaches and leavens the great communities who are the actual consumers of all products, and who must be acted upon by advertisement to require a special article before the merchant will venture to order a consignment.

Reviews.

The Mason's Home-Book, Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4. Philadelphia: No. 814, Chestnut-street; published by Bro. LEON HYNEMAN.

We commend this excellent publication to the attention and support of our readers. No. 1 commences with a reprint of the Rev. Dr. Oliver's "Antiquities of Freemasonry," which is continued in No. 2 and concluded in No. 3, in which we also find a reprint of the Constitutions of 1723. No. 4. contains the celebrated "Illustrations of Masonry" by Preston, which has long been considered a standard Masonic work.

The enterprising editor promises a rich literary banquet to his subscribers, and from the excellence of the material already collected we anticipate a great success for the "Mason's Home-Book." Each part comprises 64 pages of closely-printed matter, which will make a volume of 768 pages at the end of the year. The annual subscription is 3 dollars, and the price of a single copy 25 cents.

From the editor's preface we extract the following admirable remarks:—

"The true history of Freemasonry has never been written, nor have the principles upon which the institution is founded been rightly comprehended. It will be our province, having prepared the minds of our readers by laying before them the almost universally accepted authorities of the past century, with the accumulated myths of recent times, to so induct the reader as to enable him to separate the wheat from the chaff, the right from the wrong, the true from the false, and thus cause him to have a higher appreciation of our mystic Order, a higher regard for its sublime principles, and thus incite him to higher and holier aspirations so to live as to commend him to the good and virtuous of mankind, to have the approval of his own conscience, and the approving assurance of God in the silent whisper of his inner temple. There never was, in the world's history, an institution founded on such elevated and exalted ethics as the Masonic. Its system of morals is the natural unfoldment of a grand and sublime Truth impressed upon the consciousness of man by Divine Being. Its principles, broad and comprehensive as the universe, have always commended it to the good and true in every land, in every age. The promoters of civilization, of science and the arts, were at all times enrolled as members of our Order, having assumed its covenants and practically illustrated in their lives its ennobling principles. It will be our endeavour to so enlighten the Masonic mind that the fraternity will become imbued with the divine principles of the Institution, and exhibit its vitalizing power in their life and actions, and thus become living stones in the Universal Temple, whose Architect and Former is Jehovah."

The Book of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, by Bro. CHARLES T. McCLENACHAN, 33°. New York, 432, Broome-street.

This is the most comprehensive and exhaustive work upon the high degrees which we have ever seen. It unfolds the beauties of the system in due succession from the degree of Secret Master to the grade of Sovereign Grand Inspector-General. We are free to confess that we did not realize the philosophical importance of the Rite until we had scanned the pages of Bro. McClenachan's admirable compilation, and even now, although we hasten to commend his labours in the cause, we cannot do justice to the value of the instruction contained in the work itself, which embraces a wide circle of Masonic information. We must carefully peruse it, and weigh deliberately in the scale of impartial justice the claims of the Ancient and Accepted Rite to the support of the Fraternity at large, for, as we have intimated, the subject is presented to our consideration in an entirely new light through the medium of Bro. McClenachan's researches. The legends gravely recited by foolish enthusiasts in the high grades as positive facts are, in the work now before us, assigned their proper position as allegories, and it is this candour which produces a generally favourable impression on our mind. We will now merely add that no member of the Ancient and Accepted Rite can consider his library complete without this book, and to the general Masonic student it will be found replete with rare and beautiful illustrations of Freemasonry.

THE MASONIC REUNION AT LIEGE.

[FROM A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

I take the first opportunity after my return from Belgium to give you a short and rough account of our Masonic reception at Liege.

We were invited to attend the Masonic Hall, No. 1, Rue des Rivets, at 7 p.m. on Sunday, the 19th. The Hall consists of Tyler's quarters and offices, two preparation rooms, Secretary's offices, a library, containing about 2000 volumes of Masonic works; a waiting-room hung round with Masonic engravings; an entrance hall to lodge-room, in which were several sword-racks from whence each Brother arms himself before entering the lodge. The lodge-room itself is about 70 feet in length, 40 feet wide, and 40 from floor to crown of arch, the arch or ceiling representing the cloudy canopy studded with the usual Masonic emblems. A dais, with three steps, was in the East; on this was placed the Master's chair, which was covered by a canopy decorated in a tasteful manner. Both Wardens were in the west, Orator on left of Master, Treasurer and Secretary on his right, the Brethren being placed on cushioned benches which rose in tiers on either side, leaving a space of about 10 feet up centre of hall.

Previous to entering, those who held certificates gave them to the Secretary, were then subjected to a short examination, called upon to sign the lodge-book, and then accepted as vouchers for those who had not brought their certificates. Each visitor was then supplied with a medal (one of which I enclose), and all were ushered into the lodge under an arch of steel. On entering I was invited, together with Bro. Mason, Past Grand Sword-bearer, Bro. Captain Bramble, and several other P.M.'s, to take our seats upon the dais.

After the opening ceremony, which was impressively performed by the Master, he welcomed the visitors to his lodge, expressing the great pleasure it gave him to meet their French and English brethren that evening, and especially to see them muster in such goodly numbers. (There were about eighty or ninety English Masons present.) He then called upon the Orator to deliver the "speech of welcome" to the visitors.

This was done in the most eloquent manner. He spoke of Masonry as carrying its tenets to the remotest corners of the world; there was now a lodge in every city and town, and in every village one was sure to find a Brother, and, of course, a friend. He went on to say that in the lodge all met on the most perfect equality, for there was the only spot in which true freedom could be found—freedom of thought, freedom of opinion. Masons were ever ready to help each other, and the only nationality they required in a lodge was that of Freemasonry. He welcomed the visitors—especially the English brethren, whom he congratulated upon the prosperity of the Order in England. He welcomed the whole most heartily to Liege, hailed each by the sacred name of Brother, and asked them to remember that the brethren of Liege were extremely anxious to do all in their power to contribute to the comfort and amusement of their foreign brethren. Towards this purpose the Hall would be open daily from 7 a.m. till 9 p.m., and brethren would be there to attend to the desires of the visitors.

Captain Irwin, the Adjutant of the Second Battalion of Volunteers at Liege, responded on the part of the English brethren. He thanked the Master, officers, and members of the lodge for the hospitable reception given to the visitors that evening, and said that from the reception given that day to the Volunteers he fully expected the visitors to the lodge would be well received, but the reception given was far in excess of anything they anticipated. The English Masons fully reciprocated the sentiments conveyed in the eloquent oration delivered by the worthy brother the Orator of the lodge. They would carefully preserve the medals given to them that evening as mementoes of their reception by the Masons of Liege, and would not fail on their return to England, to lay before their respective lodges an account of the fraternal reception they had met with; and he (Capt. Irwin), with the Master's permission, would on his return home propose him as an honorary member of the lodge to which he belonged, and he had little doubt that the Master's name would be enthusiastically received by the brethren of Lodge No. 1222. Capt. Irwin went on to say that it was well for Masons to visit the lodges of other countries in such large numbers as had met there that evening, as it gave confidence and support to the Craft in both countries.

Bro. Mason, P.G.S.B., then rose and thanked the brethren, on the part of the London Masons, and suggested that, instead of the W.M. being appointed an honorary member of a local English lodge, the matter should be referred to Grand Lodge, who would doubtless take satisfactory steps to do honour to the W.M.

After a few more speeches from different officers and visitors, the lodge was called from labour to refreshment.

I noticed with regret the absence of the Holy Volume from the lodge-room. There were no working tools or emblems as in our British and American lodges.

The refreshment hall, which appeared to be about 80 feet square, was laid out for upwards of 300 guests. The expenditure of champagne during the evening was something wonderful. The health of the Bourgmestre, Bro. d'Andrimont, was drunk in the most hearty manner, especially by the English brethren. Bro. d'Andrimont responded in a few well-chosen words. In responding to a subsequent toast, Bro. the Mayor d'Andrimont made a most eloquent speech, the substance of which I hope to give you in a further communication.

The New Vade Mecum (invented and manufactured by Charles H. Vincent, optician, of 23, Windsor-street Liverpool) consists of a telescope well adapted for tourists, &c., to which is added an excellent microscope of great power and first-class definition, quite equal to others sold at ten times the price. Wonderful as it may seem, the price of this ingenious combination is only 3s. 6d. and Mr. Vincent sends it (carriage free) anywhere, with printed directions, upon receipt of post-office order or stamps to the amount of 3s. 10d.—ADV'T.

GATHERING OF FREEMASONS IN LIVERPOOL.

The annual provincial grand lodge of the western division of Lancashire was held on Tuesday, 5th inst., at the Adelphi Hotel, when upwards of 200 brethren assembled. The provincial grand officers present were—Bros. Sir Thomas G. Fermor-Hesketh, Bart., M.P., R.W. Prov. G.M.; the Hon. F. A. Stanley, M.P., S.G.W.; H. S. Alpass, G. Sec.; T. Wylie, G. Reg.; C. Sherlock, P.P.G. Reg.; A. C. Mott, S.G.D.; H. G. Vernon, M.A., G. Chaplain; T. Armstrong, J.G.D.; W. Laidlaw, P.G.S.; J. W. J. Fowler, G.S.B.; J. Skeaf, G.O.; H. Bulley, P.J.G.W., Cheshire; J. P. Platt, P.P.J.G.W., Cheshire; R. Wylie, P.G.A.O.D., Cheshire; Marsh, P.G.P. G. W. Broadbridge, P.G.S.; B. W. Rowson, P.G.S.; Joseph Mawdesley, P.P.G. Reg.; J. Molineaux, P.P.G.O.; S. White, P.G.S.B.; C. J. Banister, P.G.S.B. of England; F. Binckes, P.G.S. Sec. Boys' School; John Bower, P.P.G. Reg. Cumberland and Westmorland; Jas. Hamer, P.G. Treas. All the lodges in the province were represented with four exceptions, and in some instances the individual lodge attendance was very numerous.

The Grand lodge having been opened, the Grand Secretary read the minutes of the previous annual Provincial Grand Lodge held at Wigan, and the special Provincial Grand Lodge meeting held at Rufford on the occasion of the laying of the foundation-stone of St. Mary's Church. He also announced that letters of apology for non-attendance had been received from Bros. Lord Skelmersdale, Lord de Tabley, Schneider, and several other brethren in the province. Bro. Hamer, P.G. Treas., presented his accounts, and in receiving them the R.W. Prov. G.M. said the financial statement appeared to be very satisfactory, and they had been very properly audited. The accounts showed that there was a balance at the bank of £820 2s. 6d., and £117 3s. 10d. remained in hand.

The financial statement was adopted. Bro. Hamer, who has held the office for nine years, was elected Prov. G. Treas. for the ensuing year, and in acknowledging the renewed compliment Bro. Hamer signified his intention of resigning at the close of the current year. The following brethren were then appointed Provincial Grand Officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, D. Prov. G.M.; the Hon. F. A. Stanley, M.P., Prov. S.G.W.; Schneider, Prov. G.J.W.; Vernon, Prov. G. Chaplain; Wylie, Prov. G. Reg.; H. S. Alpass, Prov. G. Sec.; A. C. Mott, Prov. S.G.D.; H. B. White, Prov. J.G.D.; Dr. Moore, Prov. G. Supt. of Works; R. Wylie, Prov. G.D.C.; Marsh, Prov. G. Assist. D.C.; S. White, P.G.S.B.; J. Skeaf, Prov. G.O.; Laidlaw, P.G. Purs.; and Wearing, Pickering, Broadbridge, Ibbs, Rowson, and Fowler, Prov. G. Stewards. Bro. Peter Ball was unanimously re-elected G. Tyler, and Bro. W. H. Ball, Assist. G. Tyler.

A number of applications for relief of distressed Masons were submitted, and votes of money were made to each of the applicants.

The GRAND SECRETARY reported that warrants for the consecration of three new lodges had been issued during the year, and congratulated the brethren upon the continued harmony and progress which the different lodges had exhibited.

Bro. WYLIE moved that the sum of ten guineas should be voted from the Fund of Benevolence to the Annuitant Fund of the Aged Freemasons and Widows of Masons, and that the gift should be made in the name of the S.G.W. This proposition was unanimously agreed to.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was then resolved into the Court of Governors of the West Lancashire Masonic Institution, when Bro. A. C. Mott read the minutes of the general and other committee meetings held during the year, which were unanimously adopted.

The other proceedings of the court were merely of a formal character, the officers of the past year being unanimously reappointed.

After the Provincial Grand Lodge had been again resumed, Bro. BINCKES made a statement as to the condition and prospects of the Boys' School.

On the motion of Bro. BANNISTER, seconded by Bro. YOUNGHUSBAND, 100 guineas were voted from the Fund of Benevolence for the benefit of the Institution, and it was agreed that the gift should be made in the names of the Prov. S.G.W. and the Prov. J.G.W.

After Bro. BINCKES had acknowledged the handsome and spontaneous donation, the Provincial Grand Lodge was closed in due form.

It should have been mentioned that Bros. Haswell, Wilson, T. Armstrong, and T. J. Hughes kindly gave their services as musical brethren. Bro. Skeaf, Prov. G.O., not only played the accompaniments, but also furnished a new anthem (his own composition), called "Behold how good and pleasant," which is marked by a fine flowing harmony and most artistic arrangement, and will doubtless attain no mean popularity.

The brethren afterwards banquetted at the Adelphi Hotel, when Bro. Sir T. G. Fermor-Hesketh, Bart., M.P., R.W.P.G.M., presided. The list embraced fifteen toasts, which were proposed in an efficient manner and cordially responded to. In the course of the evening the Prov. G.M. announced that he would hold his next annual meeting at Southport. A well-selected programme of music was performed by the above-named musical brethren, and the brethren separated after spending a most pleasant evening.

"The Earl of Zetland, M.W.G.M." and "The Earl de Grey and Ripon, M.W.D.G.M., and the other Officers of the Grand Lodge," responded to by Bro. C. J. Banister, P.G.S.B. of England.

"The Worshipful Masters of the Lodges in the Province," responded to by Bro. Dr. E. M. Sheldon, W.M. Temple Lodge, 1094.

"The Visiting Brethren," responded to by Bro. Binckes.

"The Provincial Grand Stewards," responded to by Bro. Hibbs, P.G.S., and Bro. Skeaf, P.G.O.

CONSECRATION OF THE LODGE OF ST. MICHAEL, No. 1273.

The Lodge of St. Michael, No. 1273 in the register of the Grand Lodge of England, was duly consecrated according to the ancient forms of the Craft on Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 29th, at 2 o'clock. A very large number of the brethren having assembled in the new lodge-room, at the Free Church School, Sittingbourne, the P.D.G. Bro. Dobson, appointed Bro. Keddell, P.P.G., S.W. of Sheerness, presiding officer, who immediately appointed his officers pro tem, viz.: Bro. P. Nettleingham (P.M.P.P.S.G.M. 27), S.W., and Bro. Thomas Hill (P.M.P.P.G.S.W.), J.W. The lodge was then opened in the three degrees. The presiding officer then delivered an address on Freemasonry in general, which showed that he had devoted no small amount of time to condense so many of the grand fundamental truths of the Craft, and yet to give each its proper position and importance in so short a compass.

The oration was delivered by the P.G. Chap., Bro. W. H. Hill of Maidstone, in his usual fervid and eloquent style, who held all the brethren entranced while he beautifully portrayed the character of the saint to which this lodge is dedicated, as one to be humbly followed by every true Mason.

The lodge-board was then uncovered, when the wine, corn, and oil were carried round the lodge by the three following Prov. Grand Officers—Bros. Crittendon, Townsend, and Thorpe, amid solemn music. Halting in the east, the beautiful anthem, "Glory to God on high," was intoned by the W.M. and the brethren generally. The Chaplain then traversed the lodge three times with the censer, consecrating the building for the purpose of Freemasonry. A prayer having been offered up, Haydn's perfect hymn, "The spacious firmament on high," was poured forth in volumes. Brother Keddell then dedicated and constituted the lodge. The National Anthem concluded this part of the ceremony, when an additional verse, composed for the occasion, was sung.

The musical arrangements were conducted by Bro. Horde (1174). Owing to the severe illness of the W.M. designate of the new lodge, the Rev. Thos. Grabham, M.A., which prevented him from being present at this interesting ceremony, the ceremony of Installation was dispensed with, he being already a ruler in the Craft, and P.M. of Faversham. The D.P.G.M. requested Bro. Keddell to take charge of the new lodge until such time as the health of the W.M. designate would allow him to be inducted to the chair and able to perform his duties. A paper was then read signed by the W.M. designate and properly attested requesting the presiding officer to appoint the several brethren therein mentioned to their respective offices. Thereupon the W.M. pro tem., appointed Bros. Ily. Penfold, S.W.; Wm. Bayley, J.W.; J. C. Barnard, S.D.; R. Griggs, J.D.; S. Shirubsole, Treas.; J. Owen, I.G.; and J. Fearn, Tyler, and to each of the above as he invested them with their collar and badge of office, he address a few wholesome words of advice. The new lodge furniture was the theme of universal admiration on account of its strict architectural character, and the beauty and chasteness of its design, much of which was presented by various brethren who had the interest of the new lodge at heart, and made by Mr. G. Green of Rainham, Kent. Bro. Jas. Owen of the Bull Inn, Sittingbourne, prepared a dejeuner at half-past four o'clock, in a style that reflected much credit to his establishment, to which about 80 sat down.

At the close of the dejeuner the brethren present liberally provided the nucleus of a charity fund in connection with the lodge, charity being one of the leading features of the Craft. In commemoration of the event of the day, the bells of the parish church of St. Michael, to which the new lodge is dedicated, sent forth a merry peal, and the standard of old England floated from the church tower. The town put on quite a holiday appearance, and the band of the 16th Kent (Sittingbourne) Rifle Volunteers performed a variety of pieces during the dejeuner. Masonry, we are informed, has lately made rapid strides in the county, which is now perhaps second to none in a Masonic point of view, and at present there are double the number of lodges than existed in the province at the time the present P.G.M. came into office.

PERFECT ASHLAR LODGE, No. 1178.

The usual monthly meeting of this lodge, which was consecrated by Bro. W. Muggeridge just two years ago, was held on Thursday, at the Gregorian Arms, Jamaica-road, Bermondsey. Bro. F. H. Ebsworth, W.M., opened the lodge, and afterwards, assisted by his officers, initiated Mr. Gustav. Ellis in the ancient mysteries of the Order. He subsequently passed Bros. Green (1194), Rambert and Smith to the second degree, executing his work as a W.M. should. Bro. Alfred Avery, P.M. (619), then installed Bro. James William Avery, S.W. and W.M. elect., also a P.M. of (619), in the chair, in the fluent and correct style for which he is so famous as the Installing Master of his mother lodge, and he was warmly applauded at the conclusion of his delivery of the charges. The officers invested by the W.M., were Bros. Josiah Green, S.W.; H. Bartlett, J.W.; Dr. John Dixon, P.M., Treas.; F. Walters, P.M., Sec.; D. Rose, S.D.; G. J. Grace, J.D.; J. W. Dudley, I.G.; J. H. Harmsworth, D.C.; J. H. Fudge, W.S.; and W. Y. Laing, Tyler.

The W.M. afterwards presented the I.P.M. with a beautiful P.M. Jewel, and congratulations of the Lodge, and also a magnificent P.M. Collar and Jewel which had been subscribed for by the brethren. The observations with which the W.M. accompanied the presentation were most complimentary and well chosen, and Bro. Ebsworth returned thanks in very feeling terms, promising to forward the interests of the Lodge in the future as he had in the past.

A vote of thanks was passed to Bro. F. Walters for his zeal as Secretary. The Lodge was then closed, and a splendid banquet followed; whereafter Bro. J. W. Avery proposed the usual toasts in a genial and happy way.

The brethren spent a delightful evening, and enjoyed some capital singing and recitations.

Among the brethren present in lodge and at the banquet table, we noticed Bros. F. H. Ebsworth, J. W. Avery, Josiah Green, J. Dixon, M.D. Treas.; F. Walters, Sec.; H. Bartlett, D. Rose, G. J. Grace, J. W. Dudley, J. H. Harmsworth, L. Ashton, J. A. Smith, J. H. Fudge, P. Fry, J. A. Axtell, and the visitors were R. B. Newsome, W.M. (1223); T. L. Green (1194); H. Massey, P.M. (619); C. J. Hogg, W.M. (58); W. H. Pragnell, P.M. (310); A. Avery, P.M. (619); Saul Walls, S.W. (619); and H. Muggeridge, P.M. (192).

SAINT ANDREW, THE PATRON SAINT OF SCOTLAND.

By CIPES.

The next day he was again brought before the Proconsul, who persuaded him that he should not foolishly destroy himself, but live and enjoy with him the pleasures of this life. The apostle told him that he should have with him eternal joys, if renouncing his execrable idolatries, he would heartily embrace Christianity, which, said he, I have already so successfully preached amongst you. That, answered the Proconsul, is the very reason why I am so very earnest with you to sacrifice to the gods, that those whom you have everywhere misled may by your example be brought to return back to that ancient religion which they have forsaken, otherwise I will cause you to be crucified with exquisite tortures. The apostle replied, that now he saw it was in vain any longer to deal with him, a person incapable of sober counsels, and hardened in his own blindness and folly; that as for himself he might do his worst, and if he had one torment greater than another, he might inflict it upon him; for the greater constancy he shewed in his sufferings for Christ, the more acceptable he should be to his Lord and Master. Ægeas could now hold no longer, but passed sentence of death upon him. The particular reason of the Proconsul's displeasure and rage against him was, that amongst others he had converted his wife Maximilla, and his brother Stratocles, to the Christian faith, having cured them of desperate distempers that had seized upon them.

The Proconsul first commanded him to be scourged, seven Lictors successively whipping his naked body; and seeing his invincible patience and constancy, he commanded him to be crucified, but not to be fastened to the cross with nails, but with cords, that so his death might be more lingering and tedious. As he was led to execution, to which he went with a cheerful and composed mind, the people cried out that he was an innocent and good man, and unjustly condemned to die. Being come within sight of the cross, his countenance did not change, nor did the blood freeze in his veins, nor his hair stand on end, nor did he lose his voice, his body did not tremble, nor was his soul troubled, nor did his senses fail him, as it happens to human frailty, but the flame of love which burns in his breast cast forth sparks through his mouth, and he saluted the cross with this kind of address: That he had long desired and expected this happy hour, that the cross had been consecrated by the body of Christ hanging on it, and adorned with his members as with so many inestimable jewels, that he came joyful and triumphing to it, that it might receive him as a disciple and follower of Him who once hung upon it, and he the means to carry him safe unto his Master, having been the instrument upon which his Master had redeemed him. Having prayed and exhorted the people to constancy and perseverance in that religion which he had delivered to them, he was fastened to the cross, whereon he hung two days teaching and instructing the people all the time, and when great opportunities in the meanwhile were used to the Proconsul to spare his life, he earnestly begged of our Lord that he might at this time depart and seal the truth of his religion with his blood. God heard his prayer, and he expired on the last day of November.

There seems to have been something peculiar in that cross that was the instrument of St. Andrew's martyrdom, which is commonly affirmed to have been a cross decussate, two pieces of timber crossing each other in the middle in the form of the letter X, hence usually known by the name of St. Andrew's Cross. His body being taken down and embalmed, was decently and honourably interred by Maximilla, a lady of great quality and estate. As for that report of Gregory, Bishop of Tours, that on the anniversary day of his martyrdom, there was wont to flow from St. Andrew's tomb a most fragrant and precious oil, which according to its quantity denoted the scarceness or plenty of the following year; and that the sick being anointed with oil were restored to their former health; "for my part," says one of his biographers, "if there be any ground of truth in the story, I believe it no more than that it was an exhalation and sweating forth at some times of those rich costly perfumes and ointments wherewith his body was embalmed after his crucifixion." His body was afterwards, by the Emperor Constantine the Great, solemnly removed from Patræ to Constantinople, in A.D. 357, and deposited in the great church which he had built to the honour of the apostles, which being taken down some hundred years after by Justinian the emperor, in order to its reparation, the body was found in a wooden coffin, and again reposed in its proper place.

The churches of Milan, Nola, Brescia, and other places, were at the same time enriched with small portions of the highly-prized relics of St. Andrew. When Constantinople was taken by the Franks, Cardinal Peter of Capua brought the relics of St.

Andrew thence to Italy in A.D. 1210, and deposited them in the Cathedral of Armafi, where they still remain. It is further said, however, that Thomas the Despot carried the head of St. Andrew from Constantinople to Italy, after the capture of Constantinople by the Turks, and presented it to Pope Pius II. in 1461, for which he was rewarded by having a monastery allotted to him as his residence, and a competent revenue.

There is a tradition that the cross on which St. Andrew was crucified was brought from Achaia, and placed in the monastery of Veauue, near Marseilles, from which it was removed before A.D. 1250 to the Abbey of St. Victor in Marseilles, where it is still shown. There is a difficulty in conceiving how the Christians of Patræ got possession of that precious piece of wood, in the circumstances in which they must have found themselves at the time of the martyrdom of the apostle. A portion of this cross was carried to Brussels by Philip the Good, Duke of Burgundy, who, in honour of it, instituted the Order of the Knights of the Golden Fleece, assigning them a figure of this cross as a badge.

St. Andrew has long been honoured as the principal patron Saint of Scotland. An Abbot, called Regulus or Rule, brought from Constantinople, about the middle of the fourth century, some relics of St. Andrew, which he deposited in a church built in honour of this saint, where now the city of St. Andrews stands. Many pilgrims resorted to this church from foreign countries. Hungus, King of the Picts, early in the ninth century, in thanksgiving for a great victory over the Northumbrians, bestowed on this church a tenth part of all the land of his dominions. Kenneth II., King of the Scots, having overcome the Picts, and annexed their territories to his kingdom in A.D. 845, repaired and richly endowed the church of St. Regulus or St. Rule. An arm of St. Andrew was kept in it as a precious relic.

The institution of the Scottish Order of Knighthood, called the Order of the Thistle, is ascribed to King Achaius in the eighth century. It was revived by James VII., who created eight knights in 1687, and after being again in abeyance for fifteen years, it was again revived by Queen Anne in 1703. One of the badges of the Order, the Jewel, is a figure of St. Andrew suspended by a green ribbon. The Order of the Thistle consists of the Sovereign and sixteen Knights, all of whom are peers of Scotland.

St. Andrew is generally represented in mediæval pictures with the decussate cross, called St. Andrew's Cross, in his hand.

The principal statue in the Grand Lodge of Scotland is a figure, the size of life, of St. Andrew the Patron Saint of Scotland.

CRYSTAL PALACE LODGE, No. 742.

The following letter has been forwarded to us for publication:—

Crystal Palace, S.E.,
30th September, 1869.

Dear Sir and Brother,—The number of applicants for admission to the benefits of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys is unfortunately so much in excess of the vacancies in that excellent Institution, that without a canvass for the votes of the Vice-Presidents, Governors, and Subscribers, success is almost impossible.

I trust this will excuse my request to be favoured with proxies on behalf of Herbert Horace Newman, the son of a deceased member of the Lodge over which I have the honour to preside; the circumstances of which case are thus described in the official paper:—

39. Newman, Herbert Horace, Born 5th January, 1861. Father, Bro. William James Newman, was Clerk to the Crystal Palace Company, who died 19th December, 1868, after an illness of three days, and leaving Petitioner, Mrs. Abigail Newman, with six children, five of them dependent upon her for support, unprovided for, her only means arising from the proceeds of a small Life Assurance Policy.

I shall gratefully acknowledge any Votes with which I may be favoured, and have the honour to remain,

Dear Sir and Brother, fraternally yours,
S. G. FOXALL,
W.M. Crystal Palace Lodge.

INNOCENCE.—That innocence should be the professed principle of a Mason occasions no astonishment, when we consider that the discovery of the Deity leads us to the knowledge of those maxims wherewith he may be well pleased. The very idea of a God is attended with the belief that he can approve of nothing that is evil; and when first our predecessors professed themselves servants of the Architect of the World, as an indispensable duty they professed innocence, and put on white raiment, as a type and characteristic of their conviction, and of their being devoted to His will.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Wonder Working Remedies.—As the battle of life has to be fought alike by the naturally feeble and the constitutionally strong, how momentous is it to preserve the former from adventitious ailments. A scratch on the leg, slight inflammation about the ankles, which would have been cured at once by Holloway's Medicaments, grow from the want of the commonest precautions into grievous diseases, which throw the sufferer on the bed of sickness, and perhaps his family on the parish. Every peasant's home should have these remedies, they will save both parents and children from much misery, and above all, they will remove their complaints, at a trifling cost, and leave no disheartening heavy bill behind.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Temple Lodge, No. 101.—This numerous and influential lodge held the first meeting of the present session on Tuesday, in their Lodge-room, at the Ship and Turtle Tavern. There were present: Bros. Joseph Tanner, W.M.; F. J. Cox, S.W.; Smithly, J.W.; Bond, P.M., Treas.; J. H. Wynne, P.M., Sec.; Youle, S.D.; Reynolds, J.D.; Hastelow, D.C.; Prince, I.G. A numerous band of Past Masters, amongst whom we recognised those veterans in Masonry, S. May, E. Farthing, sen., T. Beard, Henry and W. W. Wynne. As usual at the meetings of the brethren of the Temple, there were many visitors, viz.: The W. Bro. Norris, W.M., 21, Past Grand Steward; T. Wescombe, P.G. Sec. Kent; B. P. Todd, P.M. 27, Storr, P.M. 453, &c., &c., altogether forming an assemblage of fifty-three. Mr. Marmaduke Lintt was admitted to the privileges of Masonry in a most impressive manner by the W.M. and his efficient officers, after which the brethren adjourned to one of Bro. George Painter's recherche banquets (the wine supplied needing, of course, no comment), and a most pleasant evening, enlivened with some very good songs, was brought to a close with the Tyler's toast. We observed amongst the toasts proposed by the W.M. "Our Royal brother the M.W. Albert Edward Prince of Wales."

Domestic Lodge of Instruction, No. 177.—A meeting of the above lodge of instruction was held at the "Palmerston Arms," Grosvenor-park, Camberwell, on Tuesday, the 5th inst., when the ceremony of consecration was worked by Bro. R. Wentworth Little, P.M. (975), and that of installation by the esteemed Secretary, Bro. H. Thompson, P.M., of the parent lodge, who installed Bro. Stevens, P.M. (720), as Master. One of the sections in the first lecture was then worked by Bro. Stevens, assisted by the brethren, amongst whom were Bros. T. H. Pulsford, P.M. (1158), a very clever Mason; C. L. Marshall, P.M. (22), the worthy host; E. Shaughnessy, Wisewould, McCrea, Poore, and about fifteen others. This lodge of instruction meets regularly at half-past seven o'clock every Tuesday evening throughout the year, and has already achieved much good for brethren on the Surrey side of the water. Upon this occasion Bro. Thomas, the distinguished teacher, who like the late lamented Stephen Barton Wilson, is an architect by profession, was to have worked the consecration ceremony, but being unable to attend, Bro. Little was requested to take his place, which he did at short notice. Votes of thanks were passed to the Consecrating and Installing Masters, and the lodge was closed. We may add, that the fifteen sections will be worked in this lodge on the last Tuesday in October, by Bro. Pulsford, when there will doubtless be a very large muster of the brethren.

[FROM OUR SPECIAL REPORTER.]

Vickers Lodge, No. 1194.

The installation meeting of this lodge was held on the 2nd inst., at the Northumberland Arms, Isleworth, and was numerously attended, in spite of the drenching rain which fell during the afternoon. The W.M. was not in attendance, but the lodge was opened and presided over by the I.P.M., Bro. E. Clark, who, after the minutes of the former regular and emergency meetings and the report of the Audit Committee had been read by Bro. Dodd, declared Bro. J. T. Trickett, of 954 duly elected a joining member, and initiated into the mysteries of the Order, Messrs. V. Beadle Bedolfe, M.D., Charles G. Forsyth, George Luke Ridge, and Thos. Anthony Woodbridge. Out of four candidates for passing to the second degree only one appeared, and he just at the last minute, when, as time was very short, he agreed to forego his advancement, and Bro. F. Walters promised to get him passed on the 7th inst., at 1178. Bro. Little, by desire of the presiding officer, then took the chair, and Bro. E. Clark presented to him Bro. J. Trickett, C.E., W.M.-elect, to receive the benefits of installation. The ceremony was most impressively rendered by Bro. Little, and the Board of Installed Masters expressed their pleasure at the way in which he had performed his functions. The board having been closed, the brethren were admitted and saluted the newly-installed Master in all the degrees. At the conclusion of this portion of the installation, Bro. Trickett invested Bros. W. Dodd, S.W.; Henry Allman, J.W.; R. W. Little, P.M., Sec.; E. T. Osbaldeston, S.D.; F. J. Lancaster, J.D.; T. Smale, I.G.; R. A. Steel, D.C.; W. Harvey, Senior Steward; Major H. W. Palmer, Jun. Strd.; Gilbert, Tyler. The re-investment of Bro. Little as Secretary was received with a round of applause. Bro. F. Walters, P.M., fluently delivered the charges and on resuming his seat, the brethren expressed their approbation in Masonic form.

The minutes, which were read in the early part of the evening, were approved, and the auditors' report was ordered to be entered on the minutes. At the election of Treasurer, the choice of the brethren fell on the genial Bro. E. Clark, P.M., who, on being invested by the W.M., said he would discharge his duties to the best of his ability, and so prove the satisfaction he felt at the honour conferred on him by the lodge.

A vote of thanks to Bro. R. Gurney, for the zealous discharge of his duties while acting as Treasurer, was carried with acclamation.

Bro. E. CLARK proposed, and Bro. E. T. OSBALDESTON seconded, that Bro. H. G. Buss be made a honorary member of the lodge. This motion also was carried unanimously, and the lodge closed.

A magnificent banquet, provided by Bro. Jones, the host of the Northumberland Arms, followed, and this was succeeded by a sumptuous dessert, when the W.M. proposed the usual toasts.

Bro. JOHN HERVEY, G. Secretary, who was selected by the W.M. to respond to the toast of "The Earl De Grey and Ripon, D.G.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers," said it had given him great pleasure to be present in obedience to the recommendation of the Book of Constitutions, which said we were to visit other lodges, see the different modes of working, and endeavour to improve our minds (our bodies too, he hoped), by mixing with our fellowmen. He had no doubt they had all done so that evening. Unfortunately he had not been able to see all the working, for he and Bro. Hubbard had been storm-bound. Perhaps the preferring to have a dry coat to seeing the working of the lodge was rather a slur upon their Masonic ardour, but he hoped the brethren would look with some degree of kindness upon the act, inasmuch as if they had got wet it might have been a serious drawback for the future. Although he was late, he had seen enough of the working, and had heard enough of it from Col. Burdett—who had said how pleased he was with it—to know that it was extremely good. It was always gratifying to see a new lodge working so well, so amicably, and with such prosperity. He congratulated the W.M. on the way in which the work had been carried out and trusted he would have a happy year of office. He thanked the W.M. and the brethren for their hospitality; he had enjoyed himself very much; and for the Earl De Grey and Ripon, the rest of the G. Officers and himself, he begged to acknowledge the compliment which had been paid him.

Col. BURDETT, in responding for "The Army, Navy and Volunteers," also spoke of the lodge's hospitality, and with respect to its working said, although he had had great experience in lodges he was much gratified at the way in which the work of this lodge had been done both by the Master and his officers. He had seen a great portion of the initiation, and trusted that the initiates were as pleased as he was. Many young Masons entered the Order from curiosity, some from persuasion, and some to know what Masonry was. A great many went on for a short time, and then relaxed and left off. Those who had perseverance to go on were the men to rise in the Order, and were the men whom Masons wanted. Those who came in from curiosity or for amusement were not the men to benefit the Order. Those who stuck to it were the men from whom it derived most support. He had seen much of Masonry, and the more he saw of it the more he liked it. He never regretted joining it; and if it was only for the way in which his health and that of the Army, Navy and Volunteers, had just been drunk, he never should regret it.

Bro. Major PALMER, for the "Volunteers," said as brevity was the soul of wit for once in a way he would be witty, and merely thank the brethren for drinking his health.

Dr. V. B. BEDOLFE acknowledged the toast of "The Initiates." He found himself occupying, he did not know why, a seat at the cross table. It was an honour he could not deserve, but it reminded him of a remark in Don Quixote. When the Don was placed in such a seat he was not quite content with it, not being sure that it was a post of honour. He explained that a rustic having been requested to dine should be allowed to sit at the other end of the table; when the nobleman took him by the coat and thrust him into his seat, and the reply was, "Don't you know wherever I am, there is the seat of honour." Therefore he (Bro. Bedolfe) supposed that wherever the W.M. sat there was the seat of honour. He spoke on behalf of himself and the other gentlemen who were initiated with him, when he said they would like to spend the remainder of their lives to the advancement and good of Freemasonry. He believed it was an institution which had been a benefit in past times, and was a benefit now, because it seemed to explain the dependence on man should have on another. It was not a union of one rank, but of all ranks. The Prince of Wales and men of the humblest position belong to the Order, and joined hands and lived in good fellowship. It was never intended to confound ranks or institutions, but to hold out the hand of friendship to all. It was conservative in all that was good in society, and society would benefit by it. He and his brother Initiates would endeavour by a life of devotion to the interests of the fraternity to benefit their fellow men.

Bro. E. CLARK, P.M., proposed the W.M., who in his capacities of Junior and Senior Warden had given satisfaction to the brethren.

The W.M.: I rise to thank you for the very cordial manner in which you have drunk my health, and for your good wishes for my year of office. I am sure I feel very much gratified and very much honoured by the position you have placed me in, and I shall endeavour, as far as in me lies, not to disappoint your hopes and wishes. At the same time I must express my thanks to the Past Officers, Past Masters, and Officers, who are much more highly qualified in Masonry than myself, for the kind and friendly manner in which they have assisted me on all occasions, and I look for their cordial co-operation with me while I am in office. I can only say that so far as my wishes and intentions go I desire to do all I can for Freemasonry, but at the same time I cannot help expressing the conviction I have of my own want of knowledge, which I hope to make up; but I trust that the desire and disposition to go on in Masonry will help me over some of the difficulties. Still, I repeat, I depend much upon the officers better informed than myself to help me along. Beyond that I have only to express my thanks for the kind and courteous manner in which I have been treated by every member of the lodge and visitors we have had since I have belonged to it. I can but express my gratitude to those officers and brethren who have so kindly assisted me, and hope that we may long have the pleasure of meeting the distinguished officers who honour us to-night with their presence, and that we may end not only this year, but many years of success in Masonry. Brethren, I thank you very much.

Bros. HUBBARD and QUILTY returned thanks for "the Visitors," Bro. E. CLARK for "the P.M.'s," Bros. DODD and ALLMAN for "the Officers," and Bro. LITTLE for "the Secretary." Bro. GILBERT gave "the Tyler's Toast," which brought the proceedings to a close.

The company who attended the Lodge included Bros. J. Trickett, W.M.; E. Clark, I.P.M.; W. Dodd, S.W.; R. Gurney, R. Wentworth Little, Sec.; H. Allman, J.W.; E. T. Osbaldeston, S.D.; F. J. Lancaster, J.D.; T. Smale, I.G. R. A. Steel, D.C.; W. Harvey, H. W. Palmer, W. B. Tustin, C. Tomlin, L. Acworth, Geo. Cattol, E. J. Bailey, Benj. Glover, Geo. Kenning, Thos. Cubitt, V. B. Bedolfe, C. G. Forsyth, G. L. Ridge, T. A. Woodbridge, T. L. Green, W. F. N. Quilty (P.M., 862), W. H. Edwards (13), J. T. Trickett (954), P. R. Jones (193), John Hervey (G. Secretary), W. H. Hubbard (P.M., 173), Col. Fras. Burdett (P.G.W., Rep. G. Lodge of Ireland), and H. Massey (P.M., 619).

PROVINCIAL.

Ipswich.—Prince of Wales Lodge, No. 959.—There was a numerous attendance of brethren at this lodge on Monday, the 4th inst., After the confirmation of the minutes, a ballot was taken for Mr. William Morley Farron, which proving unanimous, this gentleman was regularly admitted and initiated into the mysteries of the Order. Bro. J. Emra Holmes, 31, and Bro. Chas. Young were elected joining members. Bro. Parsons, initiated at the last regular lodge, having passed the usual examination and retired, the lodge was opened in the Second Degree, when Bro. Parsons was passed to the degree of a F.C. A revised code of Bye-laws was passed by the brethren, subject to the approval of the Provincial Grand Master. There being no other business before the lodge, the brethren retired to their Banqueting-room, where nearly thirty brethren enjoyed the remainder of the evening in love, peace and harmony.

Liverpool.—The Neptune Lodge, No. 1264.—This new but attractive and interesting lodge, which was consecrated on the 11th day of June last, seems to be growing rapidly in strength and favour, to which its worth and working so justly entitle it. The brethren of this lodge now number about forty, and judging from the excellent discipline maintained, both by the officers and members, and the intelligence brought to bear in the general working of the lodge, we augur a most successful result. This lodge held its regular meeting on Oct. 1st, and was visited by several brethren from America and other foreign parts, who expressed themselves highly delighted and entertained. The lodge was opened at 6 p.m., by the W.M. Bro. Joseph Healing; the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed, and a ballot for Mr. George Donalty having been taken, he was declared unanimously elected. Mr. Joseph Korn, who had been elected the previous lodge night was in attendance, and with Mr. Donalty was initiated into the mysteries and privileges of Antient Freemasonry. The lodge was opened to the second degree, when Bros. Ford and Sowerby were examined, in this degree were found sufficient and complimented, received the test of merit, and retired. The lodge was then opened in the third degree, when the said brethren were readmitted and raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason. The lodge was then closed down to the second degree, and immediately to the first degree, when Bro. Wm. Barr of this lodge presented to and for the use of the lodge a very handsome silver salver, and in a very neat speech expressive of devotion to and for the welfare of the lodge, said he felt highly gratified in their acceptance of the humble present. A vote of thanks was unanimously accorded to Bro. Barr, and the W.M., in thanking him in the name of himself and brethren, said he was delighted to bear witness to the esteem in which Bro. Barr was held by every brother in this lodge, both for his ability, intelligence and integrity, and although not an officer of the lodge he was able to hold any office therein. He hoped the day would soon arrive when Bro. Barr would occupy the chair that himself had the honour of now occupying. Bro. John Pemberton, S.W., of this lodge, now presented a quantity of music books, handsomely bound, compiled for the use of Masonic lodges, and said he hoped the brethren would use them in properly developing the harmony of our beautiful service and render it as impressive as its solemnity deserved. A vote of thanks was unanimously accorded to Bro. Pemberton, and the W.M. in thanking him in the name of himself and brethren, said that he was confident and proud to say that Bro. Pemberton had, and was worthy of, the highest respect of himself and every member of that lodge. He highly complimented him upon his assiduity and ability in the discharge of his duties as S.W. of the Neptune Lodge, and hoped that his kind present would be properly appreciated by every brother endeavouring to act in concert and in harmony in the well-arranged selections of music for the various degrees. The lodge was then closed, when the brethren retired to refreshment, and spent a frugal, convivial, and happy evening, and departed in peace.

THE ROYAL ARCH. METROPOLITAN.

Beacon Chapter, No. 619.—An emergency meeting of this Chapter was held on Saturday. Comps. F. Walters, P.Z., as M.E.Z.; E. Clark, as H.; W. H. Hubbard, as J., and Comp. Little, as P.S., opened the Chapter, and afterwards Comp. H. Massey, S.N., and J.-elect, was formally installed in the J.-chair, the ceremony being impressively performed by Comps. F. Walters and R. W. Little. The Chapter was then closed, and the Companions adjourned to the banquet table and spent a happy evening.

MARK MASONRY. METROPOLITAN.

Thistle Lodge, No. 8.—The election meeting of this old lodge was held on Friday, the 1st inst., at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, and was well attended by the members, amongst whom we observed Bro. T. Meggy, P.G.M.O., who officiated as W.M., in the unavoidable absence of Bro. Mann; Bros. H. G. Lake, S.W.; J. W. Dawson, J.W.; C. A. Cottebrune, P.G.S.B., P.M., and Sec.; F. Binckes, G. Sec., and P.M.; Joshua Nunn, P.G.D., and P.M.; R. Watts, P.G.S.B.; L. Harvey, J.D.; E. Hart, Org.; J. W. Boord, Baber, Henley, Mortlock, Sendey, Marshall, Lowder, Baker, and Taffs. The visitors were Bros. R. Wentworth Little, P.M., and Sec. St. Mark's Lodge, No. 1, and Chas. Sloman the eminent improvisatrice. The lodge was duly opened, and the Mark Master's hymn was sung by the brethren, led and accompanied by Bro. Hart the respected Organist, after which the minutes were read and confirmed, and ballots taken for eight candidates. The following brethren being in attendance were then regularly advanced to the ancient and honourable degree of Mark Master Masons, viz., Bros. Charles Lacy, W.M. (174), a trusty "Sincerity" man; George Kelly, P.G. Stew., and P.M. (63), a zealous veteran in the Craft; Morton Edwards, of "St. Luke's" Chelsea (144), the eminent sculptor whose bust of the Grand Master, Lord Zetland, has won universal praise; R. P. Wilkinson, P.M. (95), a worthy member of no undistinguished lodge. The work of the degree was admirably performed by Bro. Meggy, the acting W.M., who is truly a Master of the art, and he was ably assisted by Bros. Nunn, Cottebrune, Watts, and other P.M.'s, and by the officers present, but we regret to observe that several officers were not in their places. The elections for the ensuing year resulted as follows:—Bros. H. G. Lake, well known as P.M. of 186, and P.Z. 820, was chosen as Master; Bro. J. W. Figg, P.M., an old and valued member, was re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. Woodstock, Tyler. The lodge was then closed with the musical accompaniments, and the brethren adjourned to a banquet under the presidency of Bro. Meggy, P.G.M.O. The usual formal toasts were well received, and a cordial outburst of enthusiasm greeted the name of Bro. Meggy when proposed by Bro. Binckes. The acting W.M. replied, and deplored the absence of Bro. Mann, W.M., who had been suddenly called to Ireland. The "Newly Advanced Brethren" responded seriatim, and expressed their great gratification at having become Mark Masters. Bros. Little and Sloman acknowledged the compliment paid to them as visitors, and Bro. Binckes delivered an interesting speech upon the present position and prospects of Mark Masonry in England. Bros. Nunn and Cottebrune responded for the P.M.'s. We must not omit to mention that the vocal abilities of Bros. Mortlock, Marshall, and other brethren greatly contributed to the enjoyment of this most agreeable meeting.

The weather being very beautiful, the assemblage was highly pleased with the day's excursion.

PROVINCE OF LINCOLNSHIRE.

A meeting of the members of the Charity Committee for the Province of Lincolnshire, was held at Louth Sep. 30, under the presidency of R.W. Bro. Major Smyth, D.P.G.M. Brethren present: Bros. Lucas, P.G.S.; Rainey, P.P.G.D.; Seaton, Moore, P.G.R.; Agabitt, P.G.T.; Radley, P.I.G.W.

Bro. Lucas proposed, and Bro. Seaton seconded, "That the M.E.Z.'s of the chapters in the province be added to the members of the Charity Committee."

Letters were read from the Pelham Pillar Lodge, and also from Bro. Bacon, Lincoln.

Bro. Lucas proposed and Bro. Seaton seconded, "That before any new candidate be selected, the debts that have been incurred to secure the elections of Bros. Lincoln and Josiah Margason be repaid." The Secretary was ordered to repay Bro. Rainey thirteen boys for Bro. Patten, and eighteen boys Bro. Radley for Bro. Wright, of Derby.

A letter was read from Bro. Hessay, soliciting votes for Arthur Earnest Hustler, and one from Bro. Nesbitt, on behalf of Bro. Fowler, for Herbert White. The committee were sorry that they were unable to give any support to either candidates, as they were about to receive an application from an old brother in the province.

Bro. Moore, of Lincoln, proposed, and Bro. Lucas seconded, Bro. Henry Cotton, the Provincial Grand Tyler, as a candidate to be placed on the list for the next election for the aged Freemasons.

Bro. Radley proposed, and Major Smyth seconded, Elizabeth Jackson as a candidate also for the Aged Widows' Fund.

There being no other propositions, the ballot was taken, when Bro. Cotton was unanimously elected.

It was found that the Secretary had upwards of fifty votes for the Boys' and Girls' Schools, which he was authorised to exchange at the best rate for aged Masons' votes, and also to write to all the lodges in the province and ask their co-operation to secure the election of so deserving a case as their old P.G. Tyler.

At the Peckham Lodge of Instruction, 879, held at the Maismore Arms, Park-road, Peckham, every Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock precisely, the brethren of Old Kent-road, Peckham, and their neighbourhoods have a treat under the very able instruction of Bro. P.M. Rose, assisted by Bros. P.M. Tibbatt, Howes, &c.

THE MASONIC LIFEBOAT FUND.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am a member of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Cumberland and Westmorland, at the last meeting of which the sum of £5 was voted to the "Masonic Lifeboat Fund," and as I object strongly to the money being handed over until I know what has become of the amounts received from other lodges, I shall be glad to know whether any account of the Fund has been published, and, if so, where it can be obtained. Ugly rumours are abroad on the subject, and many brethren believe the Fund to be a myth.

Yours fraternally,
C. H. L.

[We know nothing of the Fund in question, neither has any account been printed to our knowledge. The Grand Lodge declined to subsidise the scheme, and we would therefore recommend brethren to subscribe direct to the Lifeboat Institution.]—Ed. F.

INELIGIBILITY OF BASTARDS AS FREEMASONS.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

My business engagements, &c., entirely preclude me from answering the lengthened remarks of Bro. "Cipes" at present. However, I intend to read them all carefully over, and I shall, at my first spare moments, give a few words in reply, when I hope to show the mistakes he falls into, and to prove that a better acquaintance with the real history of our Order, &c., might have prevented him from writing as he has done.

Yours fraternally,
LEO.

THE ANTIQUITY OF SPECULATIVE FREEMASONRY.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Your correspondent, D. Stolez, at page 161, is mistaken. We do not all admit that Freemasonry is of Jewish origin; for, operative Masonry was in existence before Abraham was born, whereas speculative Freemasonry was not in existence until last century, and I defy all your numerous readers, jointly or severally, to prove otherwise. Again, the Jews were not a nation of builders, whereas the Egyptians—who were old as a nation before the Jews were heard of—were. Further, Leo does not "express a wish to observe Freemasonry to the traditions of the second Temple," nor the first either; nor to any other Temple. King Solomon of the first Temple, and Ezra, Zerubabel, and Nehemiah of the second, had about as much to do with Speculative Freemasonry as Julius Cæsar had to do with the tragedy of "Julius Cæsar," as written by Shakespeare. Let honour be given to whom it is due, and as England is the Mother of Speculative Masonry she deserves to be honoured as such. It was in England, about A.D. 1717, that Speculative Freemasonry with its doctrines and principles degrees, rituals and ceremonies sprang up; or to put it in other words, Speculative Masonry was then manufactured by Desaguliers, Anderson, Payne, &c. It has, however, been elaborated or touched up since then; their production was concocted out of the Bible, and other books, &c., and they then grafted it on to the old operative Masons' lodges, which knew nothing about it before. Consequently Speculative Freemasonry is only about 152 years old. Let those of your readers who have hitherto imagined otherwise, examine into the matter, as I have done, and they will find that I am pretty near the mark.

I am, yours fraternally,
LEO.

We have the greatest pleasure in adding our testimony to the unanimous verdict of the Press in favour of Messrs. Macniven and Cameron's pens, particulars of which will be found in our advertising columns. We have used them for some time past, and to fitly describe them, must apply the cabalistic letter and numeral so well known at "Lloyds," as they are truly A. 1.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—Grateful and Comforting.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"The singular success which Mr. Epps attained by his homoeopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold by the Trade only, in $\frac{1}{2}$ lb., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., and 1 lb. tin-lined packets, labelled JAMES EPPS & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London.—ADVT.

DEATHS.

McFARLANE.—On the 3rd ult., at Colon, Central America, Bro. William McFarlane, second mate Ship "Trelawny," of Greenock, M.M., Lodge Clyde, No. 408, aged 41 years.

ST. MAUR.—On the 30th ult., at No. 20, Dover-street, W., the Right Hon. Edward Adolphus Ferdinand, Earl St. Maur, aged 34.

Answers to Correspondents.

All communications for THE FREEMASON should be written legibly, on one side of the paper only, and, if intended for insertion in the current number must be received not later than 10 o'clock a.m. on Thursdays, unless in very special cases. The name and address of every writer must be sent to us in confidence.

E. S. (Constantinople).—We will attend to your suggestion, in the meantime we can refer you to our local agent, Bro. Hanley, of the Levant Times, who will doubtless meet your wishes.

C. W.—Yes. Apply at the Grand Secretary's Office, Freemasons' Hall, where, if your name be duly registered, the district certificate can be exchanged free of expense.

SILEX.—Mr. Gladstone is not a Freemason, but several members of his Cabinet belong to the Craft. The late Prince Consort was a Teutonic Knight, but not a Freemason.

PERFECT ASHLAR.—The alteration is not legal until approved by the Grand Master through the Grand Secretary, or in provincial and district lodges by the P.G.M., or D.G.M.

THE SON OF SALATHIEL.—We shall be delighted to receive your MSS. when ready.

KAPPA.—The society you allude to, Phi-Beta-Kappa, does not exist in England; it was originated in the American Universities, to which sphere its operations have been confined. The "Order of Harodim" is not extinct, but is now regarded merely as a curious phase of Masonry in the eighteenth century. We are acquainted with its secrets, but cannot indicate their nature beyond stating that the lessons of the third degree were reduced to practice in the ceremonies of "Harodim," with an effect that must have been at once sweetly solemn and awe-inspiring to the candidate. There is little doubt that much Masonic knowledge lies hidden in forgotten manuscripts of the last century, and one of the greatest boons to the Craft would be the recovery of these important documents. We believe Dr. Rob Morris, of Kentucky, is in possession of the ritual of Preston's "Order of Harodim," of which we also have a copy. We will publish a list of its officers in 1795, if the information will be of service to you.

EVERARD LYLE.—We do not profess to answer questions respecting the religious belief of any member of the Craft, but the statement you mention is to our certain knowledge untrue, as the exalted brother referred to belongs to the Communion of the Church of England. It would make no difference to us or to the Craft, in our estimation of his virtues, were he a member of the religious body stated.

Ex-Officio.—The assertion is so palpably absurd, that no one but a Yahoo, like its inventor, would credit it, but if publicly made it will be repelled in an equally public manner.

NATIONAL MASONIC JURISDICTION.

AN invariable adherence to social order, and a spirit of fraternal union are at once the bases, and the bulwarks of the whole Masonic structure. The first induces that respect and reverence for lawfully-constituted authority which we find inculcated so forcibly in the Ancient Charges of the Craft; and the second reminds us of our paramount duty to live in peace, harmony, and brotherly love with the household of the faithful. It will thus be seen that good order and good fellowship are landmarks which no true Mason ever wilfully violates; and when we see them disregarded by men who profess to be brethren of the mystic tie, we may well look with suspicion upon their claims to be considered a part of the great Masonic family. Now, one of the most widely recognised principles of Masonic government is that which assigns to the Grand Lodge of every country or state the exclusive and indisputable right to rule over all lodges of Freemasons within the limits of its jurisdiction. It is a wise and salutary regulation, and one which has never militated in the slightest degree against the cosmopolitan character of symbolic Freemasonry. On the contrary, its non-observance arouses national jealousies and creates internecine strife between the members of a society whose proudest boast should be that they are citizens of the world.

Unfortunately, attempts have been made at different periods, and in more than one nation, to overthrow this landmark of the Craft, and the frequency of such instances of late, forces upon our mind the reluctant conviction that these nefarious efforts are part and parcel of an organised conspiracy of the enemies of social order and true freedom against true and genuine Freemasonry. We have recently had to deplore the action of the Grand Orient of France with respect to a gross infringement of the jurisdictional rights of the Grand Lodge of Louisiana; we have been compelled to allude in terms of disapprobation to the establishment of a clandestine lodge in Jersey by the French Supreme Council; and we have felt it our duty to denounce the malpractices of a spurious body located in London itself. It is with the last-named community that we now propose to deal, inasmuch as one of its members impugns the accuracy of the statements made in our article, entitled "Spurious Freemasonry, or the Rite of Memphis," which appeared in No. 4, on the 3rd April, 1869. We are indebted to this gentleman for several documents relating to the subject, including the "General Statutes" of the "Order," and a supplement issued by the "Chaine d'Union"—which appears to be the official organ of the body—on the 15th May, 1867.

We have carefully perused the various statements before us, and are only confirmed in the opinions to which we have previously given expression; in point of fact, the illegality of the "Rite" is more clearly established by the admissions made by its defenders in reply to the strictures on their conduct; and a brief resumé of the case will render this conclusion apparent to every brother who acknowledges the right of national Masonic Jurisdiction. Let us quote from page 5 of a paper styled "An Appeal to the Grand Lodge of England," in which the following passages occur:—

"The Grand Lodge of Philadelphes is a transformation of the Lodge 'Les Sectateurs de Ménès,' founded in London in 1850, one year before the Coup d'Etat of December, by Masons, foreigners to England, but belonging to various Masonic orders acknowledged in Europe. A charter was granted to them by a regular Masonic power, the Lodges of which had continuous and amicable relations with those of the Grand Orient and those of the Supreme Conseil of France, a power which was therefore acknowledged. True, after the Coup d'Etat of December, 1851, the Lodges of the Rite of Memphis were closed in France. But it must not be forgotten, they were not so by an order emanating from the Masonic power, but by an order from the administration (government). This step against the order of Memphis was therefore entirely extra-masonic, and we will not stop here to discuss its lawfulness.

"An arbitrary act of the political power having closed the Lodges of our rite in France, measures were to be taken to shield the archives of the order against another coup de main. Then was it, that the Lodge 'des Sectateurs de Ménès' in London was selected to be the depository of them, and was legally constituted Grand Lodge of the Rite of Memphis, under the distinct name of the Grand Lodge des Philadelphes. From that period she has continued to work without interruption, and we can prove by our minute books that she has never deviated from a truly Masonic path.

"Now, here are the facts: The Grand Lodge of England has issued an interdiction against the Grand Lodge of Philadelphes; she has forbidden, under the most severe punishment, all the Lodges acknowledging her supremacy to have any connexion whatever with the Philadelphes; and her official journal has published the excommunication pronounced by the supreme power. Not content with striking at us a direct blow within the limits of her jurisdiction, the Grand Lodge of England has denounced us to all the Masonic orders she is connected with in France, Germany, &c. These are the facts we complain of."

From their own showing, it is obvious, in the first place that the members of the "Rite of Memphis" started a lodge without any authoritative sanction whatever, and although it is afterwards alleged that they obtained a charter from a "regular Masonic power," it is equally clear that they never possessed authority to work as Masons from the English Grand Lodge, which alone can exercise the right to create lodges in England.

The name of the "regular Masonic power" is, however, discreetly withheld, and we can have no difficulty in fitly interpreting their reticence on this point, for, could it be proved that any recognised Masonic power had thus invaded the jurisdiction of England, such an unwarrantable violation of international Masonic law would not only justly incur the condemnation of all regular Masons throughout the globe, but entail the penalty of Masonic ostracism on the offending body.

There is another aspect under which we may consider this question, and it is one of the gravest importance. It is well known that the Masonic fraternity, as a secret society, enjoys the protection of the law throughout the British dominions by a special legislative enactment, and that all other secret associations are illegal. It is also patent to every observer that the Freemasons of England have won the esteem and respect of their fellow-citizens by a studious abstention from interference in political or religious disputes. But the very reverse is the case with the individuals who compose the spurious lodges of Memphis; they not only break the laws of the country in which they reside, but trample upon the land-marks of an Order which they profess to cherish and admire. They deceive the unfortunate dupes, who fancy that by entering into those pseudo lodges, they acquire the rights of fellowship with brethren of the Craft universal. We ourselves know several instances in which the distressed members of a lodge of "Philadelphes" have sought assistance from the funds of regular lodges, and could hardly believe that they had been the victims of an imposition, and that their Masonic status was utterly ignored. There are, doubtless, some men of character enrolled in this unlawful association, and to them we appeal whether it is consistent with the dictates of honour to encourage such a travesty of the Masonic institution. In one respect, and in one only, we appear to have done injustice to the "Philadelphes" in our article of the 3rd of April, namely, in stating that the "Rite" of which they are members comprised the absurd number of 92 degrees.

When Marconis originated the system of Memphis, in 1839, as a rival to the Ancient and Accepted Rite, he very nearly tripled the grades conferred by the Supreme Councils of the 33°, but it appears that the "Reformed Order of Memphis," as worked in London, recognizes only three degrees. This, however, is beside the question, and to sum up the matter briefly we deliberately affirm :—

1st. That the "Rite of Memphis" is a spurious imitation of the Masonic Order, the offspring of vanity, folly and fraud.

2nd. That all lodges of "Philadelphes" which meet in England are held in defiance of the laws of the realm, and ought to be suppressed by the police.

3rd. That no Foreign Grand Lodge or Masonic Power of whatever rite or system can legally establish lodges within the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of England.

We fraternally request the co-operation of our brother editors of the Masonic press throughout the world, in denouncing all infractions of the clearly-defined right of every National Grand Lodge to govern the fraternity of Freemasons in its own jurisdiction, and should any regular lodges abroad have been misled by the specious professions of the "Philadelphes," we trust they will at once withdraw all countenance and support from such an irregular and illegitimate body.

Obituary.

BRO. THE EARL ST. MAUR.

We regret having to announce the sudden decease of this estimable nobleman, who expired at No. 20, Dover-street, W., on Thursday the 30th ult. The Right Hon. Edward Adolphus Ferdinand, Earl St. Maur, was the eldest and only surviving son of the Duke of Somerset, and was born in 1835. His lordship had held commissions in the Wilts Yeomanry-Cavalry and the 4th Hussars, but retired from the service in 1860. He was called to the House of Peers in 1863 by the ancient family title of Lord Seymour. The deceased Earl was initiated into Freemasonry in the Pythagoras Lodge, 447, at Corfu, on the 14th of March, 1863, and raised to the degree of Master Mason on the 5th of May following, about which period Sir Percy Florence Shelley, Bart., son of the celebrated poet, was also admitted into the Order in the same lodge.

Masonic Notings.

With the commencement of October Masonry shews some signs of vitality. June, July, August, and September form the Long Vacation of Freemasonry, and the brethren take advantage of the beautiful weather to blow off some of the dust and smoke of London, which have accumulated in and upon them during the Masonic season. But with the return of the short days and the long nights the Craft are recalled to the performance of their fraternal duties, and begin to assemble in those temples wherein they have learned that man does not live for himself alone.

The past week has called together a large number of lodges; but the most noticeable occurrence is the celebration of the Centenary of the St. John's Lodge (167). As the Lodge had lived through the trials and troubles of a hundred years, and "this length of labour past" arrived at a point of great happiness and prosperity, it was thought by the brethren who managed the festival, to be a fitting occasion to offer prayer and praise. Accordingly a service in which the Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G.C., read the prayers, took place at Hampstead church, and the Vicar of Holy Trinity, Haverstock Hill, the Rev. C. Lee, M.A., preached the sermon, of which it may be said it was less a sermon than a Masonic lecture. But it was a fine composition and displayed immense research, and will doubtless attract the attention of Grand Lodge. The whole of the day's proceedings were perfect.

Among other Masonic matter, may be mentioned the re-assembling of the Mark Lodge of Instruction, at the Lyceum Tavern on Monday night, at 7-30.

The meeting for the season of the Domestic Lodge (177), under Bro. R. Tanner, W.M., on Friday; and the Installation of Br. James W. Avery, an old P.M. of 619, as W.M. of 1178, on Thursday.

As Masonry is now awake for the season, and as it is making such giant strides in all quarters of the globe, the Fraternity will find that THE FREEMASON is equal to the occasion and will keep pace with it. We shall give numerous reports of lodge meetings and furnish full information of everything that concerns the Order.

PAPERS ON MASONRY.

By A LEWIS.

XXVII.—MASONRY AND SATURN.

Well, gentlemen, though Faustus' end be such,
As every Christian heart laments to think on:
For wondrous knowledge in our German schools,
We'll give his mangled limbs due burial:
And all the scholars cloth'd in mourning black,
Shall wait upon his heavy funeral.

And burned is Apollo's laurel bough,—

That sometimes grew within this learned man.

Lights for the lodgings! 'tis high time for rest,
Great men may be mistook when they mean best.
FORD. The Fancies Chaste, and Noble.

These papers have been written on the principle of the multiples of nine. I have arrived now at the period of the ponderous orb of Saturn, the scytheman of antiquity, and the devourer of man and gods alike. My labours, intended for the intellectual satisfaction of my individual desires, and the ennoblement of others so far as may be, now come to a period.

I have unaffectedly and earnestly in these papers striven for the Right and the True. I have been honoured, far beyond my hopes, with the attention and cordial approval of many whose good opinion it is a happiness to earn. To them my heartfelt thanks are due, and I also give sincere thanks and praise to T.G.A.O.T.U. for enabling me to complete this first cycle of Masonic papers. I part with this last paper with a heart as heavy as the ponderous orb which symbolizes to me the fact that my course has to recommence, although at the same time I cannot but hope that what I have been able to say may lead to good results. Certainly it was my aspiration to effect good, and if I have offended, very unintentionally, I can only express regret. It seems to me, however, that, maturely considered, my offences have been but small.

For a time I shall therefore be a spectator. Respecting the motto of the Fraternity Audi, Vide, Tace, I shall yield the space occupied by me in these columns to the zealous and able men who, in various ways, adorn the literary and practical annals of Freemasonry. By an abstinence from active exertion, I shall learn and be able to treasure up lessons for the future. True it is that I had noted many subjects for future discussion, but it is only right that on the return of active Masonic work, a mere tyro like myself should withdraw before men whose lives and sympathies have been nobly and devotedly dedicated to the defence and illustration of Masonic history and principles.

In my first paper, published on the 27th March, 1869, I expressed my anticipation that the dog would be allowed an unmolested bark. Those anticipations have been fulfilled. I have just said, as it were, to use a Transatlantic expression, "right out" of me, what seemed to be appropriate on the passing events of the time. For the attention I have received I am unfeignedly thankful. The few who know me are well aware how anxiously I have tried to make the rough into the perfect ashlar, and that labour will be pursued without intermission. Those who know me not, are those who will not know me. There is a Scripture text very applicable to which I allude, but not to be quoted here. Cryptonymus, in laying down the weapon of intellect—the pen—desires to do so with friendly feelings to all men. I have censured the Roman priests; there are at the same time good although mistaken men among them. I have spoken of that peculiar form of fanaticism known as Atheism, although I am well aware from personal observation that many individuals professing such opinions have led good, self-sacrificing and moral lives. I have touched upon other topics, which might seem like treading upon some people's corns, but the pressure of my foot has been light as that of Mercury new descended on some heaven-kissing hill.

"What" some will say, "has this to do with Saturn?" This from his lone and leaden sphere in which he pursues his solitary way—enlivened only by his satellites and encircled by his ring he stands as a watcher in the solar system, so I, afar off, have watched and worked—I trust to some advantage. I, too, am of Arcadie, although my Masonic brethren know me not. In the course of these papers I have sometimes alluded to the existence of an Order to which I have the honor to belong.

In that Order are preserved with fidelity and singleness of heart, many of the secrets of the Masonic body, but to the Masons they are for the present incommunicable. The way is painful and wearisome, though the haven is true happiness. Like the Masonic body, we love to preserve the Religion of the Heart, and scorn to bind ourselves to the creeds of the hour. Like the Masonic body, we are unsectarian and universal; but we are more occult, for reasons not be lightly expressed. We make no claim to supernatural powers, we appeal to no sentiments outside of Humanity, and we never proselytize. But every Mason of good report is our brother. Yes, in that touching passage of the thirty-third chapter of Genesis (v. 4), which records the meeting of Jacob and Esau, lies the kernel of our tradition: "And Esau ran to meet him, and embraced him, and fell on his neck, and kissed him, and they wept." In the sublime parable of the Profligate Son we receive our fulfilment and reward. While the highest emotions of our nature are wrought upon by these symbolisms, our greatest activity at the same time is directed towards the accomplishment of real Unity; and some of the noblest men of all ages have passed under the dark folds of our tents. Hospitality and nobility of soul still reside in the East—still gleam as a Shekinah for the world to wonder at. Treasures of art, monuments of intellect, enduring truths of science, are garnered up amongst us in modesty and simplicity. We have no costly paraphernalia—in the exquisite phrase of Horace, we are and we love Truth for its own sake. Recognising, therefore, that kindred spirit which has been the glory of Freemasonry wherever and however displayed, these papers have been a message of peace, amity and harmony from an Order co-extensive with Masonry, and on which the Sun cannot set throughout the æons of ages yet to come.

I unwillingly pronounce the word, Farewell—but it is written that I must, for a space, depart.

I have come to a multiple of the number nine, which causes me to observe the rule of taciturnity. Perhaps at some future day, Cryptonymus may again appear before you—but for the present he must seize the staff and the arrow, and depart on the duties imposed upon him by the solemn obligations long since entered upon.

All I can therefore say is, Thanks, and well befall the noble Order of Freemasons.

BURIAL.

The right to be conducted to the last resting-place on earth by his brethren, and to be committed to the grave with the ceremonies of the society, belongs only to Master Masons. Among the old regulations is the following:—"No Mason can be interred with the formalities of the Order, unless it be at his own special request, communicated to the Master of a Lodge of which he died a member—foreigners and sojourners excepted; nor unless he has been advanced to the third degree of Masonry, from which there can be no exception.

A DANGEROUS INNOVATION ON TEMPLARISM IN SCOTLAND.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

Our attention has been called by a Brother Knight Templar, to a paragraph which appeared in an Edinburgh newspaper, about the beginning of last month, and which may, perhaps have appeared in other newspapers, although not observed by us, concerning "the Institution of the Order of Good Templars" in Edinburgh, Glasgow, and other towns in Scotland. It states that on a certain evening, not long since, a gentleman of Philadelphia, U.S., "Representative of the Right Worthy Grand Lodge of Good Templars of North America," delivered a lecture in the Temperance Hall of Edinburgh, on the constitution and objects of the said order, Mr. W—, being in the chair, and introducing the lecturer; that the hall was crowded, and that a lodge was organized. The lecturer is reported to have said that a great work still remains to be done by the Temperance Reformers of Scotland, which work it seems that this new organization is intended to accomplish. He said that "in America, the order he represented had been honoured to do a great amount of good in this work;" that "the Good Templars were at least five hundred thousand strong in America," and were forty thousand strong in the state of Pennsylvania alone. He believed they were "the great instrumentality directed by Providence to lead on to victory the great Temperance Reform movement." He further stated, that "the principal characteristic of the order was the cultivation of brotherly love, and a deep interest in the welfare of each other, as a power by which they might overthrow the rum-bottle;" and that every lodge held weekly meetings "for the initiation of candidates and for the improvement of the members;" also that the co-operation of women was invited and encouraged, and that women are equally eligible with men, not only for membership, but for all the offices of the order. Moreover, he added that the Good Templars had their secrets, "which not only bound them together as with a moral cement, but enabled one brother to know another anywhere, and always secured to him sympathy and kindness in any circumstances." The "platform of the order" was read by the chairman before the close of the meeting, and is as follows:—

1st, Total abstinence from all intoxicating liquor as a beverage.

2nd, No license, in any form, of the manufacture, importation, and sale of such liquors, to be used as a beverage.

3rd, The absolute prohibition of the manufacture, importation, and sale of intoxicating liquors for such purposes—prohibition by the will of the people, expressed in due form of law, with the penalties deserved for a crime of such enormity.

4th, The creation of a healthy public opinion upon the subject, by the active dissemination of truth in all the modes known to an enlightened philanthropy.

5th, The election of good, honest men to administer the laws.

6th, Persistence in efforts to save individuals and communities from so direful a scourge, against all forms of opposition and difficulty, until our success is complete and universal.

There can be no doubt of the right of any who choose to form themselves into an association for the purposes signified in this "platform." But the formation of a secret association—an association having its secrets, by which the members are to be known to each other—is a very different thing, and is clearly contrary to the law of the land. The Ancient and Honourable Order of Freemasons, enjoys, under law, a special privilege in this respect. There is also a very ancient Order, the Order of Knight Templars, affiliated to the Masonic body, although not strictly Masonic in its origin. The Order of Good Templars seems by the very name which it assumes, to place itself in opposition to this ancient Order, and to claim regard as something better in its character and purposes. That this claim is not well founded may be seen by considering the "professions" of the Knight Templars, which are known to all, and more especially to the members belonging to the Order.

What, then, is the special excellence of this new order? It is a mere Teetotal Association, with some of the forms of Freemasonry. It is not truly Masonic; the admission of women as members is contrary to one of the first principles of the ancient landmarks of Freemasonry. It is a mere mimicry of Masonic institutions. It is founded in evident contravention of the law against secret societies. In its operation, also, if any considerable number of people enter into it, it cannot but soon become dangerous, through its influence on municipal and parliamentary elections. There is no doubt that Teetotalers have exercised a considerable influence in these already, but their influence has been fairly and honourably exercised. Whatever may be thought of their views, they have gone to work openly, and in a legitimate manner, and if they have supported candidates holding the same views, advocates of the suppression of public-houses, and favourable to the "Permissive (Prohibition) Bill," no one has a right to object to it. The case is entirely altered, when a secret society is formed. Freemasons refrain from entering, as such, into political questions. The privileges which they exclusively enjoy, depend upon this. They are not associated for any political purpose, or to effect any change in the laws of the land. As Freemasons they are bound to conform themselves to the laws of the land; as members of the community, they are entitled to seek by all fair means, any change of them which they think desirable. But here is an "order" constituted, having for its special object the change of some of the existing laws. The whole thing is contrary to the system of government under which we live, and if it were to attain any considerable magnitude, would be found inconsistent with the welfare of society; a conspiracy, rather than an Association. Let any object which men think good, be openly prosecuted, and by fair means; but there ought to be no secret society, the members of which are bound together to support candidates of particular views in municipal or parliamentary elections.

This society may extend over the United Kingdom; probably it may not, but it is hard to say what may happen. Is it not the duty of Knight Templars to protect the reputation of their own Order, which is indirectly assailed? All honourable associations, such as Benefit Societies and the like, are enrolled under Act of Parliament, and are subject to complete supervision by the registrars in the various districts. But why should this association—"Good Templars," a secret one—be allowed to parade that character in the eyes of the public, whilst in consequence of that very character it is illegal, and whilst it aims at the upsetting of laws of the land, and thereby at once becomes dangerous from the fact of its being a secret society. The case is different with Freemasons, and all the various degrees or orders affiliated or connected with them. One of their chief characteristics is that of being peaceable subjects, and cheerfully conforming to the laws of the land, to which they are bound by special and solemn obligations. Of this they make no secret, and it is to be found printed in their Laws and Constitutions.

Will not the British public say to themselves, if this illegal association is the "Good Templars," naturally enough the existing ancient Order of Knight Templars are bad.

Knight Templars look to your reputation.

I have the honour to be,

CIPES,

A Member of the Order of Knights Templar.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF LEICESTERSHIRE & RUTLAND.

Thursday, the 30th ultimo, will long be a day memorable in the annals of Freemasonry in Leicestershire, a new Province having then been added to the rule of its estimable Provincial Grand Master, the Earl Howe, by the M.W. the G. Master. On that day the annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge was held at the Agricultural Hall, Oakham, when the County of Rutland, which has not hitherto possessed any Masonic Lodge, became, de facto, united to the Province of Leicestershire by the Consecration of the Vale of Catmos Lodge, No. 1265, and the Installation as its first W.M., George Brown, Esq., of Cottesmore Hall.

The attendance, as might be anticipated on so interesting an occasion, was unusually numerous, and the Provincial Grand Lodge was honoured with the visit of a deputation of members of the neighbouring Province of Northampton and Hunts, headed by the Dep. Prov. G.M., Bro. Inns, and the Prov. S.G.W., Bro. Orford.

In the deeply regretted absence of Earl Howe, owing to his infirm state of health, the Dep. Prov. G.M., Bro. Kelly, discharged the duties of the day as acting Prov. G. Master.

Among the brethren of the Provincial Grand Lodge present were Fred. Goodyer, P.P.G.S.W., acting as Dep. Prov. G.M.; the Revs. Dr. Pyemont, Prov. G.S.W.; W. K. Robinson, B.A.; and John Spittal, M.A., Prov. G. Chaplains; and W. Langley, M.A., P.P.G.C. and P.W.M., No. 1130; S. Davis, P.M., No. 50, P.P.J.W.; C. Stretton, P.P.G. Reg., as P.G. Sec.; A. M. Duff, P.M., No. 523, P.G.S.D.; Henry Douglas, S.W., 1130; and Thos. Thorpe, S.D., No. 279, P.G. Dirs. of Cer.; W. Adcock, Sec., No. 1130, P.G.S.B.; Chas. Johnson, P.M., No. 491, and Org. 523, P.G.O.; and T. H. Buzzard, S.W., No. 523; Thomas Markham, J.W., No. 1265; and John Hunt, M.R.C.S., No. 523, Prov. G. Stewards.

Among the members of private Lodges in the Province were Bros. Toller, W.M.; Rev. Dr. Haycroft, S.D.; S. S. Partridge, J.D.; M. H. Lewin, I.G.; M. Hack, &c., of the John of Gaunt Lodge, No. 523, Leicester; E. J. Crow, Sec. and Org.; Jno. Hart, I.G.; L. L. Atwood, R. W. Widdowson, J. Wright Smith, and others of St. John's Lodge, No. 279; J. J. Fast, J.W.; S. Weaver, Sec.; J. E. Bright, S.D.; J. Selby, F. S. Petty, W. Rew, W. A. Leadbetter, W. Hardy, J. Snodin, J. E. W. Clarke, and W. Mann, of the Rutland Lodge, No. 1130, Melton; whilst the following members of the new Lodge were present (including the D.P.G.M. and others), Geo. Brown, W.M. designate; G. M. Ashforth, M.D., S.W.; Thos. Markham, J.W.; W. Berridge, J. W. Kew, J. E. Bennett, W. C. Crowson, Capt. Bailey, and Alex. Brown (P.M., father of the W.M.), the Chaplain of the new Lodge, the Rev. Fred. Orme, Rector of Lyndon, (a P.P.S.G.W. for Herts), was absent owing to a family bereavement, as were also the Prov. G. Treas., Major Brewin, and several other P.P.G. Officers.

Among the visiting brethren were S. Inns, (Leicester) Dep. Prov. G.M.; E. J. Orford, P.G.S.W.; and J. M. Howard, W.M.; Horace Wright, J. B. Corby, W. W. Dalton, M. Wood, W. Oldham, H. Duncome, W. Brown, Thos. Hasson, A. Coulson, Geo. Catmel, H. Michelson, and H. Whincup (all of Lodge, No. 466, Stamford), from the Province of Northampton and Hunts; Frederick Binckes, P.G.S. and Sec. Royal Masonic Institution for Boys; Rev. E. Hawley, Pelham Lodge, Newark; E. W. Ovitt, S.W., No. 831, London; W. Crowson, No. 142, and others.

A letter was read from the R.W. Prov. G. Master Earl Howe, expressing his deep sorrow that the state of his health, which confined him to his room (a bad cough being added to his usual ailments) forbade his having the pleasure of meeting his brethren on the occasion; his trust that all would go off satisfactorily, and that his absence would injure no one but himself; he further expressed his anxious desire that arrangements might be made as early as practicable for his retirement from office.

Letters were also read, apologising for absence, from the Duke of Manchester, P.G.M. Northampton and Hunts, the Earl of Shrewsbury, Earl Ferrers, S.W. of the Ferrers and Ivanhoe Lodge, No. 779, Ashby-de-la-Zouch, Rev. F. Orme, Bro. Hervey, G. Sec., Bro. Jno. Symonds, P.G.D., and others.

A letter was also read from the Right Rev. Bro. the Lord Bishop of Peterborough, "regretting very much that his numerous engagements already made must prevent his compliance with the request of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Leicestershire," to preach the Sermon on this occasion.

The preliminary business having been completed, the ceremonies of consecration and installation were most effectively and impressively performed according to a printed programme supplied to every Brother on entering the Hall.

The "Oration," which was delivered by the Junior Prov. G. Chaplain, the Rev. John Spittal, M.A., Vicar of St. Andrew's, Leicester, P.M., No. 523, and P.P.G.S.W. was an exceedingly appropriate and eloquent disquisition on the leading principles of the Order, and a resumé of the progress and extension of the Order in the Province, under the fostering care of Prov. G. Master and his Deputy; and which was greatly applauded.

During the ceremony of Consecration the various chants and hymns, ably conducted by Bros. Crow and Johnson, and joined in by 70 or 80 voices, coupled with the mystic rites of the Order, had a highly impressive effect, far exceeding any similar ceremony in the Province.

The new Lodge having been declared duly Constituted, the acting Prov. G.M. proceeded to instal Bro. Geo. Brown into the chair, who having been duly proclaimed and saluted, invested his Wardens, and received various propositions and candidates for initiation, and joining, &c., afterwards closed the Craft Lodge.

The acting P.G.M. then appointed and invested the Officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge for the ensuing year as follows:—

At Two o'clock the brethren went in procession to the beautiful Parish Church; numerous spectators lined the road, and the Church was filled by a highly respectable congregation, among whom were many ladies.

Prayers were said by the Curates, the first lesson was read by the Rev. Bro. Spittal, Vicar of St. Andrew's, Leicester, and the second lesson by the Rev. Bro. Pyemont, D.D., Vicar of Whitwick.

The Sermon (in the absence of the Right Rev. Bro. the Bishop of the Diocese,) was preached by the Senior Prov. G. Chaplain, the Rev. W. Kay Robinson, Master of the Grammar School, Wymondham, and P.M., No. 1130. He took for his text the words of our Lord, "When ye pray say Our Father which art in heaven."

The chief line of argument in the Rev. Brother's learned and able discourse, was that Freemasonry, not claiming to be a system of religion, but rather one of morality, "veiled in allegory and illustrated by symbols," and men of various nationalities and religious creeds—the Jew, the Mohammedan, the Parsee, the Roman Catholic, the Greek, as well as Protestant Christians of various denominations—being ranged under its banners. The prayers of the three degrees were so framed that men of all nationalities and creeds could unite together in offering up their prayers to the one eternal Being the "Great Architect of the Universe," and that consequently no direct reference could be made in them in the second Person in the ever-blessed Trinity, and by that so doing we were not acting contrary to the practices of the early Christian Church, in which prayers were offered up direct to Father without the intervention of the Son, or in the name of the Saviour (both modes being in use), thus proving that our prayers, being addressed to the Father direct, did not justly lay open the Order to the charge of being Anti-Christian, as was sometimes urged against it by persons who were ignorant of its true principles, and which was a great mistake.

At the conclusion of the sermon, a collection, amounting to about £15, was made in aid of the National Schools of the parish and of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys.

The procession having returned to the Agricultural Hall, votes of thanks were passed to the preacher for his sermon, to the Rev. Bro. Spittal for his oration, and to the Vicar of Oakham for the use of his church.

The business was concluded by an address from the Acting Prov. G.M., on the chief events of the day, and especially on a discovery he had accidentally made of the very curious fact, that although there was no record of the county of Rutland ever having had a Masonic lodge, it had formerly had two Provincial Grand Masters, one of whom was a Portuguese Doctor of Philosophy, named Da Costa, who had previously been confined for three years in the prison of the Inquisition at Lisbon, for a pretended crime of Freemasonry, from which he effected his escape and reached London, where he had this honorary dignity conferred upon him. The Prov. G. Lodge was then closed in form with solemn prayer.

THE BANQUET,

to which about 70 brethren sat down, and to which, as usual, Lord Howe contributed a plentiful supply of venison, game and dessert, took place at the Crown Hotel, at four o'clock.

The D.P.G.M., Bro. KELLY, who, of course presided, was supported on the right by the acting D.P.G.M., Bro. Goodyer, P.P.G.S.W. (Chief Constable of Leicestershire), the D.P.G.M. of Northamptonshire and Hunts, Bro. Binckes, P.G.S., the Rev. Bro. E. Hawley (Vicar of Newark), and others; and on the left by the Revs. Dr. Pyemont, P.P.G.S.W., and Robinson, P.P.G.C., the P.G.S.W. of Northampton and Hunts, S. Davis, P.P.G.J.W., Capt. Bailey and other brethren. The vice chairs were occupied by the Prov. S. Wardens, the Rev. Bro. Langley, W.M., No. 1130, and Bro. Brown, W.M., No. 1265.

Grace was said by the Rev. Bro. ROBINSON, and thanks returned by Bro. Dr. PYEMONT.

"The Queen and the Craft," "Bro. His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, P.G.M., the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family," "The R. Rev. Bro. the Bishop of the Diocese, and the Ministers of Religion within the Province," "The M.W. the G.M.," "The R.W. the D.G.M., and the Officers of Grand Lodge," having been duly honoured,

Bro. KELLY rose to propose the toast of the evening, "The better health of the R.W. Prov. G. Master, Earl Howe." He expatiated on the warm attachment which Lord Howe had evinced for Masonry during his long connection of nearly half a century with St. John's Lodge, Leicester, over which he, (Bro. Kelly,) after an interval of twenty-eight years, had now for the second year in succession the honour to describe the great prosperity which had marked his rule over the province as P.G.M., there having been only two lodges in active operation in the province thirteen years ago, on his appointment, where there were now seven, and the crowning point, as it were, which was now put to that state of prosperity by the addition of the County of Rutland to this Provincial Grand Lodge, and which event shed a lustre on his contemplated retirement (which all must deeply regret), owing, as it was, to his advancing years and infirm state of health; and he also referred to Lord Howe's munificent charities (he had lately presented a third donation of £1,000 to a local charity), and his many private virtues, which ennobled him not less than his high rank and his illustrious name. (The toast was received with the greatest enthusiasm and with musical honours.)

Dr. PYEMONT, in highly eulogistic terms, proposed "The health of the Dep. Prov. G. Master, Bro. Kelly," which also met with a very cordial reception from the brethren, and to which Bro. Kelly responded, thanking the brethren for the manner in which, on this, as on all occasions, his name was received by them; and announcing that he might be considered as taking his farewell of the brethren in his official capacity, because, as they all knew, this, in all probability, would be the last annual meeting of the Grand Lodge of the province held under Lord Howe's authority as P.G.M., and (as he had once or twice before told them) having now held the distinguished office of D.P.G.M. for some fourteen or fifteen years, it was his intention to withdraw from it whenever Lord Howe should retire, the noble Earl having paid him the high compliment, when, ten years ago, he asked permission to retire, to request him to continue as his deputy so long as he might remain as P.G.M. This alone had induced him to hold the office for so long a period, and now, having actively laboured in Masonry in the Province for nearly thirty years, half the time as D.P.G.M., he felt he had fairly earned his retirement, leaving the work to younger hands.

This announcement was received with loud cries of "No, no," by many of the brethren, but was repeated by Bro. Kelly, and several brethren rose to make remarks on the subject expressive of regret at the D.P.G.M.'s determination, and a strong feeling was expressed that the Deputy should be Lord Howe's successor in the P.G. Mastership, an ebullition of feeling which, however complimentary to himself personally, the D.P.G.M. begged might at once be suppressed, placing him, as it did, in a very painful and delicate position as their Chairman.

The health of "The Visiting Brethren" was responded to in a humorous manner by the D.P.G.M. of Northampton and Hunts, that of the "Present and Past Prov. G. Officers" was acknowledged by the Rev. W. LANGLEY, the incoming, and the Rev. Dr. PYEMONT, the outgoing, Prov. G. S. Warden.

In proposing "The Masonic Charities," the D.P.G.M., stated that when three years ago the eloquence of their worthy Bro. Binckes had induced him to accept the office of Steward on behalf of this province for the Festival of the Boys' School, by the kindness and liberality of the brethren he had been privileged to send in the largest list of any individual Steward upwards of £200—that their Rev. Bro. Langley, who had recently served the office—when the munificent sum of £12,000 was contributed by the Fraternity—had increased the contributions from this province by nearly £80, and that Bro. Brown, the W.M. of the new lodge had accepted the office for the next Festival, whilst their ever energetic Bro. Langley would serve as Steward for the Girls' School.

Bro. BINCKES being called upon to respond, pleaded the cause of the Charities with that eloquence for which he is so distinguished, but his remarks were necessarily somewhat curtailed by the near approach of the time for the arrival of the 8-50 train for Leicestershire, by which the great majority of the brethren had to leave.

After their departure the list of toasts was concluded, and the brethren finally separated, able to congratulate themselves on the highly successful completion of a double event, the introduction, for the first time of Freemasonry into the County of Rutland, and its union with the Province of Leicestershire. Esto perpetua.

CENTENARY FESTIVAL OF ST. JOHN'S LODGE, No. 167.

On Tuesday last, the St. John's Lodge (167), which attained its centenary two years ago, but from some unknown or unexplained cause has only just got its centenary warrant from Grand Lodge, celebrated its coming of age by a festival at its old quarters, the Holly Bush, Hampstead. Such a successful celebration of a lodge's birthday it would be impossible to meet with; the arrangements, which had occupied the attention of Bros. Douglas, Adlard, and Thompson, P.M.'s, for some weeks, were perfect, not only for the comfort of all the brethren of the lodge and their visitors, but for doing honor to such an important event in the history of the lodge. The rules laid down by the managing brethren were carefully observed, and although ninety members of the order attended, there was not a single hitch from beginning to end of the day's proceedings. The lodge was first opened at the Holly Bush by Bro. F. B. Davage, the W.M., who, during his year of office as well as during the years he has filled the inferior posts in the lodge, has won the esteem and admiration of all his brethren; and then he gave way to Bro. Thos. Adams, P.G.P. and P.M., for the performance of the ceremony of installation. Bro. Davage presented the W.M. elect, Bro. George Baker, J.W., and in presence of a full lodge, and before a board of over twenty P.M.'s, among whom were many Grand Officers, Bro. Baker was installed in the chair of K.S. The lodge bow with a species of reverence to Bro. Adams, which his age (76), his urbanity and correct working entitle him to, and the installed Master usually allows him to perform all the work of installation, down to the investiture of the officers. It was so on Tuesday, and Bro. Adams invested, by the W.M.'s commands, Bros. Barge, S.W.; Dr. Davison, J.W.; Douglas, P.M., Treas.; J. R. Thompson, P.M., Sec.; the Rev. Charles Lee, Chaplain; Fairbank, S.D.; Capt. Thomson, J.D.; Hollis, I.G.; F. Adlard, P.G.D.C., D.C.; and R. Bradley, T.

After the delivery of the charges by Bro. Adams, the lodge was called off and a procession was formed, headed by Bros. Bradley and Hoare, for the purpose of attending divine service at the church of St. John, Hampstead. A dispensation from Grand Lodge had been applied for by the brethren to be allowed to wear masonic clothing in the procession, but the Grand Master, as we think, wisely, refused this, but directed that they should wear white gloves. The members of the lodge and visitors, walking two and two led the way, and Grand Lodge Officers brought up the rear in the following order:—first the W.M., Bro. Baker, accompanied by Bro. W. Alexander, who was W.M. in 1867, when the lodge reached its hundredth year; next Bros. W. Ough, G.P., and James Brett, A.G.P.; then W. Young, P.G.S.B., T. Adams, P.G.P., and J. Savage, P.G.S.D.; and last of all the Chaplain of the lodge, Bro. the Rev. Charles Lee, M.A., and Bro. the Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G. Chaplain. On arriving at the church door the brethren halted, and divided right and left, and the clergy and grand officers walked up the centre, the whole procession entered the church in priority of rank, exactly in the reverse order of their march through the streets. The service commenced at four o'clock by the anthem being sung by the choir, under the direction of Bro. Seymour Smith, consisting, among others, of Bros. T. Young, G. T. Carter, Chaplin Henry, and the choristers of the Temple Church. The Rev. R. J. Simpson read the prayers, one of the clergy of St. John's the lessons, and the Rev. Charles Lee, M.A., vicar of Holy Trinity, Haverstock Hill, preached the sermon, a copy of which will be inserted next week by permission of the Rev. Brother.

A collection was afterwards made on behalf of the Hampstead Dispensary. The church was very well attended by the general public, in addition to the Masonic Brethren. The service was concluded by the singing in splendid style of the Hallelujah chorus; and the procession again wended its way through the town to the Tavern, where in lodge the brethren came on in proper time for the further despatch of Masonic business.

Bro. D. TILDESLEY proposed, and Bro. DOUGLAS seconded, a vote of thanks to the Chaplain of the lodge, for the excellent sermon he had preached, and included in the motion a request that he allow it to be printed at the expense of the lodge, for the use of the brethren.

The motion was carried unanimously, and was succeeded by another, not less important, made by Bro. DOUGLAS, and seconded by GRAND CHAPLAIN, of thanks to the incumbent of Hampstead Church, for granting the use of the sacred edifice for the service of the day. Bros. Douglas and Dr. Davidson, could not allow another service to the lodge to pass unrequited, and the former proposed, and the latter seconded a vote of thanks to the Grand Chaplain for the part he had taken in the ceremony.

Bro. SIMPSON responded. It had been a pleasure to himself to join the brethren and conduct prayer and praise to T.G.A.O.T.U. that day, and he took it as a kind compliment on the part of the brethren to ask him to do so, and he was much obliged to them.

A further vote was proposed by the GRAND CHAPLAIN, although not a member of the lodge, to Bro. Seymour Smith for the musical portion of the service, gave an opportunity to an admirable speaker, Bro. J. Savage, P.G.D., to open his lips. He gave in his adhesion to the motion. Being a listener he had taken part to speak in the service of the day, and he congratulated the lodge in the arrangements that had been made, and particularly on being so successful in producing such a solemn and sweet a ceremony as he had heard at church. The sermon was everything that could be desired; and the music was delightful, particularly the singing of the Hallelujah chorus. This motion having been carried, and all the motions ordered to be entered on the minutes, the brethren who had been at work for four hours, assisted the W.M. to close the lodge, and adjourned to banquet. Among the brethren who attended were the following:—

Bros. W. Shury, P.M. (167, 548 and 51); F. B. Davage, I.P.M.; G. Pritchard, P.M.; John Douglas, P.M.; Jonathan Ward, P.M.; Thomas Adams, P.G.P., P.M.; E. Barge, S.W.; Rev. Charles Lee, Chaplain; Hy. When the cloth had been removed and grace said the W.M. proceeded with the toast, which he proposed very curtly but with hearty good-will. The toast of "The D.G.M. and the rest of the G.O.," called up.

Bro. JOHN SAVAGE, P.G.S.D., who said: Obedient to your W.M.'s call I rise with great pleasure to respond to the toast which he has proposed, although he has certainly taken me somewhat by surprise, as one my senior, and much respected, on my left hand, should, to my mind, have been coupled with the toast. But the Master can do no wrong. It is not only his privilege, but it is a pleasant thing to think he can use that privilege, to call on any one he likes, although I would much rather he had selected my senior to reply to his compliment. Nevertheless the duty is gratifying, I assure you, to speak on behalf of the brethren so many of whom have distinguished themselves, in the Craft, and all of whom deserve at your hands every respect. Of our D.G.M. it is difficult to say too much; the difficulty is to speak of him in terms adequate to his merits, but as I believe most, if not all of you, know during the time he has held that high office in the Craft which he does hold, have witnessed his zeal in Freemasonry, it will be sufficient for me to say it is a most pleasant task to respond for him. On the part of my brother officers it is equally a pleasant thing to respond for them; for meeting them at our Charity Boards and other Masonic Meetings constantly, it is at all times most gratifying to me to see them working so well, and labouring for the good of the Craft. It is because I see such examples before me that I have felt myself honoured by being one of their number—(hear). Now, let me say a word, at the expense of keeping these brethren on their legs, about what has brought us together to-day. My brother G. Officers and myself are delighted to meet you to day. They thank you for the kind invitations you have given them to witness the celebration of the centenary of your lodge, and they congratulate you through me, on the manner in which you have conducted the ceremonies of to-day. (Hear, hear.) Gratifying must it have been to all of us to see the way in which Bro. Adams went through the ceremony of Installation. (Hear, hear.) I am sure all praise is due to him. It is an honour to perform that ceremony, and that honour has been properly conceded to him, but never has he performed it better than he has to-day. But brethren, you are not satisfied with simply letting your visitors see the ceremony of installation well performed, but you have very appropriately arranged for the occasion, a sweet and solemn service at your parish church, through the permission of that church's incumbent, and we have all derived pleasure, and, I trust, profit. It must have been delightful to you all to listen, as it was my privilege to listen, to the able and excellent discourse of our friend and brother, the chaplain of this lodge. I am sure you could not have listened to it without profit. The research which it displayed was immense, and the practical lesson it enforced upon us were equally good and excellent. One thought contained in it was very delightful, that as we have but one temporal head in England, so we have but one spiritual head—it is a very beautiful thought—we have only one Master in Heaven, and we are all brethren. But I must also observe before I sit down, that there were other delightful parts of that service which it would not be right to forget to mention. I am sure the musical portion of the service was most charming. Where all was so beautifully it seems hardly right to pick out one particular part; but if one was more delightful than another it was the concluding piece, the Hallelujah chorus. It must have been enrapturing to us all. And now just one word more upon the judgment displayed by the chaplain, in selecting the two beautiful lessons to which we listened; the second inculcating that most beautiful lesson of charity, not simply almsgiving, but including that no doubt, but inculcating that more expansive charity which believeth all things, hopeth all things, and endureth all things, and then inculcating the three Masonic graces which we admire, and which are so well illustrated in our charities, "Faith, Hope, and Charity." On behalf of myself and other Grand Officers, I beg to express the great delight and pleasure we have experienced in visiting St. John's Lodge to-day. (Cheers.)

Bro. H. G. BUSS responded for "The Visitors," and said: I very sincerely regret that you have not coupled with that toast, the name of some one more able than I to acknowledge it, but to say that any one can do so with more heartfelt feelings than I do, would be to err, for really I can hardly find words to express my feelings of thanks to you all, for the way in which we have been entertained. To meet you here on an occasion like this is an event once in a man's life. I should be very glad to see a double centenary. 'Tis only once in a man's life-time it can happen, and we shall never forget the manner in which the proceedings have been conducted, for which you have received the high compliments of Bro. Simpson and other brethren who were competent to judge. It must have been a source of gratification to you all to be able to go through the proceedings of this day in such a style, as to win the praises of brethren like those. I can only wish that you may live and prosper for the next century to come—and I could desire to be alive to see another, though that cannot be—but I hope the brethren who may then be here will see as happy a gathering as the present. I think I can say on behalf of all the numerous visitors, that we thank you most heartily for the manner in which we have been entertained, and we congratulate you on attaining the centenary of your existence, and wish you happiness and prosperity in return. I am sorry I cannot express my feelings in better terms, but I do it to the best of my ability, and I wish you happiness and prosperity in return for the compliment you have passed on the visitors by drinking their health. (Cheers.)

Bro. DAVAGE, J. P. M.: Brethren, by my rising I have no doubt that you anticipate the toast I am about to propose to you. It is "The Health of our esteemed W.M.," who now occupies the chair in which I have had the honour of presiding over for you this last twelvemonth. I can only say that I and the rest of the brethren of the lodge, have every confidence that the lodge will be well carried out during his year of office. I believe he is more capable and feels less diffidence in the lodge than at the banquet table. He is a thoroughly hard working Mason; he is quite up in the three degrees, and when he shows you his working in the lodge, I know he will retire from the chair with satisfaction to you and honour to himself. I trust you will drink this toast in bumpers, this being our centenary festival. (Cheers.)

The W.M.: I have to thank the company for drinking my health, but especially have I to thank the brethren of the lodge for placing me in this chair. It is my wish, and shall be my endeavour to contribute to the welfare of this lodge and the comfort of the brethren; and I hope when my term of office expires the brethren will not have occasion to regret my having occupied this position. (Hear, hear.)

Bro. ADAMS, replying for the P.M.'s, said he had been the Installing Master of the Lodge for fifteen years, and he believed he had given satisfaction. He thought he knew something of Masonry, but when he heard that excellent sermon of the Chaplain's it took all the conceit out of him, though certainly he had not much in him. It had made him feel quite an initiate. The rev. Chaplain had stated those things in Masonry which showed deep research after hidden knowledge. It was but a short time ago that he (Bro. Adams) had deaconed him round the lodge, and it must have astonished the brethren how so much information could have been obtained by so young a mason. The sermon had given him great satisfaction, and he was sincerely thankful to the Great Architect for having spared him to hear it. This sermon, and the excellent speech of Bro. Savage had quite put him out of sorts; but he could honestly say he had done his best as the preceptor of the lodge to improve men's minds and to make them have a knowledge of the Supreme Being. Although he had lived so long among the brethren he had been so kindly received that he hoped he might be spared strength for twenty years to come to meet the brethren in the lodge. He had seen the lodge greatly improve. Fifteen years ago they thought twelve a goodly muster of the brethren, but now the number was very large. Their Chaplain had said they must not stand still, but must go on, and he hoped to see the lodge improve in the future as it had in the past. (Cheers.)

Bro. DAVAGE also replied, and thanked the brethren for a handsome P.M. jewel, which had been placed upon his breast by the W.M.

The P. GRAND CHAPLAIN in responding for himself, after blaming the modesty of the Rev. Bro. Lee in not being the first to speak, complimented the lodge on its hospitality, and denied his own seniority to Bro. Savage which that brother alluded to in his speech. He went on to say he never was a stranger in any lodge of Freemasons, and to-night he had felt himself quite at home. He thanked all the brethren, and not least his Bro. Lee, for suggesting that he should perform part of the service. He had felt it an honour to lead the prayers and praises of the brethren, but he did not like to walk in borrowed plumes, and could not think of receiving thanks which were justly the due of his Rev. brother. He afterwards praised the brethren of Hampstead, for the festival which they had arranged, for the excellent banquet, which he considered a most happy and delightful way of concluding such a celebration, and for making a portion of that celebration the meeting in one of our national temples, to praise that God who had preserved them, to assist on this occasion. "When," (continued the Rev. brother,) our Bro. Buss alluded to another centenary, I could not help thinking where we should be then. Pardon me, if even in a happy festive meeting of this kind, I say that the thoughts which have been called forth by our Bro. Lee to-day, remind us that in another century those thoughts will be far more real, permanent, true and thorough to all who are permitted to assemble in the Grand Lodge above, than all the evanescent speeches we hear, (which are as evanescent as the champagne we drank), and the passing pleasures which we have. I do much value the social element in Freemasonry, but let us value still more those deeds which are not fleeting, which are not passing, which belong to us as men, which belong to us as Masons, and which will live when these bodies we have shall die. (Cheers.)

Bro. the REV. C. LEE: Bro Savage said the Master can do no wrong. I cordially subscribed to that doctrine, until the W.M. proposed the vote you acceded to, and then I felt that in some sort he had put the saddle on the wrong horse, and whatever his infallibility might be, though he could do no wrong, in giving thanks to myself he had really reversed what to my heart and mind is the state of the case, for I feel cordially, that my thanks are due to the W.M. and brethren who invited me to preach the sermon, which I have had the honour and happiness to deliver. It led me to investigate for my own personal satisfaction, the whole history of Freemasonry, and its uses; and the study I have been able to pursue and follow out, has been one most instructive to my own mind. I beg most cordially to thank you for the kind manner in which you have been pleased to speak of my labours, which I would say are not only most instructive and interesting to me, but are of common benefit to us all. The law of the Church is, I believe, passive obedience and non-resistance. If, therefore, I am called upon to print the sermon I was asked to preach, I should certainly do so, and submit to the wishes of my brethren. I shall therefore endeavour to improve it by the addition of some notes and references, which may enable them to verify the most important statements that sermon contains. I so cordially re-echo from my inmost soul what Grand Chaplain has just given utterance to, that I can only say, that in every and any way it may be possible for me I shall always be ready to consult the good of Freemasonry in general, and this most worthy and worshipful lodge in particular. (Cheers.)

Bro. BARGE, S.W., returned thanks for the "Officers;" Bro. DOUGLAS for the "Treasurer;" Bro. J. R. THOMPSON for the "Secretary;" and Bro. F. ADLARD for the "Director of Ceremonies," in a humorous speech, in which he narrated how the brethren were always complaining to him of the badness of everything put before them, but which nevertheless they seemed heartily to enjoy.

The brethren shortly afterwards separated. The evening was enlivened by some excellent singing by, among others, Bros. Seymour Smith and F. Vizetelly.

LAYING THE FOUNDATION STONE OF THE CHURCH OF ST. PETER-IN-EAST-GATE, LINCOLN.

The Feast of St. Michael and All Angels, in the year of grace 1869, will be memorable in the annals of the united parishes of St Peter-in-Eastgate and St. Margaret as the day upon which was laid the foundation stone of the church for those combined parishes. The ceremony was attended with a greater display than is usual on such occasions, owing to the circumstances that the operation of laying the foundation stone was performed by the Freemasons, with Masonic honours.

The ceremony was announced to take place at two o'clock in the afternoon. The brethren assembled at the White Hart an hour previously where lodge was opened, various lodges of the county being represented. Shortly before two o'clock, the brethren, about 70 in number, formed in procession, and headed by the band of the Royal North Lincoln Militia, marched to the entrance of the churchyard, where it divided right and left, the lines facing inward. The Deputy Provincial Grand Master of Lincolnshire (Major Smyth) passed between to the place of honour, followed by the brethren according to their rank and office. A procession of the clergy of the city and surrounding district was formed at Miss Cookson's school, and accompanied by the Lord Bishop of the Diocese, wended its way to the scene. The assemblage in the churchyard was of an imposing character. The brilliant display made by the Masons contrasted favourably with the surroundings—the surplices of the clergy and choristers, and the gay attire of the large company of ladies for whose accommodation a platform had been erected on the west side of the yard. Order having been observed, the Bishop offered up prayer, followed by the Vicar, the responses to which were sung by boys from the cathedral and other voices. The 84th psalm was next sung, after which the secretary to the Witham lodge (Bro. George Bacon) read a copy of a document deposited in a phial (relative to the history of the church), which phial was securely placed within the stone. The lime having been spread by the D.P.G.M., the stone was lowered by the contractor into its proper place, the D.P.G.M. saying: "In the faith of Jesus Christ we place this foundation stone, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, Amen." He then tried the stone with square, the level, and the plumb-rule, and certified that it was properly squared, laid, and adjusted; and he afterwards scattered corn, poured wine, sprinkled oil, and spread salt upon the stone, saying: "I scatter corn on this stone, the emblem of fertility and prosperity; I pour wine on this stone, the emblem of cheerfulness and joy; I sprinkle oil on this stone, the emblem of peace and love; I spread salt on this stone, the emblem of purity and incorruption." This operation over, the D.P.G.M. said: "May the blessings of God rest upon this church, and all connected with it, upon those by whose munificence it is to be built, the architect and workman employed thereon, and may they be preserved from all accidents during its progress; upon the clergy who shall minister, and all who shall worship therein. May the great Architect of the universe bless the united parishes of St. Peter and St. Margaret, this ancient city, the county, and the nation, the Queen, and all who are placed over us in Church and State, with the corn of prosperity, the wine of cheerfulness, and the oil of peace, till time shall be no more, for ever. Brethren, I now call upon you in ancient form to unite with me in prayer that He may be with us in this and all our undertakings, that our labours, thus begun in order, may be conducted in peace, and closed in harmony." The brethren responded, "So mote it be." The chaplain (the Rev. E. R. Larken) then offered up prayer, after which the brethren gave the grand honours.

The D.P.G.M. next delivered the following oration: The beautiful ceremony prescribed to be used by Freemasons on occasions of this kind is never considered complete without an oration or address in honour of Freemasonry. Indeed, our worthy and distinguished Brother, the late Dr. Oliver, insists that no assembly of Masons should separate without a charge being given by the Worshipful Master of the Lodge, or by some other brother well skilled in the landmarks and principles of the Craft. Had I been addressing Freemasons only it would be deemed unnecessary to enter upon a history of the Order, or a defence of its principles, especially in this city, where the learned doctor spent many years of his life, and wrote many of his works. As, however, there are probably in this assembly many who have not read those works, and are ignorant of our objects, I propose to give you in a few words a history of the Craft, and some of Free and Accepted Masonry. Masonry, then, in some shape or other, has existed from the earliest ages. We read in the 10th chapter of Genesis of the building of Babel, of Babylon and Ninevah, and many other cities, by the early descendants of Noah, and at this time Masonry may have been operative only, but that speculative or symbolical Masonry was amalgamated with it at a very early date we have the strongest possible evidence in the ancient sculptures of Ninevah and Egypt, which abound with symbolical emblems. I will only mention a few which are symbols of their divinities. First, the well-known human-headed winged bull, represents the wisdom of the man with the strength of the bull; secondly, the man with the horns of the bull within a winged circle, shows omniscience, omnipotence, eternity, and omnipresence, the circle denoting infinity or eternity, and the wings ubiquity. The serpent, also, is often used to represent wisdom. One very remarkable emblem is the triangle, or Sacred Delta, the Greek letter D, which has been called the number of perfection, or the soul of nature, and everywhere represents the creative principle. Can we not all of us recognise in this symbol Three Persons and One God? In Egypt this may allude to the Delta of the Nile, from which came their wealth and power, or it may have represented their three chief deities, Osiris, Isis and Horris, Osiris himself, also, it must be remembered, was a triune deity, under the names of Ammon, Phtha, and Osiris, severally representing the power, wisdom, and goodness of God. There is also another remarkable emblem, the tau, or letter T, which was placed on the forehead of those initiated into the mysteries of Tammuz, or Adonis, or the Sun. This, we are told, was placed by judges on the breasts of those who had been acquitted of a crime as a mark of innocence, and military commanders placed it on those who had escaped safe from the field of battle, therefore it was called the mark of life. This is also supposed to be the ancient form of the cross, and it is a remarkable fact that this ancient symbol of life should be chosen as the instrument by which our own Blessed Redeemer should abolish death and bring life and immortality to light. The sacred writings abound with types and symbols. The Paschal Lamb without blemish was a type of the Saviour, and the readiness of Isaac to be sacrificed, the young man in the prime of manhood offering no resistance to his aged father, was a fitting type of Him who "was brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb so opened He not His mouth." The visions of the prophets were all symbolical. The ornaments of the first temple were also symbolical. The two pillars at the porchway, Boaz and Jachin, were enriched with network, chain-work, pomegranates, and lily work. The network, from the connection of the meshes, and the chainwork, from its links, denote unity or harmony. The pomegranates, from the exuberance of their seeds, denote plenty, and the lily work, from its whiteness, peace and purity. How or when Masonry was first introduced into England is lost in obscurity. There is a legend that Joseph of Arimathea, who came over to England and built Glastonbury Abbey, introduced it, and that St. Alban was one of our Grand Masters; but passing this over as entirely legendary, it is beyond a doubt that in the year A.D. 926 King Athelstan granted a charter to the Freemasons, and after collecting many manuscripts in French, Greek, English, and other languages, caused a book to be made which declared how the science was first invented, and the utility thereof; that his brother Edwin in the same year summoned all the Masons to meet him at York, who came and composed a general lodge, of which he was Grand Master; that in the year 1353 Edward III. revised the constitutions. We read that the Freemasons were a sort of nomad or wandering tribe which roamed about the country building churches where required. At no time, however, has Freemasonry increased as it has done in the last few years, under the presidency of our present Grand Master, the Earl of Zetland. Our enemies have said that we are irreligious and disloyal. If we were disloyal, is it possible that we should be patronised by kings and royal princes? Among those initiated in England we have Henry VI., William III., Frederick, Prince of Wales, and George IV. and his brothers, many nobility and gentry of undoubted loyalty, and lastly the heir-apparent of this kingdom, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. Her Majesty also has given many donations to our charities, and is the patroness of the Boys' School. Among foreigners we number Frederick the Great of Prussia, and the present Kings of Italy, Prussia, Sweden, and the Belgians, and the Crown Prince of Prussia, the husband of our Princess Royal. If we were irreligious is it likely we should be supported by the clergy, as Brothers Larken, Colman, Nash, Hoadath, or Oliver, and many others! But it is said, we admit Jews, Turks, in fact, all who believe in the Old Testament. This is true, and we gladly welcome those who have thrown aside all the prejudice of ages, and are ready to meet on friendly terms those whom they have formerly detested and despised. Dr. Oliver has called Freemasonry the handmaid of true religion, and nothing is more likely to bring others to what we Christians believe to be the truth, than that friendly intercourse which at all times pervades masonic assemblies. Many of the brethren present will also remember that our Provincial Grand Master, the Duke of St. Albans, informed us that he was told in Egypt that there was a spirit of masonry among the Mahometans which was more likely to bring them to Christianity than anything else could do. Irreligious! Almost the first question put to the candidate is "In whom do you put your trust?" When he replies "In God," right glad are we to see his faith so well founded. He is also directed to make the sacred volume his rule and guide through life. In the charge to the Master he is urged to practice himself, and to cause others to practice without the lodge, those excellent tenets and principles they are taught within it, that when a man is said to be a Mason, the outside world should know that he is one to whom the burdened soul may display its sorrows, the poor and distressed may look for comfort, advice, and assistance, whose hands and hearts, in fact, are guided by philanthropy, justice, and benevolence. I would sum up the instruction given to a Freemason, in these words, "Fear God and keep his commandments, and love your neighbour as yourself." One word for our charities. We have connected with the Order an annuity fund for aged and distressed Freemasons and their widows, an institution for orphan sons, and another for orphan daughters of Freemasons, where the children are clothed, fed, and taught, and looked after as well as could be done by the parents they have lost. The Grand Lodge has a large benevolent fund, and nearly every province and many private lodges have benevolent funds; in fact, there is a chain-work and net-work of lodges which is able to refresh and pass any brother to his home, at whatever distance that may be. The boys' school has lately been enlarged at a great expense, which entailed a heavy debt upon it, and last year more than £12,000 was collected for removing it, without any of the other charities suffering in consequence. I may also state here that one of the present excellent masters of that school was the orphan son of a Lincolnshire Freemason, and was educated at the school. It now only remains for me to thank you for the compliment paid to me in asking me to lay this stone. I thank you also on behalf of Freemasonry for inviting us to lay it with our ancient rites. I look upon this ceremony as one of the most legitimate we can perform. Everything we have done has its symbolical meaning. The corn, wine, oil, and salt are ancient elements of consecration. The square, level, and plumb-rule, with which the stone has been tried and proved, severally represent morality, equality, and uprightness of life and actions. These are beautifully illustrated in our lodge lectures. This stone itself reminds us of "the tried stone, the precious corner stone, the stone of stumbling, the rock of offence" of the Prophet Isaiah; "the stone which the builders rejected, and which has become the head stone of the corner," mentioned in the Psalms—the Great Architect of the Universe, the blessed Saviour of the world.

A collection was made, and the sum of £41 odd was taken upon the plates. The choir next sung the hymn, "Christ is our corner-stone," after which his Lordship pronounced the benediction, which brought the ceremony to a close. The brethren then returned to the White Hart Hotel, where the lodge was closed.

The luncheon was provided in the County Assembly-rooms, by Mr. Kitchen, of the White Hart Hotel. The company numbered upwards of 150, including many ladies. The Rev. J. M. Barrett presided, and was supported on the right by the Lord Bishop, Miss Cookson, and the Misses Wordsworth; and on the left by Major Smyth, D.P.G.M., and the Rev. Chancellor Massingberd. Mr. F. Pilkington and Mr. W. Kirk, the churchwardens, occupied the vice-chairs.

After several toasts had been given, and cordially received, the Chairman proposed "The healths of Freemasons in general, and the Deputy Grand Master of Lincolnshire in particular."

Major SMYTH eloquently responded.

The toast of "The Ladies," responded to by the Rev. H. ADCOCK, exhausted the toast list, and the proceedings were brought to a close.—Abridged from The Lincoln Journal.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE, The Great Cure for Cholera and Consumption,

A Newly-discovered principle residing in Gum Benjamin (Styrax Benzoin), the chief chemical product of which has hitherto been Benzoic Acid, well known and highly valued by medical practitioners. The great difficulty which the discoverer encountered in bringing out this important remedy was the form in which to present it to the faculty and the public, the new chemical being amorphous and incapable of crystallization. It has therefore been deemed advisable to prepare a highly-concentrated solution of the product, combining it with such adjuncts as are considered natural auxiliaries. PRICE'S BENZODYNE is stimulant, anodyne, and mechanically astringent, arresting fluxes and hæmorrhages of all kinds both external and internal, possessing singular efficacy in the following diseases:—Ague, Bronchitis, Consumption, Colic, Cholera, Cold, Cough, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Debility in all its various forms, Fevers, Influenza, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Spasms, Ticdolereux, &c., &c. PRICE'S BENZODYNE has been tried repeatedly in these cases and has never failed to cure.

It immediately relieves all pain, actually sheathing the organs with a protective matter, which defies the action of the most virulent blood-poisons, and thus PRICE'S BENZODYNE acts as the most powerful styptic now known to science, being the only effective external application for cuts, bites of insects, and all open wounds. In Cholera, as in Consumption, its effects are astounding, while Chronic Cough yields to its curative influences in a few hours.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is acknowledged by the highest Medical authority to be the most wonderful medicine yet introduced to the public; it may be taken at any time by both young and old with the most beneficial effects in all cases, leaving no bad effects like Laudanum, Chlorodyne, or any other poisonous and imperfect preparations, and can be given when no other could be tolerated.

In Consumption and Cancer its peculiarly soothing properties render it a boon to the sufferer in allaying the cough, mitigating night perspirations, and in relieving pain, &c.

In every stage of those dire diseases it gives an amount of ease not attainable by any other remedy.

In all cases of Chest Affections, as Asthma, Bronchitis, Winter Cough, Palpitation, &c., PRICE'S BENZODYNE is a very valuable medicine, producing a composed and tranquil state of the system, and quickly relieving the cough, assisting expectoration, and in a few days removing the most distressing symptoms.

In Hysteria, Epilepsy, Gout, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nerve Pains it is justly valued, as it is given with immediate benefit, relieving pain and suffering however violent the attack.

In Diarrhoea, Cholera, Alvine Discharges, spasms and colics of the intestines, &c., its effects are signal, as it never fails to check the disease.

CONSUMPTION IN ALL ITS STAGES CURED.

Coughs, Whooping Cough, Asthma, Bronchitis, Fever, Ague, Diphtheria, Hysteria, Rheumatism, Diarrhoea, Spasms Colic, Renal and Uterine Diseases are immediately relieved by a dose.

During the period of Dentition of Children it will be found invaluable, and in curing Whooping Cough, Spasms, dispelling Flatus, preventing Convulsive Fits, Heat, &c., to which they are so liable.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.

Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills, are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary Diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL.

Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says:—"I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued Cough, Pain, and Irritation of the Chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."

This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers, in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, and wholesale by Jas. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough.

* * Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.

THE AMERICAN FREEMASON

is Monthly, of sixteen double-column quarto pages of entirely original matter, and translations from the French Italian, and German Masonic papers and periodicals of the day. It is devoted to the discussion of the rights of Lodges and individual Freemasons, in contradistinction to the assumptions of Grand Lodges, and the un-Masonic doctrines and arrangements of "high degrees." Its motto is—Belief in the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man. Its price is Five Shillings a year—a sum so small that no Freemason, for pecuniary reasons, need be a non-subscriber to it.

Trans-Atlantic Subscribers to the AMERICAN FREEMASON will receive it Post-paid from the Office of Publication direct, at their respective Post-offices, upon payment of the subscription to

BRO. GEORGE KENNING

3 & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN, LONDON, E.C.

All Subscriptions begin with March 15th, 1869, and end with February, 1870.

The AMERICAN FREEMASON is not the organ of any Grand Lodge; but speaking the words of truth, manhood, and independence, advocates freedom for Masonry in America, and the rights of Freemasons in their Lodges—rights which, by our Grand Lodges, in their subservency to high degrees, have been invaded, until at present they are nearly obliterated.

Subscribers in the British Colonies will please address all Subscriptions and Correspondence to J. FLETCHER BRENNAN, Editor, 114, Main-street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

TO THE NERVOUS & DEBILITATED EPILEPTIC SUFFERERS AND OTHERS.

HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA, discovered, introduced, and extensively prescribed by the late eminent Dr. MARSHALL HALL, has proved an infallible remedy (by oxydizing the blood and supplying its saline constituent) for Indigestion, Debility, Coughs, Asthma Consumption, Skin, Liver, Stomach, and Nervous Affections, more especially Epilepsy, Apoplexy, and Paralysis. The successful results of this new chemical preparation are beyond all precedent, and the extraordinary cures effected by the late discoverer, and by his successor (Dr. Sutton), in the above maladies are without a parallel in the annals of medicine; and it is confidently believed that in no case need the sufferer despair, for practical experience has demonstrated, and signal success warranted the assertion, that in 99 cases out of every 100 complete cures may be relied on.

Sold in Bottles at 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and Cases of £5 each, by

DR. SUTTON, M.D., 15, REGENT SQUARE, LONDON, W.C., and in BOLTON by PRIESTLEY, Chemist.

The following are a few Testimonials published by privilege.

Sir Charles Locock, Physician-Accoucher to Her Majesty, stated at a meeting of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society, that in sixteen cases of Epilepsy he had effected permanent cures by the use of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa.

"September 6 1856.—The Editor of the Bury Gazette returns thanks to Dr. Hall for the great benefit he has received from his Chlorate of Potassa treatment in a severe nervous disease."

Sir J. Ferguson, King's College Hospital, London, says—"I have repeatedly prescribed Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa and found it an agreeable and beneficial remedy."

Extract from the Lancet, April 1, 1857—"In conclusion, we are of opinion that Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is a far superior remedy to the ones in general use for Nervousness, Indigestion, and Liver Complaints, when judiciously prescribed."

Sir Benjamin Brodie says—"What Chloride of Lime is to the foul sewer, Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is to the blood."

Professor Syme says—"The effects of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa in obstinate cases of disease are as astonishing as perplexing."

Dr. Lankester, the eminent coroner, says—"Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is calculated to entirely supersede iron, mercury, saffron, quinine, and cod liver oil."

Sir Philip Crampton says—"I believe there is no condition of the system that may not be benefited by Dr. Hall's Potassa."

Sir T. Lawrence says—"I have found Dr. Hall's Chlorate an excellent remedy in Skin Diseases. I presume it is by oxydization."

Sir T. Watson says—"I know that it is an invaluable remedy."

Sir Edward Brough, 9, Fitzwilliam-square, Dublin, certifies Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa has been of the greatest benefit to a member of his family.

The Earl of Clarendon certifies that Dr. Hall's Chlorate cured a case of indigestion of 15 years' duration.

DR. HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA may be procured by order through any Chemist. Ask for "Dr. HALL'S Chlorate," and do not be imposed on with the common article.

It is sold in Bolton by Priestley Chemist, 12, Deansgate; or it may be had direct from Dr. Hall's successor, Dr. JOHN SUTTON, M.D., 15, Regent square, London, W.C., who undertakes the positive cure of all chronic diseases before payment.

Dr. HALL'S Chlorate is sold in MANCHESTER by JEWS-BURY, Market-street; in LIVERPOOL by PRIESTLEY, Lord-street.

N.B.—Dr. Sutton will shortly repeat his Lecture on this subject.—The Lecture sent for two stamps.

ANCIENT MASONRY AND TEMPLAR JOTTINGS.

BY BRO. JOHN YARKER, JUN.

I may reply to Bro. Hughan by saying that I have set forth in my little work all that is known at present about the degree of "Templar Priest." Its certificates are scattered throughout Lancashire bearing the era of 1686, a date no doubt used last century at a time when more was known of the degree than now. At York it bore the name of "Holy Wisdom," and, like the degree of "Heredom" in the Royal Order of Scotland, claimed a Culdee origin, and in that form is not necessarily a strictly Templar Order or degree, and although no Templar documents beyond 1780 have yet been shown, it is quite certain the Order must have had a connection with Masonry at least one generation before that. Indeed, Dr. Burnes (see Laurie) distinctly states that G.M. Deuchar, of Scotland, had traced the Order to 1740 by means of existing members about 1800, and Brother Hughan may feel disposed to place more reliance upon this than upon the statement of the Bristol ritual of 1735, which I was told had been traced in the same way.

Nor is there the slightest need for any affectation of mystery about the origin of the Order, its traditions as regards derivation from the Scottish Chivalric Order—which undoubtedly did exist—being everywhere the same, and taught in England by both Hutchinson and Preston. In Germany, Baron Hunde stated (see Laurie) that he held the patent of G.M. Prince Charles Edward Stuart, as Commander of the Seventh Province of the Order.

But why, in the name of goodness, is all the onus of proof to be thrown upon me and upon Lancashire? If there is no one connected with older Templar counties who can throw additional light upon its history, its honour must hitherto have been shamefully prostituted. I must also strongly object to have Bro. Richard Woof (than whom there is no one I more respect) pitted against me in this matter, because I do not think his language or expressed opinion will bear the construction put upon it by Bro. Hughan, and were it so I could not agree therewith, for I am certain that the Order is derived from the veritable Order of the Temple and Hospital, or I would at once withdraw from it and treat it as an imposture. Besides, our knowledge of the history of the Order is every day increasing, and will continue to progress, if each will contribute his share as he ought.

I have in no way written dogmatically about Freemasonry, and, where there is not proof by document, I have given tradition for what it may reasonably be considered worth. We are fast arriving at that uncomfortable state in all degrees that those who are withholding the documentary proof they say they have—after making certain representations for years—incur a grave responsibility. My own views and doubts as to the questions under discussion are expressed in the following, written for the pages of a contemporary and intended for publication on the same day as this:—

In the face of past Masonic secrecy and the present state of Masonic archaeology, no writer is justified in asserting that because documentary evidence of certain Masonic traditions have not been discovered by him, therefore there is no truth whatever in such traditions. We have at present far too much of this dogmatical writing, and the cause of the writers is only injured thereby. I may state, without apparent vanity I think, that during the last fifteen years I have read the bulk of what has been printed upon speculative Masonry and the old Philosophical Associations, besides a goodly amount of manuscript evidence, and that I am inclined to place considerably more faith in the "Ancients" than in the "Moderns." By Speculative Masonry, then, I understood a system of seven or eight degrees, practised at York and elsewhere, and as a rite alleged to date from 1686. By strict Operative, guild Masonry, I understand nothing more than what I find in the old MS. Constitutions. The system of the present Grand Lodge, I consider, is neither one nor the other, but simply what it has always claimed to be—Modern Masonry. In regard to the opinion expressed by some that the Master Mason's degree is a fabrication of 1717, I may express my belief that there is nothing whatever to saddle such a piece of imposition upon either the Ancients or the Moderns, beyond the fact that absolute mention of it is not yet found in the Scottish operative minutes, and I consider that this goes for very little indeed. York, in 1725, alludes to the Master Mason; and the 1723 Constitutions of the Modern Grand Lodge lead us to believe that the degree was conferred by the Ancient General Assemblies. Was it this degree and others of the speculative system that constituted Sir C. Wren an "Adopted Brother" at St. Paul's in 1691? In Scotland the case was far different to this; the Craft ceased their General Assemblies, if any were held by them, and placed the government of themselves in an hereditary Grand Master. That they had at one time a Master Mason degree seems to be rendered pretty evident by Bro. "Reitam" in regard to Roslyn Chapel. The brother assures me personally that he has seen himself what he describes in the following words:—"In the south-east part of the chapel is the beautiful and celebrated 'Prentice's Pillar,' a plain fluted shaft, with a floral garland spirally hoisted round it and carved out of the solid stone. The legend is, that when the plans of the chapel were sent from Rome, the master builder did not clearly understand about this pillar, or, as another account states, had lost this particular portion of the plans, and in consequence had to go to Rome for further instructions or to procure a fresh copy. During his absence a clever apprentice, the only son of a widow, either from memory or from his own invention, carved and completed the beautiful pillar. When the master returned and found the work completed, furious with jealous rage, he killed the apprentice by striking him a frightful blow on the forehead with a heavy setting-maul. In testimony of the truth of the legend, the visitor is shown three heads in the west part of the chapel—the master's, the apprentice's (with the gash on his forehead), and the mother's." I entertain no doubt that other evidence of a Master's degree will appear both in England and Scotland. I was at one time disposed to be very sceptical about the alleged Athelstan Constitutions, but think there is evidence in Spain, long prior, to A.D. 926, of similar Masonic government, and in Norway and other parts, of these guild associations immediate to the time of Athelstan. That the body of stone masons in England held by charter a General Assembly seems to admit of no manner of doubt. The Constitutions of 1400, printed by J. O. Hallwell, say at page 16—

That every Master, that ys a Mason,
Most ben at ye Generale Congregacyon;

but neither this MS. nor that of 1500, printed by Bro. Matthew Cooke, has any mention of York, and no doubt it was intended that these General Assemblies might be held wherever occasion necessitated. It has, however, been asserted that there was a General Assembly held at York, under Sir Thomas Sackville, in 1561, and Bro. Godfrey Higgins seems to have received proof of this in a MS. obtained by G.M. Drake from Pontefract Castle (Anacalypsis, p. 765). Another valuable admission from a brother of Higgins' stamp is as to the antiquity of the degrees of the Temple and of Holy Wisdom, and although he makes no mention of the Rose Croix, yet we know that it was practised by them. There seems also little reason to doubt that the Masonic General Assemblies were pretty regularly held in England during the reign of the Stuarts, and the supposition that the civil wars tended to upset the old Guild Masonry, and introduce Speculative Masonry seems not wide of the mark. We know also that such infringements had been made on the former, that the General Assembly of 1663 enacted that no initiation should be legal unless in a lodge of five, of whom two (including the Master) were to be operatives in the trade of Freemasonry. It sounds to sense that a Master's degree could be conferred only in these General Assemblies; for the Master of a lodge being appointed for years or for life, no one in a private lodge could have conferred the dignity upon him, and it was evidently a fundamental principle of the operative craft, that all its grades were to be conferred by sign, grip, word, and ceremonial; and if such rule applied to the Master, it would necessarily be followed in any higher degrees possessed at this time.

As there is no reason to suppose that the degree of Royal Arch can be legitimately separated from the other high grades, so we know—thanks to Bro. W. J. Hughan's discovery of D'Assigny's work—that these degrees were practised at York prior to 1744, but it seems probable that a ceremonial revision took place at the revival in 1761, and that whilst the series at York at this time was—4°, R.A.; 5°, K.T.; 6°, Holy Wisdom; 7°, Rosy Cross; in the south it was 4°, R.A.; 5°, —; 6°, R.C.; 7°, K.T. and Kadosh; and claiming from the Rosicrucians. This brings us to the present position of the Royal Order of Scotland, with an authentic history from 1740, its legendary history being contrary to all historical research and the doctrine of 1740-55, viz., a pure Templar origin from 1314, for what in the south claimed a Rosicrucian origin. Can the degree Heredom be identified with that of Holy Wisdom as the degree of Rose Croix has with the Rosy Cross, for both the York Rite and the Royal Order have claimed a Culdee origin for the first-mentioned degree of their rite.

I may state that I am aware that Sir Walter Scott, Jacobus Van Lennep, Sir R. Brown, and Dr. Burnes state that the Temple Order was continued in Scotland separately from the Hospital till nearly 1500, but no evidence has been tendered of this, and such charter evidence as we have makes against the view. Possibly the Bruce compelled with the Templar estates an equal reception from the Hospital, and even in some commanderies the Temple element may have swamped the Hospital, and the election of David Seaton (who died 1591) as Grand Prior of Scotland seems never to have been recognised at Malta, and there is little doubt that it ensued from this election that, with one or two intervening names which may be discovered, the Viscount Dundee was Grand Prior, or Master, when he fell in 1689; but whether there was a forced connection with Freemasonry at this date in England (as there was probably an unofficial connection both in England and Scotland prior thereto) is not certain, but traditional. Prince Charles Edward Stuart, after his election at Holyrood as Grand Master, in 1745, seems to have appointed Templar Commanders of Masonic Provinces of which Germany was the seventh. The nobiliary proofs were officially expunged for the British langue in 1545, after the Reformation.

With this I must conclude this long, and to many no doubt uninteresting, article.

P.S.—I am informed, since writing the foregoing, that though the degree of Rosy Cross represents the Rose Croix of the A. and A. R., that of Heredom has no relation to the York degree of Holy Wisdom, Heredom being the ancient Scottish degree of Master Mason, christianised and containing the Word, as was the case in England until transferred to the Arch degree by Dunckerley. This points to the selection of two of the principal degrees of the Ancient Rite when the Scottish Grand Lodge of Modern Masonry established themselves in 1736, and is another proof of the traditional antiquity of the Master Mason and Rose Croix degrees there.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Counsel and Help.—When diarrhoea, dysentery, or fever prevails in any district it behoves every one to be watchful and to have at hand the means of checking those symptoms of general uneasiness, nausea, and vertigo, which foretell the threatening malady. This well-known Ointment, rubbed diligently and repeatedly upon the pit of the stomach and over the abdomen, exercises the most powerful and salutary effect in arresting these morbid indications of the coming evil, and, aided by appropriate doses of the Pills, will secure safety to their employers while the heedless are falling thickly around them. Every person at this critical time should subdue the first traces of disordered action by Holloway's regulating and purifying preparations.—ADVT.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

St. Luke's Lodge, No. 144.—The first meeting of this excellent lodge was held on Monday evening, last week, at Bro. Golding's, the Pier Hotel, Chelsea, and was most numerous attended. Bro. John W. Dawson, W.M., presiding, supported by his officers. Amongst the brethren present were: Bros. Kirke, Berry, Waite, J. Maples, Burch, Todd, and Warland; Past Masters: Bros. Golding, Buer, Pullen, Morton Edwards, H. H. Kirke, Patient, Wallbancke, Cadwell, Roberts, &c. The visitors were: Bros. Joshua Nunn, G.S.B.; A. Laird, P.M. 13; J. Wright, 22; W. Travers, P.M. 63; Thos. Twyford, 98; W. Carter, P.M. 141; Hart, 145; David Saunders, 172; T. Mortlock, 186; J. E. Wytia, 186; Jaa. Cook, P.M. 507; Ashton Godwin, 858 (S. Middlesex), G. S. Symonds, 1017; E. Hickey, 534, W. Winn, 1158, and Chas. E. Thompson, J.W. 1158. The lodge having been opened in due form and with solemn prayer, the minutes of the former meeting were read and confirmed. The ballot was then taken, which proving unanimous in favour of their admission, Messrs. W. Hyde, Carr Roberts, M.D., and E. Watts, were regularly initiated into the mysteries and privileges of Masonry by the W.M., who performed the ceremony with very fair accuracy. The gentlemen, as they afterwards declared, were very much impressed with the solemnity of the occasion. The next business was the Installation of a W.M. for the ensuing year, and the choice of the brethren having unanimously fallen upon the S.W., Bro. David Pullen, he was installed by the W.M., Bro. Dawson, who rendered the ceremony, together with the subsequent beautiful addresses in a perfect manner and was much applauded at the close. The newly installed W.M. then proceeded to appoint and invest his officers as follows: Wallbancke, S.W.; Cadwell, J.W.; W. Burchall, Treas.; John Todd, P.M., Sec.; Kirke, sen., Dir. Cer.; Patient, J.D.; H. Kirke, I.G.; Morton Edwards, W. Steward; Longstaff, Tyler. The office of S.D., intended for Bro. Mann, was left open on account of his unavoidable absence in Ireland. The W.M. then performed a very agreeable duty, and he said it would be as well to state that the lodge had an intimation a short time back from Past Master Waite, that he was leaving London to go into the country to remain there permanently. He was the father of the lodge, having been connected with it for 33 years, and they felt they could not part with him in that cool manner which other societies sometimes did with their old friends, but had resolved to do something in the shape of giving him some little memento of the respect and fraternal regard they held him in. At a meeting of the members of the lodge, it was resolved to present him with the handsome testimonial exhibited that evening, consisting of an engrossment on vellum, handsomely framed and glazed. He could have wished that the duty had devolved upon some one else more able to do justice to it than he was, but if he did neglect to say anything which the subject deserved, they knew Bro. Waite too well to let that militate in any way against the honour they all desired to confer upon him. Addressing Bro. Waite, he said he was deputed by the Lodge St. Luke's, No. 144, to present to him a little souvenir of the great respect and esteem in which he was held by all the members of the lodge during his service, not only as treasurer of the lodge, but for his general amiable and kind conduct and willingness at all times to oblige. He was not only a valuable member of the lodge, but also of the Lodge of Instruction attached to it, where he was an able Instructor. He never heard his name mentioned but with the greatest possible respect and friendship. He would please accept it, not for its intrinsic value, for if they were to give him something of equivalent value he would receive something very valuable indeed. (Cheers). Bro. Waite returned thanks in a few brief, but appropriate remarks. The W.M. said he had another equally pleasing duty to perform, and that was to present to Bro. Dawson, the retiring Master, with a handsome Past Master's Jewel, and he trusted he might long live to wear it and be amongst them. He thanked him cordially for what Masonic knowledge he had taught him (the W.M.), and assured him the brethren were well satisfied with the manner in which he had performed his duties. Bro. Dawson, I.P.M., thanked the lodge most heartily for the honour conferred upon him, and said he should always endeavour to do his duty to the best of his poor ability. Some other lodge business having been disposed of, the brethren sat down to an excellent repast.

Caveac Lodge, No. 176.—At the ordinary meeting of this lodge on Saturday last, at Radley's Hotel, there was very little business done, on account of but one candidate, (Bro. J. J. Groves), out a good list of aspirants for a position in Freemasonry coming forward. This brother who formed the exception was passed to the second by Bro. W. Nelson Smith, W.M., and as a few items of lodge business only had to be considered, the work of the day was wound up with their discussion, and the pleasures of banquet table followed. Bro. Hart, supplied the best of viands and wines, and dessert which might have made an Oriental's mouth water. After the formal toasts had been drank, Bro. P. A. Nairne, I.P.M., proposed "The Health of the W.M.," who filled the chair with so much honour to himself and the lodge. The work that evening had fallen short of their expectations, but if there had been more the W.M., backed up by his officers, would have done it to perfection. The work of the lodge latterly had very much increased, and with it the accomplishment of the officers; and for the performance of the work a better Master could not be found than Bro. Smith, whose heart was thoroughly in his work. The W.M., although very gratified at hearing such kind sentiments expressed, felt that his working was very defective, and that it would be better to say nothing about it. The kind and generous recognition of his endeavours to do his duties properly made the welfare of Caveac Lodge still more dear to his heart than before. Looking back for years and seeing around the table the P.M.'s who had kept the lodge in such good order, he felt himself a degenerate brother, but he trusted that though he was unable to give the lodge that go which they had done, they would overlook his faults or forgive them. As to Bro. Nairne, he was a good fellow for saying what he had, because he could perform the Master's duties much better himself. The W.M. afterwards proposed a special toast for Bro. Nairne, upon whom he in his office of Master was very dependent. Bro. Nairne had had for the last three years, to respond so often in one capacity or other to toasts in the lodge, that he was tired of hearing his own voice. What Masonic work he had performed it was only his duty to do, and he was sorry that that night had been such a fallow one as to leave him comparatively unemployed. To the toast of "The Visitors," Bro. Griffin responded, and Bro. Charles Browne to that of "P.M.'s." Bro. Elijah Litchfield, P.M. and Sec., was honoured with a special toast, which he acknowledged in feeling terms. Bro. Henry Muggeridge responded for "The Masonic Charities." Amongst the brethren who attended, we noticed, Bros. P. A. Nairne, I.P.M.; E. Litchfield, P.M., (the Father of the Lodge); Pemble Browne, P.M.; Charles Browne, P.M.; H. Muggeridge, Alfred Bryant, S.D., 12; F. Walters, P.M. 73, and W.M., 871; J. T. Trickett, 1194; H. Massey, P.M., 619; Ed. Coates, B. Church, Ed. Turner, R. S. Foreman, J. M. Allister, H. Beasley, J. H. Godsell, H. Jennings, J. F. Smyth, and H. Puckle.

Domestic Lodge, No. 177.—On Friday last week, this lodge under its respected and able W.M., Bro. R. Tanner, held its first meeting after the long recess, at Auderton's Hotel. Bros. Tomkins, Upham and Hassell, were raised and Bro. Sullivan was passed, both these ceremonies being skilfully performed by Bro. Joseph Smith, P.G.P., P.M. Messrs. Percival, Geo. Clark, W. Palmer, M. T. Gillo, and E. H. Macklin, were initiated by the W.M. The minutes of the former regular meeting and also of the emergency were read and passed, and some slight questions having been put and answered, the W.M. closed the lodge and headed the brethren at the banquet table. The attendance was numerous, and the P.M.'s consisted of Bro. Joseph Smith, M. Haydon, James Brett, W. F. Smith, H. Thompson, H. Elmes, Carpenter, H. Potter, and T. H. Pulsford. The visitors also were plentiful and included Bros. F. Walters, P.M. (73); Millis, W.M. (157); Dawson (186); the last of whom enlivened the evening by singing some pretty songs in masterly style. The toasts were proposed with much good humour and tact by the W.M., and Bro. Joseph Smith, and the festivities produced a happy effect on the mass of the brethren.

Lion and Lamb Lodge, No. 192.—The first regular meeting for the season of this old and influential lodge, was held at the Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, on Thursday, the 7th instant, under the Presidency of Bro. E. King, W.M., at which about 40 brethren were present. The W.M. being supported by the following officers, Bros. E. Roberts, J.W., W. Goodyer, P.M., Treasurer, J. G. Marsh, I.P.M., Secretary, J. J. Harris, S.D., F. Trott, J.D., Geo. Abbott, I.G., the lodge was duly opened in the 1st, 2nd and 3rd degree, and Bros. Haynes, and Taylor, being present (after having shewn their proficiency in former degrees) are raised to the sublime degree of M.M. The W.M. then resumed the lodge in the 1st degree, and Bros. W. Younger, and C. Arkell, being present responded to the usual questions, and the lodge was then again opened in the 2nd degree, and the said Bros. were duly passed to that degree. The lodge was then after sundry business had been disposed of duly closed and adjourned. The Brethren then retired to a sumptuous Banquet served in Bro. Sydney Spencer's, (the Manager of the Hotel Co.) usual good style, and which was Presided over by Bro. King, the highly respected W.M., after the cloth had been removed the usual Masonic Toasts were given, which were most heartily responded by very excellent speeches, from the Past Masters, Officers, and Visitors. Bro. J. G. Marsh, I.P.M., at the particular request of the W.M. proposed a special though solemn toast, to the memory of a departed member of the lodge, Bro. W. Allatson, whose death transpired last month, having been a subscribing member of the lodge during the last 18 years—the deceased Bro. had served the office of S.W., the intelligence of his death was received with deep regret, and to mark the high esteem in which he was held many of the brethren appeared in Masonic Mourning. The toast was drank in solemn silence to the memory of one who was not only highly respected by his lodge, but has left behind him an unsullied name. The company consisted of also the following Bros. J. Johnston, P.M.; Ch. Hosgood, P.M.; Geo. Kenning, P. J. Warden, H. Davis, E. Taylor, S. Haynes, G. Newman, E. Page, W. Baker, J. R. France, R. E. Bright, J. Harvey, J. Kent, J. McKeirnan, A. J. Dickenson, R. G. Dixon. Brookman E. Raffe, Thos. Cohn, and other brethren. The Visitors who honoured the lodge on the occasion were Bros. A. Bryant, (P.M. of the lodge), J.D., 12; Thos. White, 22; H. B. Dunn, 28; Jas. Johnson, 295; W. Worrell, 766; Geo. King, 766; W. Lewens, 766; W. H. Thompson P.M. 788; W. Clark, 1087, all of whom expressed themselves highly pleased with the hospitality extended to them by the Lion and Lamb Lodge, for which it has been so long famed, and the cordial and genial kindness of the W.M., and the brethren generally; the meeting was as usual a very successful one, and terminated at an early hour.

Stability Lodge, No. 217.—This lodge met at Auderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, on Tuesday, 5th inst., at 5 o'clock p.m., the W.M. Bro. Edward Hughes in the chair. The lodge was opened in the first degree, and the minutes of the last (emergency) meeting were confirmed. Bros. Coley and Wilson were examined and entrusted, and the lodge was opened in the second degree, when those brothers were passed to the degree of F.C. Bro. Warsap passed his examination in a very admirable manner, and the lodge having been opened in the third degree, he was raised to the sublime degree of a Master Mason. The lodge was then closed to the second and first degrees, and the petition to Supreme Grand Chapter for permission to hold a Chapter of R.A. Masons, under the sanction of "Stability" was read and signed by the W.M., Wardens, &c., in open lodge. On the motion of Bro. Samos, seconded by Bro. James, S.W., two guineas was voted to the Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and their Widows, to be placed on Bro. Taylor's list. Nothing further being offered, the lodge was closed in due form and with solemn prayer. Visitors present were Bros. Heath, P.G.S.W., Herts; Fielder, P.M., Panmure, 715; and Coghlan, Caveac, 176.

Crystal Palace Lodge, No. 742.—This lodge held its last meeting for the season at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, on Thursday the 7th inst., Bro. Samuel Foxall, W.M., presiding, the minutes of the preceding meeting being read and confirmed, Bro. Marshall was raised to the third degree, Bros. Elsey and Whale were passed to the second degree and Wm. Pope, Faith Lodge No. 141 was unanimously elected joining member of the lodge. The various ceremonies were admirably and perfectly rendered by the W.M. The lodge was closed, and the brethren to the number of 86 sat down to a very recherche banquet, provided in Bros. Bertram and Roberts best style. After the usual loyal toasts, "Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen," "The Right Hon. the Earl of Zetland, Grand Master of Masons," "His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, P.G.M. of Masons. The W.M. proposed "The health of the Earl de Grey and Ripon, D.G.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers, coupling with the toast the name of the Grand Secretary, the V.W. Bro. John Hervey. The W.M. said that the many excellencies of the Earl de Grey as D.G.M., had so often and so properly been commended that he should not then take up their time with the subject. The other Grand officers had all of them performed their duties in the most satisfactory manner, and he was sure he spoke the sentiments of every Bro. present when he said he felt honoured and proud to have the G.S. Bro. John Hervey amongst them that evening, for we feel that beside the exalted position he holds in the Craft, which entitled him to every mark of respect, that he is one of Nature's noblemen. He has subscribed so liberally to our charities, he has devoted so much of his valuable time to their welfare, he has assisted so ably at Grand Lodge and has done so much good work for Freemasonry, that if he were to speak for any length of time of the many great and good things he has done for Freemasonry, he should still leave something unsaid that reflects honor and credit on him. But his many excellencies are so well known, that a short time ago when the office of G.S. became vacant, the name of John Hervey was prominent on every brother's lips, as the right man for the appointment. The toast was responded to in the most hearty and brotherly manner. In response the G.S. said he thanked the brethren most sincerely for their many kind expressions towards him, he feared he was not deserving of all the praise the W.M. had given him, and to which the brethren had so heartily and kindly responded. It was his duty and it should always be his pleasure to contribute all he could to the welfare of the Craft and the happiness of the brethren, he was much pleased to hear the very able and effective manner in which the W.M. had rendered the ceremonies of passing and raising. He considered himself a judge in these matters having been preceptor to the Lodge of Emulation for the improvement of Master Masons for some years, and he had never heard them better rendered and seldom so well as their W.M. had performed them that day. And he was much pleased at the able and courteous manner he had also performed his other duties in the lodge and at the banquet. He wished also to congratulate the other officers of the lodge for the able assistance they had rendered their W.M., and he complimented the lodge on its happy and prosperous state. Bro. Thos. Foxall next proposed the health of the W.M., in most complimentary terms which the W.M. acknowledged, in the course of his address he appealed to the brethren to support the election of H. H. Newman, son of the late Bro. W. Newman of their lodge, in whose memory he spoke in high terms, he also appealed to them for their individual support to the Boy's Charity, to which the lodge had voted ten guineas, and appointed the W.M., Steward to the next Festival. The W.M. then proposed the health of the visiting brethren, whom he said were of that excellent class of Masons, it had always the good fortune and pleasure of the lodge to receive amongst them, and he hoped their visit that day would be a most agreeable one to them, he should couple with the toast the name of P.G.D. Bro. Udall, a worthy brother who contributed as liberally to our charities, devoted as much time to their welfare, and evinced as much concern for their usefulness as any living man. P.G.D. Bro. Udall responded for the visitors. He thanked the brethren for the kind manner in which they had received them, and was fully prepared to give his support at the next election, to their candidate, the boy Newman, in reading over the list of candidates he did not think there was a more deserving case in the list. He also congratulated the lodge on being so ably conducted by their Master and officers. The W.M. next proposed the health of the P.M.s of the lodge, a toast that was always welcome, and well received in the lodge in the true spirit of brotherly love, and justly so, for every one of them had performed their duties in this lodge most admirably, and were ever ready and anxious to render their assistance in every possible way. Bro. Thos. Foxall on behalf of the P.M.s, expressed the pleasure it afforded the P.M.s to receive the continued expressions of kindness which the lodge had always evinced to them, and assured the brethren it was always a source of happiness to be of service to the lodge. The W.M. then proposed the health of the Officers of the lodge, a toast he remarked was always as welcome in that lodge, as any he had given that evening. The Officers of Crystal Palace Lodge were always punctual, and ably performed their duties, and the lodge was much indebted to them, for without their assistance the W.M. would be as nothing. Bro. H. French, S.W., on behalf of himself and the officers expressed thanks to the lodge for their high appreciation of their services, and assured the lodge they would always strive to merit their approbation. After the Tylers toast the brethren retired, having spent a truly pleasant evening. The visitors were the V.W. John Hervey, G.S.; V.W. Bro. John Udall, P.G.D.; V.W. Bro. John Emmens, P.G.P.; Bros. Tyrrel, P.M. (704); Horsley, P.M. (382); and several others whose names we are sorry to omit, but could not get them correctly.

Peckham Lodge No. 879.—There was a select assemblage of the brethren of this lodge and a goodly array of visitors at its Installation meeting, on Monday night, at Bro. Scott's Maismore Arms, Park-road, Peckham. Bro. Glasspool, W.M., opened the lodge, and was assisted in his labours during the evening by Bros. Evan Davies, Gard, J. Allsopp, George Colville, H. Bushby, C. W. Kent, Seymour Smith, J. Green, E. Stephens, T. J. Scott, E. Martin, C. Rudd, D. Rose, (W.M.) 73, B. Barton, (W.M.) 45, F. Walters, (P.M.) 73, and (W.M.) 871, H. Bartlett, (J.W.) 117 Henry Smit h, 720, J. Howes, (P.M.) 765, H. Massey, (P.M.) 619, Charles Lake, late of 879, and T. S. Truss. The minutes of the former meeting were read and confirmed, and Bro. Glasspool passed to the second degree Bros. Edgar Martin and Caleb Rudd. The lodge having been resumed to the first degree, Bro. J. A. Harris (739), was elected by ballot, a joining member of the Peckham Lodge. The W.M. then vacated his seat, which was taken by Bro. David Rose, W.M., 73, and presented the W.M. elect, Bro. Evan Davies, S.W. for Installation. Bro. Rose performed the ceremony admirably, and was much congratulated on his success, it being the first occasion on which he had had an opportunity of displaying his powers as an Installing Master. The officers invested by the new W.M., were: Bros. Arthur Gard, S.W., H. Bushby, J.W., George Colville, Treas., J. Allsopp, P.M., Sec., C. W. Kent, S.D., E. Stephens, J.D., J. Green, I.G., E. Martin, D.C., Seymour Smith, Org., and W. Y. Laing, Tyler. The balance sheet was afterwards read and received, and a vote of thanks was carried to Bro. Rose for the able manner in which he had installed the W.M. Bro. Scotts, the host, who is always famous for his liberality, accepted the office of Steward for this lodge at the forthcoming festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, and Bro. George Colville took upon himself the same duty for the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution. Bro. Green gave notice of his intention to move, at next meeting, for a committee to revise the Bye-laws, and as no further business remained to be transacted, the lodge was closed, and a sumptuous banquet was partaken of. All the toasts were proposed and drunk, and Bro. F. Walters in thanking the lodge on behalf of the visitors, took occasion to point out what a high position the lodge had that night reached, by sending Stewards to represent it at two of the Masonic festivals in one year. Bro. Seymour Smith and Allsopp, treated the brethren to some good songs, and Bro. Caleb Rudd played a solo on the violin in a masterly manner.

The lodge being worked in its several degrees, a most instructive lecture on the 1st degree was rendered by Bro. Spears, P.M. The brethren subsequently adjourned to the "Britannia Tavern," where every accommodation was afforded by their excellent host, Bro. Jno. G. Green, P.P.J.W.

After disposing of some further business and finally resolving the By-laws, the lodge was closed in due form and with solemn prayer, and the members adjourned to refreshment. Macdonald Mark Masters' Lodge of Instruction.

—We had the pleasure to visit, and had the honour of becoming a member of, this useful Mark Masters' Lodge of Instruction (which meets every Monday from October to April inclusive), last Monday, at the Lyceum Tavern, Strand, when there were present a perfect galaxy of first-class Mark Masters, amongst whom we had the felicity of meeting Bros. BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—Grateful and Comforting.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"The singular success which Mr. Epps attained by his homoeopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold by the Trade only, in $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. and 1 lb. tin-lined packets, labelled JAMES EPPS & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London.—ADV.

FREEMASONRY AND MODERN FANATICISM.

MYSTERIES have ever possessed a strange and potent influence over the minds of men. But this influence, like the face of Janus, has two aspects, and like a two-edged sword cuts both ways. While educated men compare and analyze, the vulgar stare and wonder and fear.

It is probable that this feeling dates its origin from the occult and sacred rites practised by the priests of ancient creeds, because it is known as an historical fact that the weird and awe-inspiring ceremonies of the Indian, Egyptian, and Grecian mysteries sank deeply into the hearts of the initiates; and the reflex of this solemn and speechless awe was found in the mute, unquestioning belief of the multitude. When Christianity arose in strength, after an unparalleled probation of blood and tears, many of the primitive superstitions retained their hold upon the imaginations of the people; and it will be an everlasting reproach to the so-called shepherds of the Christian flock in the early ages of the Church, that instead of trying to eradicate those semi-pagan prejudices and practices, they merely sought to make themselves "all things to all men," and suffered ignorance and fanaticism to prevail where the pure light of the Gospel should have filled mankind with the enduring splendour of wisdom, truth, and justice.

Christendom at large has reaped the bitter fruits of this pusillanimous complaisance—this base trifling with the intellect of man—this fatal abandonment of his highest and holiest rights. As a result, we have seen corruption overspreading the doctrines of true religion; we have seen persecution uprearing its detested head; we have found that the name of the Creator of all worlds has been used as the rallying-point for blood-shedders, and haters of their fellow-men. All who dared to differ from the dogmatic utterances of Rome were doomed beyond appeal. Jews and heretics alike suffered from the insensate wrath of the priest-led persecutors. And it is a curious phase of this blind intolerance that the most incredible rumours were set afloat to intensify the opposition of the mob to all who thought for themselves. Every Israelite was looked upon as a devourer of young children in those days, and it was generally believed that no Passover could be duly celebrated without a holocaust of infants stolen from the Christian community. The Albigenes were, in a similar manner, accused of awful crimes. The Waldenses, though pure in life and action, were credited with offences happily rare in the worst ages of the world. Every city, every plain, had its legend of the "devil's children," and the arts of ancient astrologers and magicians pale into insignificance when compared with the deeds attributed to men who simply worshipped God after the fashion of their forefathers. Yet, wonderful to relate, and wise as we are in the nineteenth century, it seems that we have some of this old leaven of persecution left. If the story of the Minotaur and of his tributary victims were quoted now as a grave and absolute fact, how many smiles it would provoke amongst the wisacres of our boasted civilisation, how many "Impossibles" from the sceptical youth of the present day! Truth, however, is stranger than fiction, and there are realities transpiring every moment around us which corroborate the truism that man's nature is the same in all ages.

History reproduces itself as the revolving cycles of time roll on. The Anglo-Saxon of to-day is the Athenian of antiquity. The Norwegian of the present is the unconscious image of the Boeotian of the past.

It is true that Scandinavia is especially fertile in superstition, in legends, and in mysteries; her peasants suck in with their mother's milk fearful memories and ghastly recollections of demons, of dwarfs, and of demigods. When the Norsemen swept the seas, scenes of blood and conquest were familiar to the bold and sturdy race which may be said to garrison the North of Europe, and tradition has carried down to our own times the fame of many a fierce old Runic hero and victorious Viking. Patriotism, the true love of country, is welded into the singular mental organism of the Scandinavian peasant, and he revels in the recital of the sanguinary deeds of his yellow-haired and strong-limbed ancestors. Many of these legends are full of a quaint simplicity, and bear the rugged impress of their Northern origin; others, as we have stated, teem with records of slaughter and terror. A remarkable instance of the influence these tales retain over the minds of the populace has occurred at Christiania, the capital of Norway, within the last month. It appears that among the lower classes of Norwegians a belief prevails that one of the secret duties of the Freemasons is to supply a human tribute to the Grand Turk—"Trynetyrken," or swine-snout, as they irreverently call His Sublimity, being supposed to be partial to roast maiden, varied with a steak or two off a plump boy flavoured with Worcestershire sauce. A perfect panic seems to have arisen lately in consequence of the time having arrived, according to the popular notions, for the despatch of the septennial victims to the modern Minotaur. The youth of both sexes were afraid to venture out after dark, and yet the delusion spread that an unknown but enormous number of young women and lads had disappeared and were in transitu to the Sultan's pantry. Fourteen bakers and one tailor were also kidnapped and sent off as live stock to the shambles, and at last the frenzy of the people rose to such a height that they attacked the Freemasons' Hall in the town, and a scene of riot ensued which was only quelled by placing the military under arms. In another column will be found a more detailed account of the transaction, and it reveals a state of affairs by no means creditable to the education and intelligence of the hardy Norwegians. Why the Sublime Porte should have a penchant for bakers it is not for us to say, but there must be a plethora of bread-makers in the Norwegian capital, when so many can be spared for His Imperial Majesty's delectation. Only one tailor appears to have been caught, a circumstance which redounds to the reputation for caution which his fellow-craftsmen possess. We are also thankful to see that there was no editor among the victims; possibly knights of the pen are scarce in Christiania, although we believe it boasts an university, and must, therefore, contain a few men of letters. In all sober earnestness, however, it is sad to think that such a lamentable delusion should exist in the midst of a civilised people at the present day, despite the manifold efforts made by the apostles of progress to spread the benefits of education in every land. Let us hope that before the expiration of another seven years—when the time for paying the supposed tribute to the Turk shall have again arrived—the commotion which took place in 1869 will be remembered as the last act of a comedy which but for the forbearance of those in power, might have had a tragical termination; and by that time, let us also trust, the citizens of Christiania will have learned enough of the true principles of Freemasonry to prevent the recurrence of a similar demonstration in future.

FOREIGN NOTES BY THE EDITOR.

A sad occurrence is reported from New Zealand. Brother James Cameron, formerly of the Morning Advertiser, and since then connected with the New Zealand Herald, had attended his lodge at Auckland for the purpose of taking his third degree, and on returning home appears to have inadvertently left a light burning which set fire to the house, and, melancholy to relate, he perished in the flames.

From the Proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Maine we glean that there are 43 Grand Lodges in the United States, with a total of 435,658 subscribing members—the rate of increase being nearly 50,000 per annum. It is further stated that, "making proper allowance for lodges not making returns, for the increase since the returns up to the present time, and for the non-affiliates, it is safe to say there are over 500,000 Masons in the United States and the Dominion of Canada." New York heads the list with 70,000 members, and the Grand Lodge of Idalia is at the bottom with 225. Sixteen States have over 10,000 brethren in each. The Proceedings of American Grand Lodges generally are compiled with great care, and though voluminous will well repay perusal.

REMARKABLE DELUSION.

Freemasonry in Norway, although warmly patronised by the reigning monarch and his son, the Crown Prince, and conferring privileges on its members in a manner unknown to this country, seems to be the subject of a strange delusion in the minds of the lower orders of Norwegians. Their quiet capital has lately been subject to a popular commotion of a most extraordinary character. For several days previous to the 17th of last month, the Freemasons' Hall, in Christiania was the centre of continued riotous demonstrations; numerous arrests were made by the police, and at night the military were placed under arms. Similar scenes have been witnessed before, and they are the outburst of curious and deplorable superstition. Among the lower class there is a belief that once in seven years the Freemasons have to discharge one of their secret duties at the expense of their fellow-citizens, by supplying a few plump human bodies to tickle the palate of the Grand Turk—"Trynetyrken," or swine-snouted Turk, as he is irreverently denominated in the vernacular. Under the present panic, which is precisely similar to that described by the popular poet Wergeland more than twenty years ago, young people of the poorer classes and servants refused to move out of doors after dusk, and are the subjects of unfeigned terror. The most extraordinary stories prevail of "suitable persons" having been carried off by force in broad daylight, and it is generally believed that the city authorities assist in procuring this Turkish tribute. The people arrested in open warfare against the Freemasons' state specifically that fourteen bakers have disappeared, and one tailor, and an unknown but enormous number of young women and boys are supposed to be on their transit to the Sultan's pantry. The magistrates have tried to allay the popular frenzy by issuing a caution to householders requiring them to keep young people out of the way, and pointing out the stupid character of the panic. The Aftenpost, in commenting on this strange commotion, ascribes it to the fact that many persons emigrate to America without apprising their friends of their intention, and says that this circumstance, brought into connection with an exaggerated historical tradition handed down from the time when European nations paid tribute to the piratical states of Tripoli and Tunis, accounts for the whole affair.

SUPREME GRAND COUNCIL, XXXIII.

A meeting of the Council was holden on Wednesday, at the Freemasons' Tavern, for conferring on the S.P.R. X, Bros. F. W. Thoyts, the Rev. C. W. Spence Stanhope, Magnus Ohren, C. Allen, R. Bailey, T. W. Parker, F. Sparks, W. C. Deeley, S. White, Edwin Slee, Lieut.-Col. Jno. Elliott, Capt. G. J. Shanks, Major Harvey Duncan, the Rev. R. N. Sanderson and H. W. Hemsworth, the 30°, when there were present:—The M.P.S.G. Com., C. J. Vigne; the Lt.-Grd. Com., H. C. Vernon; the Grand Treasurer Genl., Capt. N. G. Philips; the Grand Chancellor, Col. H. Clerk, R.A., F.R.S.; the Sov. Grd. Inspec. Gen., Capt. Alex. Wm. Adair; the P.M.P. Sov. Grd. Com. H. Beaumont Leeson, M.D.; the Sov. Grd. Inspec. Gen. Albert G. Goodall, 33°, N. Jur., United States, Hon. Mem.; the S.P.R.S.'s, R. J. Spiers, 32°; Hyde Pullen, 32°; R. Hamilton, M.D., 32°; J. Montague Pulteney Montague, 32°; the G.I.I.C.'s, S. Rawson, 31°; W. Blenkin, 31°; S. R. P. Skelton, 31°; the Rev. C. Raikes Davy, 31°; James Glaisher, 31°; the Rev. Evelyn Hardolph, 31°; Henry Massay, 31°; the G.E.K.K.H.'s Doherty, 30°; Hutton, 30°; Jamieson, 30°; Brickall, 30°; Carless, 30°; F. Alpass, 30°; Frazier, 30°; Binckes, 30°; G. Lambert, 30°; Starkey, 30°; R. Spencer, 30°; Vesper, 30°; and numerous other members of the A. and A. Rite.

The ceremony of Induction was most ably and impressively administered by the Ill. Bro. Col. H. Clerk, 33°, as M.P.S.G.C.; the Ill. Bro. Hyde Pullen, 32°, as Grd. Marshal, and the other officers of the Supreme Grand Council.

The minutes of the meeting in May were read and confirmed, and the cash account approved and ordered to be entered on the minutes, after which a desultory debate ensued, started by the Ill. Bro. Dr. Leeson, 33°, as to the necessity of holding a Grand Communication, to which representatives of the various Rose Croix Chapters should be invited. This was to a certain extent objected to by the acting M.P.S., as he thought that the Supreme Grand Council were the sole arbiters respecting the management of the affairs whether monetary or otherwise of the A. and A. Rite, and after several remarks very much to the purpose, by the Ill. Bros. Lambert, Binckes, and others, the M.P.S. concluded the debate by assuring the meeting that the remarks made should receive the prompt attention of the Supreme Grand Council, and also informed the brethren that the accounts were at all times (in office hours) open for the inspection of all Brethren and Knights of the A. and A. Rite.

All business being concluded the Council, was closed in ancient and solemn form in the 30°.

[We trust our readers will excuse any errors of omission or commission respecting the names of those present, for as our representative (30°) was (by express permission of the courteous Grd. Treas. Gen. Capt. N.G. Philips, 33°) copying the names of some of those present from the signature book, it was in a most offensive manner snatched from him by an individual having the appearance (less the good manners) of one of the Junior Waiters of the Tavern adorned with the Belt and Jewel of the 30°]

LEGAL RUMOURS.—It is believed in well-informed circles, that the vacant Lord Justiceship will not be filled up before February, the new legal commission which appeared in the London Gazette of Tuesday night, being likely to effect some changes.

Bro. H. EMPSON moved, and Bro. BENJ. HEAD seconded, "That the Right Hon. The Earl of Zetland, the Right Hon. Wm. Hy. Baron Leigh, and Benj. This was carried nem con.

It was then moved by Bro. H. EMPSON, seconded by Bro. Benj. HEAD, and carried unanimously:

"That the Right Hon. Thos. Earl of Zetland, Geo. Fred. Samuel Earl De Grey and Earl of Ripon, the Right Hon. Wm. Hy. Baron Leigh, and Benj. Willis, Percival & Co., to place the dividends, immediately upon the receipt thereof, to the account in their books of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls."

Bro. J. M. CLABON, then moved, and Bro. F. WALTERS, seconded, the following recommendation of the General Committee, of 30th Sept:—

"That inasmuch as Miss Jarwood's connection with the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls dates back as far as fifty years, during forty of which period she has filled the offices of Assistant Matron and Matron, it has been suggested that, in order to commemorate the event, and as a special mark of appreciation of her services, this Committee do recommend that the sum of fifty guineas be presented to her as a gratuity on the occasion, and that the Quarterly General Court be respectfully requested to consider the same with a view to its adoption."

This was put as a motion, and carried unanimously.

Bro. B. HEAD moved, and Bro. F. WALTERS seconded, that £1,000 be invested in 3 per cent. Reduced Annuities, and £500 in 3 per cent. Consols.

Brs. H. Empson, F. Walters, Hy. Smith, A. Pratt, Thos. Cargill, and J. R. CHANNEL ISLANDS.

INSTALLATION OF BRO. COL. ED. C. MALET DE CARTERET, AS R.W.P.G.M. OF JERSEY.

We may briefly premise for general information, that the question of providing the town of St. Helier with a plentiful supply of good, wholesome water, had long been a matter of anxious consideration. With this object "The Jersey Water-works Company," was formed.

The promoters, therefore, determined to inaugurate the important undertaking by a grand public display, so as to give éclat to the whole proceedings, and for that purpose they fixed the day of the R.W.P.G. Master's installation for the inauguration of the "Water-works." His Excellency the Lieut.-Governor, the Bailiff, the Civil Authorities, and the Clergy with the principal merchants and gentry of the island, responded to the invitation to join the day's proceedings.

The P.G.M. and the brethren cordially consented to honour the event.

Giles, W.M.; and over 200 brethren of the several lodges.

The lodge having been raised from the first to the third degree, the Directors of Cer. introduced the French deputation from Rennes, headed by Bro. L. Guillot, Vén; from St. Malo, by Bro. A. Grout, Or.; from Guernsey, Doyle's Lodge, by W. Bros. J. Gallienne and J. Gardner, W.M.; from Loyalty Lodge 243, by W. Bro. I. F. Draper, P.M., and from Justice Lodge, 34, J.R., by J. Grimmond, P.M.; who having been cordially saluted with all Masonic honours, were conducted to the right and left of the chair of the P.G.M.

The INSTALLING MASTER now stated the chief object for which the Prov. Grand Lodge had been summoned.

A deputation, composed of P.M.'s C. H. Mann, C. Kingsnorth, J. G. Scott, A. Schmitt, Dr. J. Le Cronier, Ph. W. Lequesne, G. J. Renouf, together with Bro. P.M. Manuel, Dir. of Cir., retired to the ante-room and returned to the lodge in procession, escorting Bro. Col. Ed. C. Malet de Carteret, who was received with great enthusiasm, and presented to the Installing Master by Bro. Du Jardin to receive the benefit of installation.

The Patent from the M.W.G.M. was exhibited and after the reading of its contents by the Assist. Sec., Bro. M. Tracy, the ceremony of installation was proceeded with, being most ably performed by the presiding officer, admirably assisted by his two Wardens.

The INSTALLATION MASTER then proclaimed the R.W. Bro. Col. Ed. C. Malet de Carteret as Prov. Grand Master for the Province of Jersey, when all Masonic honours were paid to him. The same officer heartily congratulated the P.G.M. upon his accession to the high office.

The P.G.M., in a feeling speech, expressed his sense of the honour that had been conferred upon him, and thanked the brethren for their attendance. He said he was fully determined to do his duty to the Craft, so far as it was in his power, and he hoped that the province would hereafter occupy its due position among the provinces of the land.

The P.G. MASTER announced to the brethren that it was with peculiar pleasure he appointed as his Deputy, W. Bro. J. Le Cronier, M.D., for he believed that there was no one who would hesitate to bear testimony to the uniform courtesy with which he had carried out the Masonic duties of his several offices. On that account, he felt, that in appointing him his deputy, he was appointing a brother who might be said to be held in the highest possible esteem that a man can attain.

The Patent was then handed to the Secretary and read.

Bro. Dr. J. LE CRONIER, was installed by W. Bro. J. O. Le Scur, was duly proclaimed Prov. D.G.M., and saluted accordingly.

The brethren next proceeded to the election of a brother to fill the office of P.G. Treasurer for the year, when Bro. P. W. Benham was proposed, seconded, and unanimously elected to fill that important and responsible office.

The following of Prov. G. Officers were appointed, and such as were present were duly invested:—Bros. Ed. D. Le Conteur, S.W.; J. G. Scott, J.W.; Rev. F. A. Rey, Chap.; P. W. Benham, Treas.; Wm. Adams, Reg.; A. Schmitt, Sec.; J. O. Le Scur, S.D.; Fothergill-Smith, M.D., J.D.; Ph. Le Scur, Sup. of Works; H. L. Manuel, Dir. of Cer.; Ph. W. Lequesne, Assist. Dir. of Cer.; Ed. Lott, Org.; Colonel Miller, Pur. Stewards:—Bros. F. Baker, Sergt.-Major, R.A. 244; Ph. Blampied, 245; R. Barrow, Sergeant, R.A., 491; A. Viel, W.M., 590; Fred. Cooke, J.W., 877; Alex. Low, M.D., J.W., 958, and Toms, Tyler.

Letters were received from Bros. A. Guepin, M.D., Vén. of Lodge "Mars et les Arts" (Nantes), M. Villers, M.D., Vén. of Lodge "Nature et Philanthropie," (Lorient), heartily congratulating the province on the appointment of such a distinguished brother to the post of P.G.M., expressing their Masonic sympathy with the Jersey Lodges, at the same time deeply regretting their inability to send deputations at this particular moment.

Bro. J. T. DU JARDIN proposed, seconded by Bro. P. W. BARHAM: "That the Committee of the late Prov. Grand Lodge be requested to draw up a code of Bye-laws for the government of the Province."

Bro. S. JEWELL proposed, seconded by Bro. C. LE SUCUR, made an amendment to the effect: "That the Masters and I.P.M.'s of all lodges should be the Committee."

The P.G.M. then put the amendment which was lost, and the original motion carried.

The Prov. G. Lodge was then adjourned and a procession of the brethren was marshalled under their respective banners, headed by the band of the town regiment, and proceeded to the church of St. Helier, shortly before one o'clock. A choir, composed of ladies and gentlemen connected with St. Simon's district church, and who had kindly come forward and volunteered their services, conducted by Bro. E. Lott, then sang a psalm. Prayers were read by the Very Rev. H. C. Le Breton, M.A., Dean of Jersey, and an admirable sermon preached by the P.G. Chap., the Rev. Bro. F. A. Rey.

At the conclusion of the service, a collection was made on behalf of the General Dispensary and the Parochial Visiting Society, amounting to £8 4s. 6d. Having left the church, the brethren proceeded processionally to the site of the "Water-works." The streets of the town through which the cortege was to pass was crowded with spectators, and the march along St. Aubin's road, presented as grand and imposing an aspect as ever had been witnessed.

After a walk of nearly two miles, the procession reached the site of the proposed Water-works at Millbrook-mill. Here the Masonic body was met by his Excellency the Lieut.-Governor, the Very Rev. the Dean, the Bailiff, the Directors of the Company, &c., &c. The ceremony of inaugurating "The Water-works," was then proceeded with.

At the collation succeeding the ceremony of inauguration,

The DEAN rose and said that, as a private person, uninitiated in the mysteries of the time-honoured Craft of Masonry, he could not speak to them of the secrets of that Craft, of which they had so distinguished a member amongst them that day. He had for once been allowed to worship with that body, at least as a proselyte in the gate. (Hear, hear, and laughter.) He proposed health and prosperity to the Seigneur of St. Ouen, the newly-appointed Provincial Grand Master of the Ancient Order of Freemasons.

The R.W. the PROV. GRAND MASTER said he was deeply gratified at the kind manner in which the Dean had proposed his health. As a Mason, he might be allowed to say on behalf of his brethren that, although not a body in the States, they were a large and powerful society, whose only wish was the prosperity of their native island. They were very pleased that day to do honour to the inauguration of what they hoped would prove a blessing to the island. (Applause.) He concluded by thanking the Dean for having officiated at the parish church, which was an honour they did not expect. (Applause.)

After the ceremony, the procession was re-formed in inverse order, and returned to the Temple, where the labours of the day were resumed.

Moved by the P.G.M., seconded by his Deputy, and carried by acclamation:—"That a cordial vote of thanks be conveyed to the Very Rev. W. C. Le Breton, M.A., Dean of Jersey for his very great kindness in assisting at this day's special service in the town church on the occasion of the Installation of the R.W. the P.G.M. of Jersey, Bro. Col. Ed. C. Malet de Carteret, and for the good feeling he has shown towards the Craft in voluntarily reading the Litany."

A vote of thanks was also passed to the Prov. G. Chap. for his remarkably eloquent sermon.

The P.G.M. then moved, seconded by the P.G.S.W.:—"That the best thanks are due and are hereby given to W. Bros. H. L. Manuel, Dir. of Cer.; Ph. W. Lequesne, Assist. Dir. of Cer., and the Hon. Stewards, for the judicious manner in which they had organised the procession."

The business of the day having ended, the P.G.L. was closed in due form and with solemn prayer, at half-past five o'clock.

BANQUET.

At seven o'clock 119 of the brethren sat down to a sumptuous dinner at the Pomme d'Or Hotel. The R.W. the Provincial Grand Master occupied the chair, and was supported on the right by Dr. Le Cronier and on the left by Advocate Gallienne. Near these gentlemen sat the deputations from Brittany, Normandy, and Guernsey, and the brethren holding high office in the province. The vice-presidents were Bro. Adams, the installing officer, and Brothers E. D. Le Couteur, Pro. S. W., and J. G. Scott, Pro. J. W.

The dinner reflected the greatest credit on Mme. Boisnet.

After the removal of the cloth the healths of Her Majesty the Queen, of Bro. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales and the Royal Family, and of the M.W. the G.M. of England and the members of all the Grand Lodges in the world, were proposed by the R.W.P.G.M., and received with due honours.

Bro. ADAMS in neat and eulogistic terms proposed the health of the Provincial Grand Master. The toast was received with loud and enthusiastic applause.

The Right Worshipful E. C. MALET DE CARTERET, in a brief but fervid speech, thanked the brethren for their confidence in him. He referred with emotion to the unanimity with which the lodges of the island had recommended his appointment to the important and responsible office into which he had this day been installed. He assured the brethren that they might depend on his earnest and continuous efforts to promote all that related to Masonry, and, assisted by his excellent brother, Dr. Le Cronier, the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, he humbly trusted that he might not altogether disappoint the hopes that were so generously entertained in connection with the Grand Mastership.

Bro. A. SCHMITT, in proposing the next toast, addressed the meeting as follows:—"At the present time it is with diffidence that I address you, in presence of the talent that surrounds me; but what I experience no fear in saying is, that I am the faithful interpreter of the affectionate sentiments of the brethren who have entrusted me with this agreeable mission. We are honoured by the presence of deputations from the lodges of "La Parfaite Union," of Rennes, of St. Malo, of "Doyle's" Lodge, of Guernsey, and of the Irish "Justice" Lodge; and we deem ourselves fortunate, and are glad, at their fraternal invasion of our Province. Yes! beloved visiting brethren, we feel our hearts palpitating with joy and gladness at seeing you in our midst; for that which was to have been the fete of the installation of our new beloved Chief, will be the fete of international Masonry. Thanks then, to you, brethren, who have come to assist us on this solemn occasion, to cause it to shine with increased lustre. It is because you know what Masonry is, whose task is not ended because it is infinite, as is the struggle between good and evil, between right and might, between light and darkness! Yes, beloved brethren, you are in our midst, because you know what Masonry is,—that cultus, that religion par excellence which repels all intolerance, superstition, and fanaticism;—because, moreover, you know that it is the cultus of humanity and devotedness to one's brethren and the neighbour, ever marching at the head of civilization and progress, and having as its basis that immortal triangular motto: "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity." That, beloved brethren, is what you know, and these are your sentiments. Hence it is that you have come to share both our labours and our pleasures. Accept, therefore, this expression of our fraternal gratitude. I need not assure you that you will ever find in this province a fraternal reception and the most cordial hospitality; for we shall ever remember the warm reception we met with at Rennes, at St. Malo, at Guernsey. In you, therefore, brethren, we hail the harbingers of a new era of prosperity, happiness, and concord. May the holy bonds of brotherhood by which we are already united, henceforth remain indissoluble. Brethren of this Province, I give the Toast of "Our Visiting Brethren," and I request that you will unite with me to evince enthusiastically, by the threefold battery, the joy and happiness we experience at their presence in our midst—"Our Visiting Brethren." (The toast was received with enthusiasm.)

The Worshipful L. GUILLOT, representative of the French Lodges, acknowledged the toast and thanked the brethren for their fraternal welcome. He rejoiced at what he might call the special international alliance between the Lodges of Brittany and Normandy, and the Islands, and he congratulated the Masons of Jersey on the admirably choice that had been made in the nomination of their Grand Master.

The Secretary of the French Lodge, P. Deputy G. M. GALLIENNE (of Guernsey), and W. M. GRIMMOND, of the Irish Lodge, also responded to the toast.

Bro. GUILLOT then proposed "Prosperity to the Lodges of the Channel Islands."

Bro. P. M. DU JARDIN answered, and expressed his conviction, which was that of every Mason, that under the enlightened administration of Bro. Malet De Carteret, the Lodges of the Island increase and prosper, and work successfully not only for masonic but also for the general good.

Bro. GALLIENNE, proposed in complimentary terms the health of the officers invested to-day, and referred to their personal and masonic qualities.

The Deputy Grand Master, Dr. LE CRONIER responded and assured the brethren that nothing would, be neglected on his part and that of the other officers to justify the confidence of the R.W.G.M. and the kind opinion of the brethren.

Bro. HENRY LUCE MANUEL proposed, at the request of the G.M., "Concord, Charity, and Universal Fraternity." This, he said, was a toast essentially Masonic. With respect to Concord it was an agreeable fact, to which they all could bear witness, that the Province of Jersey was an exemplar of the good feeling that ought to exist between all men, particularly Masons. As to Charity, it was a virtue that blessed, as had been truly said by an immortal poet, both him that gave and him that received. It was a virtue for which all should pray. Then, Universal Fraternity! was it not one of the high aims and lofty objects of Masonry? When he saw to-day at this fraternal fete, and in such a comparatively small locality, so many nationalities represented, he was gratified in his conviction that the spirit which animated all present would one day animate all classes, and peoples, and races. He believed, although we, personally, were not likely to see the day, that the day would nevertheless come, and sooner, too, than expected, when the whole earth would take up in universal chorus the anthem, that one eventful morn rang from the Heavens and echoed through the skies, and the burden of which was "Peace on earth and good will amongst men." He called on the brethren to endeavour to accelerate the coming of that time. They would do so if they acted on the principle of the toast he had had the pleasure to propose. (The toast was received with all honours.)

"The Stewards" was proposed by Bro. P. BINKER. He expressed the pleasure felt by all at the admirable manner in which the stewards had performed the duties entrusted to them. It had evidently been with them a labour of love, and the success that was desired had been achieved.

In the course of the evening the brethren were favoured with excellent songs.

Shortly after 11 o'clock the National Anthem was sung, and three times three hearty cheers were given for the Queen. The R.W. the P.G.M. then left the chair and the brethren again saluted him with the highest honours, and the day's proceedings, begun with joy and continued in order, closed in truly fraternal harmony and concord.

LODGE "LA CESARIE," No. 590.

A special meeting of this lodge was called on Tuesday, the 28th Sep., at the Masonic Temple, to receive the French deputations of Lo. La Parfaite Union (Rennes), headed by our Vén. Bro. L'Guillot, 30°, (who has been re-elected for the twenty-fifth time to the Mastership of his Lodge) of "La Bienpaisante," (St. Malo), represented by Bro. A. Grout, 18°, and of Guernsey, represented by our esteemed Bro. J. Gallienne, P.P.D.G.M. There was a very numerous attendance of members and visitors (above 80).

The lodge was opened by Bro. A. Viel, W.M., supported by Bros. G. I. Renouf, P.M., S.W.; Jos. Gregg, J.W.; J. Oatley, I.P.M.; A. Schmitt, P.M., Sec.; J. T. du Jardin, P.M.; H. L. Manuel, P.M.; J. Durell, P.M.; Ph. Binet, P.M.; Ed. D. Le Couteur, P.M.; N. Le Goupillot, Treas; Ph. Starck, &c., &c.

The deputations having arrived, were received by the P.M., Deacons, and Dir. of Ceremonies, and by them conducted into the lodge, where the W.M. and the brethren upstanding hailed them with honors due to the representatives of our French sister lodge.

The W.M. then addressed the visitors, saying that he was proud to have the honor of cordially welcoming and receiving them. The president of the deputation briefly and feelingly returned his thanks for the hearty and fraternal welcome they received.

Ph. J. Le Gros and Ph. Howard, Esqs., being candidates for initiation, and well known to the whole Jersey community as to respectability and moral character, were balloted for and unanimously admitted. The ballot was also taken for Bro. A. Duvignaud, of Lodge "La parfaite Union (Rennes), and was declared unanimous in favour of his admission as a joining member. Ph. J. Le Gros, being in attendance, was duly initiated into the order.

At the request of the Secretary, Bro. L. Guillot delivered an improvised address, in which he enlarged on the beauties of Masonic principles, and enjoined on the brethren the duty of carrying out their principles before the world, and in every station of life. The charge was a beautiful exposition of the tenets which should guide and actuate the members of our Grand Universal Family at all times—and it was most enthusiastically applauded.

Bro. L. Guillot was unanimously elected an Hon. Member and the lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banqueting room, where a most enjoyable evening was spent.

PRESENTATION TO W. BRO. J. DANIEL MOORE, M.D.

P.M. & Z. 1051.; P.P.G. SUPT. OF WORKS. WEST LANCASHIRE.

On Friday Evening last, Bro. Moore delivered a lecture at the Mechanics' Institute, Lancaster, which was received with great applause, and opportunity was taken at the close of the lecture by the members of the Science Classes to make a presentation to Dr. Moore, of a handsome 21 days' dining-room clock in marble case, of very superior workmanship, supplied by Messrs. Bell and Atkinson, for the doctor's very arduous duties in connection with his office as secretary of those classes, and as a mark of the esteem and regard in which they held him. The inscription on the testimonial was as follows:—"Presented to J. D. Moore, Esq., M.D., F.L.S., by the students of the Science Classes as a mark of their appreciation of his valuable services as Secretary of the Science Committee. Oct. 1869."

Bro. Moore is a highly esteemed member of the Craft, and was chosen as one of the Grand Master's Stewards at the Inauguration Festival in April last, which is, we trust, but a prelude to those higher honours which Dr. Moore very richly deserves.

We learn from the Athenæum that one of Bro. Morton Edwards' busts of the Earl of Zetland, M.W. G.M., has been placed in the British Museum.

We are requested to state that the Meetings of the Macdonald Craft Lodge, are now held on the second Wednesday in each Month—not on the first as hitherto.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales has we understand, agreed to preside at the 205th Anniversary Festival of the Scottish Hospital, at the Freemasons' Tavern, on St. Andrew's Day.

The New Vade Mecum (invented and manufactured by Charles H. Vincent, optician, of 23, Windsor-street Liverpool) consists of a telescope well adapted for tourists, &c., to which is added an excellent microscope of great power and first-class definition, quite equal to others sold at ten times the price. Wonderful as it may seem, the price of this ingenious combination is only 3s. 6d., and Mr. Vincent sends it (carriage free) anywhere, with printed directions, upon receipt of post-office order or stamps to the amount of 3s. 10d.—ADVT.

THE BLOOD IN OLD AGE.—As age advances, the blood becomes thin and cloudy—or, in a full habit, thick and cloudy. The failing of the powers of life requires extra nutrition and support, and the blood yielding the excess required is soon overcharged with carbon, which gives to it the cloudy appearance. Being then impure, day by day the vitiated matter increases, and the body suffers from a thousand ailments. "The Blood Purifier"—Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla—supplies the extra nutrition to the blood, and restores to it its florid hue, and then the progress of decay is arrested, and the ailments disappear; man lives out his days, and the sunset of life is unattended with suffering. Testimonials with each bottle from the Hon. the Dean of Lismore, General Wm. Gilbert, of the Indian Army; and Rev. Francis Monck, of "The Gospel Evangelist." Ordered also by the Apothecaries' Hall, London. Sold by all Druggists, in bottles 2s. 6d., 4s., 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 11s. Pills and Ointment each in boxes 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d.—Caution. Get the red and blue wrappers, with the Old Doctor's head in the centre. No other genuine.—ADVT.

A SERMON

Preached by Bro. the Rev. CHARLES LEE, M.A., Vicar of Holy Trinity, Haverstock-hill, and Chaplain of St. John's Lodge, No. 167, at the church of St. John, Hampstead, on the occasion of the Centenary of the Lodge, October 5th, 1869.

"One is your Master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren."—Matthew xxiii. 8.

Freemasonry, Worshipful Master and worthy Brethren, is of all human institutions, at once the most ancient and the most progressive, the most local likewise, by virtue of the association of every brother with his own lodge, and yet, also, the most universally diffused; for that throughout the compass of the whole known world, a brother may everywhere find a brother, and, whether in the daylight of one half the globe or in the darkness of the other half, receive from some kind brother's hands the help and brotherly sympathy of which he may stand in need.

Now, although this fraternal and most charitable loving-kindness be not itself Christianity, it is certainly of nearest relationship, of dearest kith and kin, to it, for what can be more agreeable to the very essence of Christianity itself, which points us all to a common Father and to the same divine Redeemer, than those holy principles of love and brotherhood professed—alas! too generally only professed—amongst all Christians, but which do really practically operate amongst all true masons—

"The well-known sign we mark; and fly—
The wound to heal, to still the sigh,
And wipe the tear from sorrow's eye."

And especially will this correspondence between Masonry and Christianity be more fully admitted, when I remind you that Masonry, too, knows no narrow-minded exclusiveness, for it not only welcomes the poor as well as the rich, the peasant as well as the prince to its lodges, but in every age it has conferred unnumbered blessings on mankind at large. Witness— whilst yet Freemasonry was synonymous with operative masonry—the temples, the churches, the sacred fanes and domestic hearths and homes, the princely palaces for the monarch, and public buildings for the people, everywhere erected by it, as for the good of the human race, so also for the glory of Him who is the Great Architect, the Grand Geometrician, and Supreme Ruler of the World. Witness also—since Freemasonry became speculative rather than operative (albeit still more operative than ever in good works)—the very many charitable exertions, sometimes for the good of its own poorer members, or sometimes made (as is for instance the case with our collections of to-day) for the relief of distress at large. Herein our Masonic practice is precisely in accordance with the like Christian principles, "Do good unto all men, specially unto them that are of the household of faith." Indeed, no good Mason, I suppose, can possibly learn the divine arts of liberality and benevolence, albeit, specially to his brethren, without acquiring at the same time kindlier and more generous feelings than ever he had before towards all his fellow Christians, and even towards the whole human race.

It were delightful to reflect at greater length upon the charitable excellency of our Masonic principles, and perhaps I may be permitted again to revert to this attractive part of my subject by-and-bye, but their antiquity also prominently offers itself to our notice to-day; for, celebrating as we are the centenary of our lodge (a lodge which, although it has existed a hundred years, is nevertheless but of yesterday only, compared with the grave and venerable history of the Craft in general), we cannot but cast a retrospective glance, as at the past 100 years, so also at the centuries upon centuries beyond, and the ages of ages with which, in the growth of Masonry, the St. John's lodge, No. 167, is thus in God's goodness, like as the addition of another polished stone to the spiritual building, adjusted, cemented, and conjoined.

In speaking of the antiquity of Masonry—more ancient as is its distinguishing badge than the Golden Fleece or Roman Eagle, more honourable than the Star and Garter, or any other Order in existence—I shall not allege any institution of the Craft (which it must absolutely be impossible to substantiate) coeval with Adam or Eve; much less shall I fancifully, as some have done, climb the dizzy heights or descend into the awful depths of pre-Adamite worlds. It seems to me to be sufficient here to observe—first of all, that from the first moment that the necessities of mankind led them to construct houses for habitation, instead of sheltering themselves any longer in the hollows of trees or in dens and caves of the earth, from that inventive moment operative masonry may fairly date its incipient institution; and then after that, immediately man advanced a step further, from that which is material to that which is spiritual, and associated, as undoubtedly he very soon came to do, a significant symbolism with the material structure, and to give a moral and religious significance to the form and the adornment of whatever buildings he erected, especially for religious worship; from that poetical moment, though still only as from a germ, might the origin of speculative Freemasonry also be deduced. The Priests, who were usually the most learned, and the Architects and the Builders, who were the most scientific men of the times they lived in, would, almost as a matter of course, be intimately associated together, they would quickly come to understand each other upon the practical construction of their temples of religion, and as the circumstances of the times might require they would soon come to agree upon the significance of signs and symbols, associated as well with the buildings themselves, as with their own mutual relationship and subordination to each other.

As a matter of historical verity, Institutions, which whether you choose to call them Masonic or not, were truly and really Masonic in fact, whatever their Egyptian or Greek or Phœnician names might be, existed for a certainty more than 3000 years ago. The Dionysians of Asia Minor, 1500 years B.C., possessed the exclusive privilege of building all Temples and other stately and superb edifices. Their chief mysteries and most important secrets were precisely similar to those which are known to ourselves at the present day (upon these, however, in the presence of so many who have not the happiness to be numbered with us, it is my sacred duty to observe the most awful and solemn silence). At the time of the migration from Attica into Ionia (only a few years before the erection, be it remembered, of King Solomon's Temple), the Dionysian Masons had attained considerable reputation, and were known to each other throughout all Asia and as far as India by appropriate signs and symbols. They were moreover formed into what we now call lodges, which were presided over by masters and assistant wardens, and it was their regular practice also to assist and relieve their poorer brethren.

Flourishing as they did at the time I speak of, in the immediate neighbourhood, too, of Judea it is not at all unlikely that they would labour along with the Jewish Masons in the construction of Solomon's Temple.

I have alluded specifically to one of the most venerable, because it is at the same time one of the most historical forms of Ancient Masonry; it were interesting to discuss in the like view the Orphic and more especially the Eleusinian mysteries, I must, however, advance rapidly on. Pythagoras who in common with all Ancient Masons had purer and far sublimer notions of the Deity than were common amidst the surrounding darkness of his times—to whom the grand saying is ascribed, "God is one, the light of all powers, the beginning of all things, the Torch of Heaven, of mind, of life, and the motive force of the universe"—is mentioned in documents, venerable for their age, as having framed a great lodge at Crotona, in Italy. This eminent philosopher had undoubtedly learned the ancient secrets of something very like the Masonic art, as it existed in those ages, from the Egyptian Priests. He, too, had travelled to the east in search of knowledge, and certainly the more I have pondered the matter, the more I am persuaded that whether from Crotona or not, yet at least through an Italian, that is to say, a Roman channel the institutions of Masonry were introduced into England. I do not here refer to the Druidical mysteries; our country was conquered, as we all know, by the mighty powers of Imperial Rome. Well, Masonic corporations, under the names of "Collegia" and "Carpora," had for ages beforehand been recognised and regulated in the Roman Empire. Numa, 700 B.C., under the title of "Collegia Fabrorum" and "Collegia Artificum," established after the models of the Greek societies, various Masonic lodges; they continued throughout the whole range of Roman history. They were introduced into England by the Roman generals and Governors of Britain. Under the patronage of Carausius Albanus, who with strong probability has been identified with St. Alban, our first Christian martyr, held a General Council of Masons in England. Declining during the confusion which subsequently reigned, owing to the successive irruptions of Picts and Scots, the Craft revived again under the patronage of St. Augustine the Monk, in whose time the fraternity of Masons erected to the honour of the Supreme Architect, no less a fane than that of Canterbury Cathedral. I am mentioning only definitely ascertainable facts when I mention the systematic assembling of the brethren in the middle of the 9th century, under the zealous protection of King Alfred the Great, as also in the reign of his successor King Edward. The celebrated Grand Lodge of our brethren at York was established by Royal Charter in 926, the very original of that Charter remains, I believe, to the present day. King Edward the 3rd studied and revised the Ancient Charges and Constitutions of the Order. Even the Popes of Rome were not always antagonistic to the Craft, many Indulgencies and Bulls were granted by them

"freeing" Masons from burdens and imposts to which others were subject, and the name of "Freemasons" is said to have been thus originated. It were no difficult task therefore, herein also to set the infallibility of one age against the infallibility of a later age, and if yielding to misguided counsels, assumed infallibility now-a-days, believes there is aught impious or heretical, disloyal or irreligious, in our lodges and constitutions, why then all (we who know the facts of the case) need say, is, this assumed infallibility is infallibly wrong. We can all the more easily, therefore, afford to deal with the fulminations of the Vatican, as that holy apostle from whom we take our name was commanded to do with those seven-fold thunders, whose voices he heard reverberating amongst the hills of Papal Rome, and whose mutterings when he was about to inscribe them in the Apocalypse, the angel bade him treat with a respectful silence, "Seal up those things which the seven thunders uttered, and write them not."

But I must pass on. Onwards from the times I have glanced at in this rapid survey of 5000 years, the records of Masonry might fairly be inscribed in letters of gold on the glorious page of English History; Bishops and Archbishops, both Papal and Protestant, Kings and Princes, were in succession its Grand Masters and nursing Fathers. An Act of Parliament had, indeed, been passed during the minority of Henry VI. against the Order, but when that monarch came of age, he did what we recommend all who are ignorantly opposed to Freemasonry to do—viz., study its History and Constitution. The King did so, and he became himself, in consequence, a Mason; Cardinal Wolsey was in turn Grand Master of the Order, and was succeeded as such by Thomas Cromwell, Earl of Essex, in 1534. The celebrated Inigo Jones, and the still more celebrated Christopher Wren, occupied the like office, and diligently attended the meetings of their brethren; and if since their time a great change has come over the general character and constitution of our lodges,—if especially under the remodelling influence of the antiquarian, Elias Ashmole, in 1646, and yet more especially by virtue of the all-important Act of Union in 1813, when on the Festival of St. John the Evangelist, all the Masons of England were united under the Grand Mastership of the Duke of Sussex, and our present Constitutions in all material points were for ever fixed—if, I say, under the modifying and mellowing influence of time, and the guiding genius of the great men I have referred to, the Craft is now almost exclusively addicted to speculative or symbolical, rather than to operative or structural Masonry, then we may fittingly call your attention here to the analogy in this very respect between Freemasonry and those other ancient guilds of this great metropolis which still bear the names of trades and mercantile corporations, but have no other connection with them, except the name. Witness, for instance, the Fishmongers, the Merchant Taylors, the Leather-sellers, and almost all the other city companies; and whilst it is interesting to trace the like effect of time upon our own Craft also, it cannot but be regarded as most highly, and I suppose, I may say, exclusively honourable to Freemasonry, that whilst all those other companies have indeed splendid charities, which they ably administer for the good of the community, around, yet whilst their charities, (for in truth so it must be spoken), are the inherited charities of defunct and bye-gone generations, to the credit of Freemasonry it may fairly be added that its ample, abundant and most magnificent charity as it has flowed on throughout all the centuries past, so it still flows on, a mighty and a living river of love and life, springing from that kindly and benevolent source which is the heart of every true brother. Witness here the £12,500 subscribed a little time since at one single gathering of the brethren (at which I had myself the happiness to be present.) This was to further the education of Masonic boys, and this is but one of the many, very many, Masonic Charities, which here and throughout the world are similarly most liberally supported; supported, again I repeat, by the living charity of the brethren in our own days.

Masons are indeed no longer engaged as their elder brethren in old time, in the Masonic construction of material temples to the honour of God, but they are actively engaged in a grander lodge than even that assembled in the Jewish Church, and under a greater Master than even Solomon in all his glory; engaged, I say, in the construction and the adornment of the grandest of all temples ever designed on earth—that spiritual temple of piety, of loving brotherhood, and of universal charity, of which Jesus Christ himself is the foundation and the chief corner-stone, and of which ye all, christian brethren, are built up; to use St. Peter's imagery, appropriate to Operative Masonry, "living-stones," or in which blessed Fraternity rather, so to come to the imagery of my text, altogether very appropriate to Speculative Masonry, "One is your Master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren."

The context of this passage, I shall readily admit, is apparently as inappropriate to Masonry, and seems even to forbid its Orders, as the passage itself is most suitable thereto; but it is only apparently inappropriate, for if we compare scripture with scripture we may easily see that our Saviour does here by no means forbid the civil, social, and natural relationship which subsist in society. He plainly cannot mean to forbid the child to call his parent father, or the workman to address his employer as master. It is of the constitution of the Christian church that he is speaking and whilst on the one hand he is obviously demanding a loving, but absolute submission to Himself, the Grand Master of our Grand Lodge in Heaven, to which from the tessellated floor (you understand me brother Masons) of this chequered life of ours on earth, we must ever look up with hope and desire, He is, on the other hand, urgently inculcating humility and brotherly love, especially as ever against all ambitious self-seeking aspirations after authority, place and power. Rightly understood, therefore, the spirit both of the text and of the context is exactly the same as that which brethren throughout all our Masonic studies, in which from the first moment of our initiation, brotherly love and humility are earnestly taught us.

But not these Christian graces only. All the great principles of our religion (I am speaking, brethren all, in the presence of Masons who are witnesses for me to this truth), are so vividly set forth, and so urgently enforced throughout our whole system, that a good Mason cannot be but a good man, and in the ripeness of his Masonic faith also, if he but attain to it, a good Christian as well.

In allegory I admit it, for "Freemasonry is a peculiar system of mortality veiled in allegory, and illustrated by symbols," but yet in most expressive allegory is even the whole of Christianity set forth amongst us. Jewish Masons, who have become converts to Christianity have published the deep convictions of their souls that this is so. You yourselves, brethren, all know how the great sacrifice of your Great Master's death in Solomon's time—a perfect model of truth and honour and unshaken fidelity as he was, and was in all this typical of Christ—has been evidently set forth and impressed upon you. You know how, in imitation of Him, you yourselves have been—O how urgently—called from death to life, and from a state of darkness to see the Eastern Light which dawns upon in the Light, of God's truth, and you know with what repeated solemnities you have been again and again charged, so to square your whole lives by the open Bible presented to your view, that the rough ashlar of your naturally unpolished hearts may be fitted by piety and all virtue for its true place in the Temple of God. Good Heavens! I cannot but exclaim, when I think the whole thing over, and how overwhelmed and astonished I myself was at the fullness, the excellence and the beauty of the divine religion taught amongst you; when I call to mind the eloquence of those sermons in stones, to which you perpetually pay such earnest attention; and remember the awful lessons of death and of immortality, and of the great eternity beyond the grave, which you yourselves all taught me; I say, I cannot but exclaim, what manner of men ought ye Masons to be, in all godliness and in all goodness! Truly, with death continually before you and yet with the light of life shining to guide you to the heavens, ye ought to be deeply in earnest for your own salvation, even by faith in our "one Master which is Christ," at the same time, that ye seek, as I gladly praise you that ye truly do, the good of one another, because indeed, and, still in the words of my text, "all ye are brethren."

You, Worshipful Master and brethren, I am persuaded will be liberal in your offerings to-day. You must perforce be so in gratitude for the mercies of God in the preservation of our lodge through a hundred years, but also because the Hampstead Dispensary to which our contributions are to be given, (hear me, Christians all who are here present) is for the general good of this whole neighbourhood; and what truly can be more Christ-like than to aid as He loved to do, those who suffer from disease and sickness, whom for an example to us, when He who is our common Master went about doing good, He was wont to help and to heal, therefore I ask you all. All christian sisters! as well as christian brethren! to join with your Masonic brethren to-day, and to join liberally with us in this kindly act of brotherhood and benevolence, to which it is my great pleasure earnestly and affectionately to invite you, and may the Almighty God in whose great name our lodge to-day is so solemnly convened, and to whose glory it is dedicated afresh by this service of prayer and thanksgiving—may He accept all our offerings, and bless them all, to the relief of the suffering and necessitous, and for our good, Oh, join me, all of you, in the prayer. May He prosper in our Masonic lodge the continual practice of Temperance, Fortitude, Prudence, and Justice. Those cardinal virtues, as we are taught to esteem them, and may He not only bless our St. John's Lodge, No. 167, in particular, but also Freemasonry everywhere, all the world round, to the greater good of man, and, above all, to His own greater glory!

"O may her social rules, instructive spread
Till Truth erect her long neglected head;
Till through deceitful night she dart her ray,
And beam full glorious in the blaze of day;
Till men, by virtuous maxims learn to move,
Till all the peopled world her laws approve,
And Adam's race be bound in brother's love."

PRICE'S BENZODYNE,

The Great Cure for Cholera and Consumption,

A Newly-discovered principle residing in Gum Benjamin (Styrax Benzoin), the chief chemical product of which has hitherto been Benzoic Acid, well known and highly valued by medical practitioners. The great difficulty which the discoverer encountered in bringing out this important remedy was the form in which to present it to the faculty and the public, the new chemical being amorphous and incapable of crystallization. It has therefore been deemed advisable to prepare a highly-concentrated solution of the product, combining it with such adjuncts as are considered natural auxiliaries. PRICE'S BENZODYNE is stimulant, anodyne, and mechanically astringent, arresting fluxes and hemorrhages of all kinds both external and internal, possessing singular efficacy in the following diseases:—Ague, Bronchitis, Consumption, Colic, Cholera, Cold, Cough, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Debility in all its various forms, Fevers, Influenza, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Spasms, Ticdolereux, &c., &c. PRICE'S BENZODYNE has been tried repeatedly in these cases and has never failed to cure.

It immediately relieves all pain, actually sheathing the organs with a protective matter, which defies the action of the most virulent blood-poisons, and thus PRICE'S BENZODYNE acts as the most powerful styptic now known to science, being the only effective external application for cuts, bites of insects, and all open wounds. In Cholera, as in Consumption, its effects are astounding, while Chronic Cough yields to its curative influences in a few hours.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is acknowledged by the highest Medical authority to be the most wonderful medicine yet introduced to the public; it may be taken at any time by both young and old with the most beneficial effects in all cases, leaving no bad effects like Laudanum, Chlorodyne, or any other poisonous and imperfect preparations, and can be given when no other could be tolerated.

In Consumption and Cancer its peculiarly soothing properties render it a boon to the sufferer in allaying the cough, mitigating night perspirations, and in relieving pain, &c.

In every stage of those dire diseases it gives an amount of ease not attainable by any other remedy.

In all cases of Chest Affections, as Asthma, Bronchitis, Winter Cough, Palpitation, &c., PRICE'S BENZODYNE is a very valuable medicine, producing a composed and tranquil state of the system, and quickly relieving the cough, assisting expectoration, and in a few days removing the most distressing symptoms.

In Hysteria, Epilepsy, Gout, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nerve Pains it is justly valued, as it is given with immediate benefit, relieving pain and suffering however violent the attack.

In Diarrhoea, Cholera, Alvine Discharges, spasms and colics of the intestines, &c., its effects are signal, as it never fails to check the disease.

CONSUMPTION IN ALL ITS STAGES CURED.

Coughs, Whooping Cough, Asthma, Bronchitis, Fever, Ague, Diptheria, Hysteria, Rheumatism, Diarrhoea, Spasms Colic, Renal and Uterine Diseases are immediately relieved by a dose.

During the period of Dentition of Children it will be found invaluable, and in curing Whooping Cough, Spasms, dispelling Flatus, preventing Convulsive Fits, Heats, &c., to which they are so liable.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is specially adapted for Naval, Military or Traveller's medicine chests, and for Hospitals and Dispensaries everywhere.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.

Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills, are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary Diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL.

Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says:—"I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued Cough, Pain, and Irritation of the Chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."

This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers, in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. CROSBY, Chemist, Scarborough.

THE AMERICAN FREEMASON

is Monthly, of sixteen double-column quarto pages of entirely original matter, and translations from the French Italian, and German Masonic papers and periodicals of the day. It is devoted to the discussion of the rights of Lodges and individual Freemasons, in contradistinction to the assumptions of Grand Lodges, and the un-Masonic doctrines and arrangements of "high degrees." Its motto is—Belief in the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man. Its price is Five Shillings a year—a sum so small that no Freemason, for pecuniary reasons, need be a non-subscriber to it.

Trans-Atlantic Subscribers to the AMERICAN FREEMASON will receive it Post-paid from the Office of Publication direct, at their respective Post-offices, upon payment of the subscription to

BRO. GEORGE KENNING

8 & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN, LONDON, E.C.

All Subscriptions begin with March 15th, 1869, and end with February, 1870.

The AMERICAN FREEMASON is not the organ of any Grand Lodge; but speaking the words of truth, manhood, and independence, advocates freedom for Masonry in America, and the rights of Freemasons in their Lodges—rights which, by our Grand Lodges, in their subservency to high degrees, have been invaded, until at present they are nearly obliterated.

Subscribers in the British Colonies will please address all Subscriptions and Correspondence to J. FLETCHER BRENNAN, Editor, 114, Main-street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

TO THE NERVOUS & DEBILITATED EPILEPTIC SUFFERERS AND OTHERS.

HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA, discovered, introduced, and extensively prescribed by the late eminent Dr. MARSHALL HALL, has proved an infallible remedy (by oxydizing the blood and supplying its saline constituent) for Indigestion, Debility, Coughs, Asthma Consumption, Skin, Liver, Stomach, and Nervous Affections, more especially Epilepsy, Apoplexy, and Paralysis. The successful results of this new chemical preparation are beyond all precedent, and the extraordinary cures effected by the late discoverer, and by his successor (Dr. Sutton), in the above maladies are without a parallel in the annals of medicine; and it is confidently believed that in no case need the sufferer despair, for practical experience has demonstrated, and signal success warranted the assertion, that in 99 cases out of every 100 complete cures may be relied on.

Sold in Bottles at 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and Cases of £5 each, by

DR. SUTTON, M.D., 15, REGENT SQUARE, LONDON, W.C., and in BOLTON by PRIESTLEY, Chemist.

The following are a few Testimonials published by privilege.

Sir Charles Locock, Physician-Accoucher to Her Majesty, stated at a meeting of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society, that in sixteen cases of Epilepsy he had effected permanent cures by the use of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa.

"September 6, 1856.—The Editor of the Bury Gazette returns thanks to Dr. Hall for the great benefit he has received from his Chlorate of Potassa treatment in a severe nervous disease."

Sir J. Ferguson, King's College Hospital, London, says—"I have repeatedly prescribed Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa and found it an agreeable and beneficial remedy."

Extract from the Lancet, April 1, 1857.—"In conclusion, we are of opinion that Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is a far superior remedy to the ones in general use for Nervousness, Indigestion, and Liver Complaints, when judiciously prescribed."

Sir Benjamin Brodie says—"What Chloride of Lime is to the foul sewer, Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is to the blood."

Professor Syme says—"The effects of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa in obstinate cases of disease are as astonishing as perplexing."

Dr. Lankester, the eminent coroner, says—"Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is calculated to entirely supersede iron, mercury, sarsaparilla, quinine, and cod liver oil."

Sir Philip Crampton says—"I believe there is no condition of the system that may not be benefited by Dr. Hall's Potassa."

Sir T. Lawrence says—"I have found Dr. Hall's Chlorate an excellent remedy in Skin Diseases. I presume it is by oxydization."

Sir T. Watson says—"I know that it is an invaluable remedy."

Sir Edward Borough, 9, Fitzwilliam-square, Dublin, certifies Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa has been of the greatest benefit to a member of his family.

The Earl of Clarendon certifies that Dr. Hall's Chlorate cured a case of indigestion of 15 years' duration.

DR. HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA may be procured by order through any Chemist. Ask for "Dr. HALL'S Chlorate," and do not be imposed on with the common article. It is sold in Bolton by Priestley Chemist, 12, Deansgate; or it may be had direct from Dr. Hall's successor, DR. JOHN SUTTON, M.D., 15, Regent-square, London, W.C., who undertakes the positive cure of all chronic diseases before payment.

Dr. HALL'S Chlorate is sold in MANCHESTER by JEWELL, Market-street; in LIVERPOOL by PRIESTLEY, Lord-street.

N.B.—Dr. Sutton will shortly repeat his Lecture on this subject.—The Lecture sent for two stamps.

EACH Paper contains every item of intelligence, from Mail to Mail, specially affecting the country or colony for which it is published, with an exhaustive summary of home and continental politics, science, art, and social news, and a retrospect of commercial transactions in Great Britain and on the Continent.

Manufacturers and Merchants may command the greatest markets of the world for their products through the mediums of publicity afforded by the EUROPEAN MAIL. A demand may be created where none exists at present, or an existing demand may be sustained and increased against the most energetic competition.

The EUROPEAN MAIL gives such perfect mercantile information that it is the highest commercial authority in the vast and prosperous territories through which it circulates. It is therefore an imperative necessity to the merchant who orders goods in bulk, and to the wholesale and retail distributor; it is also the most complete newspaper despatched from England, and is eagerly sought by all classes; it thus, unlike merely commercial newspapers, reaches and leavens the great communities who are the actual consumers of all products, and who must be acted upon by advertisement to require a special article before the merchant will venture to order a consignment.

Scale of Charges for ADVERTISEMENTS each insertion per Paper as follows:—

When an Advertisement is ordered for insertion simultaneously in all the Papers, the lowest rate above is charged all through.

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the Cannon-street Post Office, London.

Remittances payable to William Vaughan.

The EUROPEAN MAIL may be ordered through the Local Agent, direct from the London Office, or through any Firm having representatives in England. In the last case, the usual system is to order the EUROPEAN MAIL to be forwarded until countermanded; the representative of the Firm in England being directed, under similar conditions, to make payment annually.

GLENFIELD STARCH

is the only kind used in Her Majesty's Laundry.

THOSE LADIES who have not yet used the GLENFIELD STARCH, are respectfully solicited to give it a trial, and carefully follow out the directions printed on every package. It is rather more difficult to make than other Starches, but when this is overcome, they will say, like the Queen's Laundress, that it is the finest Starch they ever used.

KNIGHT TEMPLAR JOTTINGS.

We left off at page 157 of THE FREEMASON, by directing attention to Bro. Yarker's views of Operative and Speculative Freemasonry. At page 13 there is a note respecting the "Longnor" Lodge, which we have endeavoured to verify in vain, owing to a wrong reference being given. At least, we have searched "Notes and Queries" of July 17th, 1869, without finding anything on the subject.

We hope, however, to find it elsewhere soon, as it is doubtless a typographical error. A code of By-laws of the Jerusalem Encampment, Manchester, is given at page 15 of "Notes of the Temple," and is a valuable record of the character of the Order at that period.

Then follows a Petition for a warrant to hold a K. T. Encampment in the town of Manchester, addressed to the Grand Master of all England, at York, which is a curiosity in its way, as likewise the letter accompanying it, requesting a Brother "to attend at the Grand Lodge in York, and lay the petition before them." The warrant was granted, and the Encampment duly constituted on the 17th day of October, 1866, and the warrant was written or signed by William Blanchard, G. Secretary, and numbered 15. We question if any more interesting records of this Masonic chivalric degree has ever been submitted for the perusal of the fraternity, than are to be found in the "Notes of the Temple," and although we have taken exception to a few of the statements therein contained, we none the less appreciate the manner in which Bro. Yarker has treated the subject. We find that there is an article from the same able pen in THE FREEMASON of the 16th October, as a friendly reply to a few of our well-meant criticisms. It will be necessary for our readers to refer to our remarks contained in THE FREEMASON for August 28th and October 2nd, 1869, in order to clearly understand the various points at issue, and when they have done so, it will be comparatively easy to draw their own opinions as to the accuracy of our statements. We will not go so far as to say there are no documents that mention the Knight Templar Priest's degree, written or printed, A.D. 1686, but we do say that none have yet been produced. Certificates may bear the date of 1686, but surely that does not prove the degree to be of that antiquity, any more than that Freemasonry has existed as a secret society for about 6000 years because its certificates are dated, A.L. 5869." I must heartily agree with Bro. Yarker that "we are fast arriving at that uncomfortable state in all degrees, that those who are withholding the documentary proof they say they have—after making certain representations for years—incur a grave responsibility" (THE FREEMASON, Vol. II, No. 32, p. 177). We hope this emphatic and correct statement of the present state of some departments of Freemasonry may result in the silence being broken, and the existence of certain documents be firmly established, otherwise there will naturally be grave doubts of their existence at all.

With respect to Dr. Dassigny's work—which is the earliest printed work known that alludes to the Royal Arch degree—we intend to have it carefully reprinted before long, so as to enable all Masonic students to know exactly what it does, and does not, say. The author does not say that the Royal Arch degree was worked at York, A.D. 1744, but only that he was told so. However, there is no improbability of the story being quite correct, and certainly before that date it was worked in England. We cannot stay now to consider a few of the questions propounded by Bro. Yarker as to the origin of several of the "high degrees," so called. We think that their elucidation would surely clear up many points just now apparently far from settlement, but the great difficulty is to discuss such subjects with the patience and care required, when there is such a lamentable dearth of documentary evidence in support of the statements made by the upholders of certain degrees. A few more such works as "Notes on the Temple" would result in the publication of many valuable documents for the History of the Fraternity. At page 20, Bro. Yarker again alludes to the statement by the esteemed Mason, Dr. H. B. Leeson, respecting the "37th clause of the Constitutions approved by the English Grand Lodge on St. John's Day, 1720, and printed at Brussels in 1722," which is said to contain an enactment in reference to Knights elected Kadosh and others of the "Hautes Grades." We have before shown this to be an erroneous statement. No such work has ever existed, and on the very face of it carries its condemnation, as the Constitutions of the Grand Lodge of England were not printed until A.D. 1723; and most positively we declare they contain nothing about such degrees whatever, and moreover we maintain that no such resolution was ever passed by the Grand Lodge of England at any time, neither has it ever sanctioned more than three degrees, including the Holy Royal Arch (the latter clause, not until A.D. 1813). We think that in consequence of our previous flat denial of the existence of any such work, the quotation might at least have been spoken of as doubtful. Brethren not versed in the subject would accept it as literally a fact, and as the work in which it appears is so trustworthy generally, would therefore not think of questioning it. At page 23 of the Notes, the Warrant from Bro. Thomas Dunckerley is introduced, and (like all others of about that date, and for many years since), contains abundant evidence to establish the fact of the degrees entitled H.R.D.M. and K.O.D.S.H. were under the authority of the Knights Templar in this country. "The Admission Pass" of the Templar degree Ritual of 1801, in the possession of Bro. T. L. Bold, is said to be "that of the present Order of Constantine." Bro. Yarker is very severe on the changes effected of late years in the character of the Order, after "Sir Knight Tynte received the Grand Mastership of the Order, then he surrendered all control over the Rose Croix and other degrees, and a system of repression was adopted in Encampments heretofore unheard of in its annals." "Consequent upon this were prepared new statutes, new customs, and an entirely new ritual, originating probably in some London Encampment, in which everything that had the appearance of antiquity in the old Order of St. John and the Temple, was thrown overboard. This revised Order has the bastard title given it of "Masonic Knight Templar." (Page 36).

In concluding our notice of Bro. Yarker's work, we cannot do better than indorse his recommendation of Bro. Richard Woof's admirable sketch of the Order. W. J. HUGHAN.

PRESENTATION.—At the last Isca Lodge, 683, Newport, Monmouthshire, a magnificent gold P.M.'s jewel was presented by its members to Bro. R. Bond, P.D.A.G.D.C. of Monmouthshire, and P.M. 683 and 1098, as a token of fraternal regard in recognition of past services to the Isca Lodge.

FRATRES ROSICRUCIANÆ SOCIETATIS IN ANGLIA.

A quarterly meeting of the Rosicrucians was held on Thursday, the 14th inst., at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street. The chair of M.G. was filled by Frater R. Wentworth Little, Past M.G. and S.M. of the Fraternity, in the deeply-regretted, though unavoidable, absence of the M.G. Frater W. J. Hughan, of Truro.

The Deputy M.G. Frater Hubbard was in his place, and the Ancients were in charge of their respective gates.

The M.C. having been duly formed, and the minutes read, the presiding officer proceeded to confer the grade of Adeptus Minor upon several approved fratres.

A Council of the Second Order was then held for the induction of the following Adepti Minores into the grade of Adeptus Major: W. R. Woodman, M.D.; Angelo J. Lewis, M.A., S. H. Rawley, W. Carpenter, J. Weaver, E. Stanton Jones, W. J. Ferguson, W. A. Tharp, W. Bird, and G. W. Butler.

After the usual satisfactory proofs had been given by the minor adepts to the Inductor, the fratres were admitted and renewed the covenant into which they had entered in the previous grade. The Chief Adept then delivered the address to the candidates, in which they were informed that "the occult Sciences reveal to men the mysteries of his nature, the secrets of his organization, and the means of obtaining perfection and happiness." They were reminded that from chaos, order arose, and from darkness, light; and were encouraged to persevere hopefully, through the trials and vicissitudes of life, sustained by the prescience of a glorious future. The necessity of a moral lustration—a spiritual purification—before man can become a partaker of celestial joys was forcibly inculcated. The candidates were further enjoined to study the symbolism of the Order, and to shape their actions by the precepts therein revealed; and, in fine, to regard this mortal life as but the vestibule to the temple of immortality.

With the impressive words known only to true adepts, the Inductor closed the ceremony, and the proceedings of the M.C. were resumed, when the ritual of the grade of Zelator was rehearsed at the request of many fratres present.

We may remark that owing to unavoidable circumstances, the various ceremonials of the Fraternity have hitherto been but imperfectly worked, but at this meeting nothing could surpass the solemnity of the scene—the transition from light to gloom, the sombre accompaniments, and the awe inspiring music during the inductions produced an effect on the candidates, which has vastly increased their respect and admiration for the Order.

Frater Weaver officiated with his customary ability at the harmonium, and the talented Secretary-General, Dr. Woodman, was, as usual, most efficient and obliging. The M.C. was then closed.

STANZAS.

And hast thou come,
Great spirit of Love, to haunt this lonely heart
With thy most sacred presence? I am dumb
Before thee—yet a thousand visions start
Like loosened waters thro' my brain—I feel
Their influence divine, and thus reveal
Their mystic utterances. Oh desert Earth,
What thou dost yield is evil, and our youth
Is vainly spent seeking the light of truth.
Then let us turn unto the sunnier birth
Of Love uprising from the foaming sea
Of Life, with his celestial wings unfurl'd
Above the clouds and darkness of the world,
Beckoning to Hope and Immortality!
For, like a sunbeam smiling on a rose,
The kindling rays of Love can every heart unclose.

ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE.—The Supreme Grand Council 33°, at their meeting on Wednesday, 13th inst., upon the recommendation of the Sov. Grand Inspector-General, Capt. Alexander W. Adair, resolved to grant a warrant for the purpose of opening a Rose Croix Chapter at Weston-super-Mare, to be named the "William-de-Irwin" Chapter of S.P.R. +. Capt. F. G. Irwin, 30°, will be the first M.W.S. Bro. Capt. Adair is a member of the Craft Lodge, No. 1222, Weston-super-Mare.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Tranquillity Lodge, No. 185.—The first meeting of the season took place at Radley's Hotel, Blackfriars, on Monday, when Mr. Barney Barnett, of Hull, was initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry, in a decidedly efficient and impressive manner, by the highly respected W.M. Bro. Holbrook, well supported by his excellent officers, the whole of whom were present, with a numerous attendance of P.M.'s, viz., the W. Bros. N. Harris, Alex. Levy, Louis Israel, Harfeld, &c., with those veterans in duty Bros. Peartree, the highly esteemed Treasurer, and P. Levy, the efficient Secretary. The only visitor present was Bro. Lazarus, P.P.G.J.W. Wilts. Bro. Hart provided, as usual, a profuse banquet and capital wines, well served under the superintendence of his nephew. The evening was enlivened by several good songs in the intervals between the toasts. In responding to the "Charity Fund of the Lodge," the W. Bro. A. Levy announced a donation of five guineas from the initiate, Bro. Barney Barnett.

Merchant Navy Lodge, No. 781.—This lodge met at 5 p.m. on Wednesday, 14th inst., at the Silver Tavern, Burdett-road, Limehouse, Bro. E. T. Read in the chair. The lodge was opened in the first degree, and the minutes of the last regular lodge and two emergency meetings were read and confirmed. The lodge was opened in the second degree and Bros. Hallett, Hopson, and Russell were examined and entrusted. The lodge was opened in the third degree and those brethren were each raised to the sublime degree of M.M. The lodge was resumed in the first degree, and Bro. Casman was examined and entrusted. The lodge was resumed in the second degree, and Bro. Casman was passed to the degree of F.C. The lodge was again resumed in the first degree, and ballot took place for Mr. W. Sutton, which being declared to be unanimous in his favor, he was duly initiated into the mysteries and privileges of ancient Freemasonry. Mr. Thos. Dryden, master mariner, who was balloted for at the last regular meeting, being absent with his ship in the North Sea, was apologised for. Bro. Holt proposed, and Bro. Bracebridge gave his name as seconder, to a motion for consideration that a benevolent fund be established. Nothing further being offered the lodge was closed in due form and with solemn prayer. About forty brethren attended the subsequent banquet, and the evening was enlivened by the vocal abilities of the members.

New Concord Lodge, No. 813.—This lodge assembled at the Rosemary Branch Tavern, Hoxton, on Friday, Oct. 15th, and was opened in due form by Bro. Hart, W.M., assisted by his officers: Bros. T. Bartlett, S.W.; M. J. Atkins, J.W.; Salisbury, S.D.; Jas. Blyth, J.D.; J. Absell, I.G.; J. Emmens, P.M., and T. Main, P.M., and Hon. Sec.; I. J. Wilson, P.M.; J. McDavitt, Org.; W. Lloyd, S. The brethren present were Bros. Townsend, Mathison, A. Hill, C. J. Hill, Fanequay, Burrage, Osborn, Denny, Hubbard, Chant, Whaley, Duke, Spratt, E. Walker, Nunn, Brüstlin, and Flint. The visitors, E. Dottridge (172), Forbes (J.W. 65), Vaughan (193), Lloyd (780), Nicholson (P.M. 172), H. Muggeridge, and Muggeridge, jun. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. A ballot was then taken for Mr. Francis Cain and Mr. W. Taylor. Both were unanimously approved, and Mr. Cain, being in attendance, was regularly initiated in the mysteries and privileges of ancient Freemasonry in a very impressive manner by the W.M. After one or two propositions for initiation on the ensuing lodge night, the lodge was closed with solemn prayer, and the brethren adjourned to an excellent banquet prepared by Bro. H. Gabb. After the cloth was removed, the usual Masonic toasts were given. The toasts of the "Freemasons' Charities" was very eloquently responded to by Bro. H. Muggeridge, who in the course of his speech, addressed a few pertinent remarks to the newly-initiated brother, and likewise complimented the lodge upon the great assistance it has rendered to the benevolent institutions. The W.M. then proposed the newly-initiated brother's health, who in reply expressed his gratification at being admitted into the Fraternity. He had long desired to do so, and now he should endeavour to carry into execution those true principles upon which it seemed to him to be founded. The W.M.'s health was then proposed, who thanked the brethren and officers for the assistance they had rendered him. "The Visitors" was responded to by Bro. Nicholson, P.M. (172). Bro. Bartlett, S.W., informed the brethren that he had accepted the office of Steward for aged Freemasons and their widows, and solicited their support at the festival in January next. The evening was enlivened by some excellent playing and singing by Bro. McDavitt, Organist, assisted by Bros. Hubbard, Blyth, and Vaughan.

Whittington Lodge, No. 862.—At the ordinary meeting of this lodge, at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, on Monday evening, Bro. D. J. Davis, W.M., presided, assisted in his working by Bros. W. Hurlstone, P.M.; Jas. Weaver, S.W.; S. S. Davis, J.W.; J. Geo. Thompson, P.M. Treasurer; R. W. Little, P.M., Secretary; Jas. Brett, P.M.; W. F. Smith, P.M.; Quintin Dix, and several others. Bro. W. Schuegelsberg was passed, and Bro. Thos. Voigt raised. Bro. James Weaver, S.W., was unanimously elected W.M.; Bro. J. G. Thompson, Treasurer, and Bro. Gilbert, T. Two pounds were handed to a distressed Brother. The Treasurer proposed, and the Secretary seconded the motion, that a Five guinea P.M.'s Jewel be presented to the retiring W.M., Bro. D. J. Davis. Bro. James Brett proposed that the Treasurer and the Secretary should each be allowed a visitor free of expense at every meeting of the Lodge, accompanying his proposition with the remark that the long and faithful services of both those brethren deserved some recognition. Bro. Weaver seconded the motion, and the Lodge unanimously adopted it. The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren partook of one of the most agreeable banquets that the Bros. Clemows ever provided. Bro. H. Massey was the only visitor.

Rose of Denmark Lodge, No. 975.—The first meeting of this lodge for the season was held at the White Hart Tavern, Barnes terrace, on Friday the 15th inst., under the presidency of Bro. F. C. Neweus, the W.M., who was supported by Bros. G. H. Oliver and R. W. Little, P.M.'s; G. T. Noyce, S.W.; C. A. Smith, J.W.; Rev. J. Sydney Darvell, Chaplain; W. H. Barnard, S.D.; R. B. Huddleston, C.S.; H. Potter, Treas.; T. Farrell, J. Niblett, C. Butcher, G. Steele, C. Willcox, W. Ayles, and R. Curtis. There were several visitors, including Bros. E. Sisson, P.M. (101, 901, &c.); G. Hyde, W.M. (141); Way, &c. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, and ballots taken for two candidates for initiation. Mr. Arthur Claridge being in attendance was then duly initiated, and a brother was subsequently passed to the 2nd degree. The elections for the ensuing year resulted unanimously in favour of Bros. G. T. Noyce, S.W., as W.M.; H. Potter, Treas.; and J. Gilbert, Tyler; Huddleston, Barnard, and Stevens, were chosen as auditors. A P.M.'s jewel was then voted to the retiring Master, and the lodge was closed. The usual banquet followed, and good harmony and fellowship prevailed during the evening. The incoming Master will be installed on the 19th Nov., by Bro. R. Wentworth Little, P.M. of the lodge, and now the senior member, when a large gathering may be confidently anticipated, as Bro. Noyce of Richmond, the W.M. elect., is highly respected by the brethren.

Macdonald Lodge, No. 1216 (1st Surrey Rifles).—This lodge held its seventeenth regular monthly meeting at Head-quarters, Camberwell, on Wednesday evening, the 13th inst., and was largely attended. The W.M., Bro. Major A. L. Irvine, P.M., opened the lodge at half-past six o'clock, supported by Bros. James Stevens, P.M., S.W.; J. H. Hastie, as J.W.; Dr. E. Cronin, Treas.; J. J. Curtis, Sec.; F. Dubois, S.D.; S. Wagstaff, J.D.; H. Puckle, as I.G.; and J. Messenger, Stewd. There were present, amongst others, Bros. Thomas Meggy, P.M.; S. Rosenthal, P.M.; H. Rassam (late of Abyssinia), W. Willis, Charles Phare, H. Francis, D. Fourdrinier, W. H. Thomas, W. Dicker, T. W. Carnell, M. S. Larham, C. Fountain, A. Walton, A. Kethro, and visitors, Bros. N. Gluckstein (P.M. 141), Charles Swan (P.M. 869), and W. Worrell (766). After confirmation of the minutes of previous lodge, ballots were taken for Mr. Alfred Scruby and Dr. Henry Woodgates for initiation, which proving unanimously favourable, those gentlemen were severally initiated with all the impressiveness the W.M. of this lodge is so capable of imparting. The solemnity of the ceremonies was greatly enhanced by the musical accompaniments of Bro. W. Worrell, who, at the W.M.'s request, officiated as organist. The lodge was then called off for an interval of refreshment, in the course of which the W.M. drew attention to the fact that before the expiration of the week Bro. Rassam would leave this country for Aden, on a Governmental mission which would probably render his absence from the lodge of lengthened and very uncertain continuance. The W.M., after a very feeling reference to the previous services and unmerited imprisonment of Br. Rassam in Abyssinia, and to the diplomatic tact and endurance which he had there displayed, called upon the brethren to join with him in offering to that distinguished brother the best wishes and sincere regards of the lodge, and to express their earnest solicitations that the G.A.O.T.U. might hold him in safe keeping, and grant him a return at no very distant date to receive their congratulations on reunion with them in their Masonic labours.—In answer to this appeal the health of Bro. Rassam was drank with much enthusiasm, and the worthy brother received a parting grasp from each of his Masonic associates. Responding to the toast, he expressed his earnest satisfaction at having joined the brotherhood, and thanked the lodge for his initiation by them and the subsequent pleasures he had received at their hands.

He trusted so to carry with and about him in distant lands that Masonic reputation which should add lustre to the Order, and should never forget either the principles inculcated by it, or the respect and duty which he owed to those who had first introduced him to the light of Masonry.—"Poor and distressed Brethren" having been duly remembered, the lodge was called on, and Bro. Stevens, S.W., at the request of the W.M., delivered the fourth section of the First Lecture in an able manner and to the great satisfaction of the members and visitors present.—After the dispatch of a few matters of Masonic business, the lodge was closed in due form, and adjourned to the second Wednesday in November.

Stanhope Lodge, No. 1269.—This summer lodge held its last regular meeting for the season on the 12th inst., at the Thicket Hotel, Anerly. The lodge was opened in the three degrees, and the W.M. having resumed to the first degree, the minutes were read and confirmed, after which the W.M., assisted by the officers, initiated Mr. Edward Palmer and Mr. Charles Wm. Stevens, into the ancient mysteries of Freemasonry. He subsequently resumed the lodge to the 2nd degree, when Bro. Jno. Garland was passed to the degree of F.C. The lodge was resumed to the third degree, and Bros. F. Croydon, Wm. Thomas Goddard, and Alfred Sanders were raised to the sublime degree of M.M. The lodge was well attended, the members present including Bros. H. W. Lindus, W.M.; John Thomas, P.M. (507); W. P. Clifford, S.W.; J. Kench, J.W.; J. Hart, Sec.; T. E. Hardy, J.D.; J. C. Ring, I.G.; C. W. Stevens, Edward Palmer, Jno. Garland, F. Croydon, W. T. Goddard, Alfred Sanders, J. W. Lassam, H. Webster, R. Waygood, Seymour Smith, and others. The visitors were Bros. W. T. Farthing (Constitutional Lodge, 55), and Cohen (Old Concord, 172). After the lodge was closed the brethren adjourned to an excellent banquet, and spent a very pleasant evening. The next regular meeting of the lodge will take place in the month of May next.

PROVINCIAL.

LEICESTER.—St. John's Lodge, No. 279.—A regular monthly meeting of this lodge took place on Wednesday week, at the Freemasons' Hall, Halford-street, the W.M., Bro. Kelly, D.P.G.M., in the chair, supported by the I.P.M. and all the officers of the lodge, except the Treasurer and the J.D. The business of the evening included an initiation, a passing, and two raisings; but from various causes only one of the candidates was able to attend, viz., Bro. Roper, who was duly raised to the third degree. Bro. Weare, P.M. and Treas. of the lodge, having recently lost his wife, a vote of condolence with him on that mournful event was unanimously passed, and the Sec. was desired to communicate the same to him. A letter was read from the R.W. Prov. G. Master, the Earl Howe, in reference to the announcement made at the recent annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge at Oakham, of his intended retirement, owing to ill-health and advanced years, and expressing his lordship's opinion as to the brother best qualified to be his successor in the P.G. Mastership. The letter was ordered to be entered on the minutes, and the Sec. was instructed to thank his lordship, and to state that the assembled brethren unanimously concurred in his opinion, which they had received with the liveliest satisfaction. A candidate for initiation was then proposed, after which there was a discussion as to the desirability of a Masonic Ball taking place in the town during the ensuing winter, the general opinion being in the affirmative, should the brethren of the John of Gaunt Lodge be willing to co-operate in it. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

LIVERPOOL.—Temple Lodge, No. 1094.—On the 13th inst., this lodge was opened in due form at the Masonic Temple, Liverpool, by Bros. E.M. Sheldon, W.M.; R. H. D. Johnson, P.M., S.W.; Williams, J.W.; Smith, P.M.; D. Wiustanley, S.D.; Dunson, J.D.; Wood, Treas.; Marsh, Sec.; Gilbert, I.G.; Morley and Martin, Stewards. Bros. De Cantillon, Bayley, and H. Struthers were duly passed to the degree of F.C.'s by the W.M., which did that W. Brother great credit, being the first time of his doing the work in this degree. The working tools were given by Bro. R. H. D. Johnson, P.M., and a lecture on the second degree was given by Bro. Hamer, P.G.T. The only business was the installation of the Principals, and Comp. James Brett, P.Z., installed Comps. Bartlett as M.E.Z., and H. G. Lake as H. Comp. E. Clark not being present, Comp. Mann; the M.E.Z. stating that all the Comps. highly approved of his conduct while in the First Principal's chair, and were greatly indebted to him for his energy in establishing the Chapter. Comp. Mann stated that he had not thought the Chapter would have been able to afford a P.Z. Jewel in the first year of its existence, but as its funds had allowed it, it was a proof of the prosperity of the Chapter, and he thanked the Comps. for their kindness to him in voting the Jewel. The Chapter was then closed, and the Comps. adjourned to the Tavern, where Comp. Charles Gosden had provided a sumptuous banquet. The evening was concluded with the customary toasts. There were present during the evening, besides the Comps. before mentioned, Comps. W. Turner, Morton Edwards, G. Henley, H. W. Lindus (742), W. C. Lucey (21), and H. Massey, J. (619).

ORDERS OF CHIVALRY.

RED CROSS OF ROME & CONSTANTINE.

METROPOLITAN.

St. George's Conclave, No. 18.—A preliminary meeting of the founders of this Conclave was held at the Palmerston Arms, Grosvenor Park, Camberwell, on the 13th inst. The chair of Constantine was occupied by Sir Knt. R. W. Little, G.R., and that of Eusebius, by Sir Kt. W. H. Hubbard, G.T. The M.P.S. designate, Sir Knt. H. Thompson; the V.E. J. Thomas, W. H. Wright, E. Shaughnessy, and C. L. Marshall were also present. Seven brethren being in attendance were then admitted into the Order, after which Sir Knts. Thomas and Shaughnessy were advanced to the priestly grade. Sir Knt. Thompson then took the chair and appointed the officers: W. H. Wright as S.G., and G. A. Taylor (P.M. and P.Z.) as J.G. The days of meeting, subscription, and other details were then satisfactorily arranged, and the formal Inauguration of the Conclave was fixed to take place on the second Wednesday in January, 1870. The utmost enthusiasm was manifested by all the members in their resolve to make "St. George's" Conclave a prosperous branch of the Ancient Order of Constantine, the authenticity of whose connection with the Craft in England has been so remarkably demonstrated of late years. It was further resolved to invite Lord Kenlis and Col. Burdett to the Inauguration ceremony, when a guard of honour will be furnished by the 3rd London R.V., to do honour to the occasion. We must not omit to state that Sir Knt. T. Wingham, jun., was appointed Organist, and officiated at the harmonium during the closing of the Conclave. After partaking of biscuits and wine, the Knts. separated.

PROVINCIAL.

LANCASTER.—Red Rose Conclave, No. 12.—A regular meeting of this Conclave was held on Monday evening, the 11th inst., at the Masonic-rooms, Athenæum, under the presidency of the Ill. Sir Knight J. D. Moore, M.P.S., Inspector-General for North Lancashire, who was assisted by the Emt. Sir Knight T. Mason, V.E., and other officers of the Conclave. After the usual business had been transacted, the Conclave was resolved into a Preceptory of Instruction. A candidate for installation was proposed, and certificates from the Grand Council distributed to several of the members. The labour of the evening being ended the Conclave was duly closed.

LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

The monthly meeting of the Lodge of Benevolence was held in the Board-room, Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday evening, the 20th inst., W. Bro. John Savage, P.G.D., presided, and was supported by Bros. J. Mason, P.G.S.B., as S.W.; J. Brett, A.G.P., as J.W.; J. Hervey, G. Sec.; J. Smith, P.G.P.; J. Nunn, G.S.B.; J. Udall, P.G.D.; H. G. Buss, R. Wentworth Little, J. G. Thompson, W. H. Hubbard, C. A. Cottebrune, J. R. Sheen, R. Tanner, G. King, sen., G. King, jun., H. Dicketts, J. Stevens, W. J. Palmer, J. Graydon, S. G. Foxall, H. Potter, R. H. Marsh, T. Tyrrell, C. H. Potter, W. H. Andrew, T. Mortlock, J. Rowland, A. Cameron, M. A. Bontroy, A. Stoner, J. J. West, J. B. A. Wolfert, and W. H. Warr.

No less than twenty-seven cases were investigated, of which twenty-one were relieved to the extent of £287 10s., including a recommendation to Grand Lodge for a grant of £30 in the case of the widow of a well known brother.

The necessity for additional powers being conferred upon the lodge of Benevolence was fully exemplified at this meeting, as a great many cases were recommended to the Grand Master, which ought to come within the scope of the Board. We therefore hope that Bro. Clabon's scheme, for revising the present system will be well supported by the members of Grand Lodge.

Bro. J. G. STEVENS, P.M. (554), will give a reading at the Green Dragon, Stepney, on Tuesday week, the 2nd November, at 7 o'clock, in aid of the funds of the Royal Masonic Institution. We hope that a large number of brethren will attend to support the good cause.

It is a permanent regulation in England, that every candidate shall be examined as to his proficiency in the degree he last took, before he can be advanced.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—Grateful and Comforting.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"The singular success which Mr. Epps attained by his homœopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold by the Trade only, in $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. and 1 lb. tin-lined packets, labelled JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London.—ADVT.

EPILEPSY OR FITS.—A sure cure for this distressing complaint is now made known in a treatise (of 48 octavo pages) on Foreign and Native Herbal Preparations, published by Prof. O. Phelps Brown. The prescription was discovered by him in such a providential manner that he cannot conscientiously refuse to make it known, as it has cured everybody who has used it for Fits, never having failed in a single case. The ingredients may be obtained from any chemist.—Persons desiring a copy may address Prof. O. Phelps Brown, No. 2, King-street, Covent garden, London enclosing stamp. Six copies, three stamps.—ADVT.

PRESENTATION TO BR. CAPT. H. NEWMAN, 1st LANCASHIRE E.V.

Recently the members of the E. Company of the First Lancashire Engineer Volunteers met in the Royal Assembly Rooms, Great George-street, for the purpose of presenting their Captain, Bro. H. Newman, with an illuminated address and sword as a token of their appreciation of that gentleman's efforts in the interests of the corps, and as a mark of the esteem in which he is universally held by its members. The meeting took the form of a soiree and ball, and was got up by the sergeants of the corps. There was a large muster of the men, with their wives and sweethearts, and among the invited guests were the following:—Bro. Major Bousfield, Bros. Lieuts. Blundell and Wallace (1st L.R.V.); Capt. Barry and Bros. Kirby, and Capt. and Adjutant Murdock (1st L.A.V.); Capt. Bathgate (12th L.A.V.); Lieutenant Joynson, Assistant-Surgeon Bro. Johnson, Hon. Bro. Quartermaster Edwards, and Sergeant-Major Donnelly (1st L.E.V.); Capt. Mulvany (47th L.R.V.); Capt. Bro. W. J. Newman and Lieut. Peet (80th L.R.V.); Town Councillor Campbell; Messrs. Rogers, Cope, Forbes, Bro. Dyke, Swainson, Bro. Owens, Crowther, Jenson, Bro. C. P. Ackerley, Macbeth, Bro. Thomson, Bro. Newman, Pearson, Bro. Molyneux, Hargreaves, Baker, Forsyth, Capper, Calvert, Robertson, Crompton, Short, T. Pearson, Mackey, W. Armstrong, T. Armstrong, Falkner, Bro. Smith, and Horsfall.

Colour-Sergeant GEORGE PEALING stepped forward and said the important and pleasing duty devolved upon him of presenting Capt. Newman with a sword, and called upon Sergeant Samuel Fraser to read the address.

Sergeant FRASER then read the address as follows:—

To Captain Henry Newman, E Company, First Lancashire Engineer Volunteers.

Dear Sir,—We the undersigned, on behalf of seventy members of your company, beg your acceptance of the accompanying sword as a mark of their sincere respect for your private character, and a proof of their appreciation of your valuable services to the company while under your command. On parade, or when off duty, you have always manifested the most gentlemanly courtesy towards us and the liveliest interest in our individual welfare. We also think we are especially favoured by your constant attendance at battalion drill, for which we are most grateful, believing as we do that it is the secret of our success as a company, it being a great inducement for members to attend, knowing that they can depend upon at all times meeting their officers there, which, together with other favours, have, under your guidance, imparted new life and vigour to our company and rescued it from the position of being probably the weakest and least efficient, till now we think we can say without egotism it is the strongest both in point of numbers and efficiency in the corps. Sir, in conclusion, we trust that the good feeling now pervading all ranks of the E company may never be disturbed. Wishing yourself and family every happiness, and hoping you may long remain in command with increasing satisfaction to yourself and honour to us, we are, Sir, your obedient servants,

Colour-Serg. GEORGE PEALING, Serg. JOSEPH STAINER, Serg. JOSEPH TAYLOR, Serg. SAMUEL FRASER,
Corpl. SAMUEL NURSE, Sap. JOHN DOWNHIGGIN,
Corpl. EVAN WILLIAMS, Sap. GEORGE RYAN.

Colour-Sergeant PEALING then formally presented Captain Newman with the sword, which bore the following inscription:—

"Presented to Captain Henry Newman, E Company, First Lancashire Engineer Volunteers, by seventy men of the company as a mark of their appreciation of his valuable services in raising E Company to its present state of efficiency, and a grateful testimony of his uniform kindness and generosity during the four years he has been in command."

"Liverpool, October 1st, 1869."

Capt. Newman, who was warmly received, in reply thanked his friends from the bottom of his heart for the mark they had given him of their respect and esteem, and felt gratified that what he had done had merited their approbation. It had always been to him a pleasure to do what he could to advance the interests of the corps, and he had but one object in view, and that was to do his duty, which with the men he had the honour to command was a most pleasing task. (Applause). He thanked them for the kind wishes towards himself and his family, and hoped with his comrades that they might long remain banded together in one common cause for the defence of their beloved Queen and country (Applause). He could assure them that he should as long as he lived prize the very handsome sword with which he had that evening been so kindly presented.

In response to numerous calls, Bro. Major Bousfield addressed the meeting, and expressed the pleasure he felt at seeing Captain Newman presented with such a pleasing testimonial, and said he sincerely trusted the corps might long prosper, and that Captain Newman might be long spared to wear the sword which had just been presented to him.

Dancing was then begun and kept up with unflagging zeal to the spirited strains of the company's band till an early hour in the morning.

[We congratulate our esteemed Bro. Newman on the well-deserved compliment which has been paid him.]—Ed. F.

M.—The only Act of Parliament which relates to Freemasonry is one which was passed on the 12th July, 1799, entitled "An Act for the more Effectual Suppression of Societies established for seditious and treasonable purposes, and for better preventing treasonable and seditious practices," now known as 39, Geo. III. Secs. 5, 6, and 7, chap. 79, of this Act exempt Freemasons from the penalties attaching to other secret societies, provided the names of the members of each lodge be deposited with the Clerk of the Peace for the county or division where the lodge may be held. FREEMASONRY A POWER IN THE UNIVERSE.

It has been said that poets are the unacknowledged legislators of the world, and truly when we reflect upon the lofty ethics of a Milton, and the sterling philosophy that glorifies the pages of a Shakspeare, we are tempted to believe the assertion. "Let me write the songs of a nation, and let who will make its laws," is another parallel saying, uttered by one who could read human nature like an open book, and who recognised in the minstrel's mission the power of a moral Archimedes—a lever, sufficient in its majesty and might to sway the thoughts and actions of a world. In ancient times the bards of Britain and the Scalds of Scandinavia held a defined position in the State, and exercised unquestioned power over the people; and although their modern successors no longer possess class privileges, their influence and importance are admitted by all sound thinkers. It is an undoubted fact that tremendous results have followed the composition of some spirit-stirring song, whose words of flame seem to reflect, as in a mirror, the fiercest passions of the human breast. Again, the art of the poet is exemplified in his mastery of softer themes—in awakening the feelings to pity, sympathy, or love. The true poet works for good—for the happiness of his fellow-men. He delights to picture the beauty of wisdom, and the joy of knowledge. He clothes Virtue in garments of Light and Truth, and strips Vice of its false and fading splendour. He crowns Honour and Fortitude, Justice and Mercy, with the amarauts of praise; he shatters with a strong, relentless hand, the hypocrisies and the shams of life. And this he accomplishes by the force of reason, the strength of thought, and the resistless charm of melody. His music sinks deep into our hearts, and his lofty ideas control the secret emotions of our minds. We are thus unconsciously ruled by an ideal monarch, whose sceptre is none the less potent because unseen.

Now, the influence of Freemasonry, evident as it is—tangible as it is, and acknowledged as it is, to some extent—is yet immeasurably greater than it is popularly supposed to be, even by its friends and adherents. Like the verse of the poet, it has an impalpable power, an immaterial strength, which is seldom taken into consideration. Like the subtle sound of music, it sinks into the heart, and its still small voice presides over our thoughts and deeds. The true Mason can no more shake off its esthetic influence than the needle can resist the magnet's force. It is an ever present power, an infallible guide, because what Freemasonry teaches is the essence of eternal truth. No man can materially err if he practises the sublime precepts of Freemasonry; no man can be a good citizen unless he obeys its behests. The Freemasonry we speak of is the Freemasonry of the heart, not the mere ceremonial observances, however suggestive they may be. And this is what the majority of our brethren have yet to realise; and yet it is the secret of our strength, and the glory of our Fraternity. We can all feel it individually; we can tell that a certain course is opposed to our solemn professions, our sacred vows, as Masons, and if we are real subjects of the spell, we recognise the power of those guiding principles by refraining from evil and striving to do good. This is the magic of our symbolism; it is identified with the mighty range of human action, it is in consonance with the history of the human race.

Freemasonry figuratively takes man in his primitive state—rude, uncultured, savage—and develops in his soul, by successive impressions, the dignity of his nature and the grandeur of his destiny. By a retrospective view, in the crowning degree of the Craft, we behold the whole arcana of philosophy and religion, and dull, indeed, must be the soul which remains uninfluenced by the lesson it reveals.

It is not merely a question of imagination, although we will not ignore the fact that the effect is greater upon plastic and enthusiastic minds; it is an exercise of reason, and the highest faculties of man may be employed in the investigation of its mysteries. No frightful ceremonies to overawe the candidate; no vague oracular utterances are here presented. Truth in her divine simplicity—Truth in her essential unity—is the teacher, and Freemasonry is but her heaven-inspired interpreter. It will thus be seen that we claim for our Order an unseen and immaterial influence, and we appeal to all who have studied its esoteric principles, whether we are not justified in asserting its claims. It is the abuse of this power that we have to fear; it is the misdirection of this current that we have to deplore. Freemasonry, as the visible embodiment of an idea—as the representative of Universal Brotherhood—is made by some false brethren a convenient cloak for conspiracy, and a stepping-stone to bloodshed and revolution. This degradation of her higher mission we strongly resent and will ever oppose. This interpretation of her doctrines we utterly repudiate.

We yield to none in our admiration of freedom, but we abhor anarchy and libicide. We believe in progress, we endorse liberality in sentiment and act, but the humanitarian ideas by which we are actuated will never induce us to assert that Freemasonry is necessarily the pioneer of free-thought, of democracy, or of irreligion. These are subjects not so much considered by English brethren. Geographically isolated as we are from the continent, we are still more so in thought and feeling, but the time is rapidly approaching when an exposition of the true principles of Freemasonry will be sought at our hands; the time is coming when the real power of our Order will be felt, and shall it be said that we were dumb in the presence of the Destroying Angel?

Freemasonry on the Continent is fast becoming a political and anti-religious movement. In the British Islands and in the United States of America it happily still preserves its original character as a glorious allegory of the present eternal life and prospects of man. Supported by our American brethren, we hope to lead the erring sheep into the fold—we hope to dissociate the abiding precepts of Freemasonry from the ephemeral doctrines of a day; and if all comes to the worst, we hope to prove to the world that true Freemasonry still exists, and owns no fellowship with anarchists and atheists; that it is not our mission to pull down the altar of any man's faith, or to shatter the allegiance he owes to himself, his country, and his God. We hope to prove that the strength of Freemasonry is to be found in its power for good; that its might is based upon toleration, brotherly love, relief, and truth; that its ceremonies are the cement of kindly feelings, friendly fellowship, and unchangeable affection; that, in a word, it fulfils the dictates of charity, rivets the bonds of amity, and by cultivating peace and good-will to all mankind may justly claim to be a vital power in the Universe.

We observe with pleasure that the Masonic and General Fire and Life Office, 8, New Bridge-street, has contributed the sum of £16 10s. towards the funds of the Boys' School, this year. We can plainly perceive that as this office progresses from year to year, it will be likely to become a power in the Craft, for it necessarily follows that the subscriptions will be in an increasing ratio, and the voting power will be correspondingly important hereafter. All members who assure in this office, thus indirectly become interested in the Charities—a feature which alone entitles it to the warmest sympathy and support of the Masonic body.

We are informed on good authority that Bro. Albert W. Woods (G. Director of Ceremonies), the Lancaster Herald, has been appointed Garter King of Arms, in succession to the late Sir Charles J. Young. It is usual to confer the honor of Knighthood upon the "Garter King," and we are sure that the Craft at large will hail with pleasure the accession of "Sir" Albert Woods to such a distinguished post.

Multum in Parvo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

In the Critic of October 16th, 1854, p. 555, there is a notice of a volume of selections from the Diary of Sebastian Giustinian, ambassador from the Venetian Republic to the Court of Henry VIII. Can Brother Yarker inform us whether this personage was an ancestor of the Abbe Giustiniani, to whom allusion is made by Robson in his sketch of the Order of Constantine (History of Knighthood)? ENQUIRER.

I cannot see the drift of those who pretend to under-rate the antiquity of Freemasonry, or to under-value the traditions it preserves. Among the ancients a dim, undefined respect for the Hebrew worship of one God prevailed to a very great extent; witness the reverence shown by Alexander the Great to Jaddua, or Jaddua, the high priest, when the latter came forth from Jerusalem, dressed in his pontifical robes, to meet the renowned conqueror. It is to me a strong internal evidence of the antiquity of our ceremonies when we find them based upon the historical records of the Jews—a race, as I have stated, better appreciated of old than during the middle ages or any subsequent era. It is assuming an impossibility to allege that the ceremonies and traditions of the Craft could have been invented by men who despised the source from whence they professed to derive them, and contempt was the feeling of Christendom towards the Jews until a comparatively recent period. I am perfectly willing to admit that Freemasonry has undergone many modifications and many organic changes in its system and government, but the idea of an universal bond of brotherhood can be traced in the various ages of the world's history, developed, as doubtless it has been, under different names, and assuming various phases; and this grand idea is the germ of modern Freemasonry.

THE SON OF SALATHIEL.

Pope Pius the Ninth's tirade against Freemasonry is but one of a series issued by the dignitaries of Rome. I remember, when stationed at Malta in 1843, that the Archbishop of Rhodes, Monsignor Caruana, who was also Bishop of Malta, issued a pastoral in which he strongly denounced the Order. Among the choice expressions he used were "the diabolical creation of this lodge," "that pestilential centre of iniquity," "common sewer of all filth," "monsters of iniquity," &c. He also referred to the anathemas of Popes Clement XII., Benedict XII., Pius VII., Leo IV. and Gregory XVI., and excommunicated all who even accorded "common salutations" to the Freemasons, much less hospitality. The funny part of the story is, that at the very time the prelate was cursing the Freemasons, he was a frequent guest at the table of an English officer of rank who belonged to the proscribed Order, and who was a constant attendant at the "infernal tribunal," as the Bishop called the lodge in Senglea. I believe the brethren made some stir about it at the time, but as I left Malta with my regiment soon afterwards, the finale is not known to me, unless we may take the present prosperous condition of Masonry in the island as a sufficient refutation of the Archbishop's calumnies. On the other hand, I have met two or three jolly priests at Masonic banquets, who were thorough gentlemen and good Masons. One more especially, Father Peter Macnamara, who lived not a thousand miles from Ennis, in the county Clare, was a diamond of the first water.

"ANCIENT MASONRY AND TEMPLAR JOTTINGS."

I have read Brother Yarker's remarks at page 177, but his special pleading won't do. We want real evidence, not useless "it is said's," or "I have heard," &c. Point to the substance, and never mind the imaginary shadow. Then, Bro. Reitam's remarks, as quoted by Bro. Yarker, are worth nothing. The plans of Roslyn Chapel did not come "from Rome," the style of the building is Spanish, and the pretended "gash on the apprentice's forehead" is simply a streak o red chalk drawn across a sculptured head by some wag. So much for that silly would-be legend. If, instead of talking nonsense, our brethren who have the opportunity would examine and publish the records of the Mason societies, or corporations, before the middle of last century, it would be doing real service. And if the old records of other trades or crafts were published, we should thereby know their customs, and what peculiarly small differences existed amongst the old co-existing crafts. LEO.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

A Quarterly General Court of the Subscribers and Governors of this Institution was held on Monday last, in the Board-room, of Freemasons' Hall. The chair was taken at twelve o'clock, by Bro. JOHN HERVEY, G.S., V.P. There were also present:—Bros. Raynham W. Stewart, P.G.W. for Essex; H. Browse, P.G.J.D.; W. Young, P.G.S.B.; Benj. Head, Samuel May, W. Watson, Geo. M. E. Snow, Prov. G.W. for Kent; John Symonds, P.G.D.; J. Finch, W. Bramwell Smith, Major R. R. Nelson, F. Gotto, E. H. Patten, P.G.S.B.; F. Webb, John Udall, P.G.D.; J. R. Sheen, H. Massey, Thos. W. White, James Stevens, Brackstone Baker, F. Binckes (Sec.), Henry Smith, Richard Spencer, Edward Cox, Edward Harris, Charles Swan, F. Walters, A. Pratt, F. M. Haigh and W. H. Warr.

Bro. BINCKES (Secretary) read the minutes of the Quarterly Court of July, and of the different committees which had met since. The minutes which required confirmation were confirmed, and Bro. JOHN UDALL brought forward the motion of which he had given notice, "That the right to a perpetual presentation of a properly qualified boy for admission to this Institution may be purchased on payment of a thousand guineas, no votes being exercised in virtue of such payment." In introducing the motion, Bro. Udall said that he had satisfied himself that the interest of the money would pay the expense of maintaining, educating, and clothing one boy in the Institution, and he hoped that if the Court passed the resolution, some friend would come forward and pay the the money down.

The CHAIRMAN enquired whether the correspondence which had taken place between the solicitors of the school and the solicitors of Bro. Blair, as to the deed which was to be executed, coming under the Charitable Trusts Act, had cleared away all doubt on the point.

Bro. BINCKES replied that it had, and that the deed was in course of preparation, and would shortly be ready for execution.

Bro. UDALL said that a rule, similar to that contained in his proposition, was in force in the Royal Asylum of St. Anne's Society.

Bro. BENJ. HEAD seconded the motion.

Bro. JOHN SYMONDS gave his support to the proposal, but he wished to mention that it was a pity Bro. Udall had not given notice of a similar motion for the Quarterly Court of the Girls' School. Committees of both Institutions had recently been at great pains to assimilate the laws of the two schools, and this motion would make them different. He suggested that another meeting should be got together to place this rule if carried, among those of the Girls' School.

The motion was put and carried immediately.

The election of six boys out of an approved list of fifty-four was proceeded with, and the scrutineers named to examine the votes, were: Bros. Raynham W. Stewart, F. Walters, E. M. Haigh, J. Robins, W. H. Warr, F. Webb, John Udall, H. Empson, James Stevens, R. R. Nelson, Alfred Pratt, and H. Browse. When the poll was declared, at five o'clock, the following boys were found to be the successful candidates:—

Lane, Charles	1366
Birks, Maurice	1341
Bush, Henry Charles	1334
Whiteley, Alfred Baydon	1284
Newman, Herbert Horace	1253
Beaumont, William	1052

Bro. W. WINN, 657, in proposing a vote of thanks to the scrutineers said that their labours had been of no ordinary character, because the votes recorded for as many as fifty-four candidates had to be examined. He had himself at times been a scrutineer, and knew practically what the labour was.

Bro. H. GARROD seconded the motion, which was then put to the meeting, and carried unanimously.

Bro. H. EMPSON would not at that late hour, (a quarter past five), detain the Court with any lengthened observations, but in responding to the vote he could honestly say that the scrutineers' work was to him, and the brethren associated with him, a labour of love. They went into the scrutineers' room, and worked hard all the time they were there. He knew the brethren were satisfied with the scrutineers' efforts, for he had heard only one slight murmur, if murmur it might be called, where a brother, when the candidate had polled 1366 votes, said he had polled fourteen more. (Laughter.)

Bro. JOHN SYMONDS moved a vote of thanks to Bro. JOHN HERVEY, G.S., the chairman, in acknowledgment of his fraternal attention to the business of the day, a motion which he was sure expressed the feelings of every one present.

Bro. HENRY SMITH seconded the motion, which was put and carried.

Bro. JOHN HERVEY: It affords me great satisfaction if at any time I can be of service to the Craft, and I am glad that my performance of my very light duties to-day has given you satisfaction. (Laughter.)

The Court was then dissolved.

Obituary.

BRO. THOMAS JONES, Q.C.

We regret having to announce the death of Bro. Thomas Jones, Q.C., Past Grand Deacon of the Grand Lodge of England, a gentleman who was held in high estimation by a large circle of friends. Bro. Jones was initiated on the 20th June, 1845, in the Prince of Wales Lodge, No. 259, in which he served the office of Master, and continued a member to the time of his decease. He was appointed Senior Grand Deacon in April 1856, and on the 14th June following joined the Royal Alpha Lodge, No. 16, the membership of which is restricted to Grand Officers. Bro. Jones was exalted in the Prince of Wales Chapter on the 2nd June, 1854.

ORDER OF MEMPHIS.

The following is a copy of the circular issued by Grand Lodge, ten years ago, with reference to the Order of Memphis:—

"Freemasons' Hall, London, 24th October, 1859.

"Dear Sir and W. Master,—I am directed to inform you that it has come to the knowledge of the Board of General Purposes that there are at present existing in London and elsewhere in this country, spurious lodges claiming to be Freemasons.

I herewith furnish you with a copy of a certificate issued by a lodge calling itself 'The Reformed Masonic Order of Memphis, or Rite of the Grand Lodge of Philadelphia,' and holding its meetings at Stratford, in Essex.

"I am directed to caution you to be especially careful that no member of such body be permitted, under any circumstances, to have access to your lodge; and that you will remind the brethren of your lodge that they can hold no communication with irregular lodges, without incurring the penalty of expulsion from the Order, and the liability to be proceeded against under the Act 39, George III., for taking part in the meetings of illegal secret societies.

"I am further to request that you will cause this letter to be read in open lodge, and the copy of the certificate to be preserved for future reference in case of necessity.

"I remain, dear Sir and Brother,
Yours fraternally,
WM. GRAY CLARKE, G.S.

"N.B.—It is to be observed that the original certificate contains various emblematical devices which it has not been deemed necessary to have copied."

CIPES AND A "TEMPERANCE SOCIETY."

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR AND BROTHER,—I have been much surprised to peruse a letter from "Cipes" in THE FREEMASON (page 172), reflecting on a Temperance organization which has been in existence for some years in the United States, and is a most extensive and useful society. I am not a member of the Order myself, but wish to be, and have not only been a Mason for a long period, but I have been a Total Abstainer from all intoxicating liquors from birth. I therefore protest against the Order of "Good Templars" being dragged into the pages of THE FREEMASON, especially when we cannot discuss its merits in a Masonic Magazine, as its columns are devoted almost exclusively to the Craft. "Cipes" states that this society of "Good Templars" is clearly contrary to the law of the land, and is founded in "evident contravention of the law against secret societies." This I emphatically deny. The Act of Parliament passed on the 12th July, 1799, was made law "for the more effectual suppression of societies established for seditious and treasonable purposes;" and nothing is contained in this Act that would prevent any society having certain "secrets" for legitimate purposes, only not taking oaths from its members to keep them inviolate—e.g., the "Odd Fellows," "Foresters," and "Druids" have their secrets, and so have the "Rechabites" (of which I have the honour to be a Past Chief Ruler), and these societies have been held in England for many years, and moreover have proved most useful to many, who would otherwise have become a burden to themselves and the "parish." I cannot for the life of me see what the Order of Knights Templar have to do with this Temperance Society. Probably if a few of the former I know were to join the latter it would be for their benefit and would tend to improve the Order in public estimation, but, otherwise, I really cannot see what, as Knights Templar, have to do with Good Templars.

Yours fraternally,
RES NON VERBA.

A QUERY.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR BROTHER EDITOR,—Is it permitted to indicate to what the author of "Papers on Masonry" in your excellent journal alludes, when he mentions the claims another Order have upon him? Which Order, he says, "never proselytizes"—is "unsectarian and universal"—"loves to preserve the Religion of the Heart, and scorns to bind itself to the creeds of the hour," and possesses the glorious traditions he enunciates.

Surely, if an Order like this, having such high, noble, holy aims, do not proselytize, it will admit an aspirant who longs above all things to meet with what is here pointed out, believing such to be the "summum bonum" here on earth?

Though the name of the writer is hidden, can it not be made plain, and some further insight into the excelling mystery he dimly shadows be obtained?

Yours faithfully and fraternally,
ROYAL ARCH.

THE MASONIC LIFEBOAT FUND.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Having observed in a recent impression a letter, signed "C. H. L.," respecting the above Fund, I can assure him, from information received, that the Fund approaches £150, some part of which would not have been called in, but a good round sum having been received and no prospect of it increasing, while it remains in the same hands, at least I take at a fair estimate that if it does not move faster than at present it will take twenty more years to subscribe enough to purchase a Lifeboat with its appliances. Why then, Mr. Editor, should not the money be returned to the donors, or a statement published, the total amount paid over to the Lifeboat Institution, or otherwise, as the subscribers may wish? Your correspondent may well say "there are ugly rumours abroad;" I agree with him, and fear there will be great difficulty to come to terms at all.

R.

CENTENARY SERMON.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The sermon delivered by Bro. the Rev. Charles Lee, M.A., to the St. John's Lodge, No. 167, on the occasion of its Centenary, appears at page 183 of your columns. I perused it there, and as for its historical statements, they are rather wide, I am afraid. He talks of "the celebrated Grand Lodge at York," which he says "was established by Royal Charter in 926, the very original of that Charter remains, I believe, to the present day." Bro. Buchan, of Glasgow, is very desirous to see this pretended "Charter," and if Bro. Lee can get it, and give him a loan of it for a short time, no doubt but we might get something definite out of it. However, I would respectfully suggest to my Rev. Brother, that before he publishes any more Masonic sermons, to examine into the real history of the Craft a little better than he evidently has done. He might thereby have his future remarks appreciated as much as his present ones are deprecated.

I am, yours fraternally,
LEO.

MASONIC BANQUETS.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have observed at some of the banquets an absence of system in regard to the seating of guests at these festivals, and in the hope that some plan may be devised whereby to improve on this state of things, I am induced to trouble you with a few remarks, including a suggestion thereon. It is generally requested that brethren who intend putting in an appearance at these convivial meetings, will give timely intimation to the Stewards or caterers, but the request is but seldom regarded; indeed, it is often the case that brethren do not apply for tickets until the eleventh hour, and frequently then procure places at the table to the exclusion of others who purchased their's a day or two previously. To prevent the dissatisfaction and confusion that is thus occasioned, I would suggest the adoption of a similar plan to that which applies to reserved seats at concerts and like places of entertainment; namely, the tickets to bear distinctive copy numbers on the seats which they are respectively entitled to occupy. Thus, the card numbered 1, will justify the holder of it to occupy the chair which bears the same number. I may remark, that for want of such a system as this, I have not been able to take my place at a banquet, to attend which and the lodge I had travelled more than 60 miles.

Yours, fraternally,
A P.M.

MASONIC VERSION OF THE NATIONAL ANTHEM.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR,—I trust the accompanying version of "God Save the Queen," which has always been most cordially received by all the brethren who have had the good fortune to hear it sung as I have, and especially by those who have heard it in the metropolis of "Erin's Green Isle," will be allowed a space in your valuable periodical. It is by Bro. J. Fowler, late D.G. Sec. for Ireland.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Yours very fraternally,
FRAS. BURDETT, P.G.S.W.,
Rep. of G.L. Ireland at G.L. England.

God save our gracious Queen!
Long live our noble Queen!
God save the Queen!
Send her victorious,
Happy and glorious,
Long to reign over us
God save the Queen!
Hail! mystic light divine,
Mayst thou ne'er cease to shine
Over this land.
Wisdom in thee we find,
Beauty and strength combined;
Masons are ever joined,
In heart and hand.

Come then, ye sons of Light!
In joyous strains unite,
God save the Queen.
Long may Victoria reign,
Queen of the azure main;
Masons! resound the strain,
God save the Queen.

INELIGIBILITY OF BASTARDS AS FREEMASONS.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER.—Having already pointed out the landmarks, laws, and ancient charges preventing the bastard from being admitted as a Freemason, or continuing to act as such even after he has been initiated, I require to say nothing more in regard to it; and have to advise Bro. "Leo," previous to his saying anything further on the subject, to first study the laws of incest in regard to the law of God, of the land in which he lives, and also in regard to Freemasonry. To look around him within twelve miles of his own home, how bastards escape justice in regard to crimes too horrid to mention, and if they were admitted as members of the Order, or tolerated to continue to act as such, they could perpetuate monstrosities, which even the savage condemns, and escape punishment either by the present laws of Freemasonry, or of the laws of Great Britain. I repeat again, study the laws of incest, then, if you are prepared to say members of the ancient and honourable Order of Freemasons, should be of such as can commit incest and receive (or rather are out of the pale of reach) no punishment, "Leo" places himself in antagonism to the whole Christian world, and to the highest interests of society.

I must retort one charge Bro. "Leo" sets forth in his letter, "that a better acquaintance with the real history of our Order, &c., might have prevented him from writing as he has done." I think a better knowledge of the Order would prevent him writing as he does, and saying impurity should enter the threshold of a Freemasons' lodge.

With every fraternal feeling for Bro. "Leo," whom I respect in many things, and being truly sorry he has in this question mistaken ideas,

I am, yours faithfully and fraternally,
CIPES.

[We must now close the discussion upon this subject.]—ED. F.

THE ANTIQUITY OF FREEMASONRY.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Your correspondent Bro. "Leo's" not admitting Freemasonry (in which we have been initiated) to be of Jewish origin, is a statement which all Masons acquainted with Freemasonry and its lectures can see denies the very foundation on which Freemasonry stands. I need not therefore, trouble your readers with any of my remarks about it.

But as to Bro. Leo's pretence to know so much about the Jewish History, and his statement that "the Jews were not a nation of builders," before I proceed to make any remark upon the subject, and as Bro. "Leo" promises us that he will at a future time give us a reply to the argument with Bro. "Cipes," allow me to quote to him a beautiful Latin saying; it might be very good advice to him.

"Si sapiens fore vis, sex serva quae tibi mando, Quid dicus, et ubi, de quo, cui, quomodo, quando."

(Translation.)

If thou art willing to be wise,
These six precepts don't despise;
Both what thou speak'st, and how, take care,
Of, and to whom, and when, and where.

Now to prove to Bro. "Leo" that the Jews were a nation of builders, I beg to call his attention to passages in the Book which every Mason is acquainted with.

In the 1st book of Kings, the 7th chapter, 13 and 14 verses: "Hiram, out of Tyre, the widow's son, of the tribe of Naphthali"; a very clever builder, and a descendant of Israel.

Again in the history of Moses building the Tabernacle, we find a man similar to Hiram in the 31st chapter of Exodus: "Bezaleel, of the tribe of Judah, a descendant of Israel.

I should be a great trespasser on your valuable paper, if I were to keep on quoting passages from the Bible on the subject, but let Bro. "Leo" read that Book; and he will find he is mistaken.

All the great men connected with the Jewish history we find were builders: "Cain builded a city called Enoch;" Noah builded an ark, and then an altar; Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob builded altars.

So, we see, that from the beginning of the Jewish history up to the time of Ezra, and no doubt until the time of the destruction of the second temple, there were men amongst them like "Bezaleel," "Hiram," and "Ezra."

After the destruction of the Temple, the Jews were driven from one country to another and mingled amongst the nations. Spread thus over the world to find an abiding place, the Jews did not, and could not, carry on a trade like building.

I must leave the subject for your readers to judge if Bro. "Leo" is acquainted with the history of the Jews, when he says "the Jews were not a nation of builders."

I am, yours fraternally,
D. STOLZ.

THE ARCANA OF FREEMASONRY.

By CIPRA.

The origin of Freemasonry is involved in the obscurity of great antiquity, an obscurity probably in great part also owing to the gradual growth and development of the system. We may safely hold that Freemasonry was not the invention of any one who introduced it as a complete system at once; it evidently appears to derive its present perfection from the growth of ages, and the contributions of many minds, the most intelligent, the noblest, purest, and most refined of their different ages and countries. That Freemasonry dates from the erection of the Temple of Solomon is a fact admitted and acknowledged amongst Freemasons, and in a certain sense this is true; the system probably received a fuller development then, than it ever had before, but it must have existed before that time, or the Temple of Solomon could not have been built. And what shall we say of the erection of the pyramids, and of the many other great buildings of antiquity? These buildings could not have been erected without a knowledge of many things not then commonly known in the world, not published in books, or taught in universities and schools as now; laws of mathematics and of mechanics which must have been carefully preserved and studied amongst the initiated, the members of a particular craft. The study of these laws demanded a high culture for the human mind, and is it not wonderful, therefore, that amongst members of the Masonic Craft were always many of the most scientific, the most accomplished, and the most excellent men of their time; nor is it wonderful that what is called Speculative Freemasonry, aiming at all that is high, pure, and good, grew up in connection with practical Masonry. For, except in the astronomical studies of the Chaldeans and others, which were often abused to purposes of superstition, there was nothing in the early ages of the world so noble and elevating as the art of architecture; nothing which necessarily involved so much of science, and required so much application of the intellectual faculties. That the moral powers should be cultivated along with the intellectual, may almost be deemed a thing of natural consequence; and it is the glory of Freemasonry, that they have been always cultivated together where its influence has prevailed. Freemasonry requires the devout acknowledgment of God as the Creator and Ruler of the Universe; it requires also truth and honesty, with the utmost benevolence towards men. The Freemason may be a Christian, or may be of another religion. A belief in God and in a judgment to come, is, however, necessary for admission into the Order. If a Freemason professes Christianity, as is usual in Christian countries, he is expected to live as a good Christian. Anything contrary to his Christian profession is inconsistent with his Masonic obligations, and, indeed, Freemasonry as it exists in Christian countries, may be said to be founded on Christianity. It derives its highest sanction from the truths and principles of the Christian religion.

We may here quote a passage from Ashe's Masonic Manual, which is interesting in relation to this subject: "That the society of free and accepted Masons possess a grand secret among themselves is an undoubted fact. What this grand secret is, or of what unknown materials it consists, mankind in general, not dignified with the Order, have made the most ridiculous suppositions. The ignorant form incoherencies, such as conferring with the devil, and many other contemptible surmises, too tedious to mention, and too dull to laugh at; while the better sort, and more polished part of mankind puzzle themselves with reflections more refined, though equally absurd. To dispel the opinionative mist from the eye of general error is the author's intention, and however rash the step may be thought, that he, a mere atom in the grand system, should attempt so difficult, so nice a task, yet he flatters himself that he shall not only get clear over it, but meet with the united plaudits both of the public and his brethren. And he must beg leave to whisper to the ignorant as well as to the judicious who thus unwarrantably give their judgment, that the truth of this grand secret is as delicately nice as the elements of air; though the phenomenon continually surrounds us, yet human sensation can never feelingly touch it, till constituted to the impression by the Masonic art. The principal, similar to the art of light, universally warms and enlightens the principles, the fact of which virtue, like the moon, is heavenly chaste, attended by ten thousand star-bright qualifications. The Masonic system is perfectly the emblem of the astronomic; it springs from the same God, partakes of the same originality, still flourishes in immortal youth, and but with nature will expire."

The term Freemasons may be explained as signifying the "Catholic community of free minds throughout the world," the very term Freemason bears this universality of moral and spiritual comprehension, and implies all that is generous and liberal. Love, benevolence towards men, founded upon piety and love to God, is one of the first principles of Freemasonry. Preston, a standard authority on Freemasonry, thus expresses himself on this subject:

"Besides all the pleasing prospects which everywhere surround us, and with which our senses are at every moment gratified; besides the symmetry, good order and proportion, which appear in all the works of creation, something further attracts the reflecting mind and draws its attention nearer to the Divinity. It is the universal harmony and affection that prevail among the different species of beings of every rank and denomination. When we extend our ideas we shall find that the innate principle of friendship increases in proportion to the exercise of our intellectual faculties; and the only criterion by which a judgment can be formed respecting the superiority of one part of the animal creation above another, is by observing the degrees of kindness and good nature in which it excels." "Masonry," says a distinguished brother, "both in its moral and secular departments, awakens all the noblest faculties of the soul, pointing out its high origin and destination, holding up universal happiness as the crown of the race set before us, and giving those faculties their full force and operation in cultivating the means of winning and wearing that crown. It not only points out the way to immortality, but furnishes the mind with the viands of refreshment on the way that leads us to the victory. In fine, Masonry tends to restore man to that semblance he in Eden fell from, and his complete dominion over all beneath the sun. Nor need we wonder at its being the glory of ancient and modern times, the only human institution that ever survived the shocks of ignorance and opposition, when we reflect that it is founded on the firm basis of reverence and love to the Supreme, loyalty to the powers that He hath set in authority over us, and good will to the whole human race."

Freemasonry probably derives its origin from the Alibenum, or sons of God, mentioned in the book of Genesis. The name Alibenum is derived from the Hebrew name of God, and from the word ken, which signifies both a son and a building. In Greece, the initiated called themselves Theopanphileis, from Theos, God; Pan, all; and Phileo, to love; as those who believed in the universal exhibition of the divinity in characters of love. They also called themselves Mesouranists, from mesos, middle; and ouranos, heaven; as those who considered God's throne as the centre of all being, as the sun is the centre and source of all light. Their science was denominated Lux, light or splendour, for they continually meditated on that light which enlightens the whole world. From these Mesouranists, the Freemasons first derived their name.

The Christian Freemason finds his highest model, and exemplar of all that is excellent in humanity, in the Divine Saviour himself. The Freemason who is not a Christian, cannot refuse to recognize the moral excellence of the character presented to his view, and thus far all Freemasons must agree in seeking to imitate it. "Our Eternal Redeemer's human character," says a brother in his writings more than thirty years ago, "which lends to revelation such vital and inspiring efficacy, was admirably well adapted for such a universal model. It embraced in its might and indefinable circumference, all those divinest and grandest elements of our nature, in which every heart participates and equally sympathizes; it was placed in such a diversified variety of trying and hazardous positions, that all men find the essence of their own circumstances analogous to His; and His discourses have that profound and general, yet searching and individual interest, which so well became the celestial teacher of the human race." We may well conclude with a quotation from Channing, "How is the character of Christ to be explained on the principles of human nature? We are immediately struck with this peculiarity in the author of Christianity, that while all other men are formed in a measure by the spirit of their age, we can discover in Jesus no impression of the period in which He lived. We know with considerable accuracy, the state of society, the modes of thinking, the hopes and expectations of the country in which Jesus was born and grew up; and he is as free from them, and as exalted above them, as if he had lived in another world, with every sense shut on the objects around him. His character has in it nothing local or temporary; it can be explained by no argument of human experience. His history shows him to us as a solitary being, living for purposes which none but himself comprehends, and enjoying not so much as the sympathy of a single mind."

So is Freemasonry; it is not local, but universal.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Indigestion, Stomach and Liver Complaints.—Persons suffering from any disorder of the liver, stomach or the organs of digestion, should have recourse to Holloway's Pills, as there is no medicine known that acts on these particular complaints with such certain success. Its peculiar properties strengthen the stomach, increase the appetite, and rouse the sluggish liver. For bowel complaints it is invaluable, as it removes every primary derangement, thereby restoring the patient to the soundest health and strength. These preparations may be used at all times and in all climates by persons affected with biliousness, nausea, or disordered liver, for flatulency, and heartburn, they are specifics. Indeed, no ailment of the digestive organs can long resist their purifying and corrective powers.

INELIGIBILITY OF BASTARDS AND THE MAIMED AS FREEMASONS.

By BRO. D. MURRAY LYON,

A.M., Masonic University of Kentucky, U.S.; Hon. Corresponding Member of the Union of German Freemasons, and of the Rosicrucian Society of England; one of the Grand Stewards in the Grand Lodge of Scotland; P.G.S.W. Ayrshire; Hon. Fellow of the London Literary Union; author of the "History of Mother Kilwinning," etc., etc.

Of all that has appeared in these pages relative to our article in THE FREEMASON of August 21, in defence of the illegibility of illegitimates as Masons, not a word has been advanced that can in any degree be said to disprove our statement, that no principle of Freemasonry, as recognised in Scotland, is violated by the admission of good men, the offspring of illicit intercourse. In the name of Scotchmen and Scotch Masons, therefore, we reiterate our repudiation of the dogma of the "ineligibility of bastards as Freemasons" as in any respect applicable to Lodges working under the Grand Lodge of Scotland. Bro. A. O. Haye is the only Scotch Masonic writer of any note who advocates the exclusion of illegitimates, and he has done so in his papers on "Scottish Masonic Jurisprudence," written in 1865 for the "Scottish Freemasons' Magazine," of which periodical he was then editor. Under "Freeborn" he remarks, "Slavery having ceased, the question refers only to purity of birth, as the gates of the Lodge close against the admissions of bastards." The author having done us the honour of sending for our perusal the MS. of the papers in question, with a request that we should favour him with our opinion of their soundness as exponents of Scotch Masonic law, we, in returning the copy, took exception to his construction of the phrase "free-born," and to his views on the ineligibility of bastards, as not being in accordance with the hitherto unchallenged usage of the Scottish Craft. Notwithstanding this, and the remonstrances of other brethren, he adhered to his opinion, insisting that for Masonry to receive a bastard into her ranks would be to "homologate a crime in practice which she condemns in theory"—a remark which might have some point if advanced in support of the exclusion of the fathers of bastards; but in the sense in which it is used appears to us to be meaningless. His unsoundness on this point, however, did not affect his correct rendering of other and more important passages in the Constitutions of Masonry, or his courtesy to those of the brethren who chanced to entertain opinions upon Masonic subjects different from his own.

In order to show that the Grand Lodge of Scotland is not singular in its rejection of the law that would exclude illegitimates from Freemasonry, we shall present a few extracts from the recently-published Cyclopedia of Freemasonry by our esteemed friend and distinguished brother, Robert Macoy, of New York—a work, which will take its place as a standard one, and will go down to succeeding generations as a memorial of the author's learned research and herculean labours in the dissemination of Masonic knowledge:—

"Of the nature of the landmarks of Masonry," says Brother Macoy, at page 178 of the Cyclopedia, "there has been some diversity of opinion; yet the conviction has become settled that the true principles constituting landmarks are those universal customs of the Order which have gradually grown into permanent rules of action, and originally established by competent authority, at a period so remote that no account of their origin is to be found in the records of Masonic history, and which were considered essential to the preservation and integrity of the institution, to preserve its purity and prevent innovation. Dr. Albert G. Mackey, who has devoted much study and attention to the subject, enumerates the following as the unchangeable Landmarks of Masonry: ' . . . Certain qualifications of candidates for initiation are derived from a landmark of the Order. These qualifications are that he shall be a man—shall be unmutilated, free-born, and of mature age. That is to say, a woman, a cripple, or a slave, or one born in slavery, is disqualified for initiation into the rites of Masonry.' . . . John W. Simons, in his excellent and popular work on the 'Principles and Practice of Masonic Jurisprudence,' offers the following to be the Landmarks of Masonry, in the proper sense of the term: ' . . . That new-made Masons must be free-born, of lawful age, and hale and sound at the time of making.' . . . The Constitution of the Grand Lodge of New York sets forth in a concise and masterly manner, the following as the Landmarks of the Order: ' . . . That men made Masons must be at least 21 years of age, free-born, of good report, hale and sound, not deformed or dismembered, and no woman, no eunuch.' . . . Bro. Luke A. Lockwood, in his work entitled 'Masonic Law and Practice,' gives the following as the Landmarks: ' . . . That every candidate must be a man, of lawful age, born of free parents, under no restraint of liberty, and hale and sound, as a man ought to be.'"

At page 266 of the same work, Bro. Macoy gives a lucid summary of the moral, physical, intellectual, and political qualifications which are indispensable in a candidate for initiation into the mysteries of Freemasonry. The being "born in wedlock" is not one of these requisites. Indeed, were this condition insisted upon, it would, in Scotland, exclude men who, although born out of wedlock, are yet legitimate in the eyes of the law.

The eccentricity of Masonic legislation on the subject of disqualifications is exemplified in the Grand Lodge of Ireland's Constitutions of 1768, where occurs the following passage: ". . . No Lodge shall hereafter enter a person among them, who shall then be an officer of mace, sheriff's officer, bailiff, constable, livery-servant, or any person of such like occupation."

Certain words which are reported to have been uttered by the late Bro. Dr. Oliver "in conversation about six years ago," have been quoted in support of the Masonic anathema against illegitimates. We feel disposed to place less reliance upon what Dr. Oliver is alleged to have said than upon what he has written regarding the relation of bastards to Freemasonry. Treating of the "disqualification of illegitimacy," at page 98 of "The Freemasons' Treasury," published in 1863, the Dr. remarks, "This invidious stigma would now be considered a disgrace to any society of Christians, because the child cannot be morally responsible for a sin committed by its parents before its birth; and it was an old-established belief that such children 'will be witnesses of wickedness against their parents.' The system of Freemasonry, however, now contains no such disqualifying ingredient, and therefore the landmark has become obsolete."

The immutability of what are called "the Ancient Charges" is one of the exploded Masonic theories of the past to which many worthy brethren still fondly cling. Another quotation from Dr. Oliver's "Treasury" may help them to a common-sense view of the subject: "The truth is, that how pleasing soever the doctrine of irremovable landmarks may sound in theory, it is not borne out by practice; nor can it be, amidst the ever-varying changes in manners and customs, and improvements in science and arts; for Freemasonry, to hold its own, must keep pace with the progress of other institutions,—and this can scarcely be accomplished without the occasional pruning of antiquated observances to meet the requirements of an altered state of society."

PHYSICAL DISQUALIFICATIONS.

The admission of the maimed, though still regarded with suspicion by a small section of the Craft, has become wide-spread among Lodges under the Scottish Constitution. The Grand Lodge of Scotland itself very properly gives effect to this custom, by freely admitting to its courts every regular-appointed delegate, irrespective of physical qualification; hence on its roll of members are to be found the names of brethren who are crippled in their limbs, but whose misfortune in this respect has not prevented their becoming efficient Freemasons.

If those who regard the initiation of the maimed as a thing of recent occurrence will consult Bro. Dr. Morris's comprehensive "History of Masonry in Kentucky," they will find that the subject of physical disqualifications engrossed the attention of the Grand Lodge of Virginia seventy years ago, and with a result at variance with the dogma that debars the mutilated from becoming Freemasons:—

"Dec. 1798. It was settled, in opposition to the Constitution then governing the Masons of Virginia, that the old requisition 'every brother desiring admission must be upright in body, not deformed or dismembered at the time of making, but of hale and entire limbs as a man ought to be,' was not obligatory, as 'the literal observance of the said requisition, were it constantly and rigidly enforced, might operate to the exclusion of many persons otherwise qualified to become useful and ornamental members of the Society.' A rule was thereupon established that corporeal deformity was not a sufficient reason for rejection, unless he was thereby rendered incapable of pursuing his worldly avocations, or procuring a livelihood."

At its third grand communication, held in 1801, the Grand Lodge of Kentucky passed a resolution, authorizing the initiation of a candidate who had lost his right arm, on the ground "that the deformity of the candidate is not such as to prevent him from being instructed in the arts and mysteries of Freemasonry, and that his being initiated will not be an infringement upon the Landmarks, but will be perfectly consistent with the spirit of the Institution."

But we do not need to cite the custom of transatlantic lodges in support of the practice of the Grand Lodge in Scotland in homologating the initiation of men possessed of bodily defects. Bro. Oliver, the greatest English Masonic authority, is most explicit on the point:—

"Exclusion now hinges (says the Dr. at page 102 of his 'Treasury') solely on the conditions of mature age, sound judgment, and strict morality. . . . The English Book of Constitutions contains no specific law by which a candidate can be excluded by reason of any bodily defect, because in the present state of the society this ancient prohibition would be embarrassing; and therefore it has been ignored in accordance with the practice of other societies where the observance has become burdensome, useless, or inconvenient. We therefore, do not find fault with this improvement in our regulations, and only adduce it as a pregnant instance in proof of the fact that some ancient landmarks have been occasionally laid aside by the irresistible fiat of a vote in Grand Lodge, to meet the altered circumstances of the times, and in accordance with the liberal principles which increasing intelligence has pointed out as wholesome departure from restrictions which our ancient brethren considered necessary to preserve the healthy operation of the society. . . .

Mental requirements are now alone necessary to constitute a title to admission into speculative Masonry. It would indeed be a solecism in terms to contend that a loss or partial deprivation of a physical organ of the body could, by any possibility, disqualify a man from studying the sciences, or being made a Mason in our own times, while in possession of sound judgment, and the healthy exercise of his intellectual powers."

ST. ANDREW, THE PATRON SAINT OF SCOTLAND. BY CIPES.

Some further particulars concerning this part of our subject, as narrated by ancient Scottish chroniclers, may be interesting, especially to Scottish readers. Regulus was a Greek monk, living at Patræ, the city of Achaia where St. Andrew suffered martyrdom, and by him the relics of the martyred apostle were guarded. About the year A.D. 307, he was warned by a vision in the night, three nights before the Emperor Constantine came to the city, to translate the whole of the precious relics to Constantinople, to go to the shrine where they were kept, and to take out thereof an arm-bone, three fingers of the right hand, a tooth, and a knee-pan, which he was enjoined carefully to preserve and to carry them to a region far to the west, in the utmost parts of the world. Regulus was at first much troubled by the strangeness of the vision, but after a little time resolved to obey. So putting the relics in a little box, he went to sea, accompanied by a priest named Domianus, two deacons named Gelasius and Tubaculus, eight hermits, and three devoted virgins. With much toil and hardship they passed through the Mediterranean Sea, along the Coasts of the Bay of Biscay, and into the German Ocean, where they were long tossed with grievous tempests, and at last were driven into the bay now known as the Bay of St. Andrews, and there their vessel was dashed to pieces on the rocks. But Regulus and his companions all reached the shore in safety, although of all that their vessel had contained, nothing was left to them but the precious relics, which they were above all things careful to preserve. They did not, however, perish for want, although the place where they landed, where the city of St. Andrews now stands, was wild and desolate, a forest much inhabited by wild boars. But the fame of their arrival soon spread through all the surrounding country, and many of the Picts, in whose kingdom that region then was, resorted to them, some for devotion, some from curiosity. Amongst others came Hergust, King of the Picts, who, when he beheld the gravity and piety of the strangers, and the form of the religious service which they maintained, erected for them a suitable dwelling in that place, and made provision for their support. Shortly after, Hergust bestowed upon them all the lands of the forest, and erected a church. Here Regulus and his company abode, in great reputation for the piety and austerity of their lives. Regulus is said to have lived for thirty-two years after his arrival in Scotland. From the time of his arrival, or soon after, St. Andrew seems to have been regarded with great veneration by the Picts, and may almost be deemed to have been their patron saint, but this place was more fully assigned to him in the beginning of the ninth century, when Hungus, King of the Picts, being at war with Athelstane, King of Northumbria, and returning home from an expedition into the territories of his enemy, was unexpectedly overtaken by Athelstane near Eadlington, and surrounded by a superior force, but in the extremity of his danger, had recourse to the protection of St. Andrew, vowing that if he were delivered from his enemies, he would bestow upon the Saint a tenth of all his dominions. The same night the Apostle appeared to him, assuring him that he would on the morrow obtain an easy victory, and that an Angel would bear the Holy Cross before his army. The Saint also exhorted him to be mindful of his vow, when he returned home. The king, awaking from his sleep, told his vision, by which his whole army was wonderfully encouraged, and displayed such valour that their enemies were soon put to flight. It is even asserted that a light of extraordinary brightness appeared in the heavens, and that the form of a cross gladdened the eyes of the Scottish warriors. Athelstane and all his immediate attendants were slain, and Hungus cut off the head of the Northumbrian King, placed it on the point of a spear, and carried it to Inchgarvie, an island near Queensferry, where he placed the spear on the top of a rock. Thence he proceeded to St. Andrews, where he religiously performed his vow.

St. Andrew's memory is still held in high reverence in Scotland, as appears from the fact that many buildings throughout the country exhibit a life-size statue of him: The soldiers of some of the regiments wearing the Highland dress, have on the top of their sporran malloch a small figure of St. Andrew, also on the brooch which buckles the plaid on the shoulder is to be seen a representation of St. Andrew and his cross. Those of our noble and truly soldier-like volunteers, who wear the kilt, as many do in Scotland, also exhibit on the same parts of their garb figures of St. Andrew. It may be hoped they often think of the example of their forefathers, on that occasion when they ascribed a glorious victory to the intervention of St. Andrew, and when he was adopted as the Patron Saint of Scotland. The recollection of that ancient triumph over a formidable invader will animate them, like the name of Wallace or of Bannockburn, to repel all assaults on their beloved native land.

St. Andrews is the home of the Past Grand Master Mason of Scotland, and in the town of St. Andrews is a highly-popular Freemasons' Lodge.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE, The Great Cure for Cholera and Consumption,

A Newly-discovered principle residing in Gum Benjamin (Stryax Benzoin), the chief chemical product of which has hitherto been Benzoic Acid, well known and highly valued by medical practitioners. The great difficulty which the discoverer encountered in bringing out this important remedy was the form in which to present it to the faculty and the public, the new chemical being amorphous and incapable of crystallization. It has therefore been deemed advisable to prepare a highly-concentrated solution of the product, combining it with such adjuncts as are considered natural auxiliaries. PRICE'S BENZODYNE is stimulant, anodyne, and mechanically astringent, arresting fluxes and hæmorrhages of all kinds both external and internal, possessing singular efficacy in the following diseases:—Ague, Bronchitis, Consumption, Colic, Cholera, Cold, Cough, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Debility in all its various forms, Fevers, Influenza, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Spasms, Tiedolereux, &c., &c. PRICE'S BENZODYNE has been tried repeatedly in these cases and has never failed to cure.

It immediately relieves all pain, actually sheathing the organs with a protective matter, which defies the action of the most virulent blood-poisons, and thus PRICE'S BENZODYNE acts as the most powerful styptic now known to science, being the only effective external application for cuts, bites of insects, and all open wounds. In Cholera, as in Consumption, its effects are astounding, while Chronic Cough yields to its curative influences in a few hours.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is acknowledged by the highest Medical authority to be the most wonderful medicine yet introduced to the public; it may be taken at any time by both young and old with the most beneficial effects in all cases, leaving no bad effects like Laudanum, Chlorodyne, or any other poisonous and imperfect preparations, and can be given when no other could be tolerated.

In Consumption and Cancer its peculiarly soothing properties render it a boon to the sufferer in allaying the cough, mitigating night perspirations, and in relieving pain, &c.

In every stage of those dire diseases it gives an amount of ease not attainable by any other remedy.

In all cases of Chest Affections, as Asthma, Bronchitis, Winter Cough, Palpitation, &c., PRICE'S BENZODYNE is a very valuable medicine, producing a composed and tranquil state of the system, and quickly relieving the cough, assisting expectoration, and in a few days removing the most distressing symptoms.

In Hysteria, Epilepsy, Gout, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nerve Pains it is justly valued, as it is given with immediate benefit, relieving pain and suffering however violent the attack.

In Diarrhoea, Cholera, Alvine Discharges, spasms and colics of the intestines, &c., its effects are signal, as it never fails to check the disease.

CONSUMPTION IN ALL ITS STAGES CURED.

Coughs, Whooping Cough, Asthma, Bronchitis, Fever, Ague, Diptheria, Hysteria, Rheumatism, Diarrhoea, Spasms Colic, Renal and Uterine Diseases are immediately relieved by a dose.

During the period of Dentition of Children it will be found invaluable, and in curing Whooping Cough, Spasms, dispelling Flatulency, preventing Convulsive Fits, Heats, &c., to which they are so liable.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is specially adapted for Naval, Military or Traveller's medicine chests, and for Hospitals and Dispensaries everywhere.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.

Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills, are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary Diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL.

Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says:—"I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued Cough, Pain, and Irritation of the Chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."

This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers, in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. CROSBY, Chemist, Scarborough.

Its motto is—Belief in the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man. Its price is Five Shillings a year—a sum so small that no Freemason, for pecuniary reasons, need be a non-subscriber to it.

Trans-Atlantic Subscribers to the AMERICAN FREEMASON will receive it Post-paid from the Office of Publication direct, at their respective Post-offices, upon payment of the subscription to

The AMERICAN FREEMASON is not the organ of any Grand Lodge; but speaking the words of truth, manhood, and independence, advocates freedom for Masonry in America, and the rights of Freemasons in their Lodges—rights which, by our Grand Lodges, in their subservency to high degrees, have been invaded, until at present they are nearly obliterated.

TO THE NERVOUS & DEBILITATED EPILEPTIC SUFFERERS AND OTHERS.

HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA, discovered, introduced, and extensively prescribed by the late eminent DR. MARSHALL HALL, has proved an infallible remedy (by oxydizing the blood and supplying its saline constituent) for Indigestion, Debility, Coughs, Asthma, Consumption, Skin, Liver, Stomach, and Nervous Affections, more especially Epilepsy, Apoplexy, and Paralysis. The successful results of this new chemical preparation are beyond all precedent, and the extraordinary cures effected by the late discoverer, and by his successor (Dr. Sutton), in the above maladies are without a parallel in the annals of medicine; and it is confidently believed that in no case need the sufferer despair, for practical experience has demonstrated, and signal success warranted the assertion, that in 99 cases out of every 100 complete cures may be relied on.

Sold in Bottles at 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and Cases of £5 each, by

DR. SUTTON, M.D., 15, REGENT SQUARE, LONDON, W.C., and in BOLTON by PRIESTLEY, Chemist.

The following are a few Testimonials published by privilege. Sir Charles Locock, Physician-Accoucher to Her Majesty, stated at a meeting of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society, that in sixteen cases of Epilepsy he had effected permanent cures by the use of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa.

"September 6, 1858.—The Editor of the Bury Gazette returns thanks to Dr. Hall for the great benefit he has received from his Chlorate of Potassa treatment in a severe nervous disease." Sir J. Ferguson, King's College Hospital, London, says—"I have repeatedly prescribed Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa and found it an agreeable and beneficial remedy."

Extract from the Lancet, April 1, 1857—"In conclusion, we are of opinion that Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is a far superior remedy to the ones in general use for Nervousness, Indigestion, and Liver Complaints, when judiciously prescribed."

Sir Benjamin Brodie says—"What Chloride of Lime is to the foul sewer, Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is to the blood." Professor Syme says—"The effects of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa in obstinate cases of disease are as astonishing as perplexing."

Dr. Lankester, the eminent coroner, says—"Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is calculated to entirely supersede iron, mercury, sarsaparilla, quinine, and cod liver oil."

Sir Philip Crampton says—"I believe there is no condition of the system that may not be benefited by Dr. Hall's Potassa." Sir T. Lawrence says—"I have found Dr. Hall's Chlorate an excellent remedy in Skin Diseases. I presume it is by oxydization."

EACH Paper contains every item of intelligence, from Mail to Mail, specially affecting the country or colony for which it is published, with an exhaustive summary of home and continental politics, science, art, and social news,
and a retrospect of commercial transactions in Great Britain
and on the Continent.

Manufacturers and Merchants may command the greatest markets of the world for their products through the mediums
of publicity afforded by the EUROPEAN MAIL. A demand may be created where none exists at present, or an existing demand may be sustained and increased against the most energetic competition.

The EUROPEAN MAIL gives such perfect mercantile information that it is the highest commercial authority in the vast and prosperous territories through which it circulates. It is therefore an imperative necessity to the merchant who orders goods in bulk, and to the wholesale and retail distributor; it is also the most complete newspaper despatched from England, and is eagerly sought by all classes; it thus,
unlike merely commercial newspapers, reaches and leavens the great communities who are the actual consumers of all products, and who must be acted upon by advertisement to require a special article before the merchant will venture to order a consignment.

The EUROPEAN MAIL may be ordered through the Local Agent, direct from the London Office, or through any

the usual system is to order the EUROPEAN MAIL to be

ANCIENT AND MODERN MYSTERIES.

BY BROTHER ROBERT WENTWORTH LITTLE,

President of the London Literary Union, &c.

From the "Rosicrucian."

There are few subjects more interesting to a reflecting mind than the study of the secret rites and ceremonies of the ancients. It possesses a fascination peculiarly its own—we seem to wander amidst the phantasma of dreams rather than the realities of historic lore, while the mighty shades of the past appear to rise in solemn majesty from the weird and silent abysses wherein were celebrated the unutterable mysteries of Mithras, Memphis, or Eleusis.

The term mystery is Phœnician, and signifies a veil or envelopment; it was used to designate the esoteric worship of the Deity by those who were initiated, as distinguished from the superstitious usages of the uninitiated mass of mankind.

I shall commence my observations by a description of the occult religious observances of the Indian Brahmins.

The gloomy cavern and the consecrated grove bore witness to the earliest devotions of mankind. The deep shade—the solemn silence—the profound solitude—of such places inspired the contemplative soul with a kind of holy horror, and invested with peculiar sanctity the purer doctrines of philosophy and religion therein inculcated. The same circumstances were found equally favorable to the propagation of science, and tended to impress upon the minds of the hearers the awful dictates of truth and wisdom.

The Brahmins of India and the Druids of Europe were therefore constantly to be found in the recesses of the sacred grotto, and in the bosom of the embowering forest. In those undisturbed retreats, they chanted their pious orisons to the Creator of all things, and, from the example of their own severe corporeal mortification, preached to mankind a ceaseless lesson of the vanity of wealth—the folly of power—and the madness of ambition. The whole continent of Asia, though rich in colossal architectural remains, cannot boast of more august and admirable monuments of antiquity than the caves of Salsette and Elephanta, with the wondrous sculptures that adorn them. They were used not only as subterranean temples of the Deity, but within their mysterious depths were taught the principles of those sciences for which the Brahmins were so widely celebrated throughout the East. And it may be observed that, in every age of the world's history, from the deep obscurity of caverns and woods have issued the brightest beams of knowledge, of morality, and of religion. Zoroaster, the great reformer of the sect of the Persian Magi, amidst the gloom of a cavern composed his renowned system of theological institutions. Epictetus, and the famed philosopher, Pythagoras, who was himself a pupil of Zoroaster, sought wisdom in the solitary cell. Even the venerable prophets and priests of the true God took up their abode in the hitherto untrodden wastes and lonely deserts. St John, the herald of the Messiah, whose food was the locusts and wild honey which those solitudes produced, declares himself to be the "voice of one crying in the wilderness."

The profound reverence equally entertained by the Magi of Persia and the Brahmins of India for the solar orb, and for the element of fire, forms a striking feature of resemblance between the dogmas of Zoroaster and the religion of Brahma. In the union of astronomy and theology, which were sister sciences in those days, we shall find—notwithstanding the many perplexities that beset the path of investigation—the clearest elucidation of those singular rights of secret worship, believed to have been anciently practised in the islands of Salsette and Elephanta. Whatever may have been the primeval object of devotion to the Persians or the Brahmins—although it is but fair to add that there is cumulative evidence of sun worship having been the earliest idolatry of oriental lands—it is at least probable that the priests of Brahma and the disciples of Zoroaster only improved upon the popular superstition, by rejecting its gross fabric or sensual manifestations, and building up, as it were, an inner tabernacle of spiritual belief, by which the perfect epopt or purified aspirant was enabled to hold communication with his God. It was, therefore, at the period when solar worship flourished in Asia—when it was in the zenith of its glory, that those stupendous chasms were hewn out of the native rock with such untiring labour and perseverance, stimulated—as the votaries were—by devotion and the hopes of eternal reward. It was the custom of the Brahmins to mount the loftiest pinnacles of those rocks, and salute the rising sun. They ascended the heights of Salsette, even as the Egyptian priests of old climbed to the apex of their pyramids, to pay their adorations at the dawn of day to the source of light, and to make astronomical observations. When the shades of evening approached, and the sun disappeared beneath the horizon, the Brahmins descended into their stony recesses, and there renewed their oblations of praise and devotion before figures and objects that symbolized the power and attributes of the luminous Divinity. The orb of radiated gold—the bright spiral flame ascending from the ever-glowing altar—impressed their imaginations with a potent sense of the ever-present Deity. The planetary bodies were represented by images equally emblematical of their supposed form and influence, and the signs of the Zodiac blazed in imitative gold round the embossed and vaulted roof. All the caverns might truly be called pyræia, or sanctuaries that cherished the eternal flame. The whole circumference of the rock was illuminated, and the mountain burned with fire. Throughout all the deep recesses of its caverns continually reverberated the echoes of the hallowed conque of sacrifice. Around all the shores of the island the sacred bell of religion incessantly rang. The secret gloom of those majestic forests that surrounded the rock perpetually resounded with the mystic song of praise and thanksgiving. One order of priests, arrayed in vestments of woven bark, and having on their heads caps of that pyramidal form which equally distinguished the Indian and Egyptian priesthood, attended to watch the never-dying flame, which they frequently invigorated with precious spices and aromatic woods. Another order of priests was employed in preparing the various sacrifices—some were occupied in instructing the younger Brahmins in the profound arcana of those more abstruse sciences of which numerous emblems on every side conspicuously attracted their attention—while others again were engaged in initiating them into the mysterious rite of that mythology of which the principal deities were sculptured on the walls around. Many of those devices cannot now be accurately explained, but it is evident that they refer to the sacred history of the Indian religion, as well as to the heroic feats of the ancient rajahs. Description cannot convey to the mind the splendour and sublimity of the scenes in which these mysteries were celebrated, nor can we fully conceive the awful reverence which they inspired in the minds of their devout votaries; and, however much these occult rites may have been afterwards corrupted by the introduction of vicious or licentious practices, there is little doubt that they were originally the sanctuaries of a purer system of theology than was known or followed by the generality of mankind.

We are informed that on Saturday, the 30th inst., the first meeting of the South Eastern Masonic Association New Cross branch will be held at the Marquis of Granby, New Cross-road, for the purpose of receiving subscriptions. The committee hope that, assisted by the prompt payment of subscriptions on that occasion, they may be enabled to ballot for the first Life Governorship emanating from this association. Bro. AN ANSWER TO A QUERY.

Not a "Paper on Masonry," though

BY CRYPTONYMUS.

It were all one
That I should love a bright particular star,
And think to wed it, he is so above me.
In his bright radiance and collateral light
Must I be comforted, not in his sphere.
All's Well that ends Well, act i. scene 1.

Non intret Cato theatrum nostrum;
Aut, si intraverit, spectat. MARTIAL.

"Royal Arch," in his friendly letter, "puts me to the proof." What right, in his anonymity, has he to challenge mine? Masonry, although endeavouring to retrieve, by charity, a lost error, forgets to acknowledge that an Order co-existent with its wonderful integrity might and would be bound to exist. The higher the mountain, the deeper the valley. The greater the delusion, the clearer the Light.

Brekekekex, coax, coax!

If ROYAL ARCH is one who prefers the misty condition—which wets an Englishman to the skin—I, for one, do not envy him. Had he known how to read the contributions of Cryptonymus to the pages of THE FREEMASON, he would have rejoiced. Begun in honour, continued with pleasure, they have ended in a manner somewhat painful; but as the illustrious Unsworth would say, THAT is no reason why the Osirified individual should not go to Amenti.

There is a touching American ballad fit to be used in this place:—

Hans Breitmann gife a barty—
Where ish dat barty now!
Where ish de lofely golden cloud
Dat float on de moundain's prow?
Where is de himmelstrahlende stern,
De shtar of de shpirit's light?
All goned afay mit de Lager Beer—
Afay in de Ewigkeit!

It would be preposterous and extra-masonic—whether with or without fee and reward—to expect a revelation of Rosicrucian or Masonic secrets; and the secrets of which Cryptonymus is possessed should, at least, be esteemed at some kind of equal value.

If Royal Arch—who has read, no doubt, a certain meagre blue pamphlet—likes to encounter Cryptonymus in fair combat, in a sort of friendly way, no doubt the Grand Recorder of the Rosicrucian Order would transmit any letter to me; or, if the arena is to be Common Sense, there is the alternative of 4, St. Martin's place, Trafalgar-square, or Bethnal-green.

"Aber 'es kommt mir Spanisch vor!" At any rate, not the Rite of Memphis!

CRYPTONYMUS.

We understand that the Worshipful Bro. Brett, Assistant Grand Purst. (Instructor of the Metropolitan) will work the ceremonies of Consecration and Installation this day, at the Marquis of Granby Tavern, New-cross-road, (near the Station Bridge).

ST. JOHN'S GATE, CLERKENWELL.—On Saturday last, in consequence of an invite from that ever courteous and worthy brother S. Wickens, we paid a visit to his establishment at that famous remains of the once splendid Preceptory of The Knights Hospitallers, dedicated to St. John of Jerusalem, at Clerkenwell, now known as St. John's Gate, and we must express the astonishment and pleasure we experienced on viewing the really splendid and convenient manner in which the baronial rooms of this interesting relic of antiquity have been fitted up. As it is less than five minutes' walk from the Farringdon-road station of the Metropolitan Railway, it is really astonishing that although large numbers visit it, many more thousands do not pay a visit to one of the most ancient and interesting buildings in London. The luncheon bar, and the coffee-room are most unique in their character. The extensive collection of curious old engravings, etchings, pictures, MSS., a complete series of "The Gentleman's Magazine," &c., are well worth the inspection of persons of taste in those things, and we feel assured that Bro. S. Wickens on all occasions feels much pleasure in acting as cicerone.

A DISTINGUISHED Freemason, Lord Lonsborough once observed that "Masonry gave him an opportunity of mixing with the classes that were below him as a peer of the realm in the scale of society, without being branded with the stigma of a popularity hunter." This coming from so high a source is pregnant with valuable thought.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Lodge of Israel, No. 205, held its first meeting of the present session in the lodge-room at Radley's Hotel Blackfriars, (Bro. J. Hart's), on Tuesday, when the W. Bro. Chamberlin, the respected Master of this most flourishing lodge, initiated into the mysteries of the Craft Mr. Joseph Mawbey, passed Bros. Kippenhagen and Cohen, and raised to the degree of M.M., Bro. George Purnell. The W.M. was ably assisted by his very competent officers, Bros. Emanuel, S.W.; Harris, J.W.; A. M. Cohen, P.M., Sec.; Turner, S.D.; Vander Bosch, J.D.; Hogard, I.G., and the Worshipful Past Masters, Stanton-Jones, Lazarus, Coote, Littaur and Harris, the visitors were, Bros. F. Walters, P.M., (73. &c.), Barnett (25), Cooper (254), Wintler, (548), Hollyman (754) Pollitzer (1017), and Connell, of the Lodge of St. Nicholas, Aberdeen. At the banquet table in an eloquent speech by Bro. Cohen, the hard-working Hon. Sec., (who by special request returned thanks for the toast of the P.M.'s), advocated the cause of Bro. Sacqui, the Father of the lodge, as a candidate for the benefits of The Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, which resulted in numerous members becoming subscribers to the amount of 10s. each, the I.G. 20s., another brother, 21s. and a resolution to carry his election. The W. Bro. Walters returned thanks for the visitors in a very happy speech, and after the ordinary toasts the meeting adjourned.

United Strength Lodge of Instruction, No. 228.—We have had the pleasure of visiting this popular lodge of instruction—held at Bro. G. Garratt's, the Bull and Gate, Kentish Town, every Wednesday night at 8 o'clock—and would advise all those who are desirous of learning the ceremonies and ritual to attend this lodge, where they will have an excellent opportunity of acquiring Masonic information. It is under the preceptorship of Bro. J. N. Frost, an old P.M. of the parent lodge, and who evinces the greatest desire of imparting knowledge to aspirants to office in their several lodges.

Beadon Lodge, No. 619, met on Wednesday se'nnight at Bro. W. Middlecott's, the Greyhound, Dulwich, when the brethren had an opportunity of seeing the admirable performance of the ceremonies of passing and raising by the W.M., Bro. Alfred Avery. Bro. W. J. Edwards was passed, and Bro. Dr. J. J. Barrett raised. A P.M. came forward and offered himself as Steward for the Lodge at the next Festival of the Benevolent Institution, and the brethren consented to support him. The lodge was then closed, and a banquet, to which between thirty and forty brethren sat down, followed. The customary toasts were given, Bro. W. Farnfield, P.A.G.S., responding for the Grand Officers, and Bros. James (19) and F. Walters (73) for "The Visitors." Bros. J. Hill (P.M. 87), J. Whiffin (P.M. 147), W. B. Roberts (P.M. 181), and Lassam (1269) were the other visitors who attended.

Belgrave Lodge, No. 749.—The first meeting of the season of this flourishing lodge took place at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, on Wednesday, the 13th inst. Bro. Bourne, W.M., was supported by Bros. Pyman, S.W., P. Parsons, J.W., S. Honeswood, S.D., E. Harper, J.D., T. Carter, I.G., J. H. Froud, P.M., Treasa, H. Garrod, P.M., Sec.; P.M.'s Runtling, Ough, and G. P. Woodstock; Bros. T. Ship, Scott, Mackrill, Wilson, Knight, and about forty other brethren. The lodge was honoured by the presence of the following visitors:—Bros. James Philips (P.M. 754), T. E. Scott (P.M. 771), and Henry Crabtree (87). Bros. Hubbard and Greenwood were then passed to the degree of F.C., in a faultless manner, by the W.M. Bro. George Pym was unanimously elected W.M. for the ensuing year; Bro. Froud, Treasurer; and Bro. Daly, Tyler. A jewel was unanimously voted to W.M. Bourne for the able manner in which he had discharged the duties of the chair during his year of office. The lodge was then closed with solemn prayer, and the brethren adjourned to a banquet which was served in Bro. Clemow's best style. The Tyler's toast brought to a close a very happy evening, which was ably superintended by Bro. Smith.

Finsbury Lodge, No. 861.—On Friday, the 22nd, in the unavoidable absence of Bro. E. Davey, the W.M., Bro. Thos. Mackey, P.M. in his usual felicitous style initiated Messrs. Senior, Albrecht, and Tilley into our mysteries. There were present, Bros. Nicholls, J.W.; Day, P.M. and Treasa, (who occupied the chair at the banquet table in his usual jovial manner); Bro. Purdy, P.M. and Sec., (the worthy son of a worthy father, who was one of the most learned and disinterested instructors in all degrees of the present century); Benjamin, S.D.; Stokes, J.D.; Bibby, Org.; Meanwell, I.G.; G. Leach, P.M.; R. Leach, P.M., and Bond, P.M.; amongst the visitors we particularly noticed Bros. Terry, W.M., 1278, and G.S.B. Herts; Grose, 166; Satchwell, 749; Gregory, 745; Shepperd, 27, &c. Upwards of forty brethren partook of one of Bro. Bond's hospitable and liberal banquets, and the usual toasts followed, Bro. Tilley, in a neat speech, returning thanks for the initiates, and the W. Bro. Terry, in his usual elegant style, for the visitors, as also very eloquently on behalf of "The Masonic Charities."

Stanhope Lodge, No. 1269.—[We extract the following from a more detailed account of the interesting meeting of this lodge at Anerley on the 12th inst. than appeared in our last, the present report not having reached us in time for insertion in that impression.] During the proceedings in lodge, it was proposed, seconded, and carried unanimously that a lodge of instruction should be held at the Thicket Hotel, to be called the Stanhope Lodge of Instruction, under the sanction of the parent lodge. The W.M. was graciously pleased to give his assent to the same, and promised his assistance. Several gentlemen were proposed for initiation at the next lodge meeting, and the lodge being closed in usual form, the brethren adjourned to a most excellent banquet provided by the very worthy host, Bro. Lassam, which appeared to give universal satisfaction, as every brother seemed to enjoy himself immensely, and to judge from the demand for waiters, must have done ample justice to the good things provided for them. The wines throughout were excellent. After the usual toasts to the Queen and the rulers of the Craft, the W.M. severally proposed the healths of the initiates and visitors, which were cordially received by the brethren. The initiates and visitors having each returned thanks, Bro. J. Thomas proposed the health of the W.M., and asked the brethren to respond to it in a bumper, as he so well deserved it for his great kindness and urbanity, and having on the present occasion so perfectly rendered the ceremonies in the three degrees, they had a right to be proud of such a Master. The toast was received in a truly Masonic spirit, and the W.M., in response, thanked the brethren, and made some very appropriate remarks as to the proper working and management of the lodge, particularly thanking his several officers for their very punctual attendance. He concluded by proposing the health of their adopted P.M., Bro. J. Thomas, which was cordially honoured by the brethren. Bro. Thomas returned thanks, stating that the way in which the W.M. and his officers had severally performed their duty gave him infinite pleasure. He very seldom indeed had seen the business carried out in so perfect a manner as he had witnessed that evening, and considering it was so young a lodge, and most of them new members of the Craft, it did them very great credit and augured well for the future. He begged to thank them sincerely, for, he could assure them, he was proud of the honour they had conferred upon him, during his temporary absence in the country, in electing him an honorary member of their lodge, and he hoped that he should in some measure be able to repay them for their kindness by attending and rendering them his assistance on every possible occasion. The W.M. then proposed the health of his several officers, bestowing on each a proportionate meed of praise. The toast was responded to, in a neat speech, by the S.W. After spending a delightful evening the "Tyler's Toast" brought our merry and social meeting to an end, reminding us that it was time to depart, and having various distances to go, some of the brethren immediately retired to partake of their favourite coffee and souchong, while others, taking their parting "nips" and burning their weed, took their departure, ourself being amongst the latter.

PROVINCIAL.

Ipswich—British Union Lodge, No. 114.—On Thursday last the usual monthly meeting of this lodge was honoured by the presence of the Prov. Grand Master for Suffolk, Col. Sir R. A. Shafto Adair. The lodge having been opened in the three degrees by the W.M., Bro. W. Booy, and closed to the first, the P.G.M. made some interesting remarks or reflections caused by his wearing, the first time for many years, his original M.M. apron which he received at Cambridge, some thirty years ago. Bro. F. Gull, P.M. (114) and P. Cornell, J.W. (114), then worked the first section (most perfectly), and lodge closed finally. At the banquet one of the most successful ever yet given at the Hall, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given in the W.M.'s well known happy style that of the P.G. Masters' being especially received with great enthusiasm. Among the brethren present were Bros. Rev. E. J. Lockwood, D.P.G.M.; Mills, P.M. (376); C. Schulen, P.M. (114); G. Turner, P.M. (376); W. Spalding, P.M. (376); Lea, and Neave, P.M. (114); E. C. Tidd, A.P.G.S. (Suffolk), R. Stephens, S.W. (376), &c.

Scarborough—Old Globe Lodge, No. 200.—This lodge met in their lodge room, Globe-street, on Tuesday (for Wednesday), the 19th October, when the following officers and brethren were present: Bros. William Peacock, W.M.; W. F. Rooke, J.P., P.M., P.P.G.J.W.; H. A. Williamson, P.M.; R. H. Peacock, S.W.; D. Fletcher, J.W.; H. C. Martin, P.M., P.P.G.D.C., Sec.; G. H. Walsham, S.D.; J. Parker, J.D.; G. Ruddock, I.G.; Ash, Tyler; Harvey, Verity, Garnett, Hardgrave, Groves, Allen, Brearey, Chapman; and Prince, visitor. The lodge was opened at 7.45, p.m. The minutes were read and confirmed, when Mr F. Fitzherbert Jay, Surgeon, was ballotted for, elected, and initiated in the first degree by the W.M. It was proposed, seconded, and carried unanimously, that the Chromo-Lithograph pictures of the Masonic Girls' and Boys' Schools be purchased out of the funds, and Bro. Ruddock was requested to frame and glaze the same. It was also proposed, seconded and carried unanimously, that one guinea be paid over to Bro. the Rev. Tattersall's banker, towards defraying the debt of £500 incurred by him in defending himself against the prosecution of the notorious begging Mason, Torkler, after which the lodge was closed with solemn prayer.

Towcester, Hunts.—Lodge of Fidelity, No. 445.—The annual meeting of this lodge was held at the Pomfret Arms Hotel, Towcester, on Friday, the 15th inst. The lodge was opened in due form, and Bro. Wm. Tomalin, jun., was passed to the degree of F.C., Bro. Richard Howes, W.M., officiating. It was then proposed by the W.M., and seconded by Bro. C. Blencowe, "That for other the Rev. Thomas Russell, of Brackley, a member of the Churchill Lodge, 478, Oxford, become a subscribing member of this lodge." After a ballot, the Rev. Brother was declared to be unanimously elected. The Treasurer, Bro. George Osborn, P.M., then reported that the funds of the lodge were in a more prosperous state than for some years past. On the motion of Bro. Samuel Inns, D.P.G.M., seconded by Bro. S. Jacob, P.M., a donation of £10 10s. was given to the Boys' School, and £5 5s. to the Girls' School. Bro. the Rev. Wm. Atkinson Howes was then duly installed W.M. for the ensuing year, Bro. Inns assisting at the installation. The following were the officers appointed by the W.M.:—Bros. Henry Sheppard, S.W.; Wm. Whitton, J.W.; J. Hoperast, S.D.; J. Steane, J.D.; Wm. Simmonds, I.G.; G. Hefford, sen., O.G.; Geo. Hefford, jun., Asst. O.G.; James Teeton, Sec. Amongst the visitors present were P.M.'s Bros. Brook Gates, E. K. Welchman, and George Robinson, of the Pomfret Lodge, Northampton. After labour was ended the brethren sat down to a sumptuous banquet, provided by Bro. J. Tunard in his usual good style, Bro. Howes, W.M. occupying the chair, and Bro. Sheppard, S.W., the vice-chair. The customary toasts were heartily honoured, interspersed with some excellent fraternal and other songs, and the brethren separated at an early hour. We may mention that the lodge—which, like many others, has ere now passed through troublous times, is now in a thoroughly flourishing condition, six gentlemen having been initiated and passed since last anniversary—a by no means insignificant addition to a small lodge.

HULME, MANCHESTER.—Blair Lodge, No. 815.—On the 8th inst., this lodge held the festival of Saint John the Evangelist, in the Town Hall, Hulme, Manchester, when Bro. James Redford was installed by the immediate P.M., Bro. Towle, as W.M., for the ensuing Masonic year. Afterwards a banquet was held, at which were present of the P.G.L. of East Lancashire, Bros. Hine, P.P.G.S.W.; Wike, P.G.S.W.; Figgins, P.P.G.C.; Kennedy, P.G.T.; Dill, P.G.P., and also P.M. Bro. Binckes, the able Secretary of the Boys' School, London. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given. The immediate P.M. was presented with a P.M. jewel by the W.M., in the name of the officers of the lodge, and in recognition of the many valuable services rendered to the Blair Lodge. Able speeches by Bros. Wike, Hine and Binckes were made during the banquet, drawing attention to the Masonic Charities and the good they were doing. The brethren separated in peace and harmony, after a delightful evening.

FORDINGBRIDGE, HAMPSHIRE.—Vale of Avon Lodge, No. 1112.—The third annual meeting of this lodge was held on Friday, 15th October, at the Greyhound Hotel, Fordingbridge. Bro. Ward, W.M., opened the lodge in the first degree, and the minutes of the last meeting having been read by the Secretary (Bro. C. W. Wyndham, P.M.), were confirmed. The lodge was opened in the second and third degrees by Bro. the Rev. W. M. Heath, P.M. 622, P.P.G.C., Dorset, to whom the W.M.-elect, Bro. M. G. Hanford, J.W., was presented for installation. Bro. Heath performed this imposing ceremony in a most admirable and sublime manner. The W.M. then proceeded to invest the officers for the ensuing year in the collars and jewels of their respective offices, as follows:—Bro. F. Perm, I.P.M.; R. Chilcott, S.W.; G. H. Taylor, J.W.; S. Croft, Treas.; C. W. Wyndham, Sec.; S. H. Perman, S.D.; J. Lewis, J.D.; D. Stevens, I.G.; J. Bonnett, Tyler. The ceremony of installation having been completed, a vote of thanks was unanimously accorded to the Rev. Brother Heath, for his kind attendance and for the efficient manner in which he had conducted the ceremony.—Bro. Heath, in thanking the brethren, assured them it would always afford him much pleasure to attend and assist them at any time.—Bro. Perm, I.P.M., congratulated the brethren on their having selected so able and efficient a W.M. as Bro. Hanford.—The W.M. thanked the lodge for the honour they had done him in placing him in the proud position he now occupied, and assured them that no effort should be wanting on his part to promote the prosperity of the Vale of Avon Lodge and advance its best interests. I have now (the W.M. went on to say) a very pleasing duty to perform, and one I feel sure will be very gratifying to every member of the lodge. It is to present Bro. Ward with a P.M.'s jewel, and beg his acceptance of a life membership of this lodge, as a slight recognition of his valuable services, he having been the first W.M. of the lodge, and one of its founders. To his exertions and those of Bro. Wyndham, is to be attributed the success that the lodge has attained. Brother Ward, in presenting you with this jewel, I beg to share the kind feeling every member of this lodge entertains towards you, and trust it may adorn your breast for many, many years to come, and in the ruling of the G.A.O.T.U., when you shall be summoned from this lower lodge and leave all that endears you to this world, you will leave behind you a name intimately associated with each of us, and an example worthy of our imitation. (The W.M. then placed the jewel on Bro. Ward's breast amid the acclamations of the brethren.)—Bro. H. Ward, P.M., replied as follows: Worshipful Master and Brethren, I cannot find words with which to express my feelings to you at this moment for your very kind and handsome presents. I scarcely know which to value most—the handsome jewel you have given me, or the electing me a life member of your lodge, thereby retaining my name on your roll of members. This is indeed a proud moment which I shall ever treasure in memory's storehouse, and look back upon with gratitude and pleasure. Whatever services I have rendered to the lodge I have given freely and heartily and from a pure love of Masonry and those glorious principles on which our Order is founded. I have, indeed, been very anxious to see this lodge successful, and it is very gratifying to me to see it in such a prosperous state. That gratification is a sufficient recompense for any services I have rendered. I have only tried to do my duty, and that is the duty of every Freemason. Permit me once more to thank you, and assure you how highly I prize your kindness, and trust it may stimulate others to do all they can for the interests of this lodge and Freemasonry in general.—There being no further business, the lodge was closed in peace and harmony, and the brethren adjourned from labour to refreshment, an excellent banquet being provided by Brother Chilcott. On the removal of the cloth, the W.M. gave the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, which were heartily received and responded to.

SCARBOROUGH.—Denison Lodge, No. 1248.—This lodge met in their lodge room, Grand Hotel, Scarborough, on Thursday, the 14th October. The following officers and members were present: Bros. J. O. Surtees, W.M.; S. H. Armitage, S.W.; J. Groves, J.W.; J. Donner, Sec.; J. E. Green, S.D.; H. W. Garnett, J.D.; H. C. Martin, P.M., I.G.; J. Verity, Tyler; also a number of members and visitors. The lodge was opened at 7.30, p.m., and the minutes were read and confirmed. The lodge gave at a previous meeting one guinea out of its fund, towards defraying the debt of £500, incurred by Bro. the Rev. Tattersall in defending himself against the prosecution brought against him by the notorious begging Mason, Torkler. There being no further business, the lodge was closed with solemn prayer.

SCOTLAND.

JOHNSHAVEN.—St. John's Lodge Centenary.—A hundred years having now passed since the formation of this lodge, it was some time ago decided to celebrate the centenary, and Friday, the 15th October, was fixed as the most suitable day. On that day the brethren met in their hall at half-past three. A deputation from the Kilwinning Lodge, No. 15, Montrose, and individuals from other lodges assembled with them. Rather remarkably, a deputation from this same Kilwinning Lodge had assisted in making office-bearers at the foundation of St. John's Lodge. The hall on this occasion was tastefully decorated with evergreens and dahlias, given by Mr. Scott. The lodge being opened, and the brethren ranked in marching order, they proceeded directly to Brotherton Castle, the residence of Hercules Scott, Esq., whose grandfather, David Scott, Esq., of Nether Benholm, was the first R.W.M. of St. John's Lodge, and the chief instrument in obtaining its charter of erection and constitution. There they received a very kind welcome from Mr. and Mrs. Scott. The R.W.M., Alex. Middleton, jun., read a complimentary address to Mr. and Mrs. Scott, referring to the part taken in founding the lodge by Mr. Scott's grandfather, a hundred years ago, to the philanthropic spirit of Mr. and Mrs. Scott, and wishing "the Great Architect" of the world to bestow on them every blessing. To this address Mr. Scott gave an appropriate reply, referring to the many alterations which had taken place during the past 100 years. He contrasted the time when a proprietor offered a farmer 300 or 400 marks to take a farm, with the present state of matters. He also said that at that time tea was unknown, except in the gauger's family; and said that a 100 years hence it would perhaps be a matter for surprise that at this time the best light the people of Johnshaven had was that of paraffin oil. He invited them freely to inspect his grounds. After giving Mr. and Mrs. Scott three cheers, and taking a view of the garden, &c., the brethren left by the lower gate and entered the village by the east end. They then marched through the town, and arrived again about 6 p.m. at their hall, where they found a sumptuous dinner awaiting them, prepared by Mrs. McHardy. In all 41 sat down to dinner. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, the Treasurer, Alex. Middleton, gave a graphic and detailed history of the lodge from the commencement to the present time, contrasting the difficulties they had at times to contend with, with their present prosperous state, their funds now amounting to £550. He also spoke of the good they had been enabled to do to their sick members and widows by the allowances granted them, and to the general community by lending money on security. Song and sentiment now followed each other in rapid succession until about 10 p.m., when the lodge was closed. The proceedings were concluded by a full dress ball, the most orderly and best that could be, to which Mr. Thomas Young's violin band supplied the music. All present were delighted with the day's enjoyment, to which there was but one slight alloy—rainy weather.

THE ROYAL ARCH.

A. Nairne, J., presided. Bros. Plestow and Hinde were exalted into R.A. Masonry. Comp. R. Wentworth Little, P.Z., then installed Comp. Nairne H., and Comp. Peable Browne J. Comp. Lacy, who had been elected Z., was not present, and the I.P.Z., Comp. Dorey, continued to preside. The officers for the year are—F. Walters, Treasurer and S.E.; Mont. Scott, S.N.; R. S. Foreman, P.S.; Alf. Williams, 1st A.S.; Wm. Nelson Smith, 2nd A.S.; C. T. Speight, Janitor. Comp. F. Walters first announced that Comp. W. Holland would stand as Steward for Caveac Chapter at the Benevolent Institution Festival in January next, and then presented an elegant P.Z. jewel to Comp. Dorey. This concluded the business of the Chapter, and the Companions afterwards sat down to a splendid banquet supplied by Comp. Hart, and enjoyed some capital singing and imitations by Dr. J. J. Pope, Mont. Scott, and Bryant. Comp. Hervey, G.S.E., responded to the toast of the Grand Officers in a very happy vein, and Dr. Pope replied for the visitors. The meeting was a very successful one. This Chapter, which has been established only two years, already numbers twenty-two full members.

PROVINCIAL.

LEICESTER.—Chapter of Fortitude, No. 279.—An emergency Convocation of this Chapter was held, after the summer recess, at the Freemasons' Hall, on Friday week, for the installation of Principals H. and J., the exaltation of three candidates, and other business. The Chapter having been opened by the Principals, Comp. Kelly, P.Z. and P.G.H., installed Comp. L. A. Clarke in the 2nd chair; the installation of Comp. G. H. Hodges, J.-elect, being again of necessity postponed, he being in the United States. The Comps. having been admitted, a ballot was taken for Comp. the Rev. Chas. J. E. Smith, of the Euclid Chapter, No. 859, Cambridge, who was unanimously elected a joining member. Of the three candidates one only, Bro. J. G. F. Richardson, was in attendance, who was duly exalted; the ceremony being very efficiently performed by the Rev. J. Spittal, M.E.Z., and Comp. Toller, P.S.; after which, the historical, symbolical and mystical lectures were delivered by Comp. Kelly. The regular quarterly Convocation was announced to take place in the ensuing month, after which the Chapter was closed and the Companions adjourned to refreshment. Amongst those present were Comps. Rev. J. Spittal, M.E.Z.; L. A. Clarke, H.; Kelly, P.Z. and P.G.H., as J.; Pettifor, P.Z.; Stretton, E.; Partridge, N.; Toller, P.S.; Buzzard, A.S.; J. Hodges, J. C. Clarke, Atwood, Goaling, Scott, Thorpe, Crow, and others.

Grove Chapter, No. 410.—A convocation of this Chapter was held on Saturday last at the Spring Hotel, Ewell. Comps. H. Muggeridge as M.E.Z., F. Walters as H., and Conrad C. Dumas (Z.) acting as J., opened the Chapter in the presence of a large number of installed Principals. Comp. Greenwood, P.Z. and S.E., read the minutes, and afterwards occupied the J. chair, when Bro. Isaac Wilcox, (P.M. 22) was exalted to the R.A. degree. The ceremony was admirably rendered by the Principals and Comp. W. Williams, P.S. After this the Companions sat down to banquet, and spent one of the most pleasant evenings we have ever shared in. Comps. Conrad C. Dumas, M.E.Z., J. Hart, H., and C. Greenwood, as J., presided, and exerted themselves to the utmost to make every one comfortable. Comps. James Hastie, C. L. B. Roberts, W. S. Masterman, A. Parsons, H. T. Dumas, and S. Rosenthal were present, and the visitors who partook of the Companions' hospitality were, among others, John A. Rucker, G. Haydon, H. Muggeridge, F. Walters, and H. H. Partridge.

Inkerman Chapter, No. 1222.—This Chapter met at the Carnarvon Hall, Weston-super-Mare, on Wednesday, the 20th inst. The business consisted of the Installation of the three Principals, viz., Comps. F. G. Irwin, M.E.Z.; G. B. Munbee, H., and F. Vizard, J., after which six brethren of the St. Kew Lodge, 1222, were exalted to this sublime degree: Bros. Benjm. Cox, Sec., and Prov. Grand Steward of Somerset; Thos. Clarke, S.W.; E. B. B. George, Treas.; Commander John Townsend, R.N.; Edwd. C. Gregory, Org.; and Lieut. Wiltshire, Steward. The ceremony of exaltation was worked with great care by every officer, all being emulous of doing their duty with zeal and ability. Visiting Comps., A. Demoline, P.Z., 68; W. A. Scott, P.Z., 68; S. Short, P.Z., 103; J. Pickford, P.S., 68; J. L. Veysey, A.S., 103, and T. Taylor, 187. The appointment and investiture of officers were postponed until the meeting to be held on Monday, Oct. 25th. Munbee, H. and F. Vizard, J. The other Companions entered and took their seats in the Chapter; two members of the St. Kew Lodge, were exalted to the sublime degree of R.A. Comps. viz., Bros. Rev. J. C. Pigot, J.W. and Prov. Grand Chaplain, and Bro. J. H. Parsons. The following Comps. were then appointed to the different offices, Comps. E. B. B. George, Treas. and S.E.; J. Townsend, S.N.; B. Cox, P. Soj.; Rev. J. C. Pigot, 1st A. Soj.; Lieut. H. Wiltshire, 2nd A. Soj.; E. Gregory, Org., and J. H. Parsons, Janitor. Two members were proposed for exaltation at the next meeting of the Chapter, Bros. Rev. C. R. Browne and E. J. Inskip. The M.E.Z. having expressed a wish that each officer would make himself efficient in the duties appertaining to his respective office previous to the next meeting, the Chapter was closed in due form. The Companions afterwards partook of a supper, and an interchange of fraternal, expressive, and good feeling, closed a happy evening.

ORDERS OF CHIVALRY.

RED CROSS OF ROME & CONSTANTINE.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE.—Rose and Lily Conclave, No. 10.—The annual assembly of this Conclave was held in the Masonic Rooms, Weston-Super-Mare, on the 18th inst.; officers present Ill. Sir Knight F. G. Irwin, K.G.C., Inspector General for Bristol and Gloucester, and M.P. Sov. of Conclave, No. 10; Ill. Sir Knight G. Roland Munbee, K.G.C., Inspector General for Somerset, and M.P. Sov. (elect); Em. Sir Knight E. T. Inskip, M.P. Sov. of Conclave No. 17; Em. Sir Knight Rev. J. C. Pigot, M.P.S. and High Prelate; Em. Sir Knight T. Clarke, V.E. (re-elect); Sir Knight John Townsend, Senior General, Sir Knight B. Cox, Recorder of No. 10 and 17 Conclaves; Sir Knight E. Gregory, Organist; and Sir Knight S. Jones, and Knight J. H. Parsons, Sentinel. The Ill. Sir Knight Major-General G. R. Munbee, K.G.C., opened a Military Chapter, when the minutes of the previous conclave were read and duly confirmed. Sir Knight Munbee then proceeded to open a College of Viceroy for the purpose of consecrating two Sir Knights (viz): Sir Knight John Townsend, Commander R.N., and Sir Knight Sidney Jones. The ceremony was extremely imposing and ably performed. Sir Knights below the degree of Ven. Eusebius, cannot imagine any thing more beautiful than this degree when well rendered, which it was on this occasion, especially that part where the signs are given and explained; also the investment and placing of the Candidates in the chair of Eusebius. The M.P. Sov. requested all Sir Knights below the Imperial degree to retire, after which he opened a Senate of Sovereigns, and Ill. Sir Knight Irwin, enthroned Ill. Sir Knight G. B. Munbee as the M.P.S. of Conclave, No. 10; also Em. Sir Knight E. T. Inskip as the M.P. Sov. Conclave

No. 17. Viceroy and Military Knights being again admitted, saluted the newly enthroned Sovereigns with seven salutes, &c. The Conclave was then resumed in the Military degree, when Sir Knight Munbee made the following appointments:—Em. Sir Knight Rev. J. C. Pigot, High Prelate; Sir Knight J. Townsend, Senior General; Sir Knight E. T. Inskip, Junior General; Sir Knight B. Cox, Recorder and Treasurer; Sir Knight E. Gregory, Prefect; and Sir Knight S. Jones, Standard Bearer. The other appointments of officers were postponed until next Conclave, except that of the permanent Council which consists of Sir Knight Munbee, M.P.S.; Sir Knight Irwin, Past M.P.S.; Sir Knight Clarke, V.E.; Sir Knight Cox, Recorder and Treasurer; Sir Knights Townsend, Pigot, and Gregory. The Recorder presented the annual report in accordance with the 12th By-law, as follows:—

"Sir Knights,—In submitting the first annual report since the organisation of the Conclave, I have few remarks to add other than those which are in the detailed statement of the funds herewith annexed.

"It will be seen that during the past year four Sir Knts. have joined the Conclave, and eleven others have been installed, making the number fifteen in all who have been received as members and placed on the roll.

"The ordinary disbursements are exceedingly small in amount, yet heavy items of expense during the past year have been incurred, which will not be an annual charge, (viz., furnishing the Conclave, and printing by-laws for members.) The amount received in fees has been £12 6s., and the only disbursement £3 8s. I respectfully submit to your approval, for order to pay the same, all bills now due by the Conclave. After discharging the said bills there will be due to the Treasurer, £1 7s. 10d., which will eventually be recouped by subscriptions falling due.

"I beg to remain, Sir Knights, in fraternal bonds,

+ "BENJAMIN COX,

"Recorder of Conclaves, 10 and 17."

The report was received and ordered to be recorded in the minute book. A letter was written from the Recorder of Conclave No. 19, Birmingham, asking for information, and Sir Knt. Cox was requested to reply thereto. The business of the Conclave being ended it was closed with prayer by the High Prelate, and the Chevaliers adjourned to a supper (provided by Bro. Kirkbride, of the York Hotel), and spent a pleasant evening under the presidency of Ill. Sir Knt. Irwin, K.G.C.

BIRMINGHAM.—Rose of Sharon Conclave, No. 19.—The second regular assembly of this flourishing conclave was held at the Masonic Hall, Birmingham. The M.P.S. the Rev. W. B. Smith presided, there was a large attendance of Sir Knights, and the room was appropriately arranged for the degrees. Sir Knts. J. T. Kennedy and A. Horrocks supplied the necessary furniture and banner of the Order, the latter was especially admired, and is certainly one of the most handsome we have ever seen. The conclave having been opened in imperial form, the lines commencing "Thou, whose almighty word," were chanted. After which the minutes of the previous meeting were put for confirmation. A ballot was then taken for the candidates, six in number; and it proving unanimous in their favour, three of them who were in attendance having been properly prepared, were admitted and duly installed as Knights of the Order. The M.P.S. discharged his duties in an excellent manner. Sir Knt. M. Belcher, Organist, added greatly to the impressiveness of the ceremony by the beautiful and appropriate music. Letters were read from three of the candidates who were unable to attend, also from Colonel John Machen, who was detained in London and unable to attend for the purpose of taking the priestly degree and being installed as M.P.S. to qualify him for the office of Inspector General of the province, for which ceremony, authority had been received from the G.I.C. of the Order. Six candidates were proposed for installation, a committee appointed to frame bye-laws, and a very handsome tunic adopted as the dress in lieu of the apron, the conclave was then closed in imperial form. The brethren adjourned to the banquet room, and partook of an excellent banquet the usual toasts of the Order were proposed and responded to. Sir Knt. R. W. Little's song of the Order, "Let's rally round the Standard," was sung by Sir Knt. J. T. Kennedy in his usual effective style, the Sir Knts. separated at an early hour, highly pleased with the success attending the Rose of Sharon Conclave. A conclave of emergency is to be held for the purpose of conferring the priestly degree on Colonel Machen, and installing some of the candidates.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Unwhole some Changes.—The changeable weather is causing much sickness, and exerting the most powerful influence in deranging the secretions of the body. Alternating chills and heats so derange the capillary circulation that the liver, stomach, or lungs, must become disordered. Holloway's Ointment well rubbed over these parts twice a day, proves the quickest, safest, and best corrective. It penetrates the skin, enters the deeper structures, purifies their blood, rouses torpid organs to more active exertions, cleanses their substance, regularises their circulation, and renders their secretions abundant, without annoying irritation or in any way depressing, much less exhausting, the vital forces. Holloway's medicaments afford an easy means of curing coughs, colds, influenza, and asthmatic affections.

A GLANCE AROUND.

THE season of work has returned. The metropolis of England again rejoices in the active labours of Freemasonry—rejoices we say advisedly, because the cause of charity is now being pleaded, not without success, in the hundred-and-sixty lodges of this great city. The Boys' School requires aid, and we can bespeak for it the prompt, vigorous, and zealous support of the Craft, who, we feel assured, will never leave in the Slough of Despond an institution which appeals to our warmest sympathies; for let it not be forgotten that in cherishing the sons of our less fortunate brethren we are in reality building up a rampart for the future. The lewises now under our care will be the men of the coming generation, and by educating them well and wisely, we are in reality perpetuating our ancient Brotherhood. The building in which these boys are housed is unquestionably one of the most magnificent of its kind in the kingdom. Every requisite for the comfort of the children is provided, together with appliances which, although to some they may appear superfluous, prove beyond question that the happiness of the juvenile inmates is the primary object kept in view by the managers of the institution.

We have also the Girls' School—an equally noble foundation—fortunately more prosperous than the former, although we may add that this institution also deserves strong support, and there must be no diminution of our interest or pecuniary help to continue the work it now so well carries on. The Royal Benevolent Institution is likewise, we are happy to say, in a very flourishing condition, so that if the brethren will but pull together with a will now, and extricate the Boys' School from its difficulties, we shall be able to face the future without fear, in the full conviction that true charity—the brightest ornament of Freemasonry—will ever maintain those noble institutions in prosperity for all time to come.

We have had occasion before to glance at the proceedings of our brethren abroad, and now that the London Masons are actively working, let us look around, and see what are the objects and aims of our freres on the continent. France appears to be full of the Congress mania, and is setting her house in order as if she expected a deadly conflict between the lodges and the Papal power as represented by the Ecumenical Council. The "Monde Maçonnique," a very able exponent of advanced liberal views, takes exception to some of the remarks we made recently upon the suppression of the formula commonly used at the head of continental Masonic documents, "To the glory of the Grand Architect of the Universe," and our contemporary enquires when will English brethren recognise the right of man to believe or disbelieve according to the dictates of his conscience? We have never disputed this right; and we may fearlessly speak for English Masons generally when we assert that they will be found the strongest upholders of liberty of conscience and freedom of worship, not only within the limits of the three kingdoms, but throughout the world at large. This, however, is not incompatible with our requiring a declaration from all our candidates of their belief in a Supreme Being. We bind them to no creed, but we must be satisfied that they are men who will respect an obligation; consequently a man who believes in nothing, to whom virtue and vice are mere abstract terms, and for whom the sublime doctrine of the immortality of the soul is a shadowy dream—is very properly excluded from the Masonic Fraternity in England. We advise our clever contemporary to reconsider the question, when we doubt not it will give English Freemasonry credit for being the advocate of true toleration and rational progress.

In Germany, we find the Masonic horizon clouded by the mystic speculations of utopian philosophers. We have on the one hand, what is called the "Union of German Freemasons," whose main object seems to be to overthrow legitimate authority by preaching a crusade against the right of Grand Lodges to rule the Craft. On the other hand, we have conflicting jurisdictions—three existing in Berlin alone—each governed by principles more or less antagonistic to those which guide the others. If we proceed to Italy, we find matters worse; four or five grand Masonic bodies divide the territory between them, and we fear that in more than one lodge under their sway political discussions and anti-religious tirades are more regarded than the work of genuine Freemasonry. In Spain, the Craft is beginning to emerge from the forced torpor to which it was reduced under Bourbon rule. We have lately had advices from Madrid which state that there are now fifteen lodges organized in that capital, besides many others in the provinces. By refraining from identifying Freemasonry with any faction or party in the State, our Spanish brethren will earn the respect and esteem of the Fraternity, and promote the stability and success of the Masonic Institution in their beloved country. Portugal has long enjoyed a more tolerant régime than the other portion of the Peninsula, but even there we find there is a difficulty, as a spurious body appears to have taken root, and fills the land with its moral miasma.

In Holland and Belgium, and in the Scandinavian kingdoms, the Order seems to enjoy the blessings of unity, peace and concord. No rival jurisdictions exist, and the supreme bodies are not troubled with any internal dissensions. Russia is now the only nation in Europe in which Freemasonry is not openly practised. Even in Austria the Craft is rapidly progressing, and lodges are being formed in Hungary and Transylvania without let or hindrance. Turkey is in rather an anomalous position, as the Prov. Grand Lodge formerly held under England is virtually extinct, and this is a great drawback to the extension of lodges under the English constitution. Ireland, France, Italy, Germany, and the United States have all started lodges in the Sultan's dominions, which are evidently considered Masonically, as "No man's land," and if this conflict of jurisdictions goes on, it cannot fail to act prejudicially to the interests of the Craft.

After all, we have reason to believe that the true principles of Freemasonry are as well understood and as thoroughly practised in England as in any other country in the world. Even if we have to plead guilty to a little excess occasionally on the part of a few bon vivants, it is an error that sinks into comparative shade when we witness the graver error—the unpardonable sin—for such we must call the perversion of our tenets by some misguided brethren abroad, who appear to think that the conspirator's dagger is a more noble weapon for a Mason than the Deacon's wand; and, to conclude, we are satisfied that in the exercise of charity, English brethren will bear favourable comparison with any of their compeers, and we trust that instead of the frothy "Liberty, Equality, and Fraternity," our motto will long continue to be "Brotherly Love, Relief, and Truth."

It is with great pleasure we extract the following appointment from the London Gazette of last Thursday:—

"WHITEHALL, OCT. 25.—The Queen has been pleased to direct Letters Patent to be passed under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, granting unto Albert William Woods, Esq., Lancaster Herald, the office of Garter Principal King of Arms, with the name of Garter, and the style, liberties, and pre-eminences belonging to the said office, the same having become vacant by the decease of Sir Charles George Young, Knight, late Garter."

Bro. Woods being as most of our readers are aware the Grand Director of Ceremonies.

GRAND LODGE OF COLORADO.

At the annual Communication of the M.W. and Honourable Fraternity of F. and A. Masons of Colorado, held in Denver, on Tuesday, the 28th of Sept., the following named Grand Officers were elected and duly installed: Bros. M.W. H. M. Teller, G.M., Central; R.W. R. Lopriz, D.G.M., Dewrer; W. D. Anthony, S.G.W., Dewrer; Halsays, J.G.W., Central; W. W. Ware, G. Treas., Georgetown, and Ed. C. Parmela, G. Sec., Georgetown. Bro. L. N. Greenhaf, of Dewrer, was appointed Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Correspondence.

In our leading article last week the sentence beginning "In the British Islands and in the United States of America it happily still preserves its original character as a glorious allegory of the present eternal life and prospects of Man," should read present prospects and eternal life of Man.

SELECT MASTER.

This Degree is the perfection of Ancient Masonry, and without which the history of the Royal Arch Degree cannot be complete. It rationally accounts for the concealment and preservation of many essentials of the Craft which were discovered and brought to light at the erection of the second temple, after they had been concealed from the Masonic eye for a period of four hundred and seventy years. Many interesting particulars relative to those few who, for their superior skill, were selected to complete an important part of King Solomon's Temple are also explained.

ARCANA.

In the secret arcana of our mysteries a series of valuable truths are preserved which correspond with the teaching of Christianity, and point to the appearance of a Saviour in the world, to atone for human transgression and carry us from earth to heaven; and being the conservator of such valuable mysteries, it is not surprising that in these days of superior piety and intelligence it should so rapidly increase in public estimation and be practised by the wise and good, not merely as a source of rational amusement, but as a means of promoting the blessings of morality and virtue amongst mankind and augmenting a respect for the institution of religion.—Dr. Oliver.

MASON.

The speculations of many Masonic writers respecting the origin and derivation of this word are too puerile to be repeated. It is evidently the German "metzen," to cut. In Germany, the operative masons were called "stein-metzen," stone-cutters, and sometimes "mauern," wall-builders. The term Mason is simply the German word anglicized by softening the tz sound.—Macoy.

CONSECRATION OF THE WARREN LODGE, No. 1276, AT EGREMONT, CHESHIRE.

Twenty-one brethren were proposed as joining members, and three candidates for initiation, so that the lodge will start at its first regular meeting with thirty-five members, and every prospect of a steady increase.

After the lodge was closed a first-class banquet was given at Stokes Hotel, Seacombe, attended by all the Prov. Officers and a numerous company of the brethren, who cordially united in wishing prosperity to the new lodge. Bro. Hill, W.M., in the chair.

The New Vade Mecum (invented and manufactured by Charles H. Vincent, optician, of 23, Windsor-street Liverpool) consists of a telescope well adapted for tourists, &c., to which is added an excellent microscope of great power and first-class definition, quite equal to others sold at ten times the price. Wonderful as it may seem, the price of this ingenious combination is only 3s. 6d., and Mr. Vincent sends it (carriage free) anywhere, with printed directions, upon receipt of post-office order or stamps to the amount of 3s. 10d.—Adv.

JURISDICTION OF GRAND LODGES.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

MR. EDITOR.—In America the doctrines that Grand Lodges have exclusive jurisdiction in their several territories, has become so firmly established, that all attempts to change it in practice are useless. It would seem, indeed, that this doctrine so commends itself to the sound judgment of the Craft that no such attempts would be made. Two distinct civil governments could exist in the same territory, as well as two distinct Masonic governments. Both are impossibilities.

It follows as a necessary consequence to this doctrine that no person made a Mason in any state by any authority other than the Grand Lodge of that state, can be recognised in that state. He is held to be irregular and clandestine.

It further inevitably follows that the Scottish Rite must commence at its fourth degree, and that its degrees can be conferred only upon Master Masons of the York Rite, or else that there must be no recognition between the two Rites. A York Rite Mason would recognise a Scottish Rite Mason made under authority of the Supreme Council as a Mason, no sooner than he would an Odd Fellow, as a member of any other organisation.

The Rite, whether wisely or unwisely has chosen the former alternative, and accordingly the Constitution of the Supreme Council 33° of the Northern Jurisdiction expressly provides that the degrees shall be conferred only upon affiliated Master Masons, this has given rise to a question of Masonic law, which has been much discussed, viz.:—"What is the effect of an expulsion, by a lodge, of a possessor of the higher grades?" Let it be remembered that there is no appeal beyond the Grand Lodge, and that the higher degrees "cannot in any manner interfere in the trial."

The higher bodies of the York Rite, which build upon the Masters degree precisely in the same manner as the bodies of the Scottish Rite, have often decided this question. They hold that when the foundation is destroyed, the whole structure falls. If the Grand Master of Templars in the United States should be expelled by his lodge, and the expulsion confirmed by the Grand Lodge, he ceases to be a Master Mason, Royal Arch Mason, or Knight Templar.

The same rule is applied in the Scottish Rite, and we can as well maintain that a structure will remain in its position after its foundation has been removed and destroyed, as that a man can be a Mason of the thirty-third degree without being a Master Mason!

The same doctrine of exclusive Grand Lodge Jurisdiction is the foundation of the complaint of the Grand Lodge of Louisiana, against the Grand Orient of France, the Grand Lodge of Louisiana so far as she is concerned, does not inquire whether Chassaignac's Council is spurious or not, she holds that a lodge of Masons formed in the state of Louisiana by any other authority whatever than her own is an irregular and spurious lodge, and all its initiates clandestine Masons. But she finds that this Council has undertaken to establish lodges in her territory, and that the Grand Orient of France has recognised those lodges.

Those lodges were in existence, were held by her to be spurious, were also held by the Grand Orient of France to be spurious for years before they admitted persons of colour into their membership. But when they proclaimed that they admitted Masons without regard to race or colour, the Grand Orient recognised them, the logical proposition embodied in the action of the Grand Orient is, that a spurious lodge by admitting members without regard to race or colour thereby becomes regular!!

If Chassaignac's lodges admitted only such candidates as other lodges, they would be held spurious equally as now, the character of the initiates has nothing whatever to do with the question.

The same rule is applied in the case of the lodge established by the Grand Lodge of Hamburg in the State of New York. In that Lodge, the Grand Lodge of New York (as well as all the other American Grand Lodges,) holds to be irregular without regard to the character of the membership or initiates.

The action of the Grand Orient as shown in the Bulletin for July, is based upon an utter misconception of the question. It was assumed that the Grand Lodge of Louisiana, and the Supreme Councils in the United States hold those lodges to be spurious, because they initiate persons of colour, this is not so. The Grand Lodge of Louisiana (in accordance with the general Masonic sentiment in the United States) holds, as its published record shows, that lodges have the right to receive candidates of any race or colour. It seems impossible that the Craft in general will fall into the error of the Grand Orient.

THE JEWS NOT A NATION OF BUILDERS

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER.—At page 190 of your issue of 23rd of October, I find your correspondent Bro. D. Stolz, rating me for stating that the Jews were Not a Nation of Builders, he considers I am wrong in saying so, and after frightening me with a Latin quotation, goes on to tell us about certain parties, whom he says were connected with the Jewish history, and "were builders," such as Cain, Noah, &c. I must confess my ignorance before this of the above "connection." Although a Scotsman myself, I always supposed that I had about as much claim to Noah as an ancestor as the Jews or any others, and as for Cain I have no desire to claim any relationship with him, more, I would suppose, according to Jewish history, that the posterity of Cain were annihilated by the flood. Then as to Abraham, the Ishmaelites, and the Edomites could claim him as their ancestor as well as the Jews, and Isaac was as much the father of Esau as he was of Jacob, so that the Arabs of to day are as much the descendants of Abraham, as are the Jews. Cain is therefore disposed of, Noah built a wooden house, while Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob gather a few stones together and "built altars." The Masonic efforts were therefore rather on a small scale. While the Jews were raising as a nation in Egypt, they saw some real building, and were forced to learn some of the Egyptian arts, hence the capabilities of "Bezaleel" in the wilderness, but to prove that the Jews themselves were Not a Nation of Builders, we find that for the long period of 400 years after they possessed Canaan, they built no temple for their worship, and when about B.C. 1012 they did set about erecting one, they had to get strangers to do it, as per 1st Chron., 22nd chap., verse 2, "And David commanded to gather together the strangers that were in the land of Israel; and he set Masons to hew wrought stones, to build the House of God," and at chap. 27, we read of store-houses for grain, vineyards, olive trees, herds and flocks, but nothing about Masons.

The building of Solomon's Temple, which would have been a mere "flea-bite" to the Egyptians was a great matter to the Jews, it was something extra, hence the way it is detailed and gone about. And as for Hiram, the architect, it was not his widowed mother, ("a daughter of Dan,") who taught him, of course not, it was his father, who was a man of Tyre, hence Hiram learned his cunning in Tyre not in Israel.

Again the Jews—something like our merchant gilds five hundred years ago, more or less—rather looked down upon handicraftsmen, as we may partially see by their making the Gibeonites "hewers of wood and drawers of water," and as I show above they employed strangers as Masons. The Jews dealt more in merchandise, herds and flocks, wheat, oil, &c., and their craftsmen were generally "strangers."

Then when Solomon did build the Temple he had to send to the King of Tyre for men, and David's palace before then was a wooden one, and as at the building of the second although they might have through necessity and the force of circumstances, a spirit at building, that was only an exception. I think that I need say nothing more to show that the Jews were not a nation of builders. No! Their forte was rather different, and so was their real glory. The Jews built a spiritual temple! for just in so far as the Egyptians and Greeks excelled the Jews in stone edifices, just so much did the Jews excel them in their religious ideas and worship. Greater Glory therefore I give to the Jew for upon Him we build all our hopes of Eternity, and it is through Him we hope to find a place in the Grand Lodge above. The Bible of the Jews is worth a thousand times more to us than all the buildings, rank and pomp of antiquity piled together. Hence I love sincerely to hear of the breaking down of our bye-past unworthy prejudices against the Jews. I love to hear of Jews being Freemasons, and therefore brethren in our fraternal bond. And I consider that our British Parliament honours itself, as well as bestows honour, when it admits Jews to its membership.

I am, yours fraternally,

LEO.

THE INSTALLATION OF THE RIGHT HON. EARL PERCY, AT ALNWICK.

On Tuesday last, an event occurred which is fraught with the highest interest to the Freemasons of this province, and to the Masonic Fraternity generally, an event which will become historical, and a source of gratifying reminiscence to those who had the good fortune to take a part in it. At the annual meeting of the Alnwick Lodge, No. 1167, presided over by Bro. James Heatley, the Right Hon. Henry George, Earl Percy, Prov. Senior Grand Warden of England, was installed Master of the lodge for the ensuing twelve months. The ceremony being impressively conducted by Bro. E. D. Davis, of Newcastle, supported by the brethren of the Alnwick Lodge, and by officers of the Prov. Grand Lodge, among whom were, The P.G. Chaplain, and Bros. L. M. Cockcroft, J. S. Challoner, J. Anderson, T. Y. Strachan, Smales, Allen, W. E. Franklin, G. Thompson, J. H. Thompson, and J. A. Hair, all from Newcastle-on-Tyne, and Bros. Braithwaite, R. King, Reed, &c., from Morpeth. The Right Noble Earl appointed and invested the following officers to serve under him, Bros. James Heatley, P.M.; Hy. H. Blair, S.W.; Wm. Brown, J.W.; Rev. E. L. Marrett, Vicar of Lesbury, G. Chaplain; Edw. T. Turnbull, Treas.; Thos. Robson, Sec.; G. W. Busby, S.D.; J. P. Simpson, J.D.; Hy. Candlish, I.G.; Thos. Pickard, Tyler; Heatley, and A. Robertson, jun., Stewards.

After the ceremony a banquet was served in the Town Hall, to which about seventy of the brethren sat down, the Right Hon. Master occupying the chair, and stating he was very sorry for the absence of the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, the Rev. E. C. Ode, of Kirkley, but must really plead guilty to being the cause of it in a second sense, as important circumstances which he really could not help, made it impossible to invite the Grand Master to stay at the castle just at the present time. (The noble Earl was understood to allude to the hourly expected birth of an heir to that noble house.) He announced his intention of undertaking the duties of his office as far as his time would allow, and signified his intention to accept the office of Steward of the Boys' School, and hoped the brethren would liberally support him in his representation of that valuable institution.

Bro. DAVIS, in proposing the health of the newly-installed Master, referred to the enthusiasm with which the toast of our beloved Queen was always received, and stated that it would be absolutely impossible, under the very walls of Alnwick Castle, to greet the heir of the House of Percy in such a character as that which he had now assumed, without the utmost enthusiasm. The Masons had conferred upon him the highest honour in their power by electing him to be their Master, and he fully appreciated the compliment, and would rule over them worthily and aright, and give them the benefit of his experience and exalted position. He hoped his lordship's acceptance of the chair was a foretaste of the honour which awaits the Alnwick Lodge for ages to come, and that our children's children when scores and scores of years have passed since the first Percy was placed in the chair, may still have one of the House of Percy to preside over them.

The NOBLE EARL, in replying assured the brethren that this was but another of those proofs of cordiality and kindness towards himself and his family that are always uniform and always extreme, but to-day it is called forth in a peculiar manner, I cannot feel that I have not earned my post, but it shall be my endeavour to justify your choice, and I will attend on all possible occasions to the duties which I have this day undertaken. I will now propose the health of the present officers of the lodge, the chief of whom I reinstate, to prevent injustice being done by my having temporarily superseded them. I cannot take credit for acuteness in their selection, but I know they are the best men, and I couple with the toast, the name of Bro. Heatley.

Bro. JAMES HEATLEY, P.M., in responding said: Right Worshipful Earl Percy, dignitaries and brethren all, it would be a piece of sheer affectation on my part, and I should be guilty indeed of gross hypocrisy did I not admit that I feel proud of the circumstances in which I now rise to address you; true it is that "some achieve greatness, while others have greatness thrust upon them." The latter has been especially my case in regard to Freemasonry, the force of circumstances, and not any merit on my part has placed me in the honourable position of Past Master in the Alnwick Lodge. I thank you cordially for the honor you have just done me in drinking my health at the call of the Junior Warden, and I am sure that Bro. Burn will excuse me if I say that he has been more than usually exuberant in his language. Pardon me however if in the company of so many distinguished Masons I venture in expressing my thanks, to recur a little to the past, as well as to congratulate ourselves on the auspicious occasion on which we have assembled this day. Not quite three years ago; the determination was formed to restore the light of Masonry to Alnwick, which had erewhile been extinguished; along with a few brethren whom I see around me I then became a humble instrument in rekindling the flame. I can assure you it did appear to us rather a hazardous undertaking. But the attempt was made in hope, as well as in fear. How these hopes have been more than realised, we are witnesses this day. The ray was at first feeble, and, in some respects, indeed, might have been regarded as a borrowed light, for we needed much assistance from another lodge (I mean the Lodge De Ogle), which I must say was cheerfully accorded. Now however at the close of the second year of our history, numbering forty-five members, we may surely congratulate ourselves on having reached the glorious sunlight; while the presence of Earl Percy in the chair this day as W.M. for the ensuing year, inspires us with the confidence that in the future that light will steadily advance onward to the "Perfect day." Brethren, in electing Earl Percy you acted in accordance with the strictest tenets of our Order, for I unhesitatingly affirm that irrespective of every other consideration you then elected the best Mason in our lodge. Allow me to ask in all seriousness, what is Freemasonry? You know, of course, the answer which would be returned were the question put in another place—but at present in view of our many responsibilities as Masons,—responsibilities to ourselves, to the Craft, and to mankind in general, I would say it is the very touchstone of honor. Masonry has been beautifully compared to a golden thread, running through the waifs and woofs of existence. It is all that, and it is something more. Like that divine faith in which we all trust, it must be something more than a mere profession—something more than a mere ritual, be it ever so gorgeous—it must be the Life, the living Life itself, otherwise it is without value to the possessor and worthless unto others. It is the cultivation and the embodiment of that heavenly virtue, the endowment of which we are told in holy writ is better far than the eloquence of men or even the tongue of angels. Masonry knows no condition, no color, no clime, while respecting all law and order, both human and divine, it recognizes no nationality, it is confined to no continent, but like the circumambient air itself is bounded only by earth and heaven. To the enquiry, What has Masonry done? I would rejoin, what has it not done? It has burst the bonds of antagonistic creeds, it has surmounted the barriers of political differences, it has bridged across the extremes of social rank, and teaching us to look beyond the narrow limits of particular institutions, whether civil or religious, it has enabled us to view in every son of Adam a brother of the dust. It has brought men into fraternal intercourse who otherwise would have passed through life in utter ignorance that they possessed one kindred feeling. It has smoothed down the asperities which are ever springing up in the pathway of this world through the conflicting interests of human effort; and it has quelled the note of discord which so often mars the poetry of existence. Whenever it has failed in any one instance to accomplish either of these grand and heavenlike results, it can only be when the spirit of Masonry has never enshrined within the bosom its noble principles received into the heart, or its sublime dictates allowed to regulate the conduct. I now come to the discharge of a very pleasing duty, that is to thank those officers who have along with myself performed the work of the lodge during the past year. I have to thank them personally for the kind approval and brotherly assistance which they have at all times afforded me, indeed, I have to thank all the brethren for the timely forbearance and generous sympathy which I have always received at their hands. The attendance at the lodge has been well sustained, and the work within it has been cheerfully done. But when I say within the lodge, I do not mean to exclude that important officer who stands without. The duties of Tyler have been discharged by Bro. Mulvany with such unswerving fidelity as to merit the highest meed of commendation. There is another office also involving a great deal of trouble and self-denying labour, which deserves special mention at my hands. I mean the office of Secretary. That laborious post was accepted so willingly by Bro. Turnbull, and its duties have been so energetically fulfilled by him, that it affords me the greatest pleasure to associate his name with the toast I have now to propose, viz., that of the Past Officers. I can safely say that during the twelvemonth which have elapsed since we last met together in a similar capacity, not one jarring note has been heard within yon sacred enclosure—we care not for the attacks of the cowan from without, but we do care that peace love, and honour may ever reign within. But at best, brethren, it can only be regarded as a temporary judgment. In a few years most of us will have passed away, admitted I trust into that Grand Lodge above, where the G.A.O.T.U. ever lives and reigns—that lodge which is never closed, where work will be worship, and labour will be prayer; and when those who may still remain shall be further down the stream of time, then we trust amongst all the hallowed memories of the past, not the least pleasant will be the recollection of the early history of this Masonic Lodge.

Bro. TURNBULL having suitably responded, and some other appropriate toasts having been duly honoured, the auspicious ceremony was brought to a close.

It may be remarked that the banquet was of the most attractive character, and the choice fruits which were abundantly dispersed over the tables led to the impression that the noble chairman had munificently seconded the successful efforts of the Stewards, to whom a vote of thanks was proposed by Bro. D. E. Franklin and cordially accorded by the meeting.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF LINCOLNSHIRE.

CONSECRATION OF A NEW LODGE AT BRIGG.

A most interesting and successful meeting was held here on Monday the 25th October, to constitute and consecrate a new lodge under the name of the Ancholme Lodge, No. 1283. The ceremony, which was complete, has never been more beautifully rendered than it was under the presidency of W. Bros. Major Smyth, D.P.G.M., assisted by Captain E. Locock, (712,) S.W.; W. H. Radley, (838), J.W.; W. G. Moore, (297), R.; C. M. Nisbitt, (712), T.; C. E. Lucas, (712), Sec.; the Deacons and other Officers. Bro. C. E. Lucas, performed the duties of Chaplain, and also gave a short congratulatory address. He was very warmly received, as indeed he always is whenever he presents himself to the brethren. There was only one circumstance which tended to throw a cloud over the meeting, and that was the unavoidable absence of His Grace the Duke of St. Alban's, P.G.M. A letter from His Grace was read stating the deep regret he felt at being unable to be present. The lodge was held in the Town Hall, which had been most tastefully decorated for the occasion by Bro. H. L. Simons, assisted by Miss Kirkham, the daughter of Bro. Kirkham of the Angel Hotel. A large number of the principal inhabitants were admitted after the Ceremony was over to view the room, and the rich illuminated emblematical devices and gorgeous banners, and the exquisitely chaste new furniture, together with the jewels and the magnificent silver vessels containing the elements, were the theme of admiration.

Though the railway accommodation is of the worst possible description making it a matter of the greatest difficulty to prosecute the double journey in one day, no less than seventy brethren were present. After the imposing ceremony of consecration had been brought to a close by singing a beautiful anthem, which was accompanied on the harmonium by Bro. Waite, of Louth, in his usual felicitous style, the installation of the W.M. took place. Bro. Valentine Dudley Carey Elwes, P.M. was presented by P.M. Bro. Fowler, 712, P.P.G.S. of W. and duly placed in the chair. He then installed Bro. George Nelson, of Great Limber, as his S.W., and Bro. D. Robbs as his J.W., and the other Officers, and there is no doubt from the efficient way in which they performed the duties of their office that the Ancholme Lodge will be well worked. If report speaks true as to the number of candidates seeking admission, there will be no excuse for their not becoming proficient. The addresses to the Wardens and the Brethren were given in a most impressive manner by W. Bro. F. R. Larken, W.M. 297, and the P.G.T. Bro. Nesbitt. At an earlier part of the Ceremony the D.P.G.M. gave an oration which will be remembered by the brethren, and which was full of good advice to the young lodge. From the earnest and truly Masonic spirit which pervades the brethren in general, and the W.M. in particular, we prophecy a career of great prosperity for the new lodge.

A sumptuous banquet was provided by Br. Kirkham, at the Angel Hotel, which was attended by all the brethren, and presided over by the W.M. Bro. J. D. C. Elwes, his S.W. taking his place in the West. The usual loyal and complimentary toasts were given with much ecclat. Bro. Capt. Locock in proposing the Masonic Charities made a powerful appeal on behalf of the R.M.S. for Boys, and announced his intention of representing the Province as Steward at the next Festival. Bro. C. E. Lucas, trusted that Bro. Locock would be as well supported, and take up quite as large a sum with him (viz.:—£112) as he did this year. He also alluded in glowing terms to the satisfactory position which the P.G.L. Benevolent Fund had arrived at, and thanked the brethren very warmly for the support they had given to his pet child, hoping that it would grow in vigour and usefulness for many a year.

AN ESSAY

Concerning the most productive and most useful method of Masonic activity most in accordance with the ideas of Freemasonry. By Bro. B. A. CRAMER, at Eichenbarleben, Member of the Lodge at Aschersleben.

[Specially translated for THE FREEMASON, by Bro. W. LITTAUR.]

II.—ACTIVITY AMONGST NON-MASONS.

The persons received into Masonry who already possess the average moral status of the profane world, should be raised to the moral elevated status of Freemasonry. To attain this end it is not sufficient, as has already been very properly observed by a distinguished brother, "merely to express general maxims, wishes and exhortations, as these have always proved inefficacious." Neither does the mutual intercourse of the brethren within the lodge suffice; for it is proved by experience, that out of the lodge the brethren in general do not distinguish themselves at all by their possession of a higher state of morality from the great mass of the so-called educated classes; nay, we often hear of accusations against the private life of Masons. The good which is done by individual brethren, through their honest efforts in their special sphere of action, to their families and fellow-citizens, is not so much done from the fact of their being Masons, but irrespective of Masonry they are good men. We are of opinion that the little success hitherto attained by our Masonic Institution, is caused by the altogether unjustifiable and one-sided adherence to the usages of the ancient operative Masons, viz., to teach and instruct in the lodges; and also in their total disregard of the fact, that in close contiguity to the lodge, these architects had a colossal cathedral, to which their art was devoted, and through the construction of which their art was kept alive. We are now continually working at the rough stone, so that our working rather resembles that in the quarry. We allow the cubic stones to lie about and decay on the building ground, and our Masters prefer leaving everything to be arranged and fitted up by the Sovereign Architect himself, thus ignoring that it is they who are to be both the assistants and instruments, and are solely responsible for the real progress of the structure. Consequently a lodge which does not build, but is always preparing for the building, such a lodge rather resembles an Inn or house of call for idling journeymen, who boast of their dexterity and who probably practise themselves assiduously in the recital of the sayings of their crafts, but withal far prefer eating and drinking to hard work. To speak more definitely, the system of individual development has outlived itself. Indeed such a system could only have been of value in times when the individual had just cause to fear being oppressed by the barbarism then generally prevailing; but now-a-days the moral and practical wants have become quite different, in consequence of the culture of civilisation. People are beginning to perceive more and more that the individual is intimately connected with the welfare of the whole. Now if the lodges have hitherto declined to endeavour to obtain more than the one-sided development of such a proportionately small fraction of mankind, then those practised in Masonry have to unite out of the lodge in a free and independent manner, towards a great goal, which is to represent a mighty cathedral, such as we have already mentioned. This goal which is a fundamental condition for true Masonic activity, cannot be optional or directed to any particular speciality, but must be in conformity with the Royal Art—a system of friendship and benevolence towards men. The latter has always been a principal feature with us, and those who protest against it seem to identify it only with "old-fashioned almsgiving." Even in the fundamental constitution of the Royal York Lodge, the words of Tessler are as follows: "In accordance with our ancestors in Freemasonry, and in conformity with reason, we must consider benevolence in the widest sense of the word as the only genuine, legal, pure and original purpose of Freemasonry; which purpose is only attainable in proportion as it endeavours to lessen all the miseries of suffering humanity, the mental as well as the corporal, and this through legal means which must intimately agree with the laws of morality and those of the government." "In accordance with this explanation of the fundamental object of our Order, Freemasonry is an institution of benevolence for the whole world, by means of which and in proportion to the capacity, dignity and activity of the Members, numerous evils may be removed from society, and many heavy burthens taken off from suffering humanity." Further, "The true and only object of eclectic Masonry is a progressive development." Those belonging to the Order shall in common brotherly activity, bring about perfection in themselves, and spread everywhere the blessings of a higher state of civilization amongst men. Finally, it is said in the new constitution of the Grand Lodge "Zur Sonne" (the sun)

"Moreover the lodge stimulates its members to general useful and benevolent works." Consequently there only remains a small step to be taken, which is to find out the right plan to be observed by every active brother in respect to non-Masons in the profane world. As we cannot deal here with benevolence in its more limited sense, but can only take into consideration the means for raising the standard of morality, and as the raising of this standard with the lower classes cannot be brought about except by a simultaneous improvement in their material position, it is evident that it is the social question we have to take into consideration; hence our duty is to co-operate in order to bring about its satisfactory solution. We do not apprehend that any one will object to this, by saying, Why! we have already been building at the temple of humanity, and have somewhat progressed in our labours, only they are not yet appreciated and will not be visible for a long period." These are antiquated views, and we here again assert that we must endeavour to approach the ideal by real means, and that this approximation is to be clearly demonstrated. Now there are already existing in connection with many lodges, associations "for good works, counsel and assistance."

The founders of the lodge at Aarau, in order to openly pursue Masonic purposes founded, many years ago, a society for mental culture which is flourishing even to this day. This proves that we desire nothing at all extraordinary in our organisation, or that it is to be established, if possible, everywhere, not only in places where there are lodges, but wherever brethren are, particularly in small towns and villages, where there is generally a want of leading minds. It is to be expected that these societies, at first isolated, will soon be developed into a large association for mental culture.

But let us now examine more closely the field of labour that presents itself before us; in doing which, we will principally follow the writings of V. A. Huberts, who, as it is well known, has been studying most attentively the social question for a considerable time.

The weal and woe of human society, depends as much upon its relation to the surrounding nature, as on the relation of its individual members and classes to each other; there classes now-a-days rigorously divide themselves into two regions, viz., the upper, of the possessors, which includes the rich and opulent; and the lower, of the non-possessors, viz., the working-classes and those totally destitute, who live only on the alms or means morally objectionable. Whilst the possessing class, full of selfishness, enjoys, revels in luxury, the lower class of people is plunged in a state of brutality, and their life is often nothing more than an animal struggling for existence. This state of the lower classes, in comparison to that of the higher, cannot be looked at by any philanthropist as corresponding with the ideas of human civilisation. For a state of things, where amongst the majority there is a total absence of improvement, and even where there is a great difficulty in securing the bare necessities of life, and where sudden and unforeseen circumstances may throw even the industrious workers into the abyss of poverty, such a state of things is totally unworthy the true dignity of man. Although we cannot entirely absolve the suffering classes from the responsibility of such a condition of things, yet the heavier guilt for the ignorance, immorality and brutality of the people falls on the higher classes, because they neglect the duties which their higher social position imposes upon them. The moral feelings are wounded by the fact of seeing the weak taken advantage of by the strong, and the destitute by the opulent. The facts belonging to this subject are of such an awful nature, that only a mental and morally vicious state of education—a state of brutality and rottenness even—in the upper classes, is alone capable of explaining how the classes can rest at ease with respect to such a wretched state of things, considering they derive their superfluities from the privations of the working classes. How seldom do we find even so much as a trace of the consciousness of our true social vocation, and the duty of compensating for these contrasts with an appropriate application of the social advantages possessed. How still more seldom do we find a serious consideration of the ways and means for a practical fulfilment of this vocation; how seldom do we find even so much as a consciousness that in the non-fulfilment of these duties lies the proof of our not being morally entitled to such social advantages. But a better condition of things is not brought about by violent destruction, but by an organised development of the healthy germs still existing.

The social disease of modern civilisation arises from selfishness in its thousand different forms; the almost obtuse thoughtlessness of the educated classes prevents their taking to heart the prevailing distress and misery. Some of those classes prefer clothing themselves with pious phrases, others do not deceive themselves as to the distress but persist in stubborn inactivity. The continually increasing pretensions of the lower classes, which are said to exist and of which people complain so much, have by no means been fully proved; and at all events, if such pretensions exist, the principal cause lies in the example set by the higher and middle classes. Let anyone who is not already lost in selfishness, give up useless weeping, hopes and wishes, and let him form instead of these, heartfelt well-founded convictions of his social vocation, in the fulfilling of which alone is to be found the true moral title-deed to every aristocratic position. Others will be ready to help in the work of salvation, and experience proves, that these only require to be guided aright, and they rest satisfied if in the exercise of their vocation they obtain but feeble success in isolated cases, simply because selfishness is foreign to their nature. Such a devotion to labour, leads naturally to the comprehension of the doctrine that a raising of the social status in as many isolated parts as possible, although singly considered, apparently insignificant, yet finally assist in raising the whole stratum. The Government should only interfere in an indirect manner, as even the most useful legislative action to bring about a better state of things will lack an important element of success unless very extensive preparatory labours have been made by independent social action.

The successful participation in this social action is open to every one at all places in proportion to the individual powers and the good-will possessed; it is therefore evident, that the co-operation of the many must ultimately result in a marked improvement. Only let us begin to work, before a general politico-social catastrophe occurs.

The working classes are deficient of the capacity for their own raising and improvement; they are not capable of realising their true position; our duty is therefore to give them assistance, by stimulating them to self-activity. There must be afforded to them the means for the development of their intellectual, moral, and physical capacities towards social self-help, and this must take place under the direction and co-operation of the true friends of the people. These true friends must stand, so to speak, like a "Corps d'Elite (select body) at the head of a widely-spread association," in order to call forth the movement where it does not as yet exist, to give it support and solidity, and to maintain it in the right path. We shall meet, no doubt, with resistance from the majority of the middle and higher classes, who are led by prejudices and apprehensions; for in all necessary reforms the chief difficulties do not lie so much in the given nature of the object sought in the views and opinions people take of those objects. However, men are seldom proof against reason. Finally, the social question is totally independent of all party interests, and this fact affords the great advantage, that religious and political matters, which are the cause of all party feeling, are entirely shut out from the social question.

Thus we consider we have clearly explained the important object which is to be pursued out of the lodge, and which is perfectly in accordance with the true idea of Masonry, viz.: "The suppression of selfishness amongst the higher classes, whilst seeking to penetrate them with the true Masonic spirit, and then to bring about with the help of these classes, the moral raising of the lower stratum by the promotion of Free Associations."

In this manner our ideal may be realised and rendered productive; we shall thus find ourselves on solid ground, and on which the principles of our art are founded, and we shall then be truly useful to the world. But here, again, sacrifice must be made, for besides the material "working capital," a moral and intellectual working capital must be brought or produced. Courage and energy, which are strengthened by self-sacrifice, will certainly assist us to a happy realisation of our principles.

We now continue to discuss the means for bringing about this object; for which purpose, a short explanation will be quite sufficient; for if our principles are the right ones, their realisation will be a comparatively easy one.

(To be concluded in our next.)

THE BLOOD IN OLD AGE.—As age advances, the blood becomes thin and cloudy—or, in a full habit, thick and cloudy. The failing of the powers of life requires extra nutrition and support, and the blood yielding the excess required is soon overcharged with carbon, which gives to it the cloudy appearance. Being then impure, day by day the vitiated matter increases, and the body suffers from a thousand ailments. "The Blood Purifier"—Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla—supplies the extra nutrition to the blood, and restores to it its florid hue, and then the progress of decay is arrested, and the ailments disappear; man lives out his days, and the sunset of life is unattended with suffering. Testimonials with each bottle from the Hon. the Dean of Lismore, General Wm. Gilbert, of the Indian Army; and Rev. Francis Monck, of "The Gospel Evangelist." Ordered also by the Apothecaries' Hall, London. Sold by all Druggists, in bottles 2s. 6d., 4s., 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 11s. Pills and Ointment each in boxes 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d.—Caution, Get the red and blue wrappers, with the Old Doctor's head in the centre. No other genuine.—ADVT.

SCOTLAND.

St. Andrew's Lodge, No. 48, Edinburgh.

INITIATION OF H.I.H. THE PRINCE RHODOCANAKIS.

An emergency meeting of this lodge was held on Monday evening, the 18th October, for the purpose of admitting the Prince Rhodocanakis to the Craft. A large number of brethren were present, among whom we noticed Bros. Dr. Carmichael, R.W.M.; William Mann, 32°, Grand Junior Warden of Scotland; Lindsay Mackenzie, 30°, Representative of the Grand Lodge of Canada; Dr. Cavins, 30°, High Prelate of the 18° and Grand Orator of the 30°; Dr. Loth, 30°; H. Y. D. Copland, R.W.M., 44°; Wm. Hay, 30°, P.M., &c.; C. Fitzgerald Matier, 18°, R.W.M., Mark Lodge, 22, Manchester; Dr. George Dickson, L.R.C.P., S.E., &c.; and many other brethren whose names we did not catch. Documentary evidence of the Prince's identity, and of the recognition of his titles and prerogatives by the British and Continental Governments having been asked for by the Masonic officials the same were courteously submitted and admitted. The lodge was then opened by the R.W.M., Bro. Dr. Carmichael, assisted by his officers, and after the ballot had been taken, the candidate, Prince Demetrius Rhodocanakis was admitted in due form, and was initiated into the mysteries and privileges of Ancient Freemasonry, by Bro. Carmichael, the R.W.M. The duties of Senior Deacon were efficiently discharged by Bro. C. Fitzgerald Matier, and the Charge was delivered in a most impressive manner by Bro. H. Y. D. Copland, R.W.M., &c., &c. The lodge was then advanced to the second degree, and His Imperial Highness was passed F.C., by Bro. Copland. The chair was then taken by Bro. Wm. Hay, P.M., and one of the Grand Stewards of Scotland; and the solemn ceremonies appropriate to the Sublime Degree of a Master Mason were gone through in a most efficient manner; the second part of the traditional history being given by Bro. C. F. Matier. There being no further business before the Lodge of Emergency it was closed in due form with solemn prayer, according to ancient custom. His Imperial Highness was pleased to remain with the brethren for a little brief refreshment, and responded in a most happy manner to the toast of his health, proposed by the R.W.M.; among the other toasts were the health of Bro. Mann, the G.I.W. of Scotland, Bro. Lindsay Mackenzie, G.S.C., Grand Representative of the Grand Lodge of Canada. The visiting brethren responded to by Bro. C. F. Matier, and the health of the R.W.M., and prosperity to the Lodge of St. Andrew's, which was proposed by the Grand Junior Warden, Bro. Mann.

It may be mentioned that the candidate's receiving three degrees in one night, which must appear somewhat irregular to our English brethren, is in certain cases of extreme emergency, as in the present case, permitted by the laws of the Grand Lodge of Scotland. We may mention, also, that the Prince's educated manners and gentlemanly courtesy have produced a very favourable impression in Edinburgh.

The Prince, as must be well known to those of our readers who are more or less familiar with the long annals of the Byzantine Empire, derives his paternal descent in a direct line from the family of Caius Flavius Valerius Aurelius Claudius Constantinus, surnamed the Great, first Christian Emperor of the Roman Empire; and in his illustrious house, are at the present moment represented not only nearly all the extinct historical and once omnipotent families of the Byzantine Empire on whose throne they sat for generations—the Ducas, Phocas, Lacapenos, Comnenos, Botaniates, Argyros, Angelos, Bryennios, Palatogios, Vatatzes, Lascaris, Cantacuzinos, &c., &c., and with whom his own were allied over and over again, while reigning for centuries—but also those who reigned over the ancient kingdoms of Armenia, Iberia, Bulgaria, Georgia, Albania, Hungary, &c. Space will not allow of an historical sketch of this many-sided house, and we must therefore simply confine ourselves to a mention of some of the illustrious European families (representatives of some of which still exist) whose blood runs in the veins of our newly-initiated brother (the heir-apparent to the honour of his family), either through the paternal or maternal line; viz., the Old Kings of France, the Grand Dukes of Muscovy (now Emperors of Russia); the Counts, and afterwards Dukes, of Savoy (now Kings of Italy); the Dukes of Austria (now Emperors); the Dukes of Brunswick, the Marquis of Montferrat (extinct); the Old Norman Kings of the two Sicilies (extinct); the Princes of Antiochia, the Counts of Sultzbach in Bavaria; and in more modern times (15th and 16th centuries), those of the Princes or Dukes, Crispi, Sommariva, Venieri, Ghizi, Vioressi, Sfozza, Doria, D'Este, Borgia, Caraffa, Corsini, Borghesi, Pignatelli, Giustiniani, Aldobrandini, Ursini, Grimaldi, Picodella, Mirandola, Piccolomini, San-Severino, de Corona, Foscari, de Gozzadini, Visconti, Gouzagnia, Farnesi, Spinola, Colonna, Strozza, de Lueignan, Maseiwo, Mallea, Malaspina, Acciaoli, Barberini, Morosini, Spada, Santa-Croce, Carafa, Bandini, Caraccioli, Cibo, Fallieri, Delphini, Dandolo, Calatti, Frangipani, Negroponti, Scala, Daponti, Spinelli, &c., &c.

The father of His Imperial Highness, as already noticed in these pages, is the Head of his House and the Hereditary Grand Master of the Supreme Constantinian Order of the Knights of St. George. The family of His Imperial Highness, as we are instructed by history from time to time, have suffered much personally and pecuniarily, in their efforts to assert the ancient Byzantine Empire; especially in the horrible massacre of the Isle of Chio by the Turks in 1822. This place was the refuge of the family after the destruction of Constantinople in 1453, and here they remained up to the time of the said massacre, when the greater portion of the family were slain, and the survivors scattered all over the world, with sufferings equal to the calamity of the loss of Constantinople. We know on good authority that many of the lodes scattered in the provinces formerly composing the Empire had resolved to unite themselves into a Grand Orient, and had proposed His Imperial Highness as the first Grand Master. At the time this proposal was made he was unable to accept the honour, not being a Mason, but this difficulty being removed, we trust he will soon be able to assume the gavel of Grand Master of the Grand Orient of the Byzantine people, and unite all the disintegrated lodges at present spread far and wide in Moldavia, Wallachia, Turkey, Armenia, Greece, Montenegro, &c., &c., and now under about a dozen conflicting jurisdictions.

We have been requested to insert the foregoing to save enquiries from individual members of the Order; and we hear from Dr. J. Jackson Howard that the Prince's genealogy, with various documents, from the earliest times, will shortly appear under his editorship in "Miscellanea Genealogica et Heraldica," where those who wish it will find further information.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

Royal Plantagenet Encampment of Knights Templar and Priory of Malta, Ipswich.

VISIT OF THE ILL. SIR KNIGHT ALBERT G. GOODALL, 33°.

A very interesting assembly of the above Encampment took place on Monday evening last, at the Masonic Hall, Ipswich, when the Encampment and Priory were honored by a visit of the Illustrious Sir Knight Albert G. Goodall, 33°, Foreign Representative of the Grand Conclave of New York. The Eminent Sir Knight presented his letter of credence, which states that the Grand Commandery of New York State, believing that a closer knightly relation and intercourse between the respective bodies of Masonic knighthood would tend to strengthen the ties already uniting them, promote in a more eminent degree the principles of Order, and secure the greater unity of purpose, concert of action, and harmony. Therefore, having in view the accomplishment of this desirable object, and "reposing especial trust and confidence in Sir Albert G. Goodall, we have nominated, constituted and appointed, and by these presents do hereby appoint Sir Albert G. Goodall, General Foreign Representative near all the Grand Bodies of Masonic Knighthood, with full power, warrant, and authority to act and appear for us in the said Grand Bodies, wherever located, in all laudable endeavours to promote the prosperity of the Order, and success of the principles of Christian Knighthood." The document is signed by John A. Seffers, Grand Commander, and Robert Mackey, Grand Recorder. The Encampment was also honoured by the presence of the V. Em. Prov. Grand Commander for Suffolk and Cambs., Capt. N. G. Phillips, 33°. In the unavoidable absence of Sir Knight F. B. Jennings, E.C., the Encampment was opened by Sir Kt. the Rev. R. N. Sanderson, 30°, P.E.C., D.P.G.M.C. Suffolk, and upon the call of the muster-roll the Sir Knights present answered to their names, viz., C. T. Townsend, Reg., P.E.C., P.G. Capt. of Lines for England, Prov. Grand Chancellor; J. A. Pettit, jun.; W. Cuckow, Expert, Prov. G. Standard-bearer; A. J. Barber, Prov. G. Organist; J. H. Townsend, 1st Capt., Prov. G. Herald; W. T. Westgate, 2nd Capt., Prov. G. D. of C.; Edw. Dorling, Chamberlain, P.G. Capt. of Lines, England; G. S. Golding, Prov. G. Capt. of Lines; J. Chinnock, Almoner, Prov. G. Sword-bearer, and E. Robertson, Visitors, Sir Knt. Emra Holmes, 31°, P.G. Almoner, Northumberland; Sir Kt. Jno. Pitcher, P.E.C., Prudence Encampment, Prov. Grand 1st Capt.; Comp. Chas. H. Wood, of the Royal Alexander Chapter, having been elected was installed a Masonic Knight Templar. Sir Knt. Emra Holmes, of the Royal Kent Encampment, Newcastle-on-Tyne, was proposed as a joining member, also a Comp. of the Royal Alexander Chapter, for installation. The ceremony was ably and impressively performed by the Rev. and Emt. Commander, assisted by the Prov. Grand Commander. After an interval for refreshment, a Priory of Malta was opened, the Rev. R. N. Sanderson, P.E.P., acting as Prior; the V.E. P.G. Com., as Captain-General; Sir Knight Dorling, Lieutenant-General; Sir Knight Goodall, 1st Lieut.; Sir Knt. Emra Holmes, 2nd Lieut. The following Knights Templar, Chas. Hector Wood, Geo. L. Golding, and John Pitcher, P.E.C. and P.G., 1st Capt., were introduced and received the honours of Knts. of St. John of Jerusalem, Palestine, Rhodes, and Malta. The interesting ceremony was ably gone through by the E. Prior, and at its conclusion the Sir Knights retired to an elegant repast, admirably served by Frater Spalding, Equerry and Hall Keeper. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to. The Em. Sir Knt. Sanderson, who presided, proposed the V.E. Prov. Grand Commander of Suffolk and Cambridge. The P.G. Commander responded, thanking the Knights for their kindness and expressing the pleasure he felt in coming amongst them, and noticing the prosperous condition of the Order in Suffolk, desiring them to remember that as the number of Knights Templars continued to increase they should be most particular as to the class of Masons admitted to the Orders of Chivalry. The E.C. then proposed the health of Sir Knt. Goodall, who had been sent to visit English Encampments by the Grand Commandery of New York, and who had selected the Royal Plantagenet to see the workings of the Templar and Malta Orders. Sir Knt. Goodall responded, thanking the members of the Royal Plantagenet for the kind reception they had given him on this and other occasions. The Illustrious visitor concluded a most elegant speech by hoping the day would come when he might be able to reciprocate the kindness the members of the Royal Plantagenet had shown him. The health of the E.C. in the chair and other toasts, brought a very pleasant and instructive evening to a close, and the Sir Knights separated at high twelve.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE,

The Great Cure for Cholera and Consumption,

A Newly-discovered principle residing in Gum Benjamin (Styrax Benzoin), the chief chemical product of which has hitherto been Benzoic Acid, well known and highly valued by medical practitioners. The great difficulty which the discoverer encountered in bringing out this important remedy was the form in which to present it to the faculty and the public, the new chemical being amorphous and incapable of crystallization. It has therefore been deemed advisable to prepare a highly-concentrated solution of the product, combining it with such adjuncts as are considered natural auxiliaries. PRICE'S BENZODYNE is stimulant, anodyne, and mechanically astringent, arresting fluxes and hæmorrhages of all kinds both external and internal, possessing singular efficacy in the following diseases:—Ague, Bronchitis, Consumption, Colic, Cholera, Cold, Cough, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Debility in all its various forms, Fevers, Influenza, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Spasms, Ticdolereux, &c., &c. PRICE'S BENZODYNE has been tried repeatedly in these cases and has never failed to cure.

It immediately relieves all pain, actually sheathing the organs with a protective matter, which defies the action of the most virulent blood-poisons, and thus PRICE'S BENZODYNE acts as the most powerful styptic now known to science, being the only effective external application for cuts, bites of insects, and all open wounds. In Cholera, as in Consumption, its effects are astounding, while Chronic Cough yields to its curative influences in a few hours.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is acknowledged by the highest Medical authority to be the most wonderful medicine yet introduced to the public; it may be taken at any time by both young and old with the most beneficial effects in all cases, leaving no bad effects like Laudanum, Chlorodyne, or any other poisonous and imperfect preparations, and can be given when no other could be tolerated.

In Consumption and Cancer its peculiarly soothing properties render it a boon to the sufferer in allaying the cough, mitigating night perspirations, and in relieving pain, &c.

In every stage of those dire diseases it gives an amount of ease not attainable by any other remedy.

In all cases of Chest Affections, as Asthma, Bronchitis, Winter Cough, Palpitation, &c., PRICE'S BENZODYNE is a very valuable medicine, producing a composed and tranquil state of the system, and quickly relieving the cough, assisting expectoration, and in a few days removing the most distressing symptoms.

In Hysteria, Epilepsy, Gout, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nerve Pains it is justly valued, as it is given with immediate benefit, relieving pain and suffering however violent the attack.

In Diarrhoea, Cholera, Alvine Discharges, spasms and colics of the intestines, &c., its effects are signal, as it never fails to check the disease.

CONSUMPTION IN ALL ITS STAGES CURED.

Coughs, Whooping Cough, Asthma, Bronchitis, Fever, Ague, Diphtheria, Hysteria, Rheumatism, Diarrhoea, Spasms, Colic, Renal and Uterine Diseases are immediately relieved by a dose.

During the period of Dentition of Children it will be found invaluable, and in curing Whooping Cough, Spasms, dispepsia, Flatulency, preventing Convulsive Fits, Fevers, &c., to which they are so liable.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is specially adapted for Naval, Military or Traveller's medicine chests, and for Hospitals and Dispensaries everywhere.

CROSBY'S

BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.

Opium, Narcotics, and Squills, are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary Diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL.

Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says:—"I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued Cough, Pain, and Irritation of the Chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."

This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers, in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, and wholesale by Jas. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough.

* * Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.

THE AMERICAN FREEMASON

is Monthly, of sixteen double-column quarto pages of entirely original matter, and translations from the French Italian, and German Masonic papers and periodicals of the day. It is devoted to the discussion of the rights of Lodges and individual Freemasons, in contradistinction to the assumptions of Grand Lodges, and the un-Masonic doctrines and arrangements of "high degrees." Its motto is—Belief in the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man. Its price is Five Shillings a year—a sum so small that no Freemason, for pecuniary reasons, need be a non-subscriber to it.

Trans-Atlantic Subscribers to the AMERICAN FREEMASON will receive it Post-paid from the Office of Publication direct, at their respective Post-offices, upon payment of the subscription to

All Subscriptions begin with March 15th, 1869, and end with February, 1870.

The AMERICAN FREEMASON is not the organ of any Grand Lodge; but speaking the words of truth, manhood, and independence, advocates freedom for Masonry in America, and the rights of Freemasons in their Lodges—rights which, by our Grand Lodges, in their subservency to high degrees, have been invaded, until at present they are nearly obliterated.

Subscribers in the British Colonies will please address all Subscriptions and Correspondence to J. FLETCHER BRENNAN, Editor, 114, Main-street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

TO THE NERVOUS & DEBILITATED EPILEPTIC SUFFERERS AND OTHERS.

HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA, discovered, introduced, and extensively prescribed by the late eminent Dr. MARSHALL HALL, has proved an infallible remedy (by oxidizing the blood and supplying its saline constituent) for Indigestion, Debility, Coughs, Asthma, Consumption, Skin, Liver, Stomach, and Nervous Affections, more especially Epilepsy, Apoplexy, and Paralysis. The successful results of this new chemical preparation are beyond all precedent, and the extraordinary cures effected by the late discoverer, and by his successor (Dr. Sutton), in the above maladies are without a parallel in the annals of medicine; and it is confidently believed that in no case need the sufferer despair, for practical experience has demonstrated, and signal success warranted the assertion, that in 99 cases out of every 100 complete cures may be relied on.

Sold in Bottles at 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and Cases of £5 each, by

DR. SUTTON, M.D., 15, REGENT SQUARE, LONDON, W.C., and in BOLTON by PRIESTLEY, Chemist.

The following are a few Testimonials published by privilege.

Sir Charles Locock, Physician-Accoucher to Her Majesty, stated at a meeting of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society, that in sixteen cases of Epilepsy he had effected permanent cures by the use of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa.

"September 6, 1866.—The Editor of the Bury Gazette returns thanks to Dr. Hall for the great benefit he has received from his Chlorate of Potassa treatment in a severe nervous disease." Sir J. Ferguson, King's College Hospital, London, says—"I have repeatedly prescribed Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa and found it an agreeable and beneficial remedy."

Extract from the Lancet, April 1, 1867—"In conclusion, we are of opinion that Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is a far superior remedy to the ones in general use for Nervousness, Indigestion, and Liver Complaints, when judiciously prescribed."

Sir Benjamin Brodie says—"What Chloride of Lime is to the foul sewer, Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is to the blood."

Professor Syme says—"The effects of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa in obstinate cases of disease are as astonishing as perplexing."

Dr. Lankester, the eminent coroner, says—"Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is calculated to entirely supersede iron, mercury, sarsaparilla, quinine, and cod liver oil."

Sir Philip Crampton says—"I believe there is no condition of the system that may not be benefited by Dr. Hall's Potassa."

Sir T. Lawrence says—"I have found Dr. Hall's Chlorate an excellent remedy in Skin Diseases. I presume it is by oxidation."

Sir T. Watson says—"I know that it is an invaluable remedy."

Sir Edward Brough, 9, Fitzwilliam-square, Dublin, certifies Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa has been of the greatest benefit to a member of his family.

The Earl of Clarendon certifies that Dr. Hall's Chlorate cured a case of indigestion of 15 years' duration.

DR. HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA may be procured by order through any Chemist. Ask for "Dr. Hall's Chlorate," and do not be imposed on with the common article. It is sold in Bolton by Priestley Chemist, 12, Deansgate; or it may be had direct from Dr. Hall's successor, DR. JOHN SUTTON, M.D., 15, Regent-square, London, W.C., who undertakes the positive cure of all chronic diseases before payment.

Dr. Hall's Chlorate is sold in MANCHESTER by JEWELL, BURY, Market-street; in LIVERPOOL by PRIESTLEY, Lord-street.

N.B.—Dr. Sutton will shortly repeat his Lecture on this subject.—The Lecture sent for two stamps.

EACH Paper contains every item of intelligence, from Mail to Mail, specially affecting the country or colony for which it is published, with an exhaustive summary of home and continental politics, science, art, and social news,
and a retrospect of commercial transactions in Great Britain
and on the Continent.

Manufacturers and Merchants may command the greatest markets of the world for their products through the mediums
of publicity afforded by the EUROPEAN MAIL. A demand may be created where none exists at present, or an existing demand may be sustained and increased against the most energetic competition.

The EUROPEAN MAIL gives such perfect mercantile information that it is the highest commercial authority in the vast and prosperous territories through which it circulates. It is therefore an imperative necessity to the merchant who orders goods in bulk, and to the wholesale and retail distributor; it is also the most complete newspaper despatched from England, and is eagerly sought by all classes; it thus,
unlike merely commercial newspapers, reaches and leavens the great communities who are the actual consumers of all products, and who must be acted upon by advertisement to require a special article before the merchant will venture to order a consignment.

The Bards and Authors of Cleveland and South Durham, by Bro. GEORGE MARKHAM TWEDDELL, F.S.A. of Scotland, author of "Shakspeare, his Times and Contemporaries," &c. Parts I. to IX.

It is well and widely known that as an antiquarian, Bro. Tweddell holds a deservedly high position, and we may safely add that if industry, perseverance, and erudition are to be taken into account, there are few men now living better versed in those studies which illustrate the remoter periods of a nation's history.

In the work now before us, the author does not however profess merely to give us glimpses of the manners and customs of the past, his object is rather to weave with the hand of truth, a kindly tribute to the labours of those sons of literature, who by birth and residence have been associated with the district to which he himself belongs, and in which his own name, we trust, will be ever fondly remembered. We can easily imagine the pride and pleasure with which Bro. Tweddell has collected these valuable records of the good and great men of his native county. It is a feeling akin to that which prompts us to scatter flowers, and wreath immortelles over the graves of those we loved, as a token that their memories are still "green in our souls."

But many of the men whose names Bro. Tweddell thus delights to honour are not only men of local or provincial fame, but of national, or it may be, of world-wide renown.

They are certainly known to students in every land, and the facts now collected by Bro. Tweddell, relative to their lives and works will be treasured by men of intelligence in regions far remote from Cleveland and South Durham. Of the ability evinced in the compilation of this interesting literary repertoire we cannot speak too highly. Truly the pictures are adorned by the frames in which they are set.

With the biography of Cedmon, the Saxon monk, whose paraphrase of the scriptural narratives is familiar to scholars, the work commences, and Walter de Hemingford, the monkish chronicler, and Gower, the master and friend of Chaucer, one of the earliest Saxon-Norman poets, are also commemorated in Part I. Specimens of the latter's verses are given in the commencement of Part 2, in which Bernard Gilpin, the Apostle of the North, holds a distinguished place. This great and good divine, who lived in troublous times of peril and persecution, was a consistent lover of truth, and his outspoken boldness drew upon him the humane attentions of those meek Christian prelates who flourished under the congenial sway of Mary Tudor. Happily the nefarious designs of Bonner and his satellites were frustrated in the case of Gilpin, by the intervention of Providence, for the good priest broke his leg on the road to Smithfield, and before he recovered, the sanguinary queen was summoned into the presence of her offended Maker and Judge.

Guide to the Royal Arch Chapter, by Comps. JOHN SHEVILLE, P.G.H.P. New Jersey, and JAS. L. GOULD, G.H.P. of Connecticut.

We have derived great pleasure from the perusal of this splendid work, in which the Royal Arch system as practised in America is most ably illustrated and exemplified. It may be observed that the order of progression in the American Rite is Mark Master, Past Master, Most Excellent Master, and Royal Arch. The third of these degrees is all but unknown in England, and the two first are worked outside the pale of Grand Chapter. In point of fact, there is no such degree as "Past Master" in the English system—it is simply the ceremonial of installing a W.M. into the chair of K.S., and is not regarded as a Masonic grade. The information respecting the degree of M.E. Master will be found most interesting, as it is so rarely to be obtained, and the ceremonial of the Order of High Priesthood—a rank conferred only on the Past Presiding Officers of American Chapters—is also most circumstantially given. The work bears evidence of great care in its compilation, and may justly be considered the hand-book of Royal Arch Masonry in the United States. Its authors are learned and zealous Masons, holding high positions in the Order, and their conclusions may be definitely accepted as authoritative and correct. We heartily commend this "Guide to the Chapter" to all Royal Arch Masons.

The Mason's Home Book. Philadelphia, No. 814, Chesnut-street; published by Bro. LEON HYNEMAN.

No. 5, for September, 1869, of this valuable addition to our Masonic Library is at hand, and contains the continued reprint of Preston's Illustrations of Masonry, a work too well-known and appreciated to need further comment.

We have had several applications for this book, as also for the following works, and shall be glad to know where they can be procured in England:—

"Macoy's Cyclopaedia and Dictionary of Freemasonry."

"McClenachan's Ancient and Accepted Rite."

"Sickels' General Ahiman Rezon."

"Gould's Guide to the Chapter."

We will gladly act as agent for the sale of these works, as they are all of sterling interest to the Craft.

The General Ahiman Rezon and Freemason's Guide, by Bro. DANIEL SICKEL'S, 33°, author of "The Freemason's Monitor," Secretary-General of the Supreme Council, N.J. America.

This work is a most comprehensive instructor in everything that relates to the Craft degrees. It contains prayers, charges, and historical illustrations. It is at once a book for the Masonic student, and a vade mecum for the aspiring worker of the ceremonies.

In this latter respect it will, however, be found more useful to American than to English brethren, as it is well-known that the ritual varies to a great extent in the two countries. The work is most beautifully adorned with plates and woodcuts, and cannot fail to prove a most acceptable addition to every Masonic library. We heartily commend it to our readers and subscribers, who will find it replete with curious and valuable information.

Impediments of Speech: Stammering and Stuttering, their Causes and Cure. By ABBOTTS SMITH, M.D., M.R.C.P., M.R.C.S., &c. H. Renshaw, 356, Strand, W.C., 1869. Second edition.

Every one knows how painful it is to listen to the inarticulate endeavours of stammerers to express themselves intelligibly, and all who are afflicted with impediments of speech as a rule feel acutely their inability to converse in a clear, deliberate manner. Dr. Abbotts Smith's work will therefore be welcomed as a great boon by such sufferers—it traces the origin of the defect—and points out the remedial measures to be adopted for the relief of the patient. Dr. Smith has won the highest commendations in his profession as a thoroughly practical physician, and the various medical works of which he is the author have likewise been received with great praise by the Medical Press of Great Britain and Ireland, as well as by other authorities technically qualified to pronounce judgment upon them. We cordially recommend this book to those of our readers who belong to Dr. Smith's profession, and also to all who are interested in the cure of stammering or hesitancy in articulation.

MASONRY IN SPAIN.

We have received the following letter, which we are informed is in substance the same as one that has also been sent to the editor of the "Monde Maçonnique":—

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER.—Our sublime institution teaches and impresses upon its members certain duties, the accomplishment of which has at all times been very difficult; not because real devotion, profound convictions, and generous efforts have been wanting, but on account of the obstacles which are scattered in our path by the profane and hostile world. Freemasonry, which was established at the beginning of the eighteenth century in Spain, has never ceased to exist, but you, dear brother, know what it has suffered—exile, incarceration in fetid gaols, penal servitude, banishment and death. Many are the martyrs which the annals of Spanish Masonry could register, but alas! in this world virtues are hidden and forgotten, whilst vice openly parades its hypocrisy and wickedness.

After various severe trials, Spanish Masonry underwent in 1848 one of its greatest persecutions; several of its members, men of honour and intellect, were banished, exiled or executed; the tyrannical Government of that epoch being one of our most cruel enemies.

But notwithstanding so many victims and persecutions Masonry developed itself successfully, and the number of its adepts constantly increased. The columns of the temples were overthrown, but the brethren were not discouraged, and continued to hold their meetings although in hidden places, and at times even in the solitude of the forest and other untrodden retreats.

Our Grand Lodge, to its honour, directed our labours at all times with prudence and wisdom.

The September revolution having taken place, we have been enabled to rebuild our temples and raise our fallen columns from the dust.

Spanish Masonry possesses at present all the elements of active life; it must now draw closer its bonds, and work in such a manner, as to shake off all fear of persecution in future. It ought to inspire in every Spaniard respect for its cause, which is the cause of humanity.

It is also time that THE FREEMASON should inform all our brethren of our existence.

Everywhere in the Peninsula, Masons meet and found Lodges, and almost all of us work after the Ancient and Accepted Rite handed down from our Masonic forefathers.

A few months since, a Lodge was constituted here, No. 6, entitled the Lodge Lealtad (loyalty). It is placed under the auspices of our Grand Lodge. I have the honour to be its first W.M. It has been constituted as a symbolical Lodge, and works up to the 18th degree.

We are on the road to prosperity. Our Masonic Hall will soon be finished, and I shall have the pleasure to inform you of its completion. Meanwhile it will be satisfactory for our brethren who come to Spain, to know that we are working. If you think that my letters may interest your readers, I shall not fail to write you from time to time.

I must here observe, that prudence still requires of Spanish Masons to follow the ancient usages adopted in the days of peril by adopting Masonic names, commonly called "noms de guerre."

I shall therefore sign this letter with such a "nom de guerre," and it is also in this manner I sign all Masonic documents.

We have the project of bringing out a paper, to be the organ of Spanish Freemasonry, which will bear the title "La Colmena" (the hive), to be published twice a week. We shall thank you if you will kindly exchange with us.

I have the honour, dear Sir and Brother, to offer you my most fraternal salutations,

HADJAR BEY, 30°,

W.M. of the Lodge Lealtad.

THE legal age of initiation in Germany is twenty-five years. The son of the Prince of Prussia, who was initiated Nov. 6, 1853, was not permitted by his father, though Grand Master, to receive the Light of Masonry, even by dispensation, until he was twenty-two.

NEW MASONIC HALL AT FROME.

On Thursday last week, the Masonic Hall, which the progressive lodge, the Royal Somerset, No. 973, have provided for themselves, was dedicated in accordance with Masonic usage.

The ceremonial was performed by the V.W. the D.P.G.M. of Somerset, Captain Bridges, who was accompanied by the P.G.S.W. General Munbee, the Grand Secretary, and other officers. All the ancient usages were observed, and the hall declared duly dedicated to the cause of Masonry. We may state that Masonry has progressed very steadily in Frome, so that it became imperative to obtain a special habitation for the lodge. The Literary and Scientific Institution having vacated their premises, those were secured for the purpose of a Masonic Hall. The arrangements comprise a spacious ante-room, a robing-room, and the hall. The latter has been solidly, tastefully, and artistically furnished, and our correspondent understands that, for its dimensions, it is one of the completest in the district, the more especially as to artistic designs in accordance with Masonic rule.

The dedication ceremony having been solemnly made, the W.M. (re-elected) was installed by P.M. Lawson, P.M. and P.G.J.W. (Wick). The W.M., Bro. W. Mason, jun., thus stands the first of the re-elected of his lodge, and, furthermore, he has been re-appointed by the P.G.M. to provincial office. The S.W. was appointed, Bro. D. Jones was appointed J.W., Bro. John Bailey, Treasurer, Bro. W. B. Wood, Secretary, Bro. W. H. Perret, S.D., Bro. Parsons, J.D., Bro. Clark, I.G., Bro. A. R. Bailey, P.G.L., and Bro. Callaghan, O.G.

At the annual dinner there was an unusually large attendance.

MASONRY IN ITALY.

The Grand Orient of Italy was created and elected in 1861, by a re-union of the delegates of the several lodges dispersed throughout the country, which began to declare themselves after the country had recovered its independence. And it received new strength, in the following years, from the several general meetings of the dignitaries of the lodges of the Peninsula. These assemblies, of which the most important is the Florentine one, of 1864, were held at Turin, Gènes, Tuscan, Naples, and they numbered amongst them the most respectable of the Masonic fraternity of Italy. The Grand Orient resides in the provisional capital of Italy, Florence. Bro. J. Garibaldi is its Honorary Grand Master during his life.

The official bulletin published by the Grand Orient of Italy contains, besides its correspondence with foreign Grand Orients, and the movements of lodges, several articles on purely scientific matters, besides those on social progress. Running over the pages of this bulletin and the general constitutions which the Grand Orient of Italy has adopted and published during the past year, one can easily judge of the motives which actuate this Grand Orient. In philosophy (that is in the dominion of thought) it is not atheistic, deistic, nor pantheistic; it is rationalist. In religion (in the dominion of sentiment) it professes tolerance; in politics, it desires liberty for all, and it execrates violence, from whatever quarter it may come. It enjoins on its members to be good citizens, and to fulfil their duties actively. It has accepted a high endeavour for itself and for generations—the struggle to death against intolerance and civil and sacerdotal tyranny, to proclaim always for the progress of humanity and of the universe. Italian Masonry abstains, as a corporation, in all intermeddling in the administrative affairs of a country; and seeking to diffuse instruction, it exercises beneficence. It protects and gives good counsel to its brethren, while it gives them free liberty to defend their rights as citizens, outside the Lodges, on their own responsibility.

The Grand Orient allows the liberty of the Rites; they can be elected members of the Grand Orient when they are Master Masons of the 3rd degree.

The Mopses are not recognised by the Grand Orient of Italy.

The number of the lodges grouped around the Grand Orient of Italy is about a hundred and fifty, distributed through the peninsula and among the isles and colonies.

A certain lodge had been opened for some time at Naples, called Roma Redenta. It admitted to its meetings females as well as males. The Grand Orient has suppressed it, but not till after it had issued a pamphlet on the measure. This is the case nearly with all demolished lodges, or individuals suspended or expelled the Order.—Translated from the Bulletin du Grand Orient de France.

The New Vade Mecum (invented and manufactured by Charles H. Vincent, optician, of 23, Windsor-street Liverpool) consists of a telescope well adapted for tourists, &c., to which is added an excellent microscope of great power and first-class definition, quite equal to others sold at ten times the price. Wonderful as it may seem, the price of this ingenious combination is only 3s. 6d., and Mr. Vincent sends it (carriage free) anywhere, with printed directions, upon receipt of post-office order or stamps to the amount of 3s. 10d.—ADVT.

ANCIENT AND MODERN MYSTERIES.

By BRO. ROBERT WENTWORTH LITTLE,

In the Egyptian mysteries we find, as in all other pagan mythologies, a recognition of the triune character of the Deity; and the remembrance of this important fact will materially assist us in deciphering their hieratic and hieroglyphic symbols. The principal mysteries of Egypt were those instituted in honor of Osiris, Serapis, and Isis; and in support of the trinitarian theory, the following curious anecdote of a response from the Oracle of Serapis may be quoted:—"Thulis, a king of Egypt, who is supposed to have given the name of Thule to the island now called Iceland, having largely extended his dominions, and being inflated with pride, went to the Oracle of Serapis, and thus addressed it:—Thou that art the god of fire, and who governest the course of the heavens, tell me the truth; was there ever, or will there ever be, one so puissant as myself? The Oracle answered him thus:—Yes! first God, then the Word and Spirit all united in one, whose power can never end. Go hence immediately, O mortal! whose life is always uncertain." And Thulis, at his going thence, was assassinated." The same doctrine may be found in Plato, who alludes to the triple nature of the Divinity, which he calls Agathos, or the sovereign good—Logos, the Word, or Intelligence, and Psyche, the all-sustaining and pervading spirit of beauty and love. An ancient inscription at Rome speaks of "The Mighty God; Begotten of God; and the all-resplendent Apollo, the Spirit." But I must not pursue the consideration of this interesting subject at present, although it is intimately connected with the esoteric worship of the mysteries.

The Egyptian rites, we shall find, are more susceptible of an astronomical interpretation than any of the religious ceremonies of the ancients. The Sun is personified by Osiris, the leader, the king, the moderator of the stars, the soul of the world, the governor of Nature (Plutarch de Isid, and Isirid and Macrobius). Isis is the Moon, or the consort of Osiris. She is endued with the faculty of receiving all kind of impressions, and of being converted into all manner of forms which the Supreme Reason shall impress upon her. (Ind. Ant.) The course of the heavenly bodies, and the changes of the seasons, are represented allegorically throughout the whole of those mysterious ceremonies. Philæ, a small island on the borders of Ethiopia, and near the cataracts, was esteemed the most sacred seat of the Egyptian initiations, inasmuch as it was said to contain the relics of Osiris; and in the Thebaid there could not be a more solemn oath taken than that administered upon the ashes of the god. The island was perforated throughout the whole of its circumference, by secret labyrinths or subterranean passages, wherein the preliminary rites of Isis were celebrated. In these gloomy avenues the aspirant submitted to the awful trials of his fortitude and constancy prescribed by the laws of the priesthood, before the grand arcana of light was revealed to his adoring spirit. It was there that superstition waved high her blazing torch, as the image of Isis was borne aloft by the chosen priests, who chanted in ecstasy their sweetest symphonies. The whole initiation—though not without a deep moral and theological meaning, independent of the physical allegory—bore immediate allusion to the progressive stages of agriculture, and the passage of the sun, or Osiris, from one tropic to another. The secret process by which nature matures the embryo seed was symbolized by grains of wheat or barley, deposited in covered baskets and consecrated vases, to which access was had by the priests alone. The departure of the sun for the cold northern signs was announced by bitter wailings and lamentations for the supposed decease of the god; during which the aspirant was introduced, and, having undergone all the preparatory proofs, was at length permitted to join the solemn procession of the initiated. First came a priest, carrying a lamp which burned with uncommon splendour in the midst of a boat of gold, as the emblem of the sacred journey of Osiris. A second priest bore two golden altars in honor of the god and his consort. A third held in one hand a palm-branch, curiously wrought in foliated gold, and in the other the magic wand, or Caduceus of Hermes. The fourth priest carried a small palm-tree, which, as the plant budded every month, was an appropriate emblem of the moon. He also bore a golden vase containing the sacred milk of the 'Dea Multimamma,' the many-breasted goddess, by whom all nature is nourished. The fifth priest carried the golden van, or 'mystica vannus Iacchi,' for winnowing the ripened corn; and the sixth and last celebrant poured out of the two-handled amphora, copious libations of generous wine in honor of the celestial deities.

This solemn festival lasted four days, by which were foreshadowed the four wintry months, when Osiris was buried in darkness and silence, until re-discovered by Isis or Nature in the vernal equinox, when his return or resurrection was hailed with shouts of joy and songs of triumph. The procession then emerged, like the rising beams of Osiris, from the gloom of the nether hemisphere, exchanging the unwholesome atmosphere of subterranean caverns for the vivifying warmth of the resplendent sun. Rich unguents and costly perfumes were diffused around the altars—some of the devotees woke the strains of the melodious pipe—others played upon the golden and silver sistra, or the Thebaic harp, and all indulged in festive dances and hymns of praise. I cannot better conclude this portion of my subject than by quoting the following extract from the Rev. G. Oliver's "Signs and Symbols." "In their initiations, the Egyptians informed the candidate, as an ineffable secret, that the mysteries were received from Father Adam, Seth, and Enoch; and in the chief degree, the perfectly initiated aspirant was termed, from the name of the Deity, AL-OM-JAH. After the initiation was fully completed, figs and honey were presented to the candidate, accompanied by this maxim, 'TRUTH is sweet.'"

From the third quarterly statement of the Palestine Exploration Fund, recently published, we find that having thoroughly examined the old Haram wall at the south-west and south-east angle, Lieutenant Warren has been exploring the north-east angle. Here he discovered the old wall—that portion of it below the ground—continued beyond the apparent line of division above ground. The Pool of Bethesda, which he had already ascertained to be a real reservoir, concreted and plastered at bottom, has an overflow through a very remarkable chamber made of wrought stones inside the wall. The stones are cut similarly to those at the south-east angle, but not, apparently, so carefully; characters were found on them, copied, sent home, and examined. They are pronounced to be similar to those previously read by Mr. Deutsch, and Phœnician. But the shaft has yielded other and, perhaps, more important results. On reaching the rock, which was 110ft. below the surface of the ground, it was found to be sloping downwards at an angle of 3 in 10. A valley, therefore, previously suspected by some, the lowest point of which has not yet been reached, runs across this corner of the Haram area. And the platform of the dome of the rock is at least 165ft. above one part of the valley in the northern part of the Haram area. Among other results which might be mentioned we may name, therefore, this. The Haram area, on one part of which once stood the Temple, may now be compared to the lid of a box, of which the walls are the sides. Its corners are respectively the S.W., about 120ft.; the S.E., about 100ft.; the N.E., about 130ft. above the rock. At the south-east corner are sub-structures, long since known, called "Solomon's stables." Are there none at the other angles, and, if so, of what kind are they? All questions relating to the inside of the Haram area must, however, be postponed till permission can be obtained to dig there. Lieutenant Warren and all his party have been obliged to retire to the Lebanon to recruit their health. They return, it is expected, at the end of this month, when it is to be hoped that the requisite funds will be in the hands of the committee, at their office, 9, Pall-mall East, to carry out the work of excavation, which now approaches completion.

GOLDEN FLEECE.—The masonic apron is said to be more ancient than the badge of any other honourable institution. It was used before the Greeks or Romans had a name. The Argonautic expedition is generally believed to be only a figurative account of the deluge; and the apron is unquestionably older than that event; it was therefore worn before the establishment of the spurious Freemasonry. We are certain from undeniable authority that the apron was the first species of clothing with which mankind were acquainted, and was adopted before the expulsion of our progenitors from the garden of Eden. When they had violated the original compact, their eyes were opened to a sense of guilt and shame, and they saw that they were naked. Decency suggested the necessary expedient of covering themselves with aprons. It is therefore said with great propriety that "the apron is more ancient than the golden fleece or Roman eagle."

THE BLOOD PURIFIER.—Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla. Other Medical Testimony.—In speaking of the "Blood Purifier," old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla, G. C. Kernott, M.D., L.S.A. Lond., says:—"I strongly recommend it in cutaneous diseases and all impurities of the blood." March 24, 1869.—In a letter to the proprietors, June 6, 1869, Dr. Irvine, of Irvine's-town, says:—"I have been in the habit of ordering your Sarsaparilla for my patients with the best results. Send me six quarts and six mammoth bottles." For all skin diseases, for purifying the system of mercurial poisons, and building up the broken constitution it is the only safe and certain remedy.—In Bottles 2s. 6d., 4s., 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 11s. Sold by all Druggists. Pills and Ointment each in Boxes, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. Testimonials also from the Hon. the Dean of Lismore; General William Gilbert, of the Indian Army; ordered also by Apothecaries Hall, London. Caution—Get the red and blue wrappers, with the Old Doctor's head in the centre. No other genuine. —ADVT.

Multum in Parbo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

I was much pleased with the explanation given in THE FREEMASON of the Royal Arch Jewel from Sir William Drummond's work—it is very good. Who and what was he, and where did he live? W. W.

MASONIC UNION.

There would be an easy way of effecting this if the Grand Conclave of K.T. and the Supreme Council could be brought to consider the matter. The York Rite of 1686 was R.A.; K.T.; Holy Wisdom (being a Royal and orthodox Constitution). Let the S.C. require the Royal Arch, and rank their degrees: R.A.; R.C.; Kadosh (wise, holy). There are certain points of secrets common to K.T. and R.C., and to H.W. and K.H. (This rite being philosophical and democratic, our French brethren assert that one of the Kadosh's was founded by Cromwell.)—J. YARKER, Jun.

"KNIGHT TEMPLAR JOTTINGS."

In reply to Bro. W. J. Hughan, I may remind him that he has not shown the date of the Belgian Constitution of 1722 to be erroneous; because he was evidently writing about one book, and Bro. Dr. Leeson another. The Modern Grand Lodge chartered Masonry in Dunkirk and at Mons in Belgium in 1721, and although they had not at this date printed their laws, yet there can be little doubt that manuscript copies of the laws passed in 1720 would be furnished to the lodges. These might be printed in Belgium in 1722, as Dr. Leeson has stated over and over again; and if so, the whole cause of fight between the "Ancients" and "Moderns" is put in black and white. One thing may be supposed to militate against their authenticity: the high grade terms are those of the Scotch, and not the English, system. As, however, there must have been Masons in France and Belgium before a lodge could be chartered, so these Masons may have been Scottish followers of the Stuarts. In the ritual of the S.C. of Charleston (kindly lent me by a brother on the point of giving some very important documents to the American press) one of the old names of the Rose Croix is said to be "Knight of St. Andrew." If these Belgian Constitutions are genuine, I take them and the James III. Rose Croix warrant to prove modern Templary an engraftation of 1745, under Prince Charles Edward Stuart.—JOHN YARKER, Jun.

THE CEREMONIES AND TRADITIONS OF OUR FREEMASONRY (page 189).

I am not aware of the Freemasons from the 12th to the 18th century possessing or promulgating our doctrine of the universal brotherhood of man. That was reserved for the speculative Masonry which arose about A.D. 1717. I consider that it is not at all impossible that our ceremonies, rituals, &c., have been manufactured and elaborated since 1717; more, I believe such to be in reality the case. Further, our so-called traditions and legends have also sprang up since 1717. Desaguliers and Co. studied the Bible and other ancient histories, hence our Masonic drama, though quite recent, comparatively speaking, itself, contains allusions to ancient personages and their actions, while the background, &c., is filled up with imaginary ideas taken out of the author's own head.

My "drift" in saying so is to get at the truth, because I consider that we dishonour Freemasonry when we are trying to bolster it up with untruths. Just as if it needed any such bolstering or propping up! It is the principles of speculative Masonry that are its grand recommendation, and it is the carrying out of those principles into action that is our recommendation. Show me your Masonic schools, asylums, &c., and I can dispense with your pretended antiquity. The Augustan age of operative Freemasonry is past; the Augustan era of speculative Masonry, I trust, has yet to come. My "drift" has been, and I intend will be, to assist a little in bringing it on. LEO.

BROS. D. M. LYON, W. J. HUGHAN, AND W. P. BUCHAN ON SPECULATIVE FREEMASONRY.

Bro. Lyon says:—"Non-operatives cannot be shown to have to any extent been admitted members of lodges before 1634, and then only were admitted as fellows of the Masonic Craft, just as in our day the Prince of Wales or any other non-professional gentleman may be received as an honorary member of the Fishmongers' Society. Such admission had something to do in paving the way for the more easy adoption of the speculative Freemasonry that was afterwards manufactured by Desaguliers and Co."

Bro. Hughan says:—"Freemasonry as we have it now was not in existence before the 18th century. The crafts were provided for from the 15th century, and afterwards, without any special distinction for masons. 'Wrichtes and maisons' were often classed together, and certainly there was nothing special in the latter, so far as may be gathered by the Acts of Parliament. We read of the "wardens and deaknes" of crafts, but never as applied exclusively to Masonry. Why? Surely because that as a body it contained nothing requiring different legislation to the others."

Bro. Buchan says:—"Desaguliers, Payne, and Anderson were the originators of Freemasonry, in the second decade of the 18th century A.D., and to them belongs the honour of its foundation. Freemasonry, as an exponent of the ideas and principles, &c., of 'Speculative Masonry,' did not arise until the time of the so-called 'revival' of A.D. 1717, which so-called 'revival' was in reality the first establishment of Speculative Freemasonry as an institution; consequently, said Freemasonry is now just one hundred and fifty-two years old. Before last century, so far as becoming speculative Freemasons was concerned, gentlemen might as well have joined some of the other old trades' societies. Operative Masonry was the spoon which Drs. Desaguliers and Anderson made use of in administering the new idea." LEO.

Can you inform me if there is a Masonic explanation of the Pentangle? If so what is the price? W. WAYNE.

The following explanation is given by Oliver:—Pentalpha.—In the Royal Arch Degree, the name of God is depicted in the centre of old floor-cloths, by a double interlacing triangle, thus inscribed within a dark circle, representing unlimited space beyond the reach of light, and the top representing the "light shining in darkness," and the "darkness comprehending it not." This had been used as a Christian symbol, to denote the two natures of Jehovah, the Godman, also as an emblem of the Trinity, for centuries before the Royal Arch Degree was ever thought of. In this form or the above it was called the pentangle, or seal of Solomon, and the shield of David, and was employed all over Asia as a preservative against witchcraft, in which superstition the Jews are said to have participated, for they used written charms enclosed in the above hexagonal or pentangular figure, and disposed cabalistically, which were worn about the necks. It constituted the Pythagorean pentalphu, and was the symbol of health.

A MEETING of Roman Catholic gentlemen has just taken place at Friburg, in the Grand Duchy of Baden, to reorganise the Order of the Knights of Malta, which course has been authorised by the Pope. Eight gave their adhesion to the rules, which do not comprise the vows of celibacy or poverty, but only those of obedience. The new chevaliers, who have a cardinal for Grand Master, will wear a crimson uniform with gold epaulettes, and a Maltese cross on the breast.

THE MASONIC LIFE BOAT FUND.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER.—My attention has been drawn to certain communications with regard to this Fund. As late Secretary, permit me to state that a very considerable sum has been subscribed by the brethren, but while acting (gratuitously) as Secretary I failed either to obtain, for publication, a list of the subscribers, or of the amounts of their subscriptions. My duties were confined simply to conducting the necessary correspondence, acknowledging receipt of sums received, and enclosing the Treasurer's receipts. I had nothing whatever to do with the money matters and I regret therefore that I am unable to give any account either of the sums received or of what has become of the Fund.

I am, yours fraternally,

FREEMASONRY.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR.—"Notes from our London Correspondent," in the Yorkshire Gazette of 30th ult., we have a letter which seems to require attention. It is not my intention nor my province to correct the writer in his careless and erroneous application of words, but I may be allowed to say, that it is not common for either scholars or gentlemen to use the words, "pleadery, bumptious, asinine, guzzling, and unmitigated snob," as they are used in that letter.

I also pass the announcement, that "The Government have been guilty of a nice little job, in sending an Ambassador to Spain, and that this said Ambassador is the bumptious, conceited, arrogant and irascible Mr. Layard—Nineveh Bull-discoverer Layard." Permit me to ask: Is this hyphen in the right place? Ought "discoverer" to have a capital D, and lastly did Mr. Layard really find a bull? Was it a real bull, or is the London Correspondent speaking in parables?

As newspapers take such a prominent part in the education of the people, would it not be well for us in all our leaders and letters to attempt the combination of elegance and accuracy. If York citizens have attained a high degree of intellectuality by means of newspapers, I cannot think it attributable to such letters as that of the London Correspondent.

I wish to reply to the paragraph on Freemasonry, which in substance is as follows: "Mr. Conway was appointed Master of the Lodge in January last, and has defrauded his employers of £1,000 and 000. Being an Englishman, he could not do less than entertain the members to a dinner which cost £44—bill unpaid. It strikes me that Freemasonry is made the excuse for much unnecessary guzzling. I have known more than one man who traces his RUIN to connection with a Masonic Lodge. If Mr. Conway is a sample of the Masters of Lodges, &c., &c., how mankind could be served, or philanthropic objects promoted by thirty-nine persons dining at a cost of £44 (bill still unpaid), I am at a loss to conceive. It would be well for Masons who dine together to see the dinner paid for, before they ATE it. Ye Gods! it is enough to make one die with laughing."

If this account of Mr. Conway is true, he has done wrong, his conduct is extremely wicked, and as I look at it I am pained to think any man should so disgrace himself and his family.

I cannot laugh at it, nor do I envy the man who can.

Whatever may have been this man's defalcations anterior to his election, they were unknown to the members of the lodge, or he would not even have been nominated, nor would he have been admitted as a member. It is not the leading feature of Englishmen to invite thirty-nine people to a dinner costing £44 and leave the bill unpaid. Men do not guzzle, or rob their employers because they are Freemasons, but because they are gluttons and scoundrels. I do not believe that people who accept an invitation to dinner do so to serve mankind, or even to promote philanthropic objects, but are influenced in the same way that London Correspondents are, namely, to enjoy a good dinner. If, in return, a London Correspondent asked some friends to dine, I should think it discourteous, if after grace, the guests said, "We beg pardon, and hope we may not be misunderstood or considered as busy-bodies, but London is a curious place—no place on earth like it, and remembering that we are at the talk of a London Correspondent, to prevent unpleasant mistakes—pray IS this dinner paid for?"

It is the established rule and general custom among Freemasons for each man to pay his share of the expenses of any banquet or social gathering, even before he leaves the room.

Our constitution and by-laws are considered wise and good, at least so wise and good as to be incapable of improvement by the London Correspondent.

That part of the paragraph which seems to me to have the least manliness, and the utter absence of good—ness is, "If Mr. Conway is a sample of the Masters of Lodges," &c. Doubtless, you Sir, with myself, have witnessed and mourned over the follies of the wise, and the failings of the good. We have known persons do things so inconsistent with their position and profession, as to excite our greatest wonder, and we have heard that expression which is almost heart-breaking, as it comes from our almost heart-broken Master, "Is thy servant a dog that he should do this thing."

If I were to ask the following questions in a mixed company, Is that person a sample of all married women? Is that person a sample of all who take Holy Orders? Is that person who is being punished for systematic cruelty to her child, is she a sample of all mothers? Is that man who said, "Whomsoever I shall kiss, that same is He, hold him fast," is he a sample of all disciples? These with many others of a kindred character might be asked, but, right minded men and pure minded women, if they answered, would probably add these words, the fact of your asking or supposing that all women are faithless, because you have fed on the foulness of some divorce reports, or that every man in Holy Orders disgraces his church and calling because some have done so; or that every mother is an incarnation of cruelty, or every disciple a Judas, is an indubitable sign of your own suspicious, deceitful, bad heart."

If Mr. Conway is a sample of the Masters of Lodges,

The character of Freemasonry is as firmly established as the everlasting hills. Time is called the Great Leveller, yet notwithstanding the wearing influences and operations of countless ages, and the destructive energies of storm and tempest, still they are—the everlasting hills—defiant of time, emblems of eternity; fixed and indestructible on earth, and ever directing man to the contemplation and attainment of his native heaven. So with Freemasonry, firm in its native omnipotence and perfect in its essential purity, its character is invulnerable and everlasting. This—is the place which cannot be moved but abideth for ever, from the world's infancy to its present maturity it has been adding strength to strength, destroying enmity by the strength of its love, and destroying want by the strength of its beneficence, and of the increase of its government there shall be no end, while there is in this world a necessity to be relieved, or a sorrow to be soothed.

If the intention of the London Correspondent was to damage only the reputation of Freemasonry, still it was labour lost, for in every clime and every living language it is felt and acknowledged to be a system of brotherly love, its benevolence is co-extensive with the wants of the world, and can be satisfied only when every clime is resplendent with its brightness, and happy in its purity of joy. Every continent of the earth, and every island of the sea, can attest the divinity of its mission. The figurative phraseology of one place speaks of it as feet to the lame, and eyes to the blind, in another place it is represented as the shelter and shadow of a great rock in a weary land, but among ourselves where figures of rhetoric are less perfectly understood than facts, we say, if we cannot dry up the orphan's tears, for they will come—They do come—yet we will do our best to be a father to the fatherless. The widows shall find a home. The aged and infirm shall be provided for, cared for; and though the palsied frame, feeble step, and second childhood are beyond our remedial skill, yet the decline and energy of life are so soothed and enlightened, and the alleviative tendency of our affection and care is such, that when our venerated brother is called to the Grand Lodge above, he may find that the brotherly love of the lodge that is to be his home for ever, is the same in kind as that which he has left, only greater in degree. Divine love being the source and sustentation of pure Masonic life now, and the deathless rapturous themes of the multitude, which no man can number, for ever and ever.

"If Mr. Conway is a sample of Masters of Lodges, &c., &c."

In conclusion, if the London Correspondent meant to show that neither official dignity, nor self-respect, nor personal safety can keep some men from evil, then I say no fraternity can feel it more keenly, nor punish it more properly, than a Lodge of Freemasons. As there are spots in the sun, so there are occasionally unworthy men found among Masons. True Masonry never robbed or ruined man, woman or child, but has helped and ennobled all those who have been obedient to its precepts.

I enclose my card, and am, Sir,

Yours fraternally,

A FREEMASON.

ANCIENT DEGREES.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER.—In the number of THE FREEMASON for Sep. 4, you did me the favor of inserting a letter requesting a list of the thirty-three degrees of Masonry as practised in Ireland and America.

In the succeeding number, you have been so kind as to give a list, and Bros. Hughan and Yarker have also very fully entered into the matter and the short description the latter has given of the various degrees is very interesting.

Yet, withal, I must confess I am not satisfied and cannot reconcile the various statements, and you will please pardon me in returning to the subject again.

Your statement of the degrees of the Ancient and Accepted Rite agrees with Bro. Yarker, which as far as I can judge are the American degrees, and yet they do not agree with those of Bro. Hughan; he has given a list of ten degrees as practised in Ireland according to Ahiman Rezon and as I received them.

In this list Past Master does not occur, although it appears to be the fifth degree in Scotland and America, and Ex. M. and Sup. Ex. M. merge into R.A. and form one degree.

Now Sir, what I would like to know is a list of the various degrees as practised in Ireland from 10th to 18th (which I have been informed is Prince Masons) and from 18th to 30th. This list and remaining three are given in the Book of Constitutions.

I would take the liberty of enquiring in your pages also for some information or sketch of the "Priestly Degree" or as it is sometimes called the "Pillar Priest." As I mentioned in my former communication it is practised in the North of Ireland, and is a beautiful degree though not recognised by the Grand Lodge or in the Book of Constitutions.

The only information I can get respecting it is in Oliver's "Landmarks," where he states it is the seventh in the series of Baron Hinde, is practised in Belfast, and under another name in Newcastle, in the North; and Bristol in the South of England.

Hoping I may not be trespassing too much,

I remain, yours fraternally.

BELFASTIENSIS.

Obituary.

BRO. JOHN STEVENS PULLEN, P.G.D.

We deeply regret having to announce the decease of this estimable brother who expired on Monday the 1st inst., in his 61st year.

Bro. Pullen was an old Mason, having been initiated in the Old Union Lodge, No. 46, on the 10th February, 1833, and in due time he served every office in the lodge. The Grand Master selected our deceased brother for the office of Senior Grand Deacon, in April, 1865; he was also an energetic member of the Board of General Purposes, and took an active part in the construction of the New Buildings, at Freemasons' Hall. In his business relations Bro. Pullen was greatly respected as a man of integrity and ability, and we may sum up his character by saying that he ever adhered strictly to the principles of honor and probity inculcated in the precepts of the Craft.

ACCIDENT TO EARL VANE.—Lord Vane attended on Monday a Masonic ceremony in Oswestry, where he joined the Oswestry Lodge, to support the Provincial Grand Master, Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, in laying the foundation-stone of a Cottage Hospital. In returning by the last train at night to Machynlleth, his lordship occupied a saloon attached to the guard's van, and at a place called Carno (on a steep incline), forty miles from Oswestry, the train came into collision with a goods train, which was partly shunted for it to pass. The force of the collision snapped the coupling chains, and Lord Vane's carriage ran down the incline a distance of six miles, to Moat-lane Junction. Fortunately the saloon kept the rails, and met with no obstruction. The manager of the Moat-lane refreshment-room was just going to bed, when an alarm was given of the unexpected arrival of the carriage, and his lordship, with his face bleeding from a wound in the forehead, received in the collision, was brought in. Dr. Parry, of Caersws, was sent for, and the wounds dressed. An engine was obtained from Llanidloes, and shortly before 5 o'clock his lordship was conveyed specially to Machynlleth. We understand that the stoker of the passenger train was much hurt, and some of the passengers knocked about.

On Monday, the 1st of November, a few gentlemen in connexion with the North of London Licensed Victuallers' Cricket Club, met for the purpose of presenting Bro. John Day, of the Westbourne Lodge, and the worthy proprietor of Lord's Cricket Ground, with a very elegant Diamond Ring, supplied by Bro. H. M. Levy, of No. 6, North-buildings, by a few friends on the occasion of his birth-day. The presentation was quite unexpected to that worthy brother, but by the exertions of Bro. James Wyld, Hon. Sec., who has done so much for the success of the Club, a very pleasant evening, was the result. A very excellent cold collation was provided and the chair was occupied by Bro. Wentzell, who filled it with that genial and courteous manner, so characteristic of that gentleman. Several toasts were proposed and responded to, and among those present were Bros. Ford, Eaves, L. Drew, H. M. Levy, James Wyld, Coates, Rawlings, Fowler, &c., and a most agreeable evening was quite unexpectedly passed.

PRESENTATION TO BRO. THOMAS M'KELL CAMPBELL, AT GLASGOW.

On the evening of Friday, 29th October, 1869 a banquet took place in the Hall of the Tontine Hotel, Glasgow, on occasion of the presentation of a Testimonial to Bro. Thomas M'Kell Campbell, Past Master "Lodge Clyde," 408, member of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, Most Excellent Principal "Z., St. Andrew's Royal Arch Chapter," No. 69, and a life member of the Supreme Grand Royal Arch Chapter of Scotland. There were present about one-hundred members of the Lodge Clyde, No. 408, and many other members of the Craft, including Masters and Past Masters of lodges in the Glasgow Province, and deputations from lodges Nos 4, 9, 27, 89, 102, 116, 117, 128, 153, 219, 332, 333, 362, 392, 419, 437, 441, 459, &c. The object of the meeting was to honour the worthy and esteemed brother already named by presenting to him a handsome gold lever hunting watch, gold Albert chain, gold locket, and gold-mounted, ebony, walking stick, also a gold brooch, gold chain, and gold ear-rings for his wife, the value of the whole being more than fifty guineas. The hall was beautifully decorated with flags, flowers and evergreens. At the upper end the banner of the lodge Clyde, No. 408, floated over the head of the R.W.M. of the lodge. Bro. John Buchanan, who occupied the chair; and many ships' flags, sent to do honour to the occasion from vessels lying in the Clyde, were exhibited on other parts of the walls. On the right hand of the chairman was the guest of the evening, Bro. Thomas M'Kell Campbell, and on both hands were Masters and Past Masters of lodges in the province. Amongst those on the right were Bros. McEwan, Macpherson, and Boyle, and on the left, Bros. T. Boyle, S.L.M., No. 8; C. J. Paton, P.M. 392; J. Steel, R.W.M. 4, P.G.T.W.; and J. T. Thomson, R.W.M. 437.

An excellent supper was enjoyed, and the chairman, the Right Worshipful MASTER of the "Lodge Clyde," then rose and stated that it gave him great pleasure to preside on this occasion—an occasion, which he was sure was regarded with much satisfaction by all present. He saw around him old familiar faces, reminding him of days long past, as "The soothing influence of a pleasant dream, Calms down the strife of this chequered scene."

In looking on those now before him, he could not but anticipate good thoughts and good deeds for the future; and he thought this evening's work might tend to the formation and development of many a high aspiration, worthy of the ancient and honourable order to which they belong, and worthy of honourable and right-meaning men. He then gave the first toast, namely that of "The First Lady of the Land, With the Sons of the True Fraternal Band,"

"The Queen and the Craft."
As the next toast of the evening, the R.W. Master gave "The Prince and Princess of Wales." Both toasts were responded to in a suitable manner.

Bro W. LINDSAY, S.W., then proposed the toast of "The Army, Navy, and Volunteers," in doing which he said that any nation might be proud of such a force as ours, which is unequalled in the world. Bro. D. Downie replied, and echoed the opinion of the proposer of the toast, by saying that no Army, Navy, or Volunteer Force was ever in a better state, and that therefore no country was ever more secure against invasion, no nation better prepared to hold its own against all enemies.

The toast of "The Three Grand Lodges" was then given from the chair. Bro. J. F. W. Templeton replied, remarking that although the three Grand Lodges are confined to the capitals of England, Scotland, and Ireland, their branches are spread throughout the whole world. He said that on looking into their history, and beginning with England, the institution of Freemasonry, must be referred to time immemorial. The first record carries us back to A.D. 287, when it is said that St. Alban formed the first Grand Lodge. The Grand Lodge of Scotland deduces its origin from the Mother Lodge of Kilwinning, formed in A.D. 1128. The Grand Lodge of Ireland was formed in A.D. 1727. Turning to foreign countries, we find the Grand Lodge of France formed in 1725, and that a Scotchman, the Earl of Derwentwater, was its first Grand Master. The Grand Lodge of Belgium was formed in 1823: that of the Netherlands in 1767, that of Denmark in 1747, that of Sweden and Norway in 1754. The United Grand Lodge of Germany is composed of four Grand Lodges: (1) The National Grand Lodge of the Three, established in 1740. (2) The Grand Lodge of Germany, 1770. (3) The Grand Lodge of Prussia, 1760. (4) The Eclectic Grand Lodge, 1783. Besides these, there is the Grand Lodge of Hamburg, established in 1740; that of Saxony, in 1811; that of South Germany, in the same year; that of the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg, in 1841; and that of the Grand Duchy of Hesse, in 1848. The Grand Lodge of Switzerland was established in 1844, and that of Italy in 1867; of the Grand Lodge of Italy, Bro. Joseph Garibaldi is Grand Master, one of the most noble names of the nineteenth century. The Grand Lodge of Portugal was founded in 1805. In Turkey there are ten lodges holding of the Grand Lodge of England, and this year a charter has been granted by the Grand Lodge of Scotland, for a lodge at Haskein, Constantinople, named the Cælonian, No. 489, of which our worthy Bro. T. M'K. Campbell, has been appointed Proxy Master in the Grand Lodge of Scotland. The Grand Lodge of Canada was established in 1855. In the United States of North America, there is a Grand Lodge in each state, the oldest of which is that of Massachusetts, established in 1733. There are Grand Lodges in Central America, in Brazil, Hayti, San Domingo, Mexico, Peru, Uruguay, Venezuela, &c., all of which have been founded since the beginning of the present century. All these Grand Lodges may be confidently affirmed to have derived their origin from the three Grand Lodges of England, Scotland, and Ireland. After giving these interesting particulars of the statistics and history of Freemasonry, Bro. J. F. W. Templeton concluded by thanking the meeting for the manner in which the toast of "The Three Grand Lodges," had been received.

The presentation of the testimonial then took place.

Bro. THOMAS GORDON, uncovering the presents on the table, said that he was proud of having been the first Right Worshipful Master of the Lodge Clyde, No. 408, and also that a brotherly feeling had always subsisted between Bro. T. M'K. Campbell and himself. It was through that brother that he was induced to become a Freemason, by joining the Lodge St. Mary's, Partick, No. 117. Bro. T. M'K. Campbell was then Secretary of that lodge as well as Principal Z. of St. Andrew's Royal Arch Chapter, 69. After the Provincial Grand Lodge had ordered the St. Mary's Charter, which had been working in Glasgow as well as in Partick, back to Partick to be wrought there only, some members found it inconvenient to walk all the way to Partick to attend meetings, and consequently a new lodge was formed in Glasgow. Bro. Campbell, who had been mainly instrumental in bringing Lodge St. Mary's, Partick, from a state of dormancy to active life, was also the leader of those who set themselves to form the new lodge in Glasgow. After encountering many difficulties, they were at last successful in raising the necessary funds, and applied to the Grand Lodge for a charter, which was granted on the 6th August, 1860, and the new lodge—the Lodge Clyde—was consecrated and the office bearers installed on 29th December of the same year. About twelve months after its formation the Lodge Clyde was honoured with a visit of the Provincial Grand Lodge, and the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, a mason of no mean worth, after examining the books, took them round the lodge, shewing them to the deputations present and requesting attention to them as a model of the way in which the books of a lodge should be kept. He made especial reference to the minute respecting the laying of the foundation stone of the Wallace Monument, the first occasion on which the lodge sent out a deputation. Probably there is no better record of that day's proceedings than is to be found in the books of this lodge. Bro. T. M'K. Campbell has stood to the craft amidst prosperity and adversity. He has had his own masonic trials and troubles, but he has been always successful in fighting his way through them, having always had right on his side. His principal view of Freemasonry is charity, the principal round in the masonic ladder. Often has he said, "I wish we could give an account of the Craft in Scotland, as having well-established benevolent and charitable institutions." It was with such design that he proposed the formation of the "Clyde Lodge Benevolent Fund," for behoof of the members of the lodge, which, after much opposition, he was enabled to establish, and which has done much good to many a poor brother and has relieved the distress of many a brother's widow. Nor have his time and talents been devoted to the concerns of that lodge alone, but to the utmost of his power he has always shewn himself willing to assist in any lodge or chapter. More than one lodge in the province has reason to thank Bro. T. M'K. Campbell for his services. About two months ago a few brethren at Constantinople applied to the Grand Lodge of Scotland for a charter, and placed the matter in his hands. He managed it so well that he not only obtained a charter for them, but also books, jewels and clothing. In testimony of their gratitude, they appointed him their proxy-master in the Grand Lodge of Scotland. He then went on to say that he might state without fear of contradiction, that Bro. T. M'K. Campbell, is regarded amongst all who have heard him work as one of the best-working Freemasons in Scotland, and that in the Royal Arch and higher degrees he is unequalled. A few weeks ago, there appeared an article in a Masonic publication, entitled, "Chips from a rough Ashlar," by one who in his travels through Scotland had seen Bro. Campbell working, and also received some of the degrees from him. He says, "Bro. T. M'K. Campbell, is almost the last of the few brethren who formerly worked the Rite of Mizraim. Bro. T. M'K. Campbell, has devoted great time and attention to studying the side degrees, and we were much indebted to him for information in respect thereof. As a Craft Mason, Bro. T. M'K. Campbell, is considered one of the most perfect working brethren in Glasgow, and on several occasions we witnessed his conduct of the ceremonies with great satisfaction." Bro. T. Gordon, concluded by saying that the worth of Bro. T. M'K. Campbell, was well known, alike in Masonic, private, and public life.

The R.W. MASTER then, in a neat and excellent speech, presented the Testimonial to Bro. T. M'K. Campbell. He said that the duty fell upon him, only through the unavoidable absence of an esteemed brother, but that he performed it with much pleasure. He wished Bro. T. M'K. Campbell and his wife, many happy years to enjoy the presents made to them, and expressed his hope that Bro. T. M'K. Campbell, might long live to be an ornament to the Craft, as well as a blessing to his family circle.

Bro. T. M'K. CAMPBELL, in replying, said that it gave him great pleasure to thank all his brethren present, and all who had united in this unexpected testimonial to him, for the valuable gifts which they had presented. He hoped to hand down these gifts to his family. He thanked them from the bottom of his heart, and with feelings which words could not express. He received these gifts as a testimony of respect from a brotherhood with which it was an honour to be connected, and whose approbation it might be any man's high ambition to obtain. He had had the honour to obtain that approbation, and he was proud of it, and grateful for it, and for this expression of it. Whilst life remained, he would retain a sense of gratitude for the honour now conferred on him. He felt it all the more, because his wife had been noticed as well as himself. He would strive by his whole life and conduct to show how he appreciated it, and he could confidently say, his wife would do the same. His efforts to promote the great teachings of Freemasonry, would be stimulated, and he hoped to do more than he had yet done, never forgetting the duty of upholding the landmarks in their entirety.

The R.W. MASTER then proposed the toast of "The Provincial Grand Lodge of Glasgow," of which he spoke in warm terms of commendation.

Bro. STEEL, R.W.M., No. 4, replied in a short speech, which was listened to with great admiration. He declared himself much gratified to observe the feeling which had brought this meeting together, a feeling of brotherly love, fostered in Masonic halls, kept alive in the hearts of Freemasons, and blazing forth on occasions such as the present. It was the glory of Freemasonry to maintain this sentiment of brotherly love, and to display it upon appropriate occasions, such as that on which they were now met.

Bro. W. McEwen then favoured the meeting with a sketch of Freemasonry in relation to everyday life. Freemasonry, he said, was an institution established by virtuous men, with a praiseworthy design of continually recalling to remembrance the most sublime truths in the midst of the most innocent social pleasures. It is founded on liberality, brotherly love and charity. It teaches morality, equality, and truth. No immoral men are allowed to take place among Freemasons, and in their lodges the king is on the same level with the peasant. The first lesson Freemasons are taught is to be good men and true. It is sometimes asked, What good is done by Freemasonry? The question may be easily answered. Let a Freemason be in a strange town, far from home, destitute, and let him look to his Masonic calendar for the places of meeting; he will find brethren of the mystic tie, who will welcome him as if he had been an old school-fellow and assist him, if found worthy, with everything useful for the prosecution of his journey. Freemasonry is useful also in teaching the lessons of fortitude and the government of the tongue, the latter of which is perhaps even more difficult than the former.

Bro. A. MACPHERSON, Secretary of the Lodge Clyde, proposed "The Guests of the Evening," in the following words:—

Right Worshipful Master and Brethren all, Right glad am I to see you in this—the Tentive Hall.
Met this evening, to render true
The Homage which to worth is due.
The Brother is before you. He alone
Has gained the prize by ardour won,
Full well we know how long he has wrought,

And how with zealous labour taught,
The Mason Tongue; The man's inquiring mind
Has sought the depths of mystic lore to find,
The truth sublime; the breadth, the height,
Such as is only known to the Sons of Light.
He ever with that watchful, constant care,
Never was wanting, when a want was there;
But with cheerful willingness, was sure to lend,
The hand Fraternal, like a brother and a friend.
His power to aid was no random guess,
To have him was to gain success;
With rapid strides he did repair disaster,
Then hail (408), to your Past Master.
And may the partner of his joys and grief,
Ever be at his side with that balm of relief,
And long may her days be, with every prosperity,
Both to themselves and to their posterity;
While o'er matters as these, our minds fondly ramble,
Let us wish every success to Bro. Campbell.
The R.W.M. he looks to the length of my muse,
To support him right and left we will never refuse,
For as long as he has one leg left to stand on
We will rally round the burly Buchanan.
There's Past Master Gordon, we should never forget,
He the example of perseverance has forth truly set;
And the good wish of our heart, let no one deride,
But long in good health may he be spared to the Clyde.

On the platform there I see our Senior Warden,
Of our Paraphernalia may he long be the guardian;
The good things of this life may he constantly see,
You could not help it, if he said "Saft-a-wee."
The mirthful expression doth make the heart tinkle,
For the loss of the gingham was a very sad wrinkle,
Fond of it he was, from the storm it did screen him;
The news to relate was the loss of the gingham.
There's D. in the South, and he's called the Junior,
But that iron-tongued jade, that's called Mrs. Rumour,
Hath raised the report, midst clamour and strife,
That D. is the one that's in want of a wife;
That a good man he'll be, and the young ones will dangle,

In spite of the farce of the broom with the handle.
To the ladies I look to, and beg their excuse,
At this my poor attempt to beguile and amuse,
For the motto it has, and it was, and is still without compare;

That the brave deserve the fair.
To the toast of the evening I must now hasten on,
Your time, nor your patience no longer prolong,
Now one and all take heed and unto me list.
And pledge me the health of this evening's guest;
Remembered may he be with the warmest emotion,
By those here at home and far away on the ocean.
That their meal may be long, cry the Sons of the Clyde.

And health, peace and happiness be around his fire-side.

Bro. T. M. CAMPBELL replied to this toast. He said that he was pleased to find himself received to their hearts by his brethren, and delighted to see how they sought to promote the cause of Universal Brotherhood; that all men of all kindreds, tongues, and nations may be as one family and meet as brothers. For himself, he hoped always to do as he had done through his whole life hitherto—to stand up for what is right in opposition to all that is wrong. And in our lodges especially, he hoped this would be the grand rule, always acted upon and carried out at whatever cost.

The R.W. MASTER, the chairman, now proposed "Freemasonry all over the world." Bro. Thompson, R.W.M., 439, replied in a neat and effective speech, in which he expressed a hope that all Freemasons over the world would uphold charity, as charity is a heaven-born feeling, and one which must be supposed to exist in the heart of every Freemason. He hoped that every brother present would aid in disseminating it throughout the Craft.

The brother who favours us with this account of the meeting, was here called out of the hall on an urgent matter of business, and of several speeches and toasts we are sorry that we can give no report.

The CHAIRMAN, the R.W.M., gave the last toast of the evening, "Happy to meet, happy to part, and happy to meet again." He expressed his great delight with the whole proceedings of the evening, a delight he was sure participated in by all present. He felt himself honoured in doing honour to Bro. T. M'Kell Campbell, who he hoped, would long live to be an honour to the Craft.

The pleasure of the evening was augmented by songs both by amateur singers and members of the Craft, and also the "stump oration" of Bro. Mullens, Altogether, such an evening and such a testimonial have not been seen for many years amongst the Masonic Fraternity in Scotland.

A REPORT of St. Mark's Lodge No. 1 will be given in our next.

JUSTICE.—Justice is a God-like principle, and sculptors have symbolised it well; the blinded brow, to show the stern singleness of heart; the scales, to weigh the merits of the case; and the keen sword, the agent of a sudden and complete satisfaction.

PROVINCE OF CORNWALL.

GRAND MEETING OF MARK MASONS AT HAYLE.

The annual assembly of the Prov. Grand Lodge of Mark Masters for Cornwall was held on Thursday last week, in the New Public Hall, Hayle, at 12 (noon). There were present:—Bros. Frederick Martin Williams, M.P., P.G.M.; Reginald Rogers, D.P.G.M.; Thos. Chirgwin, P.S.G.W.; Wm. Tweedy, P.J.G.W.; F. Harvey, P.G.M.O.; Wm. J. Johns, P.G.S.O.; Walter F. Newman, P.G.J.O.; Stephen Holloway, P.G. Treas.; William James Hughan, P.G. Sec.; R. Johns, Asst. P.G. Sec.; Dr. James Mudge, P.G.S.D.; John Coombe, P.G. Supt. of Works; John Ninness, P.G.D. of C.; and a large number of brethren representing the following lodges, viz.:—73, Redruth; 78, Truro; 87, Hayle; 94, Falmouth; and 101, Chacewater.

The noble proportions of the hall, and the excellent arrangements of the suite of rooms in connection therewith, was the constant theme of the visitors, who had the pleasure, for the first time since its inauguration, to meet in so excellent a building, and we may say that the whole of the proceedings throughout the day were suggestive of the immense amount of care and trouble taken by the members of the Cornubian Lodge at Hayle to give the brethren of the Prov. G. Lodge, a right hearty welcome. The Mark Lodge, No. 87, was first opened by the W.M., the W. Bro. Dr. James Mudge, when the Prov. G. Master, and the members of the Prov. Grand Lodge, entered, the Prov. Grand Organist (pro tem.), Bro. N. B. Bullen, performed a "voluntary" on the harmonium. The Prov. Grand Lodge was subsequently opened by Bro. Fredk. Martin Williams, M.P., and in response to the call of the Prov. G.M., Bro. William James Hughan, the P.G. Sec., read the minutes of the P.G. Lodge held in October, 1868, at Truro, and the statistical account of the lodges in the province, which were unanimously confirmed by the members, as also was the Prov. G. Treasurer's report, and reports of various committees appointed at the last meeting. The Prov. Grand Master, in a few appropriate words, then expressed his gratification at so large a muster of the brethren, and stated that the prosperity of the Mark Degree in particular, and Masonry in general, would always be a matter of congratulation to him personally, and to obtain which, nothing on his part should be spared, and no effort wanting to secure the continued progress of the grand principles of the Craft.

The officers were then appointed for the ensuing year, and invested, respectively, with the magnificent collars and jewels so kindly presented by the Prov. Grand Master.

The Prov. Grand Lodge was then formally concluded by the Prov. Grand Master, and the Cornubian Lodge having been finally closed for the day, the brethren adjourned to Bro. Crotch's Hotel, and partook of a sumptuous repast, in every respect worthy of the occasion. The various toasts were given and responded to with thorough good feeling, and were warmly received by the members. They were as follows:—1. The Queen and the Craft. 2. Bro. H.R.H. the Duke of Cornwall, and the Royal Family. 3. The Grand Master of Mark Masters for England, and the Grand Lodge; replied to by Bro. W. J. Hughan, Past Grand Overseer. 4. The Prov. Grand Master for Cornwall for the Mark Degree by Bro. W. Husband, responded to by Bro. F.; M. Williams, M.P. 5. The Dep. Prov. G.M., by Bro. William Tweedy, P. Prov. G.W. 6. The Prov. Grand Wardens; responses by Bros. Frank Harvey, and W. J. Johns. 7. The remaining Prov. Grand Officers; replied to, for the whole, by Bro. T. Chirgwin, P. Prov. G.W., and Prov. G. Sec. 8. The W.M. of Cornubian Lodge, Hayle, and warmest thanks for the very efficient arrangements for the comfort and convenience of the Prov. G. Lodge; proposed by Bro. the Prov. G. Master, and responded to by Dr. James Mudge, W.M., 87; &c., &c.

The following were the officers appointed for 1869-70, Bro. W. J. Hughan, having retired from the office of Prov. Grand Secretary:—Dep. Prov. Grand Master, Bro. Reginald Rogers, No. 94; Prov. Senior Grand Warden, Bro. Frank

CONSECRATION OF THE LODGE OF FRIENDSHIP AND UNITY, No. 1271, AT BRADFORD-ON-AVON.

It will be a matter of rejoicing to the Craft at large to learn the steady progress the Order is making in the province of Wilts. It is only a few weeks since the lodge of Calne, so long in abeyance, was revived at Chippenham, and now we have to announce the consecration of a new lodge in Bradford. For some time past the number of Masons there has steadily increased, through the influence of the Lodge of Concord, 632, at Trowbridge, whence also has sprung the Lodge of Frome, 773, and which can now number another offshoot in the lodge just consecrated.

The ceremony took place on Wednesday last week, in the lodge premises at the Town Hall, Bradford-on-Avon, the consecrating master being Bro. the Rev. C. R. Davy, P.G. Chap. of England, who performed the ceremony in his usual impressive manner. After the lodge had been declared formally constituted, the W.M. elect, Bro. R. de M. Lawson, P.M. 632 and 973, P.P.G.J.W. Wilts, was most ably installed by the V.W., Bro. S. Wittey, D.P.G.M. Wilts, assisted by Bros. Davy and Parfitt, P.M. 976, and afterwards proceeded to invest his officers, as follows:—Bro. W. Humphrey, P.M. 526, P.P.G.D. Stafford, as P.M.; Bro. A. B. Richardson, S.W.; Bro. T. P. Saunders, J.W.; Bro. Dr. Adye, P.M., 632, Treasurer; Bro. Chapman, Secretary; Bro. Collie, S.D.; Bro. Sparks, J.D.; Bro. Rose, I.G.; Bro. Feltham, Steward. Amongst the visiting brethren present were Bros. Kelway, P.P.G.S.W., Somerset; Dr. Bryant, P.M. 68, Bristol; J. Allen, P.M., 632; Holbrow, P.M., 270; Col. Ford, P.M., 335; Inskip, P.G. Steward, Somerset, P.M. 62, and 1222; S. Gauntlett, J.W., 632; N. Rogers, S.D., 632; J. Berry, Secretary, 632; also Bros. Simpson, Parsons, C. Saxty, W. Collins, &c., &c., &c. Bro. Reeves presided at the harmonium with his accustomed ability.

At the conclusion of the business the brethren adjourned to the New Bear Hotel, where a most excellent banquet was furnished by Host Bro. Feltham, who spared no pains or expense in providing for the comfort of his guests, neither must Mrs. Feltham be forgotten, to whom was due the elegant manner in which the room and table were decorated for the occasion. On the removal of the cloth, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, amongst the responses to which, those of Bro. Wittey as D.P.G.M. of the province, and Installing Master of the day, and Bro. Kelway on behalf of the Visitors, were specially received by the brethren, as also the remarks made by the S.W., Bro. Richardson, on returning thanks for the Officers of the Lodge.

The trains caused most of the brethren to leave at an early hour, and the party broke up, after a most successful gathering.

We are requested to call the attention of the brethren of West Lancashire to the meeting of the Lodge Sincerity, No. 292, at the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, Liverpool, on Monday next, at 6 o'clock, when Bro. Hamer, assisted by Bros. Pelham and Hustwick, will work the seven sections of the first degree.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Physical Strength.—For the proper development and nourishment of the human body, it is essential that the functions of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels be performed with order and regularity. Holloway's remedies readily ensure both these conditions. The powers of the stomach are greatly augmented, and good gastric juice secreted in abundance when the Ointment is diligently rubbed twice a day over the pit of the stomach. The Pills and Ointment enable it to extract all the food's nutritive matter, and to thoroughly digest most articles of food. In the most advanced cases of dyspepsia, the salutary power possessed by these medicaments is most remarkable, and will fully realize the patient's hopes, and the expectations of his friends.—Advr.

PROV. GRAND LODGE AND BANQUET IN DEVIZES.

The Right Hon. the Lord METHUEN, the R.W.P. Grand Master of Wilts, having appointed that the Annual Provincial Grand Lodge should be held this year in Devizes, on Friday there was a large and influential gathering of Freemasons, who arrived during the morning, from different parts of the country. The arrangements for receiving the Prov. Grand Lodge were entrusted to the Lodge of Fidelity, No. 663, and the W.M., (Bro. Nott,) and brethren spared no pains to ensure a successful and satisfactory result. Fortunately the weather was fine. Lord Methuen drove over from Corsham, and the Provincial Grand Lodge was opened in the Council Chamber, at three o'clock when the Prov. The lodge having been closed the officers and brethren adjourned to the Town-hall, and sat down to a banquet, the caterer being Mr. Raymond, of the Crown Hotel. The room was decorated with a number of Masonic emblems and flags and presented a most tasteful appearance, for which Bro. Nott is entitled to credit. The worthy Deputy Prov. Grand Master (Bro. Wittey), contributed greatly to the decoration of the hall by sending from his conservatory some choice plants and flowers. The musical arrangements were under the direction of Bro. J. H. Chandler, and in the course of the evening several excellent songs were rendered. The cloth having been cleared and grace sang,

The CHAIRMAN (Lord Methuen) rose and proposed the first toast on the list, namely, "The Queen and the Craft." (Applause.)

Lord METHUEN said the toast which ought to follow next was, "The health of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales." (Applause.) As they all knew, the Prince had lately joined the Craft—(applause)—and if he followed in the footsteps of his illustrious parents he would be sure to become a good Mason. (Hear, hear.) He was confident that all the brethren present entertained the hope that at some future time His Royal Perkins, P.Z., Columbia Chapter, 91, Pennsylvania, was also present as a visitor.

The chapter was opened in ancient form, and the minutes were read and confirmed.

The following report was taken as read, and ordered to be entered on the minutes.

To the Supreme Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of England.

The Committee of General Purposes beg to Report that they have examined the Accounts from the 21st July, to the 19th October, 1869, both inclusive, which they find to be as follows:—

To Balance 20th July ...	341	8	6	By Disbursements during the Quarter ...	119	15	10
To Subsequent Receipts ...	153	2	0	By Balance ...	374	14	8

which Balance is in the hands of Messrs. Willis, Percival and Co., Bankers of the Grand Treasurer.

The Committee have also to report, that the St. Peter's Chapter, No. 481, Newcastle-on-Tyne, have applied for Certificates for Companions Bass, raised on the 22nd April, 1867, and exalted on the 10th March, 1868; and Snelgrove, raised on the 18th December, 1867, and exalted on the 18th November, 1868; being respectively seven weeks, and one month, within the period prescribed by the Regulations. The Chapter have expressed their regret, and state that they have erred through ignorance. The Committee however, feeling that it is the duty of the Principals to make themselves acquainted with the Royal Arch Regulations, could not accept the excuse, but, as the Chapter was one of recent formation, have considered that a small fine would be sufficient to meet the case. They have therefore inflicted a fine of £1 1s. 8d., on the Chapter with a caution to be more careful for the future, and have directed the Certificates not to be issued until the Companions named shall have been re-exalted.

The Committee have very carefully considered the Motion of Companion Bennoch, P.Z., No. 2, viz:—

"When the Minutes of the previous Meeting have been read, and their accuracy unimpaired, and their confirmation proposed:—no motion to omit any substantial portion of the business recorded as transacted shall be accepted; unless due notice of such motion shall have been given and printed in the usual paper of business."

referred to them for their consideration and report, at the last meeting of Grand Chapter, and they are of opinion, "that it is not desirable that any alteration should be made in the method of putting the Minutes for confirmation as already existing."

The Committee have likewise to report that they have received Petitions

From Companions Henry Richards Lückes as Z., Alfred Osborne as H., Francis Nash as J., and Ten others, for a Chapter to be attached to the Vitruvian Lodge, No. 333, Ross, to be called "The Bowles Chapter," and to meet at the Royal Hotel, Ross, Herefordshire.

From Companions George A. Taylor as Z., William Biseniden Heath as H., Edwin Sillifant as J., and Seven others for a Chapter to be attached to the Lodge of Stability, No. 217, London, to be called "The Chapter of Stability," and to meet at Anderson's Hotel, Fleet Street.

From Companions John Seager Gundry as Z., John Murch as H., and Charles Cramond Dick as J., and Eight others for a Chapter to be attached to Fortescue Lodge, No. 847, Honiton, to be called "The Fortescue Chapter," and to meet in the Lodge Room, at the Armoury, Honiton, Devonshire.

The foregoing Petitions being in all respects regular, the Committee recommend that the prayers thereof be respectively granted.

A Petition has also been received from Companions Thomas Wood as Z., Colonel William Taylor Money as H., Francis Joseph Jorden as J., and Six others for a Chapter to be attached to the Corinth Lodge, No. 1122, Seetabuldee, Nagpore, to be called "The Mayo Chapter," and to meet at Seetabuldee, Nagpore, Bombay.

This Petition is regular in form, and is recommended by the Grand Superintendent of the District, but one of the Petitioners not being registered the Committee recommend that the prayer of the Petition be granted, subject to his being registered, or the name of another regularly registered Royal Arch Mason being substituted. (The Companion referred to is now registered, consequently the Petition is in all respect regular.)

The following Notice of Motion has been received for the next Quarterly Convocation:—

From Companion John Udall, P. Asst. Sojr.

"That Grand Chapter do meet for business at Five o'clock instead of Seven o'clock, and to alter Clause 9, Page 8, Line 2, of the Royal Arch Regulations, and substitute the word 'Seven' for 'Eleven.'"

(Signed) W. PULTENEY SCOTT, President. Freemasons' Hall, London, 20th Oct., 1869.

The several petitions recommended by the Committee were approved, and charters granted accordingly. A long discussion ensued upon Comp. Udall's motion to alter the hour of meeting to 5 o'clock, in which Comps. Head, Savage, Snell, McIntyre, Tomkins, Barron, and others took part, and the sense of Grand Chapter being against the proposed alteration, Comp. Udall withdrew his proposition. Comp. Savage then gave notice to alter the hour of meeting to eight o'clock, the time most convenient to the Companions.

The Grand Chapter was then closed with solemn prayer.

OXFORD SCHOOL OF ART.

A large and influential public meeting was held in the Town-hall, Oxford, on Wednesday evening, for the purpose of distributing the prizes to the successful students of the local School of Art. The chair was taken by the Very Rev. the Dean of Christchurch (Dr. Liddell), and among those present on the platform were Professor Acland, M.D., the honorary secretaries (the Rev. C. L. Wingfield, of All Souls' College, and Mr. Frank Spiers), Rev. J. E. T. Rogers, Mr. Alderman R. J. Spiers, &c. The proceedings were opened by the chairman in a most interesting address, in which the events in connexion with the school during the past year were reviewed, and its prospects for the future considered. From it we learn that during the year 360 pupils have attended the school, being an increase of 142 over the numbers last year. Of these 96 were in the artisan class, and of their works 436 have been sent to South Kensington for approval, preparatory to the claim for a money grant from Government. In addition to the prizes gained for work at the examination of last year, two third-grade prizes, one Queen's prize, and one bronze medal were awarded to the school for works sent to South Kensington, and these were gained in competition with all the schools of art in England. The president (his Grace the Duke of Marlborough) has declared his intention of making an annual donation to the funds of the school of ten guineas, which the committee have decided to lay out entirely in prizes, to be called the President's Prizes. At the conclusion of the chairman's address, which was listened to with deep interest throughout, the prizes were distributed to the successful competitors, and, after a vote of thanks to the chairman, the meeting separated. A most interesting collection of drawings, paintings, &c., the majority of which were executed by the students, while others were lent by the Science and Art Department and various friends of the school, were displayed around the walls of the hall. The head master in the Art Department, South Kensington, inspected the productions of the students on Wednesday morning, and expressed the highest satisfaction at the state of the school and the progress it had made during the past year.—Times, Oct. 29.

BR. T. MACLAGAN, the champion Scottish vocalist, of Lodge No. 8, Edinburgh, has been engaged as the truest exponent of the national songs of Scotland on St. Andrew's Day. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales will on that occasion take the chair at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street.

AN AMERICAN PAPER says:—"Wanted, at this office, an editor who can please everybody. Also a foreman who can so arrange the paper as to allow every man's advertisement to head the column."

Bond, and several excellent songs enlivened the proceedings, the brethren separated at an early hour highly pleased.

Lodge of Faith, No. 141.—The annual installation meeting on the 26th ult., of this old and much respected lodge, was held at their place of meeting, Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street. The W. Master Bro. Geo. Hyde, having opened the lodge in the 3 degrees, and performed the ceremony of raising Bros. Davis and Mayer, to the sublime degree of M. Mason. The W.M. elect, Bro. James Hill, was presented and installed by Bro. Gotthall, in a very able manner. The W.M. then appointed Bros. Speed, S.W.; C. C. Taylor, J.W.; Green, S.D.; Themans, J.D.; Pitt, I.G.; Carter, P.M. Treas.; Anslow, P.M. Sec.; and Longstaff, Tyler. Messrs. Chas. Dailey, Harry Painter, and Edward Mallett, were then duly initiated into the mysteries of the order, by the W.M. assisted by his officers in a most efficient manner. The lodge being closed, the brethren adjourned to the banquet, amongst the visitors present we noticed Bro. John Thomas, P.M., 507; Stevens, P.M., 720; Hastie, 1216; Bartlett, 186; and Lacy, W.M., 87. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were well received and ably responded to—amongst the toasts, that of the visitors was responded to by Bro. Thomas, and Stevens, that for the P.M.'s by Bro. Hyde, and Stewart, a very neat and effective P.M.'s Jewel was presented to the I.P.M., who acknowledged the honour the brethren had conferred upon him in very feeling and appropriate terms. The Jewel was manufactured by Bro. Kenning. After a very pleasant harmonious evening, the brethren separated with many congratulations and good wishes for the prosperity of the lodge during the reign of their new W.M.

Lodge of Prudent Brethren, No. 145.—The first meeting of this lodge for the season was held at Freemasons' Hall, on Tuesday last, under the able presidency of Bro. H. P. Allender, W.M., supported by Bros. G. J. Sharpe, John Boyd, Treas., G. States, Sec., and other Past Masters and some sixty or seventy brethren, amongst whom we noticed present, T. Moore, S.W.; F. Walters, J.W.; W. Brown, S.D.; J. Cambridge, J.D.; Geo. Pitt, I.G.; W. Carter, P.M.; W. Watson, P.M.; Warren, P.M.; J. Coward, Grand Org. The visitors were J. Rowland, P.M., Nelson, 700; R. S. Austin, Nelson, 700; L. Moseley, Gihon, 57, and J. D. Hood, Strawberry Hill, 946. Mr. M. J. Hickman and Mr. W. M. Sawyer were duly initiated into the order, and one or two brethren having been raised the lodge was closed in due form. The brethren afterwards re-assembled in the tavern adjoining the hall, were a most splendid recherche banquet was served under the immediate superintendence of Bro. Gosden, the manager, who is himself a member of the lodge. The usual toasts were given with great eclat, Bro. James Coward, Grand Org., responding on behalf of the Grand Officers most neatly in a speech, and more eloquently on the piano. Bro. Rowland, of lodge 700, returned thanks on behalf of the visitors. Bro. Sharpe appropriately gave the health of the Master, whose popularity was shown by the warmth with which it was received. The toast of the P.M.'s was acknowledged by the youngest and oldest, Bros. Sharpe and Warren. The Treas. and Sec. of the lodge having been proposed, Bros. Boyd and G. States responded to the compliment, the latter announcing that a charter for a new Chapter had been obtained, which would be opened in the course of the ensuing month. Bros. Coward, Banks, and Austin added to the enjoyment of the evening by their musical abilities.

Joppa Lodge, No. 188.—An event which has not happened in this lodge before for twenty-seven years, occurred at its meeting on Monday at the "Albion," Aldersgate-street, there was no work done. Bro. C. Ralph, W.M., opened the lodge, and the brethren afterwards retired to refreshment. A Hebrew Brother being a candidate for the Benevolent Institution's aid in May next, the Lodge of Joppa determined to support him, and after a powerful speech from Bro. F. Walters, who replied to the toast of "The Visitors," a P.M., came forward and offered himself as Steward if fifty brethren would support him. Sixteen members out of a very thinly attended lodge immediately put down their names, and no doubt was entertained that the remainder would easily be got, as the lodge numbers 135 brethren on its roll. Bros. Harvey, Prov. G. D. C. for Kent, M. A. Loewenstark, Talbot from America, and another Brother from a West India lodge, were present.

Victoria Lodge, No. 1056.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the George Hotel, Aldermanbury, on Thursday, 28th October. Among the brethren present were Bros. Frederick York Latreille, W.M.; George Roberts, S.W.; Alfred Robbins, J.W.; William Wrenn, P.M.; Alfred Albert Pendlebury, P.M.; George Snow, P.M.; Ulysses Latreille, Sec.; William Ashley, L.S.; J. R. C. Tison, John Winder, H. F. Atter, W. Morton, J.D.; J. Slate Brown, Thomas Maza. Visitors: W. A. Tharp, W.M., Lodge 49, and Thomas Alcock, Lodge 733. After the lodge had been opened and the minutes read a ballot was taken for Mr. D. H. MacGregor who was unanimously elected. The lodge having been opened in the second and third degrees Bros. John E. Hastings and George Harding were raised to the sublime degree of Master Masons, the ceremony being very beautifully and impressively performed by the W. Master Bro. F. Y. Latreille who in his manner of working is really a pattern for imitation. The lodge having been closed in the third and second degrees respectively, the W.M. then initiated D. H. MacGregor into the Order. After the despatch of other business and the renewal of Bro. Geo. Roberts' motion the brethren adjourned to the banquet where the remainder of the evening was very happily spent.

PROVINCIAL.

ROMFORD.—Lodge of Hope and Unity, No. 214.—On Thursday week, the usual October assemblage of the brethren of this lodge took place at the White Hart, Romford. The lodge was well attended, and was honoured by the presence of many distinguished Masons, among whom were observable Bros. W. Pulteney Scott, P.G.S.D.; James Self, M.D., P.M.; G. T. Oldfield, P.M.; K. T. Tudor, P.M.; the Rev. W. J. Skilton, P.M. Sec.; F. Adlard, P.M.; D. C. Yearley, E. J. Barron, P.M., No. 2; H. Mosey, P.M., No. 619; Owen S.; Tudor, S.W.; George Cooper, P.M., J.W.; W. F. Parr, W. A. Barron, J.D.; Evelyn Fairlie, A. Wright, R. Jordison, H. H. Pearce, and John B. Matthews. In the absence of Bro. the Rev. Spencer R. Wigram, Bro. Pulteney Scott performed the functions of Treasurer. Bro. Skilton read the minutes, which the brethren confirmed, and afterwards elected the S.W., Bro. Owen S. Tudor, as W.M. for 1870. Bro. Tudor briefly thanked the brethren for this mark of their esteem, and the lodge re-elected the Rev. S. W. Wigram, Treas., and Bro. C. T. Speight, T. The W.M., Bro. G. M. Tetbut, who had opened the lodge and presided up to this portion of the business of the day, then gave way to Bro. James Self P.M., who initiated Mr. W. J. Burgess into Masonry with great fluency, and also gave the ancient charge. The Secretary read Bro. Farnfield's circular, soliciting a Steward for the Benevolent Institution Festival in January, an office which was subsequently accepted by Dr. Self. The lodge thereupon voted £5 from its Charity Fund, to place on his list. This was the last of the work before the brethren, and the W.M. closed the lodge. A banquet, most bountiful in quantity and choice in quality, accompanied by wines of excellent selection, followed; and when the cloth was drawn and dessert supplied, the Masonic toasts were proposed and drunk. In replying to the toast of "The D.U.M., &c.," Bro. W. Pulteney Scott said the Grand Officers had a great deal of work to do; they had to sit on all committees, and a tend to the general business of Masonry to an extent which others Masons did not know of. But in all their offices they tried to do their duty, and the reward they had, which they thought a sufficient one, was having them acknowledged as it had just been. Bro. Cooper, J.W., as P.M., and Prov. Grand Officer, replied for the Provincial Officers, and Bro. Self, P.M., proposed "The W.M.," who, having responded in a few words thanked the brethren, and hoped at next meeting he would be one of the respectable P.M.'s of the lodge, proposed "The P.M.'s." Bro. Bowers replied. An elegant massive silver tea-pot was here introduced, and handed round for the inspection of the brethren, and the W.M. stated that in proposing the health of Bro. F. Adlard, P.M. and D.C., it was his duty to present it to him as a recognition by the lodge of his services as late Treasurer. Bro. Adlard said he thought, there were many who would envy him when he held such a testimonial, and he scarcely knew how to express his obligation to the W.M. and the brethren. For eleven years he had held the office of Treasurer, which entailed upon him also the duties of Collector of accounts. When he went into office the lodge was in debt, but by getting the brethren to change the time for paying dues from July to January he got it out of debt, in which happy state he left it when he handed his office over to his successor. While Treasurer to both Lodge and Chapter he had done his duty to the utmost of his ability, and as both Lodge and Chapter had subscribed towards this beautiful testimonial, he thanked the brethren and Comps. sincerely for their kindness, begging them at the same time to "Accept what I repeat Warm from a heart, unpractised in deceit."

(Cheers.) He would in future use his best exertions to promote the interests of the lodge, as he had in the past. Bros. Yearley, E. J. Barron and Massey, were called upon to reply separately to the toast of "The Visitors," and Bro. Tudor to that of "The W.M.-elect." The remaining toasts were afterwards disposed of, and the brethren separated after having spent a charming evening.

IRWING.—Prince of Wales's Lodge, No. 959, held their monthly meeting on Monday evening, at the Masonic Hall, when more than an average number of the brethren assembled, under the presidency of their worthy W.M., the Rev. R. N. Sanderson, P.P.G. Chaplain of Suffolk, &c. The lodge having been opened in ancient form, the minutes of the last lodge were read and confirmed. Bro. Farron initiated at the last meeting, having passed the necessary examination retired, and the lodge was opened to the second degree, when Bro. Farron was admitted in due form, and passed to the degree of a F.C. The charge was then given, and the lecture upon the F.C. tracing-board delivered by P. M. Townsend, P.P.G.S.W., Suffolk. The lodge having been closed to the first degree, the W.M. delivered the lecture on the tracing-board of the E.A.P. Bro. W. Norman, P.P.G. Organist of Norfolk, presided at the organ. After some necessary lodge business, and a discussion on the desirability of forming a choir from amongst the brethren, that more music might be introduced into the ceremonies, the lodge was closed in harmony.

SCOTLAND.

KIRKCALDIE.—St. Stephen's Lodge, No. 145.—This lodge held its first monthly meeting for the season in Freemasons' Hall on Monday, the 11th ult., when a very large muster of the brethren took place. Bro. W. Rae, R.W.M., in the chair. A very pleasing incident occurred during the evening, viz., the visit of a venerable Craftsman, who was first brought to light in this lodge in the year 1814. During the evening the R.W.M. called the attention of the lodge to the brother, who had shown his fraternal feelings in taking the first opportunity accorded him to visit his mother lodge, and in the name of the brethren gave him a hearty welcome, which was enthusiastically endorsed by those present. Bro. Guthrie briefly replied, stating it afforded him very much pleasure in again being in the bosom of his mother lodge after an absence of forty-five years from the city, and as he had now fixed his residence here, he trusted to be spared to spend many pleasant hours amongst the brethren who had given him such a cordial welcome.

EDINBURGH.—Roman Eagle Lodge, No. 160.—The first monthly meeting of the season of the Roman Eagle Lodge, No. 160, was held on Wednesday, the 20th ult., at which a large number of the brethren attended. There were also deputations from Lodge Journeyman No. 8, Lodge Canongate and Leith No. 5, and Lodge St. Andrew No. 43, each deputation headed by the Masters of the respective lodges, and several visiting brethren. Amongst the latter was Prince Rhodocanakis, who was lately initiated into Lodge St. Andrew, and who wished to see the working of lodges before he left Edinburgh. The Prince was received with every mark of honour and respect consistent with the level workings of the Craft, and before leaving at a late hour, expressed himself to the Master as having been well pleased with his visit. The usual musical entertainment was given by the brethren of the lodge, and the proceedings throughout were conducted, as they were closed, in peace and harmony. During the course of the evening the R.W.M. in the name of the brethren presented P.M., Bro. Dr. Cairns, with a handsome time-piece and silver snuff-box, the latter bearing an inscription in English and the former having the same inscription in Latin, in recognition of the valuable services he rendered the lodge during the years in which he occupied the chair. The Master in presenting it paid a high but well-earned encomium on the P.M. as a Craftsman of great earnestness and zeal—one who had not only worked well for his own lodge, but who was an ornament to the Craft—and remarked that the Latin inscription was very appropriate in this instance seeing that as a scholar the P.M. had well represented a lodge originally founded by Dr. Brown, who to exercise his students that were members of the lodge, ordained that the minutes should be kept, and as much of the working as possible done, in Latin. Before closing, the R.W.M., Senior and Junior Wardens of the Lodge Journeyman were, on the motion of the Master, affiliate members of the Roman Eagle Lodge, on account of the former lodge having kindly granted the use of their hall till the Roman Eagle Lodge could be provided with a hall of their own.

THE ROYAL ARCH.

METROPOLITAN.

Domestic Chapter No. 177.—A regular Convocation of this Chapter was held on Thursday, the 28th ult., at Anderson's Hotel, Fleet-street, under the presidency of the M.E.Z., Comp. R. Wentworth Little, who was supported by E. Comps. J. Smith, P.Z. Treas.; A. H.; Gilbert, J.; H. G. Buss, P.Z., S.E.; W. Carpenter, T. A. Adams, J. Brett, C. A. Cottebrune, E. Sisson and C. B. Payne, P.Z.'s; W. Platt, P.Z., 19; G. Wilson, S.N.; Dr. Calcalegue, D. G. Barri, W. Williams, and J. Thistleton. The visitors were Comps. G. Kenning, 22; H. M. Levy, 183, and C. Willeox, 975. It was expected that several candidates would have been exalted upon this occasion, but from various causes none were able to attend. The Comps. therefore adjourned to an excellent banquet, and a most pleasant evening was spent. Comp. Levy in his usual felicitous style, gave his recitation of "Mrs. Brown at the Theatre," and Comp. Wilson sang in excellent voice, the praises of a "Deep, deep draught of the good Rhine wine." We hope to record several exaltations at the November meeting of this old Chapter, which recently celebrated its jubilee.

Joppa Chapter, No. 188.—The Quarterly Convocation of this Chapter took place on Monday, the 25th ult., at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate street. The Chapter was punctually opened by Comps. T. Lazarus, M.E.Z.; W. Littaur, H.; and T. Abrahams, T.; supported by P.P.'s Lazarus, Harris S. V. Abrahams, E. P. Albert, and Comps. P.P.'s Loewenstark and Walters, visitors. The Comps. were then admitted, and the minutes of the previous Convocation were read and confirmed. A ballot was taken for the admission of Bro. Horton, which proved unanimous in his favour. This being the night for the installation of principals the Comps. again retired, and a Comclave of installed Principals was formed, when Comp. Loewenstark, M.E.Z., of the Mount Lebanon Chapter, installed most impressively, Comp. W. Littaur in the first chair, who in his turn installed the Rev. M. B. Levy, in an appropriate manner, as his colleague into the third chair. The Comclave was then closed and the Comps. were again admitted, when Bros. Rosenthal and Horton, were exalted by Comp. Littaur into R.A. Masonry. The ceremony was impressively rendered by the M.E., who was most ably assisted by Comp. P.P. S. V. Abrahams, acting as 2nd Principal. The Chapter was then closed in solemn form, and the Comps. adjourned to the banquet. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were then proposed. In giving the health of the G.Z. of the Order, the M.E. among many eulogistic remarks concluded by saying, "That if the Grand Lodge and Grand Chapter of England have at all times been considered the most powerful and most respected of all Grand Lodges and Grand Chapters in the globe it will be unanimously conceded that both Grand Lodge and Grand Chapter have lost nothing from their lustre or prestige whilst under the paternal rule of the Earl of Zetland." On giving the toast of the G.H. and the rest of the Officers of the Grand Chapter, the M.E. took occasion to dwell at length on the status of the G. Chapter, which he said was the central organ of all subordinate Chapters, and the attributes of which were very extended, having the power of granting Chapter warrants, and withdrawing them, of the watching over the maintenance in their integrity of the general laws, deciding all dogmatic, legislative and administrative questions, defending the Order against all encroachments, and protecting Comps. against any arbitrary acts on the part of any officer like himself, the M.E. In proposing the health of the P. Principals, the M.E. coupled with it, the name of the I.P. Principal, Comp. T. Lazarus. The M.E. considered the career of Comp. T. Lazarus, as unprecedented in the annals of the Joppa Chapter, having been elected Principal Soj. on the very night of his exaltation. The M.E. then handed to Comp. Lazarus in the name of the Chapter, a magnificent P. Principal's Jewel set with diamonds, to which almost every Comp. in the Joppa Chapter had been a subscriber. Comp. Lazarus returned thanks in a very feeling and eloquent speech. On giving the toast of the newly-exalted Comp. Horton, the M.E. addressed him as follows: "Allow me to tell you that by joining the R.A., you have come to a school as philosophical as were the most celebrated at Athens, Crotona and Alexandria; for as in those academies, we also teach the purest morality. Foremost of all we teach that no man should be a stranger to another man. Hence do we build up a gigantic fabric, founded on Fraternity. The instruments with which we rear this fabric are reason, justice, charity and truth. The weapons with which we maintain and defend this fabric, are those of the mind only, for the propagation of wisdom requires no violence. Our motto is, 'Pax hominibus.' Indeed, Masonry may fearlessly lift its innocent hands to heaven, for they are pure and unstained. Not a drop of blood has ever been shed on behalf of our Order, nevertheless it encircles and illuminates the whole earth, benefitting the whole human family. A little longer, and the brotherhood of all nations will be realised through Masonry, and we shall then have the right to exclaim, 'the wilderness and solitary places shall be glad, and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose.' Allow me also to tell you, it is only in the R.A. that we become acquainted with the true origin of all Grand Lodges. Outside the Chapter, the most erroneous notions prevail in this respect. According to more than a hundred Masonic writers, Freemasonry is said to descend from God himself—God created light, Freemasonry is light—giving, consequently according to this reasoning God must have been the first Mason. Now it is true, we do find in the 7th verse of the 7th chapter of Amos, these words: 'Behold the Lord stood upon a wall made by a plumb-line with a plumb-line in his hand,' but it would still be preposterous, not to say irreverent, thus directly to connect the G.A. of the U. with Freemasonry. According to other Masonic writers, the honour of having been the first Mason, is assigned to the first man, probably on account of his having been the first who wore the apron. If the theory be the true one, Ev. must have been a Brother Mason to Adam, for she also wore the fig-leaf apron. All these erroneous statements prove but too clearly that those writers had never been exalted, for if they had been, they would have known what you have been taught to-day, namely, Allow me finally to say that by having joined the A., you have acquired what I consider to be far more precious than all the diamonds of Golconda, having been taught how to attain to the true knowledge of God, and how to prepare yourself for that spiritual edifice, built by the Almighty beyond the stars. And now since our sacred temple has been opened to you, it becometh your duty to visit it very often to seek in it the wisdom that dwelleth in it to render yourself in every respect worthy of the treasures found in it, and to prove yourself unto us as Jonathan proved unto David. The toast of the visitors was then given to which Comps. Loewenstark, Walters, Coote, and Capt. Talbot (an American), most felicitously responded. The toast of 2nd and 3rd Principals was then given and that of the rest of the Officers, and the concluding toast was brought out by the Janitor,

The Comps. separated at about 11 o'clock, having spent a most agreeable evening.

Polish National Chapter, No. 534.—This excellent working Chapter met at the Freemasons' Hall, on Thursday, the 28th ult., Comps. Louis Mercik, M.E.Z.; W. Smeed, P.Z. (in the absence of Comp. T. Morris); P. H. Gilbert, J.; Matthew Cooke, P.Z., Scribe E. The minutes of the former Chapter were read and confirmed, and the report of the Audit Committee was read. There being no further business before the Chapter, it was closed in due form and with solemn prayer. The Comps. then adjourned to a very excellent banquet, provided by Comp. Gosden, that gave satisfaction to all present. The usual loyal and complimentary toasts were proposed, and some very excellent complimentary speeches were made, and ably responded to. The Janitor's toast concluded a very agreeable evening.

Prince Frederick William Chapter, No. 753.—This prosperous chapter held its last meeting for the year on Wednesday, Oct. 27th, at the Knights of St. John Hotel, St. John's Wood. In the unavoidable absence of the M.E.Z., the chapter was opened by Comp. F. G. Baker, P.Z., as M.E.Z.; T. A. Adams, H.; Houghton, J.; H. Stacey, S.E.; Hill, N.; T. Foxall, P.S.; Ware, A.S. Among the P.Z.'s present were J. D. Caulcher, Treasurer; T. Robinson, J. Frost; Comps. Mullius, Wood, Claisson, Oulton, Price, Coote, Ramsay Smith, Austin, Alexander, Stiles, Windle, Swatten, Butler, Stewart, Piggot, Carter, and other Comps. Comp. Jones, of the Joppa Chapter, was the only visitor. The ballot was then taken for the following brethren to be exalted: Bro. R. H. Bush, M.D. (1150); J. T. Brown (753), R. Firbank (167), E. Hammond (167), which was unanimous in their favour. Bro. Brown was then introduced and exalted to the Supreme degree of R.A.M., the ceremony and addresses of the various chairs and officers being given in the usual excellent manner for which this chapter is distinguished. An elegantly bound Bible was presented to the chapter by Comp. F. G. Baker, P.Z., which was accepted with pleasure. The chapter was then closed, and the Comps. sat down to an excellent banquet over which Comp. Key Hardy, M.E.Z., presided. The usual loyal toasts were given, after which the M.E.Z. proposed the health of the newly-exalted Comp.; in a few well chosen words. Comp. Brown expressed the great pleasure he received in being exalted to this beautiful degree, ever since he had been a Mason he admired it, and the degree he had taken this evening would induce him to persevere in Masonry, and prove himself a worthy Mason. The health of the visitor, Comp. Jones, was then given. Comp. Jones said he was much pleased in witnessing the excellent working of the chapter, and also the sumptuous banquet provided for them, and the cordiality by which he had been received, of which he should retain a pleasurable recollection. The health of the M.E.Z.'s, P.Z.'s and officers were then given, and the companions separated having spent a very happy evening.

SCOTLAND.

St. Andrew's Chapter, No. 88.—Exaltation of H. J. H. the Prince Rhodocanakis. A special meeting of this Chapter was called on the 19th ult., at 8 o'clock, for the exaltation of Bro. the Prince Rhodocanakis and among the Comps. present were, Dr. Cairns, M.E.Z.; Dr. Carmichael, H.; and Dr. Dickson, J.; Lindsay Mackenzie, G.S.E.; Dr. McCowen, (Representative of the Grand Orient of France), P.Z.; C. S. Law, P.Z. 56, G.D. of C.; Wm. Mann, G.J.W., M.E.Z. 1; A. J. Stewart, 33°, Grand Treasurer, Grand Representative from the Grand Chapter of Canada; C. Fitzgerald Matier, No. 1; and many others. After the degree of Mark Master, Past or Chair Master, and Excellent Master had been conferred on His Imperial Highness, he passed the veils in due and ancient form and was then admitted to the Chapter and exalted to the degree of Holy Royal Arch. The duties of P.S. were most efficiently discharged by Comp. Mackenzie, G.S.E. The only toast proposed was that of the health of the newly-exalted Companion, which was duly honoured and responded to.

INSTRUCTION.

Metropolitan Chapter of Instruction.—An interesting meeting of this well-known Chapter of Instruction was held at the George Hotel, Aldermanbury, on Tuesday, the 28th ult., upon which occasion the Companions had an opportunity of greeting the M.E. Comp. Henry Murray, D.G. Master, and District G. Supt. for China, who is at present in England. The Chapter was duly opened by E. Comp. J. Brett, P.Z. 177 and 975, as Z.; R. Wentworth Little, M.E.Z. 177, and P.Z. 975, as H.; A. P. Loewenstark, P.Z., as J.; J. Boyd, P.Z. 534, as P.Z.; G. A. Smith, P.S.; Dr. Woodman, M.E.Z. 33, as E.; Taylor as N.; Edmonds, D. R. Still, Ferguson, Lemaitre, Hamilton, P.Z. 554, Harteld, Dix, Ashby, and Bernstein. The ceremony of exaltation was ably rehearsed, Comp. Edmonds being the candidate, after which two clauses of the first section were worked. Comp. Brett then most effectively delivered the explanation of the Banners of the Twelve Tribes, and by particular request also gave the lecture on the Platonic bodies. Comp. Little, H., then rose and said he had a proposition to make, which he was satisfied would be received with unqualified approbation: it was, to move that the rank of an Honorary member be conferred upon the distinguished Comp. M.E. Henry Murray, D.G.S. for China, who was present that evening. It was a feeble tribute to his merit, but it would serve to remind Comp. Murray when he returned to rule over the Craft in that distant land, that he was held in high esteem by his brethren in England. Comp. Boyd seconded the proposition, which was carried unanimously. Comp. Murray expressed his sense of the compliment paid him, and said he was greatly interested in the proceedings he had witnessed that evening, and could only wish that the Comps. in China had so efficient an instructor as Comp. Brett. The Chapter was then closed.

Faith Lodge of Instruction, No. 141.—This old lodge of instruction which has lately moved back to the locality in which it was originated, (namely Bro. Rackstraws, the Old Gun Tavern,) in the course of time has made many changes, some not being to its advantage, but we may hope it will long continue where it has now taken up its abode: Bro. Fisher's refreshment-rooms, Metropolitan Railway, Victoria Station. The room the lodge meets in is by far the best occupied by any lodge of instruction in London—the creature comforts of the members are also cared for in every particular, by the worthy Bro. Fisher, and their progress in Masonic knowledge is safe, under the auspices of our esteemed Bro. Cottabruno, who is always in attendance to impart information. These advantages ought to make it the lodge of instruction par excellence of the south western part of the metropolis—the facility with which any part of London can be reached being also a great boon.

MARK MASONRY.

PROVINCIAL.

SCARBOROUGH.—Star in the East Lodge, No. 95, of Mark Masters, E.C.—This lodge met in the lodge-room, Old Globe Inn, on Wednesday, the 27th of October. The following officers and brethren were present: Bro. W. T. Farthing, W.M.; W. F. Rooke P.M.; J. W. Woodall, P.M., G.M.O., the Worshipful the Mayor of Scarborough; R. H. Peacock, S.W.; W. Pocock, J.W.; J. A. Chaplain, Treas.; H. C. Martin, Sec. of Reg. of Marks; H. W. Garnett, M.O.; D. Fletcher, S.O.; J. Parker, J.O.; G. H. Wabshaw, S.D.; J. E. Green, Org.; W. Pattison, I.G., and J. Verity, Tyler. Bro. Williamson Spurr, Ruddock, Hardgrave, Surtees, Groves, Inskip, and Kendall, York Lodge, visitors. The minutes were read and confirmed. Bro. J. Knight, A. Allen, and Land were balloted for, and elected candidates for advancement, and the first-named two being present they were admitted, and advanced to the degree of M.M., in the W.M.'s usual very impressive and correct manner. Bro. Rooke, P.M. proposed, and Bro. Spurr seconded, a vote of thanks to the W.M. for his regular attendance and assiduity during his year of office, which was carried unanimously. Bro. Farthing, (the W.M.) returned thanks in a very able manner. This being the night for the election of the W.M. and Treasurer for the ensuing year, Bro. H. A. Williamson, P.M., 200, was unanimously elected to fill the high and very important office of W.M. Those brethren who have heard Bro. Williamson work the several degrees in the Blue Lodge, will be aware, certain, look forward to a year's real enjoyment in the lodge, his kindness of heart, real Masonic principles and general usefulness, have justly won for him the respect and esteem of a very wide circle of friends. Bro. J. A. Chaplain was unanimously re-elected Treasurer for the fourth time, and he also returned thanks in a humorous speech, thanking the brethren for the confidence thus reposed in him. Bro. J. Kendall, of the York Mark Lodge, was proposed as a joining member, and Bro. J. Fisher, P.M., S.P.Z., was proposed for advancement at the next meeting. The lodge was closed with solemn prayer, and the brethren spent an hour's real enjoyment.

ORDERS OF CHIVALRY.

RED CROSS OF ROME & CONSTANTINE.

METROPOLITAN.

Roman Eagle Conclave, No. 6.—A regular assembly of this important Conclave was held at Anderson's Hotel, Fleet-street, on Saturday, the 23rd ult., when the following Knights were present: V.E. Knt. H. C. Levander, M.A., G.A. Treas. M.P.S.; Dr. W. R. Woodman, G.A. Recorder; V.E. Dr. C. H. Rogers-Harrison, S.G.; Rev. W. B. Church, M.A., J.G.; W. F. N. Quilty, K.G.C., P. Sov. and Treas.; A. A. Pendlebury, K.G.C., Recorder; H. Allman, Prefect; J. Weaver, Org.; S. Foxall, Herald; W. Hurlstone, S.S.; R. Wentworth-Little, G. Recorder; D. R. Adams, W. C. Barlow, A. Perrot, Geo. J. Tyler, J. Tunks, C. Haigh, Dr. W. C. Lucey, H. Thompson, M.P.S. Designate, No. 18; J. J. Caney, C. H. Thompson, J. R. Foulger and G. Smith. Visitor, Ill. Sir Knt. Colonel Burdett, 32°, G. H. Chancellor of England, and Ins.-Gen. for Surrey. The Conclave was opened in imperial form, the roll was called, and the minutes were duly read and confirmed. Ballots were taken for Bro. H. Massey, P.M. 619, Dulwich, and J. Lionel Hasleham, P.M. 76, Winchester, and proved unanimously in favour of their admission. Bro. Alfred Smith, M.A., Oxon P.M. 76, Winchester, being in attendance, was then regularly admitted, received, constituted and installed a Knight of the Order. The elections for the ensuing year were then proceeded with, and resulted as follows. Sir Knt. W. R. Woodman, M.D., as M.P.S.; C. H. Rogers-Harrison V.E.; W. F. N. Quilty, Treas., and J. Gilbert, Sentinel. Sir Knt. Hurlston, Barlow, and Perrot were chosen as the Council of the Conclave. A P. Sov.'s jewel was unanimously voted to Sir Knt. Levander, and the Conclave was closed.

The Sir Knights then adjourned to an excellent banquet—under the superintendence of Sir Knt. Smith, the manager of the hotel,—with which the brethren were well pleased.

After the cloth was drawn, the M.P.S. gave the first toast "To the memory of Constantine and Eusebius," which he asked them to drink in solemn silence.

Obedience was paid to this order, and the usual respect accorded to the pious memory of C. and E.

The glasses having been replenished, the M.P.S. said the next toast was one he was sure the Sir Knights Companions would drink with great cordiality. It was "The Queen, and Christian Masonry." (Cheers.)

The M.P.S. proposed the "Right Hon. Lord Kenlis, Sovereign of the Order, and other members of the Grand Council," and said on the present occasion the Conclave was favoured with more than one member of that Council.

He coupled with the toast the name of Colonel Francis Burdett, of the Premier Conclave.

Sir Knt. Perrot, with his usual kindness, sang an amusing song in French, which was much applauded.

Colonel BURDETT said after the very grateful music and pleasant strains they had just heard, he was afraid a reticence from him would not be very welcome. He assured them he felt great pleasure in coming amongst them and in being associated with one of the highest Orders ever brought before the public, and which was making rapid progress throughout the country, and felt the Order was one which would induce Masons to look higher than they have been able to look. He thanked them very much for their kind hospitality, and for the manner in which he had been received amongst them.

The M.P.S. said the next toast on the list was that of "The Grand Senate and the Knights of the Grand Cross of this Order."

Sir Knight WOODMAN, M.D. V.E., responded on behalf of the members of that body, and said he was sure that if they could do anything to promote the welfare of the Order they would do so very willingly.

Sir Knt. QUILTY also responded. He said he would simply tender his best thanks for the cordial manner in which the toast had been drunk, and although he could not take credit upon himself for any particular service they had rendered the Order, yet when occasion required it they were willing to do all in their power. When the Order grew into magnitude, which he was sure it would, and fresh duties were cast upon the Grand Senate, everything would be done to keep up the prestige of the Sir Knights of the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine.

The M.P.S. said he had the pleasing duty of bringing forward to their notice the name of one who had lately joined the Order—Sir Knt. Alfred Smith. He was a very old friend of his, being a P.M. of the lodge in which he (the M.P.S.) had been initiated, and of which Bro. Smith had been twice Master. (Hear, hear.) He had had much pleasure in installing him into this Christian Order, and he felt that he would never regret the step he had taken. (Cheers.) For the Conclave, he was assured they would never regret having admitted him amongst them. (Hear, hear.)

(The toast was well received.)

Sir Knt. SMITH thanked the Sir Knts. Comps for their kindness in admitting him into the Order. His knowledge of the lower degrees of Masonry had convinced him of the importance and sublimity of the higher degrees. He should never forget what he had learned this evening, and would transmit the sword to those who might come after him, as unsullied as he had this evening received it. (Cheers.)

Sir Knt. QUILTY in proposing "The M.P.S.," said he had worthily fulfilled the duties of the chair, as they all well knew.

(The toast was much applauded.)

The M.P.S. said it always afforded him the greatest pleasure to be with them, he considered it a high honour to preside over them, more especially as he had been so well supported by the Companions. He hoped they would always meet in the same harmonious spirit. He then proposed the health of the P. Sov. of the Conclave, Sir Knt. Quilty. They all knew how well he had performed his duties when in the chair. He also had much pleasure in presenting him, in the name of the Sir Knts., with a handsome jewel, which he now decorated him with. He trusted he would live many years to wear it in the Conclave, where he would always be received with the utmost cordiality.

The M.P.S. then presented Bro. Quilty with a handsome P. Sov.'s jewel made by Sir Knt. Kenning, of the Masonic Depot, 3 and 4, Little Britain, and which bore the following inscription: "Presented to Sir Knt. Quilty in recognition of his services as the first P. Sov. of the Roman Eagle Conclave, No. 6, of the Order of Knights of the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine."

Sir Knt. QUILTY said he had not only to thank them for having drunk his health, but also to tender his very best thanks to them for the handsome jewel they had presented him with. He was glad to think they considered he had done his duty well, although when he assumed the chair for the first time it was with the greatest diffidence, and it was only on being assured of their cordial support that he undertook the duty. He felt it was entirely due to them that he was able to perform the duties with satisfaction. He would always remember with pride that he had been the first Sov. of one of the largest conclaves of the Order, and from the assemblage present this evening, it was quite certain the "Roman Eagle" was not losing any of its feathers. He was sure they all had but one wish at heart, and that was the success of the Order. It would always be his earnest endeavour to deserve their good opinion. (Cheers.)

The M.P.S. proposed the health of Sir Knt. Woodman, whom he said had fulfilled numerous duties in the conclave. He trusted he would always be able to attend the conclave and add considerably to the number of its members. Wishing him success, he called upon the Comps. to join with him in drinking to "The health of the M.P. Sov. Elect, Sir Knt. Woodman." (Cheers.)

Sir Knt. WOODMAN said he would do the best he could to discharge the duties of the office to which they had so kindly elected him. He hoped the "Roman Eagle" would become the largest conclave in the Order.

The M.P.S. proposed the Recorder Sir Knt. Pendlebury. Sir Knt. PENDLEBURY in response said it would always be his utmost endeavour to enhance the prosperity of the conclave.

Some other toasts were given and responded to, and the Sir Knts. separated having enjoyed a very pleasant evening, enlivened by some excellent music from Sir Knts. Weaver, Perrot, and Chas. E. Thompson.

Sir Knt. Church acted as Chaplain in the Conclave, and at the banquet table.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

We have great pleasure in announcing that we have decided to publish THE FREEMASON—commencing with Volume III., January 1st, 1870—on toned paper, and with old-faced type, similar to that used by the Pall Mall Gazette and other high-class publications.

The size will also be permanently enlarged to Sixteen Pages, and, with other improvements contemplated, THE FREEMASON will then be the leading weekly organ of the Craft throughout the globe.

TO ADVERTISERS.

THE Circulation of THE FREEMASON being now at the rate of nearly Half-a-Million per annum, it offers peculiar facilities to all who advertise.

It is well-known that the Fraternity of Freemasons is a large and constantly increasing body, mainly composed of the influential and educated classes of society; and as

is now the accepted organ of the Brotherhood in the United Kingdom, and also enjoys an extensive sale in the colonies and foreign parts, its advantages as an advertising medium can scarcely be overrated.

Answers to Correspondents.

All communications for THE FREEMASON should be written legibly, on one side of the paper only, and, if intended for insertion in the current number must be received not later than 10 o'clock a.m. on Thursdays, unless in very special cases. The name and address of every writer must be sent to us in confidence.

Lodges of Instruction meeting on Sunday, are not inserted in the list of Masonic meetings.

J. F. DUBLIN.—Thanks for the report of presentation to the Rev. S. G. Morrison, which shall appear in our next MASONIC LIFEBOAT FUND.—We have received several letters on this subject, and will make a selection for our next issue.

CAPT. F. G. IRWIN, Prov. S.G.W. of Somersetshire.—We are greatly indebted to you for the proceedings of the lodge at Liege; they are now being translated, and will appear as soon as possible.

R.—We think it best not to publish your letter at present. Like Damocles, the unlucky wight in question has a sword suspended over his head by a single hair, and we are unwilling to be his executioner by fanning the gale that is gathering strength around him daily.

A. WARWICKSHIRE RED CROSS KNIGHT.—We entirely agree with the sentiments expressed in your letter, although we do not deem it expedient to insert it. The remarks you allude to are truly ridiculous—and our advice is—REMEMBER THE MOTTO OF THE CRAFT. AUDI, VIDI, TACE.

C.—It would be highly improper for the presiding officer to permit any brother not an installed Master to perform any of the ceremonies. The only exception is when one of the Wardens rules the lodge; in the absence of the W.M. and all the P.M.'s, he is entitled to do the work, but not to take the Master's chair. We have ourselves initiated and passed brethren when ruling our lodge as S.W., and it was held by the authorities to be perfectly legal, as there was no P.M. in the lodge.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1869.

FREEMASONRY ON THE CONTINENT.

THROUGH the medium of a noble friend and brother who is intimately associated with the secret organizations of Freemasonry in Europe we are now in a position to give reliable intelligence, which is not to be procured through ordinary sources, respecting the doings of the Craft in every part of the Continent.

We publish in this week's issue a letter received from Bro. Hadjar Bey, a Spanish Mason of eminence, the information contained in which will be new to many of our readers, although from circumstances explicable to those who know the Machiavellian policy of Spanish statesmen it has been considerably delayed in transitu. Our readers will observe that Bro. Hadjar Bey alludes to his lodge as the sixth in Madrid, whereas the secret advices which reached us last week state explicitly that the number of lodges in that capital is now fifteen, thus clearly showing how rapid has been the progress of the Order in Spain. It may, however, be proper here to remark that so great is the circumspection observed by some of our Peninsular brethren that until thoroughly proved and tested by the Chiefs of the Supreme Junta, it is quite possible for one lodge to be ignorant of the existence of another meeting in its immediate vicinity; and, again, the members of the lower grades have often no cognizance of their superiors. This régime is, we need scarcely say, by no means in accordance with our English ideas, but it is a necessity of the times in those countries where Governments are as shifting and uncertain as the sands on the sea-shore. For instance, although the Count de Reuss is himself a member of the Craft, it has been deemed prudent not to advance him beyond a certain degree, in order that he may not be brought in contact with the leaders of the Democratic party. At the same time it is but fair to add that although the Freemasons of Spain advocate the greatest freedom of thought and action, they are far from adopting anarchical or revolutionary theories, nor have they as a body countenanced the recent disturbances in Valencia and Catalonia. Still, in the present unsettled condition of their national existence, they wisely conceal from all but a chosen few those cardinal principles of fraternity and progress which are the life and soul of Freemasonry. A coup d'état may at any moment restore the hated Bourbons, and shatter the fragile fabric of the Constitution; or the ambition of a military leader may produce equally destructive effects upon the future of Spain.

We are grateful to our Spanish friends for the clear and candid view of the situation with which they have favoured us, and we are especially thankful to the powerful and fraternal aid by whose interposition the revelation has been made. Henceforth we shall see, as the great apostle expresses it—not as "through a glass darkly," but "face to face" with the mighty spirit of Ultramontanism which seeks to rule the earth—henceforth we shall be able to make allowances for those divergencies from the straight path of Freemasonry which have so often troubled us in our contemplation of other spheres of Masonic labour.

LET THE TRUTH BE KNOWN! Through the secret sources of intelligence now placed within our reach, we learn that it is not Protestantism, Rationalism, Spinozism, or Materialism that Papalistic Rome fears; it is the teachings of Freemasonry. The great bugbear of the Vatican is the Masonic Order, the hydra to be crushed beneath anathemas, and persecutions, is the bond of Universal Brotherhood. Sinners that we are—let us bow down and worship Baal—for the day of our destruction draws nigh. Infallibility wills it, and who shall gainsay its decree? All this is very sad; it is humiliating, it is positively painful. Can human depravity sink lower than this abyss of Roman perversity and despotism? Are men to be for ever the slaves of this flaming sword which bars the road to Paradise? We trow not, and henceforth we shall cast in our lot with those children of the light whose fortune it is to battle with the fiercest rage of bigotry in every land. Henceforth we shall lend the weight of that mighty weapon, the pen, to those who struggle amidst difficulties and dangers to the refulgent altar of truth. We shall endeavour to encourage those who sit in darkness and in the valley of the shadow of death, for we know that the longest eclipse has an end, and that the radiant dawn obliterates the trail of night with a flood of light and glory. Happily—and we cannot be too grateful for the boon—happily we enjoy on English soil such an immunity from the legalized spoiler, and the rapacious sacerdotalist—that we cannot realize the position of our brethren who suffer from such plagues. We cannot sympathise thoroughly with their impatience, or at once commend their prospects of redress.

With improved knowledge of the real situation; with better information as to the designs of the common enemies of mankind—priestcraft and superstition—we shall be able to render assistance in the strife, and in any case our moral influence judiciously exercised will greatly aid the efforts of our Continental brethren. Without slaves, there would be no tyrants—without tyrants there would be no conspirators—this is the phase of Freemasonry which we have now to consider, and with which we are called upon to deal.

All Europe is a witness to the deadly animosity of the Papacy towards the Masonic Order, and it would be folly to ignore it because our branch of the Fraternity in Britain, happens to be wealthy and puissant, and cares not for Papal curses. In Rome, the priesthood aver that the Freemasons are making great efforts to corrupt the Pontifical soldiers so as to induce them to desert in large numbers during the meeting of the approaching Council, and thereby make a moral demonstration against the temporal power. This may be true or not, but it proves that the foe in our front is—ecclesiastical domination. Let us grapple with it boldly and unitedly, and the victory is ours.

It may be safely assumed that even in this article we can give merely an outline of the plot against our peace, but while avoiding revelations that might compromise the brethren in Spain or Italy, we shall be prepared to give fuller particulars from time to time. The ancient chivalry of England is not yet extinct, and whether amongst Masons or non-Masons, we rely upon evoking such a spirit of resistance to priestly intolerance as shall prove to the world that English Freemasonry is "not dead, but sleepeth."

Highness would occupy the position of Grand Master of England. (Hear, hear, and applause.) He hoped that whether he filled the position of Prince of Wales or Sovereign, His Royal Highness would never forget the Principles of Masonry. (Applause.)

The next toast was "The health of the Right Hon. the Earl of Zetland, the M.W. the G.M.; the Right Hon. the Earl De Grey and Ripon, the M.W. the Deputy G.M.; and other Grand Officers of the Grand Lodge," and Lord Methuen called upon all the Grand Officers present to reply. (Applause.)

Bro. the Rev. T. F. RAVENSHAW, Grand Chaplain of England, responded and said he thought the best return he could make for the kindness the brethren had shown in drinking the last toast would be, to say as little as possible. The duty of replying to this toast was rendered much more easy than it otherwise would be by the fact, that it included the names of two distinguished noblemen, who were known to be such excellent Masons—(applause.)—in fact, their good qualities were so well-known to the Craft throughout the country, that it would be nothing short of impertinence on his part to eulogise them. He was sure that the knowledge of their names being received with such cordiality whenever Masons assembled on occasions like the present, must of itself afford them much pleasure. With respect to the Past Officers of Grand Lodge, he might truthfully say they had all endeavoured to do their duty to the best of their ability, and they always felt gratified to find their humble services recognised. He trusted the present Grand Officers would do their best to follow the example of those who had gone before them. (Applause.)

Bro. the Rev. C. R. DAVY, Past Grand Chaplain of England, who was loudly cheered on rising, also returned thanks. After some facetious observations, the Rev. Bro. said that when in Grand Lodge, he often looked round to see if any of the Wiltshire Masons were present. They would be well repaid by a visit to Freemasons' Hall, and he wished more of their brethren from the provinces would attend, and see what the Grand Lodge of England really was. (Hear, hear.) There were some of the brethren who appeared to know as little of the Grand Lodge of England as they did of the interior of Africa. (Laughter.) If they would only attend Grand Lodge, they would see how matters were managed, and find what Grand Lodge really was, namely, the Parliament of Freemasonry. (Applause.) He thanked the brethren present for the honour they had done him, and for the patience with which they had listened to his few rambling remarks. (Applause.)

Bro. BRIDGES, Deputy Prov. Grand Master of Somerset, and P.G.S.B. of England, said that after the speeches he had just heard, there remained very little for him to add. He trusted that some of the brethren present would be able to attend Grand Lodge at the next Quarterly Communication, on the first Wednesday in December, when it was expected the Prince of Wales would be present. He (Bro. Bridges) had on previous occasions enjoyed the pleasure of meeting his Wiltshire brethren, and he hoped this visit would not be the last. (Applause.)

Bro. SAMUEL WITTEY, Deputy Prov. Grand Master, said he had permission to propose the next toast, which was one they all anticipated, and he should exercise the privilege with great pleasure, as this was the first time he had been permitted as Lord Methuen's Deputy, to propose his Lordship's health. (Applause.) Without further preface he would give the toast, feeling sure they would give it a very hearty reception. (Loud applause.)

The worthy PROV. GRAND MASTER in reply, said he wished he could feel he deserved the kindness the brethren had manifested towards him. He feared he had not expended on Masonry near so much time as they might wish him to devote to that good purpose, but the fact was, he was not so young as he used to be, and he did not feel equal to the task in following up Masonic engagements so regularly as in former days. Still, he was delighted to attend the Provincial Grand Lodge whenever it might be held, and to have the honour of meeting so many good Masons as he now saw around him. He congratulated himself on having possessed for so many years such an excellent and valued Deputy Provincial Grand Master, in the person of Sir Daniel Gooch, to whom must be mainly attributed the rise and success of Freemasonry in Wilts. (Applause.) When Sir Daniel took office, there was not much known about Masonry in Wiltshire; but by his indefatigable industry, he certainly contrived to place this county in as fair a position as regards Masonry as any county in England. (Applause.) He could not allow this opportunity of meeting the brethren to pass away without bearing his testimony to the many qualities which characterised Sir Daniel, and which so thoroughly endeared him to all to whom he was known. (Hear, hear.) They must all regret Sir Daniel's absence—(hear, hear.)—which was caused by his attendance at a board meeting of the Great Western Railway Company being necessary. He had, however, written a letter to him, (Lord Methuen,) full of expressions of regret that he could not be with them that day, but he felt sure that all present regretted his absence as much as Sir Daniel did himself. (Hear, hear.) He called upon them, knowing as they did Sir Daniel Gooch's many and varied good qualities, to drink his good health. (Applause.)

Lord METHUEN again rose, and said that when he parted with Sir Daniel Gooch as Deputy G. Master of this Province, he only did so on the understanding that he would propose in his stead one equally capable of fulfilling the duties of the office which he had held with such honour to himself. On no other terms would he hear of Sir Daniel's resignation, and he must say Sir Daniel behaved most handsomely, for he fulfilled the conditions, and left in his place one who would he believed, work Masonry in Wiltshire most satisfactorily. (Applause.) He, of course, referred to Bro. Samuel Wittey, whom they had all known for many years, and whose character required no eulogium of his. (Applause.) Bro. Wittey had the interests of Masonry thoroughly at heart, and the manner in which he had already worked the Province showed that in a few years Wilts would be quite equal, if not superior, to any Province in the West of England as regarded Masonry. (Applause.) Let them all drink his good health and thank him for the efforts he had made to bring the Province into its present satisfactory state. (Applause.) Work which ought properly to have been undertaken by him (Lord Methuen), had been performed by Bro. Wittey, and on this circumstance the Lodge might congratulate itself, for had he (Lord Methuen) attempted to discharge the duties it would have been in an inefficient manner (cries of "No, No,") but they had been most efficiently performed by his good friend, Bro. Wittey, whose health he now cordially proposed, and wished him many years of health and happiness. (Applause.)

Bro. WITTEY, D.P.G.M., said he felt quite at a loss to know how he could sufficiently thank the R.W., the P.G. Master, and brethren for the very kind way in which the last toast was proposed and received. The brethren had not only treated him with great kindness on this occasion, but ever since it had been his privilege to hold the distinguished position of D.P.G. Master their thanks had been showered upon him, and he had not only received expressions of their good will in words, but had also had substantial proofs of it, for on two occasions they had presented him with testimonials of the best and richest kind, the last, at Chippenham, being the volume of the sacred law, which he should treasure as one of his valued possessions. If their kindness to him was so great, what were his responsibilities in reference to them? He felt them largely, knowing that he succeeded one whom he could only hope to follow in the distance. If he could succeed in following in Sir Daniel's footsteps even at a distance, he should so far be glad. They might rest assured that with this object he should do his best, and so long as he was connected with this Province he should spare no pains to promote the interests of Freemasonry in Wiltshire. (Applause.) One of his last acts was to install Bro. Lawson, as Master of the new Lodge at Bradford. (Applause.) He hoped Masonry would continue to extend in the Province. (Hear, hear.) They should recollect the legacy that had been left them. He trusted that the influence of Masonry would be extended more and more, and that, as Lord Methuen had said, Wilts would rank quite equal, if not superior, to any Province in that part of the country. (Applause.) In conclusion, Bro. Wittey expressed his pleasure in seeing among them Bro. Bridges, the D.P.G.M. of Somerset, whose health he proposed. (Applause.)

Bro. BRIDGES returned thanks, and expressed the great pleasure it had afforded him to attend. He was glad to find Masonry in Wiltshire making such satisfactory progress. When in London that evening he spent a few minutes with Sir Daniel Gooch, who desired him to express to the brethren of Wiltshire his great regret at being unable to attend the present gathering. He also said that he hoped on a future occasion they would give him longer notice in order that he might arrange to be with them. (Applause.) He (Bro. Bridges) was sure that at the next Prov. Grand Lodge of Somersetshire the excellent P.G.M. (Lord Carnarvon) would be delighted to see some of his Wiltshire brethren present. With regard to Masonry in Somersetshire, Bro. Bridges said he had been associated with it for the last 20 years, and he would not allow it to recede in position if he could possibly help it. As regards progress, he felt no doubt there would be a good race between the two Provinces of Wilts and Somerset. (Hear and laughter.)

Lord METHUEN proposed as the next toast, "The Masonic Charities" and associated with it the name of Bro. Binckes, who had so greatly interested himself on behalf of the Boys' School. (Applause.)

Bro. BINCKES in reply said that any service he had rendered on behalf of the Boys' School, had been readily given and it had afforded him much pleasure to see the Institution emerge from the obscurity with which it was at one time threatened, to a prominent position. (Applause.) He felt for a long time that if the claims of the Institution could only be brought home closely to the Masons of the country there would be no fear as to the result. (Hear, hear.) Situate as large numbers of the brethren were at a distance from the Metropolis, where the school was, they had little or no opportunity of making themselves acquainted with its demands on their charity, but he felt it was a very easy thing for him to visit such gatherings as the present, and state what he knew with respect to the school. (Hear, hear.) He was glad to be able to inform them that during the past few years the institution had been supported to an extent that had enabled them to increase the number of boys from 72 to 115, and if they could remove the existing debt of £8,000 or £9,000 they would be in a position to receive 20 more boys, as they had room for that additional number. At the last election there were as many as 54 candidates for 6 vacancies, and he would ask what an amount of distress was represented by the 48 cases in which the parties were successful? There was no doubt that at the next election, there would be some 60 or 70 candidates. If the liberality of the brethren would permit the committee to elect 28 or 29, or nearly one-half of the applicants, what relief would be afforded! If every Mason in the country would but do something, how much more the aggregate would be. (Hear, hear.) In these days no one, however successful, knew in what position he might be on the morrow, and it was in their days of prosperity that they should help those who were in adversity. (Applause.) There was no one duly qualified to be a Mason who could not in some way assist one or all of the three glorious institutions connected with the Craft. (Hear, hear.) In the girls' school, as many as 105 daughters of Masons were cared for, while the boys numbered 115. The aged of both sexes who were entirely supported by the brethren numbered 130. Not a word ought to be needed to secure abundant help for these noble charities. (Applause.) He felt grateful to Providence for what had already been done on behalf of those institutions, and was thankful for favours yet to come. (Applause.)

Lord METHUEN expressed his entire satisfaction at the manner in which the Prov. Grand Lodge had been received by the brethren of the Lodge of Fidelity, and proposed the health of the W.M., officers and brethren of that lodge. (Applause.)

Bro. MORR briefly responded.

Lord METHUEN thanked Bro. Wittey for a gratuitous supply of champagne at the banquet, and Bro. WITTEY expressed the thanks of the brethren to Lord Methuen, Lord Lansdowne, and Mr. Watson Taylor for gifts of game and fruit.

To the toast of "The W.M.'s, officers and brethren of other lodges in the Province," Bro. BRAID (Swindon) briefly replied.

The company then broke up.

An anecdote is related of a brother, who is noted for his acts of charity, and who is withal a man of good address and presence, and rather a favorite among the ladies so much so as to cause some degree of jealousy on the part of his worthy and inestimable spouse. One evening a bundle came to the house for him, labelled "private." Of course, this was enough to excite the female curiosity, and she determined to hold forth with an inspection. Horror of horrors! Blankets, baby-linen, &c., greeted her astonished vision, and dreams of two families floated through her distracted brain. The brute came home, and after tea, when the wife had discovered in his eye the treachery of his conduct,—as she supposed,—he went out, taking with him the bundle, but not alone, for on his track was the revengeful wife. The faithless husband little imagined that she who supposed herself so cruelly and greatly annoyed and insulted hovered near him. He halted opposite a small tenement, which he entered without even rapping at the door. Here she paused to hold a council of war. What tactics to follow she was in doubt, but she determined to fight it out all summer, and storm the citadel; she knocked and hastily brushing pass the child who answered the summons, stood face to face before her husband, the embodiment of injured innocence. Her feelings were about to find expression in rather a combative manner, when the scene before her caused her to pause. A pale and careworn man shivering over the expiring embers of a scanty fire, a woman on a sick-bed, a babe not old enough for christening, met her ferocious gaze. She read the story in a glance—the brother in affliction, the mystic tie, the great secret of Masonry.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—Grateful and Comforting.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"The singular success which Mr. Epps attained by his homoeopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold by the Trade only, in $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb., and 1 lb. tin-lined packets, labelled JAMES EPPS & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London.—ADVT.

Masonic Miscellanea.

The first Grand Lodge was established in the State of Massachusetts, in 1764.

Never forget that you are a Freemason, a link in the chain of universal brotherhood.

The oldest Lodge in America was established in the city of Boston, in 1733, its warrant issuing from the Grand Lodge of England.

Freemasonry, whitened with the frost of ages, comes down to us, bearing on its grim countenance and furrowed brow, the relics of antiquity. It lives while kings and conquerors have passed away, and thrones and sceptres have crumbled into dust—while cities, which were once renowned for their greatness, magnificence and splendour, have had "Ichabod" written upon them by the finger of time, and empires rocked and crushed, have split into fragments and disappeared. Masonry, like a mighty fire, has spread itself from the centre to the circumference of our globe. Neither the weakness, nor perfidy of its professed friends, nor the malice of its enemies, have been able to retard its onward march, or for any length of time, cripple its energies.

The Warrant of the first "coloured lodge" bears date 29th September, 1784. The warrant was issued by "Thomas Howard, Earl of Effingham, Lord Howard, &c., &c., Acting Grand Master under the authority of His Royal Highness, Henry Frederick, Duke of Cumberland, &c., &c.," and was directed to "Prince Hall, Boston Smith, Thomas Sanderson, and several others residing at Boston, New England, in North America," constituting them a regular lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, "under the title or denomination of 'The African Lodge.'" The warrant is signed by R. Holt, D.G.M., and attested by W. White, G.S. African Lodges have been regarded as irregular and clandestine. Notwithstanding, they have steadily increased, and at the last communication of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, sixteen other States were represented.

The chief goddess in the Egyptian mysteries, the symbol of nature, and the mother and nurse of all things is Isis. Diodorus says Osiris, Isis, Typhon, Apollo, and Venus were the children of Jupiter and Juno. Osiris, who is identical with the Dionysus of the Greeks, married Isis, the moon, and they both made the improvement of society their especial care. Men were no longer butchered after Isis had discovered the valuable qualities of wheat and barley, and Osiris had taught how to prepare them, Isis and Osiris were undoubtedly persons superior in mind and intelligence to the age in which they lived, who organized society, and contributed largely to the improvement of mankind, on which account the gratitude of after ages elevated them to the rank of gods. The mysteries of Isis, are interesting to Masons, as being the foundation of those of the Sidonian builders, or Dionysian architects, which have contributed so many elements to the masonic rites.

The magnificent "Mosque of Omar" is believed to have been commenced by the Caliph Omar, the first of that name, and father-in-law of Mahomet, between the years A.D. 638 and 644, and very much enlarged, beautified and enriched, in fact quite remodelled by the Caliph Abd-el-malek in A.D. 686. It was seven years in building; the Moslems believe it to stand over the rock on which Jacob was sleeping when he saw the vision of the heavenly ladder; but it is still sacred to them, as it is to the Masons of the present day, from having been the sacred rock beneath the altar of Solomon's temple, whereon the sacred sacrifice was offered. During the time of the Latin kingdom in Jerusalem this mosque became a Christian cathedral, used by the Crusaders, and called the "Temple of the Lord." The fanciful and intricate patterns of the porcelain walls, the graceful and delicate tracery of the windows and inscriptions, the peculiarly charming and perfectly harmonizing effect produced by the blending of the colours, the effect of the dim religious light upon the interior of the magnificent dome, the adornment of the walls and exquisitely chiselled columns, produce an awe-inspiring feeling with which no building of the palmiest days of the mediæval ages can compare.

PROMPTNESS IN FINANCIAL MATTERS.—No course that can be pursued by a lodge is so fraught with bad results as negligence on the part of the lodge in collection, and on the part of the members in paying their dues. Every brother can, without feeling it, pay the trifling sum assessed upon him, monthly or quarterly. But when he neglects years, and the sum becomes of considerable amount, he begins to feel that he cannot well spare it, and when payment is enforced he likely enough takes offence and withdraws his membership, and so, from mere inattention—or perhaps there is no pressing need of funds for the time being—amounts are suffered to accumulate, the brethren become angry when pressed for payment, and the lodge is either broken up or made a theatre of discontent, and perhaps of exhibition of passion.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE, The Great Cure for Cholera and Consumption,

A Newly-discovered principle residing in Gum Benjamin (Styrax Benzoin), the chief chemical product of which has hitherto been Benzoic Acid, well known and highly valued by medical practitioners. The great difficulty which the discoverer encountered in bringing out this important remedy was the form in which to present it to the faculty and the public, the new chemical being amorphous and incapable of crystallization. It has therefore been deemed advisable to prepare a highly-concentrated solution of the product, combining it with such adjuncts as are considered natural auxiliaries. PRICE'S BENZODYNE is stimulant, anodyne, and mechanically astringent, arresting fluxes and hemorrhages of all kinds both external and internal, possessing singular efficacy in the following diseases:—Ague, Bronchitis, Consumption, Colic, Cholera, Cold, Cough, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Debility in all its various forms, Fevers, Influenza, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Spasms, Ticdolereux, &c., &c. PRICE'S BENZODYNE has been tried repeatedly in these cases and has never failed to cure.

It immediately relieves all pain, actually sheathing the organs with a protective matter, which defies the action of the most virulent blood-poisons, and thus PRICE'S BENZODYNE acts as the most powerful styptic now known to science, being the only effective external application for cuts, bites of insects, and all open wounds. In Cholera, as in Consumption, its effects are astounding, while Chronic Cough yields to its curative influences in a few hours.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is acknowledged by the highest Medical authority to be the most wonderful medicine yet introduced to the public; it may be taken at any time by both young and old with the most beneficial effects in all cases, leaving no bad effects like Laudanum, Chlorodyne, or any other poisonous and imperfect preparations, and can be given when no other could be tolerated.

In Consumption and Cancer its peculiarly soothing properties render it a boon to the sufferer in allaying the cough, mitigating night perspirations, and in relieving pain, &c.

In every stage of those dire diseases it gives an amount of ease not attainable by any other remedy.

In all cases of Chest Affections, as Asthma, Bronchitis, Winter Cough, Palpitation, &c., PRICE'S BENZODYNE is a very valuable medicine, producing a composed and tranquil state of the system, and quickly relieving the cough, assisting expectoration, and in a few days removing the most distressing symptoms.

In Hysteria, Epilepsy, Gout, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nerve Pains it is justly valued, as it is given with immediate benefit, relieving pain and suffering however violent the attack.

In Diarrhoea, Cholera, Alvine Discharges, spasms and colics of the intestines, &c., its effects are signal, as it never fails to check the disease.

CONSUMPTION IN ALL ITS STAGES CURED.

Coughs, Whooping Cough, Asthma, Bronchitis, Fever, Ague, Diphtheria, Hysteria, Rheumatism, Diarrhoea, Spasms, Colic, Renal and Uterine Diseases are immediately relieved by a dose.

During the period of Dentition of Children it will be found invaluable, and in curing Whooping Cough, Spasms, dispelling Flatulency, preventing Convulsive Fits, Heats, &c., to which they are so liable.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is specially adapted for Naval, Military or Traveller's medicine chests, and for Hospitals and Dispensaries everywhere.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s. and 22s., by all chemists

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.

Opium, Narcotics, and Squills, are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary Diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL.

Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says:—"I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued Cough, Pain, and Irritation of the Chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."

This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers, in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, and wholesale by Jas. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough.

THE AMERICAN FREEMASON is Monthly, of sixteen double-column quarto pages of entirely original matter, and translations from the French Italian, and German Masonic papers and periodicals of the day. It is devoted to the discussion of the rights of Lodges and individual Freemasons, in contradistinction to the assumptions of Grand Lodges, and the un-Masonic doctrines and arrangements of "high degrees." Its motto is—Belief in the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man. Its price is Five Shillings a year—a sum so small that no Freemason, for pecuniary reasons, need be a non-subscriber to it.

Trans-Atlantic Subscribers to the AMERICAN FREEMASON will receive it Post-paid from the Office of Publication direct, at their respective Post-offices, upon payment of the subscription to

All Subscriptions begin with March 15th, 1869, and end with February, 1870.

The AMERICAN FREEMASON is not the organ of any Grand Lodge; but speaking the words of truth, manhood, and independence, advocates freedom for Masonry in America, and the rights of Freemasons in their Lodges—rights which, by our Grand Lodges, in their subservency to high degrees, have been invaded, until at present they are nearly obliterated.

Subscribers in the British Colonies will please address all Subscriptions and Correspondence to J. FLETCHER BRENNAN, Editor, 114, Main-street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

TO THE NERVOUS & DEBILITATED EPILEPTIC SUFFERERS AND OTHERS.

HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA, discovered, introduced, and extensively prescribed by the late eminent Dr. MARSHALL HALL, has proved an infallible remedy (by oxydizing the blood and supplying its saline constituent) for Indigestion, Debility, Coughs, Asthma, Consumption, Skin, Liver, Stomach, and Nervous Affections, more especially Epilepsy, Apoplexy, and Paralysis. The successful results of this new chemical preparation are beyond all precedent, and the extraordinary cures effected by the late discoverer, and by his successor (Dr. Sutton), in the above maladies are without a parallel in the annals of medicine; and it is confidently believed that in no case need the sufferer despair, for practical experience has demonstrated, and signal success warranted the assertion, that in 99 cases out of every 100 complete cures may be relied on.

Sold in Bottles at 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and Cases of £5 each, by

EACH Paper contains every item of intelligence, from Mail to Mail, specially affecting the country or colony for which it is published, with an exhaustive summary of home and continental politics, science, art, and social news,
and a retrospect of commercial transactions in Great Britain
and on the Continent.

Manufacturers and Merchants may command the greatest markets of the world for their products through the mediums
of publicity afforded by the EUROPEAN MAIL. A demand may be created where none exists at present, or an existing demand may be sustained and increased against the most energetic competition.

The EUROPEAN MAIL gives such perfect mercantile information that it is the highest commercial authority in the vast and prosperous territories through which it circulates. It is therefore an imperative necessity to the merchant who orders goods in bulk, and to the wholesale and retail distributor; it is also the most complete newspaper despatched from England, and is eagerly sought by all classes; it thus,
unlike merely commercial newspapers, reaches and leavens the great communities who are the actual consumers of all products, and who must be acted upon by advertisement to require a special article before the merchant will venture to order a consignment.

Scale of Charges for ADVERTISEMENTS each inser-

* * The above Scale of Charges is subject to a Discount of 10 per cent. for Advertisements appearing in the consecutive issues of a paper for 3 months; of 15 per cent. for 6 months; and 20 per cent. for 12 months.

When an Advertisement is ordered for insertion simultaneously in all the Papers, the lowest rate above is charged all through.

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the Cannon-street
Post Office, London.

Remittances payable to William Vaughan.

The EUROPEAN MAIL may be ordered through the Local Agent, direct from the London Office, or through any Firm having representatives in England. In the last case, the usual system is to order the EUROPEAN MAIL to be forwarded until countermanded; the representative of the Firm in England being directed, under similar conditions, to make payment annually.

GLENFIELD STARCH

is the only kind used in
Her Majesty's Laundry.

THOSE LADIES who have not yet used the GLENFIELD
STARCH, are respectfully solicited to give it a trial, and carefully follow out the directions printed on every package. It is rather more difficult to make than other Starches, but when this is overcome, they will say, like the Queen's Laundress, that it is the finest Starch they ever used.

Foreign Masonic Intelligence.

[FROM A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

I have great pleasure in informing your readers that a new Masonic lodge has been opened at Oedenburg by sixteen brethren, having at their head M. Vogel Statt. These brethren comprise representatives of various nationalities, viz., Hungarians eleven, Germans two, Poles one, a Slavonian, and a Czech. We assembled about noon in the Hall which is our temporary temple, when the symbolic lodge was opened and the grand battery given.

Ten profanes, including three Magyar notables were then admitted members of the Order and were addressed by the Orator on the mission of Freemasonry.

I can give you but a faint outline of his discourse, but he reminded his audience that the advancement of liberal principles and free thought was chiefly due to the spread of Freemasonry.

He exhorted the new members to fulfil their duties as soldiers in the great army of Progress, and appealed to their generous sympathies to assist the efforts now being made to cast aside for ever the thrall of debasing superstition. He concluded by elevating the banner of the lodge, which bore the word “Unity” in the centre, and apostrophized it as the symbol of the future, when man rising superior to the passions of envy and hate should clasp his brother’s hand in unchangeable friendship. The Orator’s address was greatly applauded, and one of the neophytes expressed his profound sense of the serious nature of the obligations into which he had entered, and his willingness to aid the cause of Freemasonry, which was that of humanity. After the labours of the lodge had ceased the brethren enjoyed the hospitality of the chief municipal officer present, and the toast of “Fraternity with all Freemasons throughout the globe” was received with repeated acclamations.

OUR EXCHANGES.

The Craftsman and Canadian Masonic Record, October, 1869. T. & R. WHITE Publishers, Hamilton, Ontario.

We welcome with great pleasure this ably edited Magazine, which now for the first time appears in our sanctum.

It opens with the commencement of a pleasing tale, entitled “Masons and Masons,” this is followed by an article on the Knights of Malta; then we find a reprint from our pages of Masonry in Prussia, by “Cryptonymus,” and the remainder of the number is filled with equally interesting matter. We hope to see the “Craftsman” regularly in future.

The Voice of Masonry. Chicago, Ill. U. S., September and October.

This valuable periodical is, as usual, a pattern of neatness externally, while the intellectual banquet it provides is also worthy of its high reputation. Bro. Rob Morris continues his series of articles on the Holy Land, which are extremely interesting and instructive. We congratulate our brethren in Illinois upon the possession of such a worthy and efficient organ.

The Monde Maçonique. Paris.

This journal now reaches us regularly, and is replete with information. Editor Beaumont criticises our remarks upon the suppression of the name of the G.A.O.T.U. in French Masonic documents, and he credits our article on a recent occurrence in Costa Rica to another source, but with all this we appreciate the ability with which the “Monde” is conducted, and look forward to its continued prosperity.

The Freimaurer-Zeitung. Leipzig.

We are glad to find that our Saxon brethren are supporting this useful periodical, which appears weekly. The number for October 9, records a meeting of the new lodge of the Three White Lilies, at Temesvar, Hungary, at which there were 26 members present. This looks well for the gallant Magyars, and we are gratified to learn that other lodges are being rapidly formed throughout His Apostolic Majesty’s dominions. From the same source we glean that the Grand Lodge of Switzerland numbers 27 lodges, with 1694 members.

We want more of these reliable statistics to enable us to take a comprehensive view of the Craft as it really is, and not as we fancy it is.

From a calendar of the German lodges we reproduce the following which may prove useful to our travelling brethren, and will continue the list till completed:—

PEABODY.

Soft be thy slumbers in the realms of shade,
Radiant thy dreams in that divine repose,
O thou whose kind and loving heart hath made Millions rejoice amidst the phantom-woes
That brooded o’er their being. Like a rose
Which blossoms in the wilderness, thy name
Spreads fragrance o’er the barren wastes of life,
And high above the Age’s sordid strife
Is blazoned now thine honourable fame.
That fame shall be to man a glorious dower,
A heritage of thoughts most pure and bright,
A presence that shall prove a blissful power
To scatter o’er thy grave, like rays of light,
While Honour, Truth, and Virtue shall endure,
The blessings of the friendless and the poor.’

R. WENTWORTH LITTLE.

SONG,

Written by Bro. J. JEWELL, and sung by Br. FRED. CLARK at the Installation Banquet of the Antient Lodge, No. 1223, Oct. 14, 1869.

Most Worshipful Master, you’ve called upon me
To sing you a song, so of 1223
I’ll add up my numbers, and multiply some,
And first in my rhymes you will find a new sum (Newsom).

Then, Brothers assembled, join chorus with me,
May success e’er attend our Lodge 1223.

In alluding to sums there are some better known
By the name of their father, as soon can be shown—
There’s Dick’s son (DIXON) and John’s son (JOHNSON)
And Tom’s son (THOMPSON), forsooth,
While EDWARD’S a steady and well-governed youth.

“Antiquity’s Pride” is a Freemason’s toast,
And a (head) ED-MED-eval we surely can boast;
Though with (Soot) SUTT-on the face, Dirt ‘n’ all (DURT-nall) on the head,
Some persons may say we’ve a BLACKMAN instead.

Though the Head may be turned there’s no madness in showing,
Like the “Man of the World,” there’s much done
by Bow-ing (BOWER);
Keep in his good books, for they’re up to the mark,
And ne’er be a FRED (afraid) of our wanting a CLARK.

Old Shakespere’s wise sayings are ne’er known to fail,
Though in Hamlet he says that a cloud’s like a whale.
“Very like to a Whale,” old Polonius doth say,
But some folk take no heed on (EDEN) the man in the play.

Now pray don’t imagine a PALMER am I
Of stale jokes or bad puns, or you’ll cause me to sigh,
The author makes NEW-IN(g) this song you will see,
And though frightfully bad—why, you can’t appal
he (A. PAWLEY).

If we get out of GEER-IN(g) our tackle or fether,
We’ve a SMITH with a bar that can weld us together;
If the Tong of a Buckle gets twisted or loose, He’ll be one (BEVON) to make straight when he’s wanted for use.

“Would I were a BIRD,” you’d be pleased with my song,
But whistle or sing if I’ve kept you too long;
I’ve piped out my best, and I hope that all you will Believe that we’ve caged in our lodge the right
JEWEL(L).

I have tried in my song on each brother to pun,
But us all (USSELL) together will surely make one;
With Caution to guide us, and Wisdom to guard,
We may treasure her (Treasurer) precepts and find a re-WARD(E).

THE BLOOD IN OLD AGE.—As age advances, the blood becomes thin and cloudy—or, in a full habit, thick and cloudy. The failing of the powers of life requires extra nutrition and support, and the blood yielding the excess required is soon overcharged with carbon, which gives to it the cloudy appearance. Being then impure, day by day the vitiated matter increases, and the body suffers from a thousand ailments. “The Blood Purifier”—Old Dr. Jacob Townsend’s Sarsaparilla—supplies the extra nutrition to the blood, and restores to it its florid hue, and then the progress of decay is arrested, and the ailments disappear; man lives out his days, and the sunset of life is unattended with suffering. Testimonials with each bottle from the Hon. the Dean of Lismore, General Wm. Gilbert, of the Indian Army; and Rev. Francis Monck, of “The Gospel Evangelist.” Ordered also by the Apothecaries’ Hall, London. Sold by all Druggists, in bottles 2s. 6d., 4s., 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 11s. Pills and Ointment each in boxes 1s. 1jd., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d.—Caution, Get the red and blue wrappers, with the Old Doctor’s head in the centre. No other genuine.—ADV

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

Egyptian Lodge, No. 27.—The usual meeting of this old and flourishing lodge was held at Anderton's Hotel 4th inst. Present, W. H. Lobbis, W.M.; J. B. Poole, S.W.; T. Sheppard, J.W.; Bro. Todd, P.M., and Treasurer; Bro. Buss, P.M., and Secretary; Payne, P.M. and W.S.; Jacobs, P.M.; Berri, P.M.; Coutts, P.M.; Palmer, S.D.; Harrison, J.D., and many other brethren. Visitors, Bro. Heath, P.M., 198; Bro. H. Levy, P.M., 183. The lodge voted £20 to be placed on the list of Bro. John Coutts, P.M., who is the steward representing this lodge at the forthcoming festival of the aged Freemasons and their widows. This sum will complete the amount necessary to make the lodge a Vice-President of the male branch of this Institution. The lodge having within the last three years given the necessary amounts to constitute the W.M. for the time being a V.P. of all the four Masonic Charities. The lodge after business adjourned to banquet after which the brethren were entertained by some excellent songs, by Bros. Jacobs, Skidmore, Hepburn, and several others. Bro. Levy, gave his inimitable recitation of Mrs. Brown at the Play, which created much mirth. There were three gentlemen proposed for initiation.

St. Thomas's Lodge, No. 142.—The first meeting of the season of this old lodge was held on Saturday, 6th inst., at Radley's Hotel, Blackfriars, Bro. F. T. Dubois, W.M. opened the lodge, supported by Bros. Bolton, S.W.; Gilbert, P.M., as J.W. (in the unavoidable absence of Bro. Valentine); W. Battye, P.M., Treasurer; Powell, P.M., as Secretary (in the unavoidable absence of Bro. Cockraff, P.M. Secretary); Clegg, S.D.; Frocarr, J.D.; Scarth J.G.; Captain Innes, R.N. P.M.; Thistleton, P.M.; Huguenin, P.M., and many others. Visitors were Bros. Wells, 15; F. Walters, P.M. 73, W.M. 871; Mills, 299 and others. The minutes were read and unanimously confirmed. The work, which was most admirably done, consisted of the initiation of Mr. Roman, and the raising of Bro. Thompson to the third degree. Bro. F. Walters solicited and obtained the promise of the lodge votes for the support of the case of Bro. Saqui, who is a candidate for the Male Annuity Fund of the Royal Benevolent Institution for aged Freemasons. Banquet followed, dessert afterwards, coffee finishing one of these superior entertainments for which Bro. Hart is so justly famed. The usual toasts were given and received. Bro. F. Walters, P.M., responded for the visitors, and expressed the pleasure he felt at hearing such excellent working.

Lodge of Stability, No. 217.—The lodge met at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street (for the second time this season) on Wednesday, the 3rd instant, at five o'clock, p.m., Bro. Edward Hughes, W.M., in the chair. The lodge was opened in the first degree, and the minutes of last lodge were read and confirmed. The lodge was opened in the second degree, and Bros. Coley and Wilson were examined and entrusted. The lodge was then opened in the third degree, and those brethren were each raised to the sublime degree. The lodge was closed down to the second and first degrees, when the W.M., apologising for an oversight, announced the ballot for Mr. Thomas Frelove, which was at once proceeded with and resulted unanimously in that gentleman's favour. In accordance with notice given at last lodge, and announced on the summons, Bro. Sillifant, P.M., proposed "That a sum of two pounds be given from the lodge funds to the Royal Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and their Widows, and placed on Bro. Taylor's list." Bro. Brodey, P.M. and Treas., seconded the motion which was carried nem. con. The W.M. then begged the co-operation of the brethren to found a mutual subscription fund, to enable all the members who would enrol themselves to become Life Subscribers to one or other of the Masonic Charities in the course of two years from the date of enrolment. The principle, the W.M. explained was to pay in, to a Treasurer to be elected, one shilling per week and when an amount of five guineas had accumulated, to ballot for a brother's name, and give him the choice of the charity connected with the Craft to which he would desire to have the subscription sent. It had only at present been casually brought before two of the Past Masters and two other members, but having been well received, and thought to be of benefit to the members, it was now brought forward for consideration. Bro. Taylor, P.M. and H.S., cordially supported the idea, and hoped all would give in their names; as the more numerous the society, the sooner subscriptions would be at the service of the members, and in addition to placing them on the lists of the charities, would also bring the lodge into a good position, and elevate its status in the Craft. Bro. Brodey, P.M. and Treasurer, was much pleased to see such a beneficial movement, and pledged himself to further the fund to the utmost of his ability. Bro. Sillifant P.M., spoke strongly in favour of this matter, and was followed by Bro. Samuels, P.M., Bro. James, S.W., and others. The W.M., stated that he had already ten names down, and requested those who felt interested in it to prosecute the affair during the ensuing month, so that by December 7th, a goodly list and a fair amount of cash to start with might be ready. He suggested Bro. Taylor's name as Secretary and Treasurer, he having kindly consented to give his time and attention if the brethren pleased to accept his services. Nothing further being offered for the good of Freemasonry in general, or of Stability, 217, in particular, the lodge was closed in due form and with solemn prayer. The brethren adjourned to banquet, and in replying to the toast of "The Visitors," Bro. Read W.M., Merchant Navy, 781, warmly thanked the brethren for their hospitality, and congratulated the lodge on the excellent working of the Master and Officers, the harmony which pervaded all their proceedings, and the step in advance they had now made to further the interests of the charities, and advance the position of their own members. The visitors were Bros. Read, W.M., Merchant Navy, 781; Richardson and Clements, Parmure, 715; Christian, Sydney, 829; and Kidd, St. John's.

Zetland Lodge, No. 511.—At the installation meeting of this lodge, held at Anderton's, on Wednesday evening last week, Bro. D. Durrant, W.M., presiding, Bros. Green and Radcliffe were raised; Bro. Garrud was passed, and Messrs R. L. Wildman, C. Milbourne, W. Herdman, and C. J. F. Theurer were initiated. The W.M. installed in admirable style. Bro. W. Adams Davy as Master of the lodge for the ensuing year, and Bro. Davy, appointed and invested as his officers, Bros. Durrant, I.P.M.; H. L. Birch, S.W.; H. Edwards, J.W.; A. Barfield, P.M., Treasurer; W. H. Andrew, P.M., Secretary; Geo. Read, S.D.; William Game, J.D.; James Austin, I.G.; G. A. Herlan, first Steward; P. E. Lack, second Steward, and W. Radford, Tyler. A P.M. Jewel was presented to Bro. Durrant for his excellent presidency over the lodge during the year, and Bro. F. Walters, 73, solicited the assistance of this lodge in the case of a Hebrew brother who is a candidate on the list for the next election of the Benevolent Fund. The W.M. and Brethren promised their aid, and then closed the lodge. A sumptuous banquet followed, supplied by Bros. Clemow, and superintended by Bro. Smith, and on the drawing of the cloth the W.M. proposed the usual toasts which were duly responded to, though in very few words, and Bros J. P. Walliker, P. H. Jones, and R. Schofield added some charming melody to the many other amusements of the evening.

PROVINCIAL.

Leicester.—St. John's Lodge, No. 279.—The usual monthly gathering of the brethren of this lodge took place on Wednesday, the 3rd inst., at the Freemasons' Hall, Halford-street, and at which a large number of brethren were present, both members of the lodge and of the John of Gaunt Lodge, 523. The officers of the lodge present were, Bros. W. Kelly, D.P.G.M., W.M.; Stanley, P.J.G.D., S.W.; Stretton, P.P.G. Reg. J.W.; Crow, P.G.O., Sec. and Org.; Weare, P.M. and P.P.S.G.D., Treas.; Hart, P.G. Steward, I.G.; while amongst the numerous visitors were Bros. Drewitt, 23, Chatham and Toller, P.O. Reg., W.M.; Buzzard, P.G.P., S.W.; Sculthorpe, J.W.; Rev. Dr. Haycroft, P.G. Steward, S.D.; and Partridge, J.D. of 523, the last of whom most efficiently performed the duties of office in the unavoidable absence of the Deacon of 279. The lodge having been opened in the first and second degrees, Bro. Levi Lincoln Atwood passed an examination as a Fellow Craft, after which a Master Mason's Lodge having been opened he was duly raised to that sublime degree. During the ceremonies, Bro. Crow most efficiently performed at the instrument, and gave the musical chants. The lodge having been lowered to the first degree, a ballot was taken for Messrs Joseph Hooley Matt and George Edmund Davisthorpe, who were severally initiated, as was also Mr. Richmond Augustus Barber elected at a former lodge. Several propositions having been brought forward for initiations, joining &c., the lodge was closed and the brethren adjourned to refreshment, and spent an hour or two very pleasantly.

Aldoro.—The Adair Lodge, No. 536.—This lodge, (which was opened on the 12th December, 1852, and named in compliment to the R.W. P.G. Master, Bro. Sir R. A. S. Adair, by whom it was constituted and consecrated 13th July following, when Bro. Newson Garrett, the first Worshipful Master, was installed into the chair of K.S. by Bro. C. T. Townsend, Prov. S.G. Warden of Suffolk) was for a time in a very satisfactory and flourishing state, but by the removal of some of its best working members and other circumstances it has not of late been so prosperous. Fortunately, however, by a recent infusion of new blood we hope soon to see it amongst the best working lodges in the province. The last meeting was held on Friday the 5th inst., at the Lion Hotel, when the brethren met to raise to the sublime degree of M.M. Bro. Taylor, and elect officers for the ensuing year. At the request of the W.M., the chair was taken by Bro. Townsend, who visited the lodge on this occasion. The lodge having been opened by Bro. Townsend, assisted by Bro. Bunniss, the S.W., and Bro. N. Garrett the J.W., the minutes of the last regular lodge and a lodge of emergency were read and confirmed. The lodge afterwards opened in the second degree, when Bro. Taylor having been asked and satisfactorily answered the questions leading to the third degree was intrusted and retired, and the lodge was opened in the M.M. degree. Bro. Taylor having been regularly admitted was raised to the degree of M.M. The important duties of S.D. having been very efficiently performed by Bro. W. Hayward, one of the founders of the lodge, to whom the brethren are very much indebted for the untiring zeal he has always shewn for the good of Masonry and this lodge in particular, and to whom the brethren are greatly indebted for the immense amount of time and labour he has bestowed in order to render the Adair what, with a little more energy on the part of its members, it must ultimately attain. The lodge having been closed in the M. Mason's and F.C. degrees, the brethren proceeded to the election of a W.M. and Treasurer, when Bro. George Harper, of Fairfield House, Saxmundham was unanimously elected the representative of K.S., and Bro. Hayward Treasurer. Four gentlemen were proposed for initiation, and as there is a Brother to be passed and raised the officers have plenty of work in prospective. There being no other business before the lodge it was closed in harmony and the brethren retired. The next meeting will be held in January for installation of W.M., and such other business as may come before it.

Cockermouth.—Skiddaw Lodge, No. 1002.—The usual monthly meeting of the above lodge was held on Tuesday, 2nd inst., in the Masonic Temple, Bro. Robinson, W.M., in the chair, when it was resolved to forward £3 3s to Bro. Woodhouse, as a subscription to the Masonic Life Boat Fund. There being no business, the W.M. favoured the brethren with the explanation of the first tracing-board. There were present Bros Faithfull P.M.; Shilton, P.M. as S.W.; E. Thwaites, Past J.W. as J.W.; Pearson, Treas.; Williams, Sec.; Lewthwaite, Brown, Allis and J. Dodds, visitors; Bro. Potts, Tyler.

Warrington.—Gilbert Greenall Lodge, No. 1250.—The regular monthly meeting of this flourishing lodge was held on Monday evening last, at the Masonic Rooms. In the unavoidable absence of the W.M., R.W. Bro. Greenall, Past Senior Grand Warden of England, the chair of K.S. was occupied by Bro. John Bowes, P.M., Past Prov. G. Reg. C. and W., who was supported by Bros. W. Mossop, S.W.; W. G.M. was announced and received with every demonstration of joy and affection.

The lodge was opened in the second degree, when the usual questions were put to Bro. F. Picot, who, having been entrusted, retired for preparation. The lodge having been opened in the third degree, the candidates were duly received and raised to the degree of M.M. The lodge was then resumed in the first degree.

Ballots were successively taken for Messrs. Ph. Binet, jun., and Captain Isaac LeMaistre, candidates for initiation, which were in each case unanimously favourable, more than ample evidence having been afforded by the Secretary and other brethren, as to their character and conduct. Bro. Ph. Le Sueur, P.S.W., 590, was also balloted for, and unanimously admitted as a joining member.

Messrs. Ph. Binet, Thos. Howard, (previously approved) and J. LeMaistre, being in attendance, were duly admitted to the first degree with the customary ceremonies by the W.M. The neophytes expressed their intention to become subscribing members of the lodge.

At the request of the W.M. Bro. A. Schmitt delivered an admirable and eloquent address, full of instruction and generous ideas, which could not fail to penetrate the hearts of all his hearers. His words, expressive of sublime truth, descriptive of the excellencies of our institution and of its real tendency, enjoining on the brethren the duty of carrying out those principles before the world and in every station of life, were received with merited applause.

The Secretary then read several communications from the lodge of Rennes, which were ordered to be entered on the minutes.

Bro. P.M. du Jardin, brought before the lodge the sad case of the widow of late Bro. T. Gallichan, the architect of the Masonic Temple.

It was moved, seconded and carried: That the sum of £3 be voted towards her relief. Another case of distress was presented by Bro. J. O. Le Sueur, W.M. 491, who pleaded the cause of a widow surrounded by ten children, whom the late Bro. Popkin left unprovided and penniless. The lodge voted the sum of £2 to relieve this unexampled destitution.

The W.M. appointed Bro. J. W. Buesnel, Asst. Sec. A candidate was proposed for initiation, and the heavy business of the day being ended, the lodge was closed at 10 in perfect harmony.

INSTRUCTION.

YARBOROUGH LODGE OF INSTRUCTION, No. 554.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR—On Tuesday evening, the 2nd inst., Bro. John G. Stevens gave a reading in aid of the fund for the relief of aged and decayed Freemasons, and the widows of Freemasons, in the lodge room, Green Dragon Tavern, Stepney, as announced in your issue of the 30th ult., and I am happy in being able to inform you that the reading proved highly successful in every respect. The room was nearly filled before the time announced for commencement—45 brethren being present during the evening—and the following lodges were represented by the presence of one or more members of each lodge; viz. the Merchant Navy, British Oak, Crystal Palace, Confidence, Camden, Sincerity, Industry, Jubilee, Perfect Ashlar, Upton, Victoria, Doric, and Yarrowburgh; all present being residents in the East of London, and not one brother resident West of the Royal Exchange graced the gathering by his presence, or evinced sympathy with the object.

It being the regular night of meeting, the lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed; when the lodge was called from labour to refreshment, and at 7.45 the reading commenced amid the most marked silence of the auditory.

As you are aware the subjects chosen were C. Dickens' "Christmas Carol," and "Boots at the Holly Tree Inn." The "Carol" is, perhaps, the author's best and most successful effort to awaken the sympathies of the indifferent and the selfish of the well-to-do portions of society on behalf of their needy and struggling fellow-citizens; and it seems to me impossible to read or hear read its soul-stirring pages without being constrained, like "Scrooge," to throw aside our selfishness and apathy, to again mix freely with the world, and to feel that to do our best to render others happy is to sow seed from which we reap a rich harvest of the same blessed state for ourselves. Badly indeed must the story be read, and pitiable indeed the condition of the hearer or reader, if it misses the aim of its author; and Bro. Stevens entered fully into the spirit of the story, especially in the pathetic episode of "Bob Cratchit" and his poor, but—within themselves—happy family. "Tiny Tim," as usual, drawing more than a tiny tear from the eyes of most of those present. The reading throughout was listened to with the most profound silence and attention—the best of evidence that the reader had done justice to the author—and at the conclusion of the story, the audience manifested its satisfaction by a hearty round of applause. After a short interval, "Boots" was introduced and told his amusing and mirth provoking story of the "Baby Lovers," and their elopement, not forgetting his own vile conduct in deceiving and betraying those innocents. How deep-rooted the villany of the fellow, when not even the promise of "£2,000 a-year, as their head-gardener" (!) could secure him from his course of deception. May he remain a "Boots" to the end of his days, a fitting reward for his baseness.

At the conclusion of the reading the lodge was recalled to labour, and upon the dues being collected, were announced to amount to £6 1s. In addition to this liberal subscription, many brethren placed their names upon Bro. Roberts' list, as donors to the Institution. A very satisfactory result of an hour or two's sport in a rational manner, and free from any selfish purpose.

It being election night, Bro. Chadwick was unanimously elected W.M. for the ensuing fortnight, when, upon the motion of Bro. H. Wainwright, seconded by Bro. G. Roberts (W.M. 554), the thanks of the lodge were voted to Bro. Stevens, "for his able and pleasing reading." Bro. Wainwright in the course of his introductory speech, remarking that, as a rule, we chiefly knew Bro. Stevens as a rollicking individual, full of fun and humour; but his reading this evening proved that fun and feeling were not incompatible, and showed how intimately associated in the same breast may be the deepest pathos, and the most robustious fun.

Bro. Roberts then rose and said: We all know how ready and willing at all times Bro. Stevens was to do suit and service to the Craft, and aid the cause of charity in any direction, Masonic or otherwise, that this was not the first time Bro. S. had rendered a similar service for a like object, and we ought to mark our appreciation of such services by conferring upon him the only honour which we, as a lodge of instruction, had in our power to bestow, namely, an Honorary Membership of the lodge: that we could freely accord to him, and as the chief value of the honour would lie in the spirit in which the award was made he, Bro. R., felt sure that the motion he was about to make would be carried with unanimous acclamation; he therefore moved, "That, as a slight acknowledgment of the valuable services rendered to this lodge this evening, and on previous occasions, by Bro. Stevens, he be elected an Honorary Member of the lodge."

This was seconded by Bro. Barnes, and carried with entire unanimity.

Bro. Stevens, in a few but appropriate words, returned thanks for the warm support and kind attention given to him, and also for the honour of electing him an Honorary Member of the lodge, and concluded by saying that he should always look back upon this evening as one of the happiest and proudest of his Masonic life.

Bro. Roberts again rose, and after thanking in his own name the brethren present who were not members of the lodge, and expressing a hope that it would not be long ere they did become members, moved that the thanks of the lodge be given to those visitors who had so kindly and liberally responded to the appeal of the lodge. This was seconded by Bro. Scurr, and carried unanimously.

The lodge was then closed in due form, and the brethren dispersed highly gratified by the re-union and its results.

MARK MASONRY.

METROPOLITAN.

St. Mark's Lodge, No. 1.—At the regular meeting of this lodge presided over by Bro. T. Wescombe, W.M., on 1st inst., at the George, Aldermanbury, Bro. R. W. Little, P.M. and Sec. read the minutes and the immediate P.M. Bro. H. C. Levanter, advanced Bro. S. C. Davison, to the Mark Degree. The Audit Committee's report was approved, and the brethren sat down to a comfortable repast. The usual toasts were honored by the company, which though not large was enthusiastic and included besides the above mentioned brethren, J. G. Marsh, S.W., Rev. W. B. Church, J. W. and Chaplain, Carey, S.D., F. Walters, R. of M. T. Cubitt, Treas., and H. Massey.

An installation was proceeded with, and Bro. Lunt, S.W., who had been unanimously elected at the last regular meeting, was presented by Bro. Hamer and Goepel, and installed in accordance with ancient custom by the W.M., Bro. Smith, who performed the ceremony in a very imposing and pleasing manner. Bro. Lunt, W.M., then invested his officers, P. M. Larsen, S.W.; Thos. Clark, J.W.; Thos. D. Price, Sec.; R. Williams, M.O.; J. Taylor, S.O.; G. Ladmore, J.O.; Henry Burrows, S.D.; Joseph Wood, J.D.; W. Goepel, and after two candidates being proposed the lodge was then closed and the brethren partook of a very excellent banquet, provided by Bro. J. Ball, the House Steward of the Temple. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, which met with an enthusiastic response and closed the proceedings of a very pleasant evening at an early hour.

Obituary.

THE R.W. BRO. THE REV. EDWARD CHALONER OGLE, M.A., Provincial Grand Master for Northumberland.

We have to record the decease of this lamented brother, who expired at his residence, Kirkley Hall, near Newcastle-on-Tyne, on Sunday, the 7th inst. Bro. Ogle was a Mason of more than fifty years' standing, having been initiated in the Apollo University Lodge, No. 357, Oxford, on the 10th of March, 1819. On the 2nd December, 1842, he joined the Northern Counties Lodge, No. 406, Newcastle-on-Tyne, of which he continued a member to the time of his death.

On the 10th February, 1848, Bro. Ogle was appointed Provincial Grand Master for Northumberland, the duties of which high office he fulfilled with great zeal and ability. It is understood that Earl Percy will succeed to the post thus vacated.

ENCOUNTER BETWEEN A BARONET AND A VALET.

On Saturday morning, a young man, a valet in the service of Mr. J. Fawcett, of the Bailey, Durham, was charged before the Durham borough magistrates with having assaulted and beaten Sir Hedworth Williamson, on the previous evening. It appears that Mr. Fawcett and Sir Hedworth were present at a masonic dinner at Chester-le-Street on Friday afternoon, and the defendant accompanied them to that place. On the conclusion of the dinner proceedings, defendant's master requested the valet to secure the surplus wines; which inunction, it would appear, he carried out, to a certain extent, in the most effectual manner; for he—doubtless with the same object as Margery of old, viz. to keep out the cold—swallowed a fair portion of it. The wine was of the choicest quality, and, consequently, it very soon had such a powerful effect on the said "Jeames," that he almost immediately began to manifest outward visible indications of the inward and invisible state of his inner man, and he was in such a helpless condition by the time fixed for his master's return home, that he had to be lifted on to his usual perch on the "dickey." A sharp drive of six miles in a pelting rain—although it had the effect of making the obfuscated flunkey a little steadier on his legs—had not, it seemed, assisted in the least in clearing his muddled brain, for his first act in the discharge of his usual functions, on reaching terra firma at his master's residence in the Bailey, was to deal Mr. Fawcett's noble, but plethoric guest a tremendous blow in the pit of the stomach, which, it is hardly necessary to state, sent Sir Hedworth reeling in a doubled up position for a considerable distance. This conduct on the part of a menial was too much even for such a good-natured baronet as Sir Hedworth to calmly brook; and the honourable baronet, who, it is whispered, is not altogether ignorant of the manly art, at once, on recovering his equilibrium, closed with his assailant. After a violent and somewhat protracted struggle, with varying results, Sir Hedworth "grasped"—or rather "flagged"—his man in gallant style with what is known to the initiated as a well-timed "bobby's twister." The pugnacious valet having been thus spread-eagled on the broad of the back in his master's passage, his more accomplished and powerful opponent at once threw himself on the prostrate flunkey, and held him in that position till the arrival of a policeman, who very considerably accommodated the valet with a night's lodging in the city lock-up. On the following morning, as already stated, the valet was placed before the Borough Bench, and presented a very seedy appearance after his night's incarceration. No one, however, appeared to prosecute, and defendant, after the above facts had been deposed to by the apprehending officer, and after a twenty minutes' search for a complainant, was discharged from custody, no doubt a wiser but a sadder man.—Northern Daily Express.

THE COUNTESS PERCY, the wife of the Earl of Percy, P.S.G.W. of England, was safely delivered of twins, both girls, at Alnwick Castle on Sunday morning. Both mother and children are doing remarkably well.

BREAKFAST.—EPPE'S COCOA.—Grateful and Comforting.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"The singular success which Mr. Eppe attained by his homoeopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Eppe has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold by the Trade only, in $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. and 1 lb. tin-lined packets, labelled JAMES EPPE & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London.—ADVT.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

We have great pleasure in announcing that we have decided to publish THE FREEMASON—commencing with Volume III., January 1st, 1870—on toned paper, and with old-faced type, similar to that used by the Pall Mall Gazette and other high-class publications.

The size will also be permanently enlarged to Sixteen Pages, and, with other improvements contemplated, THE FREEMASON will then be the leading weekly organ of the Craft throughout the globe.

MASONRY AND MYSTICISM.

GIVEN a cosy arm chair by a glowing sea-coal fire on a bleak winter's evening, and there is no enjoyment we relish better than a dreamy glimpse into the weird world of magic. Start not, gentle reader, we use the word philosophically, and stript of its vulgar surroundings, it comprehends all that is strangely spiritual, intangible, and shadowy in human existence. Every man possesses in thought a dominion of his own, peopled with shapes more or less unsubstantial—Eidolons that glimmer into being like the struggling rays of dawn, and vanish suddenly again into the impalpable gloom of night.

To what extent these phantasma affect our external life few can tell, as much depends upon the character of the scenes in which we mingle daily, but it is evident that men of intellect whose faculties are most in harmony with the beautiful in nature retain those vague impressions longer than others.

We are not speaking now of poets, whose psychological studies naturally lead them in this direction; we are content to take the ordinary earnest thinker, whose visions at times reach back to the dim and sombre past, and we will ask him whether there is not a secret charm in those manifestations which link the spirit with all that has gone before, is now, and shall be hereafter? This commune with unrealities—this dalliance in the fairy-land of thought—has given birth to mysticism, the philosophy of occult and wondrous gifts, the culmination of all that can delight and yet appal the daring soul. Some minds can fitly interpret these perceptions through the medium of splendid imagery; others invest them in the obscurest shrouds of thought, recording their impressions in language at once perplexing and alluring.

It may fairly be said that all nations have had their eras of mysticism, but Germany has ever maintained a pre-eminence in this respect since the impulse given to religious thought by the Reformers in the sixteenth century. From the wild theories and confused speculations of the alchemists and natural philosophers who flourished at an earlier period, it seems but an easy transition to the ecstatic reveries of a Jacob Behmen or a Swedenborg. But these enthusiasts, notwithstanding their dreams of the supernatural and impossible, left a visible mark on the literature of their age, and have impregnated the ideas of metaphysicians even to our own times. The ethical lore of Kant, the analytical acumen of Schlegel, and the profound philosophy of Goethe are more or less tinged with this mystical spirit, and it is needless to add that its influence permeates indefinitely the works of their admirers and disciples. Unquestionably one of the greatest developments of mysticism ever witnessed was Rosicrucianism, whose involved and complicated symbolism is itself a study worthy the labours of a race of hieroglyphic-interpreters. The key to the mystery will, however, be found in the analogy existing between the rites of the brethren of the Rosy Cross and the ceremonies practised in Freemasonry at the present day. The ancient Rosicrucians were essentially immaterialists—they looked beyond the visible world to the shores of the Infinite. They revered moral truth, and taught men to love virtue for its own sake. In the deep recesses of their hermetic science, the solemn secrets of nature were unveiled to those whose patience and perseverance entitled them to the boon. The problems of life, death, and eternity were ever present to their view, and their doctrines were consequently imbued with a purer theology than that of the schools. But after a time a schism arose in the fraternity; revealed religion was cast aside by a section which, on account of the greater noise they made in the world, has often been confounded with the true philosophers, more especially as the latter were then known as the Brotherhood of the Auræ Crucis, or Golden Rosy Cross, and occupied themselves chiefly in the contemplation of things ideal and divine. There is fortunately extant in manuscript the alphabet of these devout followers of the cross, for such it proves them to have been. As it is a rare and valuable work, we append its full title: "The simple A.B.C., or the doctrine of the Brethren of the Rosy Cross, intended for the daily use of scholars who study in the school of the Holy Spirit, plainly delineated in emblematical figures for those who apply themselves to the knowledge of the light of nature and theology."

This alone is sufficient to prove that the real objects of Rosicrucianism were far different from those blatantly published by the sceptical seceders from the true community. The aspect, however, in which the point is interesting to Freemasons, is in reference to its bearings on the ritual of Masonic degrees. In this respect it will be found that the brethren of the Golden Rosy Cross possessed the entire secrets of all the grades of Freemasonry, besides a great many more peculiar to themselves. Even the technical language used in communicating the esoteric knowledge of the science is in many respects the same, the symbols equally illustrate profound truths, and silently teach the most sublime virtues. The Rosicrucian philosopher took the lamp of Reason and examined his own heart; or to use the exact words left on record, he said, "O man know thyself, for in thee lies concealed the treasure of all wisdom."

It is in its affinity to this glorious circle of thought that Freemasonry resembles Rosicrucianism, and for our own part we shall never be content to accept the theory that our comprehensive Craft is merely the out-growth of a mechanical association. Evidences to the contrary multiply the more we seek them, but we must seek them in the right direction. In the romances of Chaucer, the sonnets of Petrarch, the divine comedy of Dante, we shall find them. In the songs of the Minnesingers and the chants of the Crusaders, traces will appear. Amidst the subtilties of mediæval divines, and the enigmas of scholars, glimpses of this philosophic light can be discerned. From the New Atlantis of Bacon to the Cosmos of Humboldt we may follow its luminous course with undeviating steps, guided on the right hand by Faith and on the left by Reason. For example, the philosopher of Verulam introduces us to the House of Solomon, situate in the favoured isle Bensalem, which is peace. From their towers of observation, as well as from their caverned retreats, the associates of the king survey nature in her various aspects—in cloud or in sunshine, in storm or in calm. Here we have prefigured in profound allegory, those high hills and lowly vales to which Freemasons repair for communion and labour.

A stronger illustration will be found in Andrea's "Speculum lapidum," which was adopted by Ashmole as the text-book of his occult philosophy. It is well-known that Ashmole was admitted into the society of Freemasons at Warrington, in 1646, at which time, according to Dr. Plot's History of Staffordshire, the Masonic fraternity possessed peculiar secrets. It is also well-known that Ashmole was initiated into the mysteries of Rosicrucian philosophy by a brother of the Rosy Cross named William Backhouse, and that he learned Hebrew in order to comprehend them thoroughly. To this celebrated antiquary we are therefore inclined to ascribe the credit of consolidating the edifice of Speculative Freemasonry. By him were gathered together those scattered elements of thought which, when collected and combined, established on a solid basis the wondrous system of morality now practised by the Craft throughout the universe. Mysticism has contributed to this great result, and we may in a future article indicate how closely it is allied to those degrees which form part of the system of the Ancient and Accepted Rite.

For the present we must pause—we do not enunciate our opinions dogmatically, or wish them to be considered as ex cathedra. It is a subject for study and investigation, but we have said enough to justify us in the belief we expressed some weeks ago, that Freemasonry is to be regarded as "a glorious allegory of the present life, and eternal prospects of man."

BELFASTIENSIS AND DEGREES IN MASONRY.

I do not think that under the Constitution of Ireland any of the degrees are worked between the 18° and 30°, and very few between the 4° and 18°. The practice in Ireland and elsewhere seems to be to curtail the degrees of the Ancient and Accepted Rite practically, because they are so numerous, and, after all, so unnecessarily lengthy and discursive, that to do justice to all, Freemasons would have to neglect the Craft, thus giving a preference to so-called, instead of "pure and ancient Masonry."

WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

ANCIENT FREEMASONRY.

Bro. Buchan, page 207 of THE FREEMASON, declares that the Revival of 1717 "was in reality the first establishment of Speculative Freemasonry as an institution; consequently said Freemasonry is now just one hundred and fifty-two years old."

I think this is too strong a way to characterise the "Revival." Without doubt, that period witnessed the institution of the first Grand Lodge in the world, but it must be remembered that before that date there were lodges in existence that had no connection with Operative Masonry as a means of livelihood, e.g., the old lodges at York, &c., &c.

I cannot agree, either, with any statement which represents the Masonry before the eighteenth century to be, as respects its esoteric character, the same as other operative societies.

W. J. HUGHAN.

BELGIAN CONSTITUTIONS OF A.D. 1722.

Bro. Yarker must excuse my saying so, but I have shown him that no Belgian Constitutions were published in 1722 containing any reference to the hautes grades. The first constitutions of the Freemasons printed was in A.D. 1722, of which Bro. Spencer, the well-known Masonic publisher, has the only copy known at the present time. The next edition of the constitutions was published by the Grand Lodge of England, A.D. 1723.

The former is exclusively of an operative character, and the next issue of 1728, by Cole, partakes of the same character.

These three are the earliest editions of the constitutions known, and certainly none other has been produced, so far as I know, by any one. Bro. Yarker speaks of the learned Mason, Dr. Leeson, having seen a copy of the constitutions, published at Brussels A.D. 1722, at Bro. Spencer's Masonic Depot, which contains an enactment respecting the Knights Kadosh, and other degrees belonging to the Ancient and Accepted Rite, and in which work it is declared such law was contained in the 37th clause of the constitutions "approved by the English Grand Lodge on St. John's Day," 1720. The latter statement is decidedly an error, as no such law has ever been passed by the Grand Lodge of England. Until A.D. 1813, no more than the three Craft degrees, including the Past Master, have been recognised by that body, and after that date, the Royal Arch only was included within its authority. Consequently the statement that the Grand Lodge of England A.D. 1720, recognised or made rules for the Knights Kadosh or any other such degrees, I declare emphatically to be an error.

I have written to Bro. Spencer, who has kindly answered my query very readily, and states most positively that he never had such a work as Dr. Leeson mentions; that the work the learned brother saw was Roberts' Constitutions of A.D. 1722, which is wholly operative, and that the constitutions which he (Bro. Spencer) sold to an American brother (said to contain this Belgian Constitutions among the lot) were simply Anderson's, of A.D. 1723 and 1738.

Bro. Spencer also informs me that Bro. Yarker is in error respecting his selling any earlier editions of the Constitutions than 1723, although Dr. Leeson did offer to purchase the copy referred to of 1722 (wholly operative), which Bro. Spencer refused to part with, but which I hope he will soon reprint, as it is a very curious and valuable work.

W. J. HUGHAN.

BELGIUM.

In 1721 the Grand Lodge of England constituted the first Masonic lodge in Belgium at Mons, under the title of Perfect Union. In 1785 there were sixteen lodges established throughout the kingdom. At this period the lodges were composed of the élite of the nation; but, as the sentiments of the brotherhood had become very liberal and patriotic, in May 1786, the Emperor Joseph II. abolished all the lodges in Belgium except three. Most of them, however, continued their meetings in secret. During the French revolution all the lodges were interdicted, and not until 1798 did they resume operations, but with limited opportunities. In 1814 these lodges declared themselves independent of the G. Orient of France, and in 1817 organized a Grand Lodge for Belgium and the Netherlands. After the separation of Belgium from the Netherlands in 1830, the latter desired to be entirely independent of the other, which was mutually agreed to. In 1835 most of the lodges placed themselves under the protection of King Leopold. In 1817 the Supreme Council of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite was established at Brussels, while the Grand Orient, located also at Brussels, has exclusive control over the symbolic degrees. The two bodies maintain towards each other brotherly intercourse, so that the members of the Grand Orient having the high degrees are considered on that account members of the Supreme Council.—Macoy, CONSTANTINIAN ORDER OF THE KNIGHTS OF SAINT GEORGE.

Knowing from a work printed in Paris during the year 1600, in 8vo., and entitled "Histoire des Anciens Ducs et autres Souverains de l'Archipel, avec une Description de l'Isle de Chio, ou Scio, par Son Altesse Royale *Monseigneur le Prince François Rhodocanaki-Justiniani,† fils du Seigneur Démétrius, l'un des Seigneurs de la dite Isle, et d'Helene Palaeologue, descendante des Empereurs de Constantinople, &c., &c.," that the wife of H.R.H. Prince Francis Rhodocanakis, Duke, &c., &c., was a Giustiniani, I applied to the representative of the family, at present in England, with the object of getting the wished for information for "Enquirer" (page 189). Our brother answers me with his usual courtesy, as follows, and beyond some other memoranda, previously obtained, which I append in the way of notes to this, it is all the information I can give to "Enquirer":—

"My dear Sir and Brother,—In reply to your note, I beg to say that there were, and still are, two Houses of the name of Giustiniani—one of Venice, whose arms are Gules an eagle with two heads displayed, crowned, armed and membered Or, charged on the breast with an oval shield Azure, a fesse of the Second; and another of Genoa, whose arms are Gules a tower Proper, on a chief Or, an eagle displayed Sable. Both families sprang from one and the same ancestor, but were entirely separated by the lapse of time and were related between themselves only through marriages. Princess Dorothea Giustiniani, the wife of my ancestor Francis (b. 1560, m. 1589, d. 1640), belonged to the family of Genoa. I do not know to which family Sebastianus belonged; judging from his christian name, most likely to that of Venice, like the Abbé Bernardus Giustiniani, the author of the book entitled "Historie Chronologique della vera origine di tutti gli ordini equestri e religioni, Cavalleresche, &c.," (Venetia, 1672 in 4to., and 1692 in folio,) and from whom, although related, we do not descend, but from the Princes Giustiniani of Genoa, and from whom also descends the Princess Maria-Cecilia Giustiniani, Countess of Newburgh, Viscountess Kinaird, and Baroness Livingstone of Flacraig, in the peerage of Scotland."

[For likely information as to Sebastian, the Prince here refers my correspondent to the late Count Pompeo Litta's magnificent, though by no means correct, work, entitled "Famiglie Celebri, Italiane," published at Milano during the years 1819 to 1865, in 9 vols. folio, of which there is a copy in the British Museum, and the library of the Athenæum Club, London.]

"Prince Andreas Giustiniani of the House of Genoa, married in 1740 my great-grandfather's youngest sister, the Princess Esmeralda Rhodocanaki, and died at our island of Chio, leaving a numerous issue.

"Believe me to remain, with much esteem and regard,
Yours faithfully and fraternally,

RHODOCANAKIS.

Park Bank House, Higher Broughton."

The Giustiniani theory can end in nothing. The so-called "Johannes Andreas Angelus Flavius Comnenus" was a mere papal puppet set up by the Holy Father, Innocent XII. (Antonio Pignatelli), with the intention of giving a colourable sale to his favourite, Duke Francis Farnese of Parma.†

JOHN YARKER, Jun.

43, Chorlton-road, Manchester.

* The family of Rhodocanakis are the direct lineal male representatives of the family of Ducas, the most ancient and illustrious of the Byzantine, or Roman Empire. I may commence the pedigree with Flavius Eutropius, who married Claudia [only daughter of Crispus, the younger brother of the Roman Emperor Marcus Aurelius Claudius II. (r. A.D. 268-270), and of Marcus Aurelius Claudius Quintilius (r. A.D. 270-270), his brother, who descended from Dardanus and the ancient kings of Troy], by whom he had two sons, Flavius Valerius Constantius, surnamed Chlorus, the father of Constantine the Great (first Christian Emperor of the Roman Empire), and Flavius Claudius Constantinus, which latter by his wife Julia Theodora was father of Constantinus surnamed Ducas, from the rank of Duke of Constantinople which he received, A.D. 335, from his first cousin, in male descent, Constantine the Great, as the following paragraph testifies—"Si quis enim replicare annales, et sursum nititur origines rerum curet, sic reperiet. Ducarum Gentem e Constantini Magni Domo propagatam; author aiquidem huius nominis, qui socium se Constantino Magno adiunxit e Roma vetera in novam migranti proxima illi consanguinitate adnotus fuisse dicitur, utpote patruelis eius, cuius praeior caeteram virtutem commendatione necessitudinis, dignitas Ducis Constantinopoleos illi collata est, ex qua in totam familiam Ducarum appellatio hunc usque in diem est propagata." &c., &c. (Vide Nicephori Caesaris Bryennii, Comentariorum de Rebus Byzantinis. Parisiis, 1661, in folio; page 8-9). This Constantinus Ducas of the 4th century was the direct ancestor of Andronicus Ducas, the Protovestiarius, and father by his wife, Anna Dalassena, of Constantinus Ducas and his brother Nicephorus Ducas (b. A.D. 869, m. 890, d. 929) who became the founder of the Royal and Imperial House of Rhodocanaki, and was Duke or Governor of the Island of Rhodes during the reign of the Emperor [Leo VI.] surnamed the Philosopher, and of his brother Alexander (r. A.D. 886-915). After the death of the last named Emperor in 913, the elder brother, Constantinus Ducas, who was Magnus Domesticus, and defended for many years the Asiatic frontiers of the Empire, was invited by the principal inhabitants of Constantinople, headed by the Patriarch Nicholas, to come to Constantinople and seize the Crown, which Constantinus VII., Porphyrogenitus, then a child of seven years, was unable to hold. Constantinus came in haste, accompanied by his son Gregorius, his nephew Michael, and his most distinguished officers, entered the city at night by a postern gate, assembled his followers in the house of his father-in-law, Nicholas Iberitzes, and before day-break at the head of them, and of an immense populace, bearing lighted torches and proclaiming him Emperor, presented himself at the gates of the Circus; repulsed on this side he enforced the gate Chale, and penetrated the interior Court of the palace. John Elladas, one of the seven tutors or guardians of Constantine VII., (whose only surviving descendant, Anna, married in 1668, H.H.H. Prince Panteleon Rhodocanakis) was here commanding a company of household troops; a fight takes place, the horse of Constantinus slips on the pavement, and a soldier cuts off the head of Constantinus and carries it to the Emperor. Nicephorus Ducas, having learned the death of his elder brother, and of his own eldest son Michael, with a host of his relatives; and at the same time that his interests at Constantinople were assailed by the Tutors, who plundered his estates and procured his deprivation of the title of Magister, he revolted, gained over the troops under his command, and assuming the title and habiliments of Emperor, crossed over into Bulgaria to assert his claims. He refused the offers of the Emperor's Tutors, and assisted by his friend Simeon King of Bulgaria, (r. A.D. 888-927), besieged Constantinople. That capital again owed its salvation to its high walls, the numerous machines of war which defended them, and the bravery of the garrison. Nicephorus, despairing to take it either by assault or by famine, accepted the proposal of the Tutors to come to terms. He received the high and invidious title of Vasileus, or King (Βασιλεύς) of the Island of Rhodes, for himself and his descendants, with permission to cut coin with his effigy, &c., &c. A few days after this, Simeon, King of Bulgaria, departed, and Nicephorus left for his new kingdom, both laden with presents and honours. On his return to Rhodes, Nicephorus Ducas, in order to distinguish himself from the other branches of his family, added after his family name that of Rhodocanakis; being a composition of the words Rhodoc and Anakis, King of Rhodes. (Rhodoc-anakis, Rhodocanakis, Rhodocanakis)—and to his escutcheon, which was Azure, charged with a cross Argent, dividing the field into four quarters, added the insignia granted in A.D. 538 to the Isle of Rhodes by the Emperor Justinianus the Great, Azure, an inverted imperial diadem Proper, containing roses Argent, and surmounted by an oval circle of six mullets Or. It may be mentioned that the elder branch of the House of Ducas is now extinct, out from it descended the Emperors Constantinus XI., Ducas (R. 1059-1067), Michael VII., Andronicus I., and Constantinus XII., Ducas (R. 1071-1078), and lastly Alexius V., Ducas (r. 1204, and dethroned by the Crusaders). From the second branch of the Ducas family descend the Kings and Emperors, who, as above, assumed the name of Rhodocanakis, and who are too numerous to mention; and from the third and last (now extinct) the Emperors who assumed the name of Vatatze and later also that of La-caris; and who were Johannes III., Lucas Vatatze (R. 1222-1255), Theodorus II. Ducas Vatatze Iascuris (R. 1255-1256), and Joannes IV., Ducas Vatatze Iascuris (R. 1259-1260). The title Royal Highness was always prefixed before the titles and names of the various members male or female of the Rhodocian House up to the year of Grace 1636, when by the death of His Imperial Highness, Prince Theodorus Palaeologus (b. 1573, m. 1593), sixth titular Emperor (Theodorus IV.) of the Byzantine Empire, being the great-great-grandson of Thomas Palaeologus, Porphyrogenitus, Despot of Achaia, and brother and heir to Constantinus XIII., Palaeologus, last Emperor (reigned A.D. 1448-1453) of Constantinople, his title, rights, and claims were inherited as a matter of course by his only child and heiress, Theodora Palaeologina (b. 1594, m. 1614, d. 1665), the wife of His Royal Highness Prince Demetrius Rhodocianakis (b. 1592, m. 1614, d. 1664), from whom the present Prince Demetrius is sixth in lineal descent: which, branch by way of distinguishing themselves from the younger branches of their house, dropped the title of Royal Highness and assumed instead that of Imperial Highness, and for this reason this illustrious family is described in some historical works as "Royal," in others "Imperial," and sometimes with both appellations, its head being the Titular Emperor of the Byzantine Empire, in the same way as the exiled Royal House of Bourbon are titular Kings of France, Spain, Two Sicilies, &c.; and many other examples might be adduced.

† He assumed the family name of his wife after his own, two years after his marriage; and he dropped it a few years afterward, having ascertained that her only brother, and consequently the inheritor of the titles and name of Justiniani, had not been killed in battle, as reported. (See Notes and Queries III., s. 7, April 1st, 1865, p. 267).

‡ The Prince informs me that Innocent XII. set up Commens "to revenge himself, as was always the practice of the Popes from the time of the separation of the two churches (Eastern and Western) about the middle of the ninth century, upon our House, (with which I may say, en passant, his own became allied by marriage in 1419, and in 1559), to promote his interests and to oblige his favourite, Francis Farnese, Duke of Parma, &c., &c., by concocting and confirming the illegal and imaginary sale of the most Ancient Order in Christendom. For he as well as his predecessors to the Papal throne knew that the dignity belonged to our House, which would have been under their special favour and protection had they abjured the religion of their forefathers and become Catholics. This was always the policy of the Popes, although with some (Paulus III. [Alexandrus Farnesius, R.A.D. 1534-1549], Clemens VIII. [Hippolytus Aldobrandinus, R. 1592-1605], Paulus V. [Camilillus Borghesius, R. 1605-1621], Clemens IX. [Julius Rospigliosus, R. 1667-1669], Benedictus XIII. [Petrus-Franciscus Ursinus, R. 1724-1730], Clemens XII. [Laurentinus Corsinus, R. 1730-1740], &c., &c.) we were very intimately connected, ancestors of mine having married relatives of their own.

DEATH OF DE BURGH ADAMS, ESQ.

Not only will the members of the Craft, but many of the citizens of Auckland outside that body, regret to learn the sudden decease in London of Mr. De Burgh Adams, Principal Purveyor to Her Majesty's Forces, and that, too, the more especially as Mr. Adams was about to retire from the service to come out with his family and settle in this province. His decease took place suddenly, on the 20th March last, through the breaking of a blood vessel.

Mr. Adams held high rank as a Mason. He was Provincial Grand Master of Freemasons in New Zealand, and did very much during his residence here to cause the institution of Masonry to be esteemed and respected. Nor was his Christian charity confined, as many have cause to know, to the poorer members of that body and their families. A genial, kindly man, he stood high in the esteem and affection of all those with whom he was brought in friendly contact.

Extract from New Zealand Herald, dated Auckland, 26th May, 1869:—

De Burgh Adams Lodge, New Plymouth, 7th July, 1869. Mrs. Adams, Cork.

DEAR MADAM,—I have been deputed by the Officers and brethren of the Lodge over which I have the honour to preside to communicate to you the heartfelt sorrow which the early decease of your late Provincial Grand Master, their honoured friend and kind benefactor, has occasioned them, and to express their deep sympathy with you in your heavy bereavement.

Believe me, dear madam, that the memory of the departed will long be cherished by the lodge which bears his honoured name, and which was watched over by him with such tender and affectionate solicitude.

With the earnest hope and trust that the Great Architect of the Universe may comfort and sustain you in your sad affliction, I remain, dear madam, yours very respectfully and truly,

(Signed),
R. C. HAMMERTON, P.M., W.M.,
De Burgh Adams Lodge.

The New Vade Mecum (invented and manufactured by Charles H. Vincent, optician, of 23, Windsor-street Liverpool) consists of a telescope well adapted for tourists, &c., to which is added an excellent microscope of great power and first-class definition, quite equal to others sold at ten times the price. Wonder ul as it may seem, the price of this ingenious combination is only 3s. 6d. and Mr. Vincent sends it (carriage free) anywhere, with printed directions, upon receipt of post office order or stamps to the amount of 3s. 10d.—ADVT.

THE MASONIC LIFE BOAT FUND.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR,—As Bro. O'Neal Hays states in his letter in THE FREEMASON of last week that he was Secretary to the above Fund, perhaps he would kindly state through the same medium, who the Treasurer is and whom the Committee are. My lodge having subscribed £3 3s. to the same, we all feel interested therein.

BROS. W. J. HUGHAN AND W. P. BUCHAN, OR "THE TUG O' WAR."

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Although, as shown at page 207 and elsewhere, Bros. Buchan and Hughan agree upon many points regarding the institution of Speculative Masonry, still they have managed to come to a dead lock, taking exactly opposite sides upon the following matters, viz. :—

BRO. BUCHAN.
Speculative Freemasonry was not practised among the operative Lodges before 1717.

The making Masons before 1717 being merely similar to the making or brothering of Smiths, Carpenters, Shoe-makers, &c., which brothering or apron-washing was practised pretty generally by all Crafts both before, and long after 1717.

It is something refreshing in these times to perceive our Masonic students coming to the point at last, and all I shall say is—Go it! for

I've bet my money on the bob-tail horse;
Who will bet on the bay?

RES NON VERBA & THE GOOD TEMPLARS.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER.—In THE FREEMASON of 23rd October, there is a letter signed "Res Non Verba," finding fault with my letter which you published on 16th October, concerning so-called Order of Good Templars. From the signature "Res Non Verba"—Things, not Words—I infer that the letter of the writer disputes my right to object to the assumption of the name of Templars by the American association which it has been attempted to introduce into this country. Names, however, are not unimportant, and it is evident that the name of Good Templars has been assumed with reference to that of Knights Templars. Of all the orders affiliated to Freemasonry the order of Knights Templar is the most select, one black ball being sufficient for the rejection of a candidate in many encampments. The high character of the order is well known to all who know anything of such matters, and your correspondent makes a most unjustifiable insinuation when he says that "probably if a few of the Knights Templar were to join the order of Good Templars, it would be for their benefit, and would tend to improve the order in public estimation." If your correspondent is, as would seem from his letter, himself a Knight Templar, he ought to know that he has means of redressing anything contrary to good morals, or the rules of the order, in which all that belongs to good morals is included, without the aid of an order of Good Templars or of any Teetotal Association whatever. He assures us that he has been "a total abstainer from all intoxicating liquors from birth." It would seem, therefore, that he entered the teetotal ranks before he was able to form an opinion for himself, unless he were more precocious than the most of mankind. He does not say how many years it is since he was a sucking teetotaler, and we are therefore left to conjecture as to his present stage of advancement.

For my own part, I am almost a total abstainer in practice, but this is of no consequence as to the present question. I deny the right of "Res Non Verba" to insinuate anything disparaging to the reputation of the Knights Templar, and in contradiction to him I assert that the assumption of the name of Good Templars by a mere teetotal association is an insult to that honourable order. The Good Templars evidently seek to derive some advantage from the resemblance of their name to that of the Knights Templar, whilst they throw discredit on that order by the very name itself, and by their pretension of superior virtue.

Your correspondent, "Res Non Verba," denies my statement that the Order of Good Templars, having its secrets and oaths, is "in contradiction of the law against secret societies." He maintains this position by saying that the Act of Parliament passed on the 12th of July, 1799, was passed "for the more effectual suppression of societies from seditious and treasonable purposes," and that nothing contained in it would prevent any society from having secrets for legitimate purposes, "only not taking oaths from its members to keep them inviolate," adducing as examples of societies acting on such principles, the Odd Fellows, the Foresters, the Druids, and the Rechabites. The following extracts from the Act of Parliament in question, 39, George III., cap. 79, will probably be deemed by most readers a sufficient answer on this point:—

"Act of Parliament, 39 George III., cap. 99., section 1, Preamble, and suppression of certain existing treasonable societies, utterly suppressed and prohibited."

"SECTION II.—And being it further enacted, "That from and after the passing of this Act, all and every the said societies, and also every other society now established, or hereafter to be established, the members whereof shall, according to the rules thereof, or to any provision or agreement for that purpose, be required or admitted to take any unlawful oath or engagement, which shall be an unlawful oath or engagement within the intent and meaning of an Act, 37 Geo. III., cap. 123, &c., &c., shall be deemed and taken to be unlawful combinations and confederacies; and every person who from and after the passing of this Act, shall become a member of any such society . . . shall be deemed guilty of an unlawful combination and confederacy."

"SECTION III.—Provided always nevertheless, this Act not to extend to declarations approved by two Justices, registered with the Clerk of Peace, and approbation confirmed at next General Quarter Session."

"SECTION IV.—Not to be retrospective."

"SECTION V.—And whereas certain Societies have been long accustomed to be holden in this kingdom under the denomination of Lodges of Freemasons, the meetings whereof have been in great measure directed to Charitable Purposes; be it therefore enacted, That nothing in this Act shall extend to the meetings of any such Society or Lodge which shall, before the passing of this Act, have been usually holden under the said denomination, and in conformity to the Rules prevailing among the said Societies of Freemasons."

"SECTION VI.—Provided always, That this exemption shall not extend to any such Society, unless two of the members composing the same shall certify upon oath (which oath any Justice of the Peace or other Magistrate is hereby empowered to administer) that such Society or Lodge has, before the passing of this Act, been usually held under the denomination of a Lodge of Freemasons, and in conformity to the Rules prevailing among the Societies or Lodges of Freemasons in this kingdom; which Certificate, duly attested by the Magistrate before whom the same shall be sworn, and subscribed by the Persons so certifying, shall, within the space of Two Calendar Months after the passing of this Act, be deposited with the Clerk of the Peace for the County, Stewartry, Riding, Division, Shire, or Place where such Society or Lodge hath been usually held: Provided also, That this exemption shall not extend to any such Society or Lodge, unless the name or denomination thereof, and the usual place or places, and the time or times of its Meetings, and the names and descriptions of all and every the Members thereof, be registered with such Clerk of the Peace as aforesaid within Two Months after the passing of this Act, and also on or before the Twenty-fifth day of March in every succeeding year."

It is no desire on my part to discuss anything but Freemasonry in the columns of THE FREEMASON, but when a society adopts a name affecting the reputation of any order affiliated to Freemasonry, surely it is but right and proper they should know of it.

The Scottish Templars claim to be the original Knights Templars, and have affiliated themselves to Freemasons merely in order to enjoy the protection afforded by law. England, I believe, has recently adopted, or is about to adopt, the Scottish mode of working. The Scottish Knights Templar are in general almost total abstainers in practice, yet probably few teetotalers coming forward to express their particular views and to urge them as the perfection of virtue, would pass the ballot. They might be rejected as troublesome enthusiasts, bent chiefly on an object not approved by many as good and virtuous as themselves, but also in many cases because their notions of virtue seem to be limited to one particular part of the moral law, other parts being neglected.

I have the honour to be, ours fraternally,
CIPES.

* "37 George III., cap. 123, section 1.—Persons taking or administering, or being present at or consenting to, any oath or engagement, purporting or intended to bind the person taking the same to engage in any mutinous or seditious purpose or to disturb the public peace, or to be of any association, society or confederacy, formed for any such purposes or to obey the orders or commands of any committee or body of men not now lawfully constituted, or of any leader or commander, or other person not having authority by law for that purpose . . . may be transported for any term of years not exceeding seven years."

ANCIENT AND MODERN MYSTERIES.

BY BRO. ROBERT WENTWORTH LITTLE,

President of the London Literary Union, Editor of "The Rosicrucian," &c.

From the religious rites of the Egyptians we come to those of the Persians, which afford another proof, if one were necessary, that the genius of antiquity delighted in mystery.

Dark and secret, as the subterranean vaults and forest recesses in which they dwelt, were the doctrines promulgated by the sages of the East. Their theology was veiled in hieroglyphics and allegorical figures, their philosophy was involved in a circle of symbols. All the sublime wisdom of Asia, however, was concentrated and displayed in the cave of Mithras, which represented the world, and contained expressive emblems of the various elements of nature. Porphyry, a celebrated ancient philosopher, thus writes concerning them:—"The most ancient of the human race, before they were sufficiently skilled in architecture to erect temples consecrated cells and caverns to the Deity;" and adds that, "whosoever men acknowledged Mithras as the supreme divinity they performed the sacred rites in caverns."

These subterranean retreats, which were afterwards so common in Persia, were devoted to the worship of Mithras, the Father of the Universe, and from that Deity denominated Mithratic Caves. In those caves they kept a portion of the sacred fire, constantly and fervently glowing, it being considered a radiant image of celestial purity, never to be extinguished, nor even suffered to grow feeble in its rays. But the caverns were not only the temples of religion, they were also the solemn schools of the occult sciences. Porphyry describes the cave of Zoroaster as one "adorned with flowers and watered with fountains, consecrated to the honour of Mithras, the Parent of the Universe;" that in this cave, which represented the world, were many geometrical symbols, which shadowed forth the various elements and climates, arranged with the most perfect symmetry, and properly disposed at certain distances around it. The sun was figured by a sphere of gold, or some resplendent gem of immense value suspended from the roof, which, glittering in gold azure, not inappropriately represented the heavens. The learned Celsus informs us that in the rites of Mithras the Persians proved by symbols the two-fold nature of the stars—the fixed and the planetary; and by the doctrine of metempsychosis, which was first taught in Persia, they endeavoured to show the passage of the soul through the celestial bodies. The Mithratic priests illustrated this doctrine by erecting in their caves a high ladder, with seven gates or steps corresponding to the number of the planets, and the candidate for initiation into the mysteries was compelled to pass through seven dark and winding caverns. This was called "ascending the ladder of perfection."

Each round of the ladder was said to be of metal of increasing purity, and was dignified with the name of one of the planets. The symbolism of this sacred ladder has been explained as follows:—

1. Lead.....SaturnFirst World.
2. Quicksilver...Mercury...World of Pre-Existence.
3. Copper.....Venus.....Heaven.
4. TinJupiterMiddle World.
5. IronMarsWorld of Births.
6. SilverMoonMansion of the Blessed.
7. Gold.....SunTruth.

Truth was therefore the object of the search in the Mithratic, as in all other, mysteries practised by the ancient world.

But the most celebrated and most important of these religious rites were those instituted at Eleusis, a town of Attica, in Greece. The chief priest was termed the Hierophant—or the revealer of sacred things and his assistants were the Daduchus or torch-bearer, the Ceryx or herald, and the Ho epi bomo or altar-server. The mysteries were of two kinds—the greater and lesser. The latter were merely preparatory, and consisted of a nine-days' lustration and purification preceded by sacrifices. The herald opened the ceremonies of initiation into the greater mysteries by the proclamation, "Retire, O ye profane."

The aspirant was presented naked; he was then clothed with the skin of a calf. An oath of secrecy was administered, and he was then asked, "Have you eaten bread?" The reply to which was, "No, I have drunk the sacred mixture; I have been fed from the basket of Ceres; I have laboured; I have been placed in the calathus, and in the cystus."

He was then invested with the sacred tunic, which he was to wear until it fell in pieces. The priests having left him in the utter darkness of the vestibule, the scene which followed is thus described by the poet Claudius, in his Rape of Proserpine.—"Now I see the shrines shake upon their tottering bases, and lightnings announcing the Deity's approach shed a vivid glare around—Now a long warring is heard from the depths of the earth, and the Cecropian temple re-echoes, and Eleusis raises her holy torches, the snakes of Triptolemus hiss, and lift their scaly necks, rubbed by their curved yokes. So afar, the three-fold Hecate bursts forth." A similar description is given in the Travels of Anacharsis.

The aspirant encountered enormous difficulties in his progress. Nonnus states—"There are eighty degrees of labours from less to greater, and when the candidate has gone through them he is initiated. These labours are—to pass through fire, to endure cold, hunger and thirst, to undergo much journeying, and—in a word—every toil of this nature." Pythagoras nearly lost his life in undergoing these severe tests, and many aspirants succumbed to the terrible trials. Finally the aspirant emerged from darkness into the region of eternal joy, where dazzling light shone around. The sight of this divine splendour was called in the mysteries Autopsia, and the initiate then took the name of Epoptai.

PRESENTATION TO BRO. THE REV.
S. G. MORRISON, DUBLIN.

A large number of the brethren of the Order in Dublin met on the evening of the 2nd inst., in the new Masonic Hall, Molesworth-street, for the purpose of presenting an address and testimonial to Brother the Rev. S. G. Morrison, Past Grand Chaplain, as a mark of the very high esteem in which he is deservedly held by the Freemasons of Dublin. The reverend gentleman has long been a member of Lodge No 245, the greater number of the brethren of which were present to do him honour on the occasion. This was the first presentation made in the new Masonic Hall, and it could hardly have been made to a more deserving brother. For several years the Rev. Mr. Morrison has been attached to the Masonic body, and proved himself worthy of the confidence reposed in him by the Craft.

Bro. Alderman MANNING, G.D. of C, presided, and amongst the other brethren present were Ed. Purden, Lord Mayor Elect, Vice-Chairman; John Byrne, T.C.; Rev. L. A. Le Pan; &c., &c.

Bro. FLYNN, Hon. Secretary, H.K.T. (245), then read the address as follows:—

"To Right Worshipful and Rev. Brother S. G. Morrison, Past Grand Chaplain of Grand Lodge in Ireland.

"DEAR REV. SIR AND BROTHER,—The pleasing duty has been delegated to us by some members of the Masonic body of presenting you with the accompanying artistically-painted and richly finished portrait; the likeness is life-size, and is that of yourself, and also with a purse of sovereigns. The brethren with whom we are co-operating have been desirous of marking in some way—though not commensurate with their wishes or your deserts—their appreciation of the paternal and kindly feelings which have characterised your association with them for a number of years. They are sensible that this small tribute but indifferently represents the great esteem in which they hold your Masonic worth, as one who at all times and seasons was ever ready to stand forth and urge with an eloquence and felicitousness peculiarly your own whatever tended to promote the well-being, efficiency, usefulness, and honor of our Order. They cannot omit to here record the great respect and admiration they entertain of your high abilities, and how willingly and powerfully you have ever employed these gifts in forwarding the interests of our Masonic Orphan Schools, or any movement having for its tendency the alleviation of a brother's troubles. They recognised in you, during the period in which you officiated as a grand officer, one who was superior to the interests of any section or party, and who discharged the duties of your position with an earnest and unprejudiced zeal, calculated to maintain in its purity and splendour the essential attributes of Masonry—a zeal which was enhanced by your geniality of temperament and singleness of purpose. We trust when the time comes at which it shall please the Great Architect of the Universe to call you from the sphere of your labours in His vineyard here to another and better world, that those cherished lineaments which, in the flesh, shone so benignantly and kindly around the domestic and friendly board may, by the limner's aid, be the means of perpetuating the evidence of our fraternal love and regard, and of your paternal affection and merit. Wishing you and your family all the comfort and happiness possible in this world, we beg to sign ourselves on behalf of the brethren subscribing, yours very truly and fraternally—Joseph Manning, G.D.C., Chairman; Edward Purden, H.K.T., 245, Vice-Chairman; Philip R. Patman, H.K.T., 153; Henry Fielding, P.M., 100; A. Fitzpatrick, H.K.T., 245, Treasurer; James Flynn, H.K.T., 245, Hon. Secretary."

The CHAIRMAN then handed over the address and accompanying presentation to the Rev. S. G. Morrison, who read the following reply:—

"DEAR BRETHREN,—Your address is indeed beautiful—beautiful in my esteem—not so much for the elegant style in which it is written and illuminated, as for the evidence it affords me of the goodwill you entertain towards myself. I would be insincere were I to take exception to your allusions to my Masonic life. When admitted into the Craft I laboured to make myself acquainted with the literature, traditions, principles, and objects of the Order, not only for my own interest, but that I might truthfully represent them to others. You give me credit for success, and I can honestly accept the compliment. As one of your Grand Officers I gave what little time I could command to discharge my duties. When, however, increased professional duties devolved on me I resigned my office, having held it for seven years. The high honour was done me on the occasion of my resignation, by an unanimous vote of the Grand Lodge of Ireland, of requesting my continuance as its Grand Chaplain. You do me but justice when you give me credit for taking a deep interest in our schools. I have not failed to advocate their claims as opportunity offered, and to an extent, I believe, which tended to add considerably to the number of their supporters and their funds. You have been pleased to mention my temperament as 'genial.' I suppose you mean by this that I joy in your joys and smile upon your occasional scenes and seasons of recreation. I do so. I do so, for it is my nature; I do so, for it is my duty. The same God-born spirit which sighs at scenes of sadness and melts at scenes of woe rejoices with them that rejoice. However reprehensible may be 'the loud laugh that speaks the vacant mind,' no law condemns the 'mirth' that blends with inspired 'trembling.' Your gifts, brothers, are accepted gratefully—I know they represent substantial proof of your regard. As an expression of paternal love, the artistically-executed portrait with which you present me shall ever be prized and preserved. The man making experiences of time have wrinkled the brow and thinned and blanched the hair; but the gifted artist has caused a still young soul to look out of dimming eyes, and on the throne of a furrowed forehead to seat a yet cheerful heart. I am proud of this presentation and its surroundings, and accompaniments. I see upon the subscription list the revered name of our noble chief, his Grace the Duke of Leinster, and our esteemed Grand Senior Warden, Lord Athlumney, and of many others high in the honors of the Craft; and to possess the friendship and confidence of such men would make any one proud. Brethren, I thank you; your love thus manifested is my gerdon for the past; to retain that love shall be the effort of the future.—I am, brethren, yours fraternally.

"S. G. MORRISON, P. Grand Chaplain, G.L.I., Grand Chaplain, R.A.C., H.K.T., 245, P.M., 245, 126, Chaplain 245, 100, 120, 171."

The presentation consisted of a very handsomely finished portrait, three-quarter size, of the Rev. Mr. Morrison, richly framed, and admirably executed by Mr. J. Hoskell. The likeness was very striking, and the painting reflected great credit on the skill of the artist. There was also a gift of a purse of sovereigns, the amount subscribed being very much in excess of the sum anticipated to defray the expenses. The address, which was very handsomely framed, was engrossed and illuminated by Mr. Charles L. O'Brien in a manner that reflected much credit on his taste and skill. In the centre, at the top, was displayed the well-known intersecting triangles having on their right a representation of the Grand Chaplain's insignia, and on the left that emblem which has for its motto "Aude vide luce." In the centre, under the heading, is placed the peculiar cross whose motto is "Dieu le veut." At the lower part of the Address, at either end, stand two pillars, suggestive of the stability of the Order; and between these is neatly grouped an original design of the artist's symbolising the Sacred Writings.

The brethren afterwards adjourned to the dining-hall, where a sumptuous supper had been prepared.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Hereditary Diseases.—Are never more likely to develop their existence and to display their intensity than during the autumnal months. It should, therefore, be known that the tendency to particular ailments transmitted from parent to child exercises a wide influence in producing diseases remediable by these preparations. Few persons are free from hereditary predispositions; consumption, gout, and scrofulous disorders are from this cause ever present, and yearly rob us of our dearest treasures. Holloway's Ointment and Pills have the power of removing from the blood the morbid qualities in which lies the essence of all hereditary diseases, and not only do they cleanse the blood, but purify every living tissue throughout the frame.—ADVT.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE,

The Great Cure for Cholera and Consumption.

Newly-discovered principle residing in Gum Benjamin (Styrax Benzoin), the chief chemical product of which has hitherto been Benzoic Acid, well known and highly valued by medical practitioners. The great difficulty which the discoverer encountered in bringing out this important remedy was the form in which to present it to the faculty and the public, the new chemical being amorphous and incapable of crystallization. It has therefore been deemed advisable to prepare a highly-concentrated solution of the product, combining it with such adjuncts as are considered natural auxiliaries. PRICE'S BENZODYNE is stimulant, anodyne, and mechanically astringent, arresting fluxes and hemorrhages of all kinds both external and internal, possessing singular efficacy in the following diseases:—Ague, Bronchitis, Consumption, Colic, Cholera, Cold, Cough, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Debility in all its various forms, Fevers, Influenza, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Spasms, Ticdoloureux, &c., &c. PRICE'S BENZODYNE has been tried repeatedly in these cases and has never failed to cure.

It immediately relieves all pain, actually sheathing the organs with a protective matter, which defies the action of the most virulent blood-poisons, and thus PRICE'S BENZODYNE acts as the most powerful styptic now known to science, being the only effective external application for cuts, bites of insects, and all open wounds. In Cholera, as in Consumption, its effects are astounding, while Chronic Cough yields to its curative influences in a few hours.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is acknowledged by the highest Medical authority to be the most wonderful medicine yet introduced to the public; it may be taken at any time by both young and old with the most beneficial effects in all cases, leaving no bad effects like Laudanum, Chlorodyne, or any other poisonous and imperfect preparations, and can be given when no other could be tolerated.

In Consumption and Cancer its peculiarly soothing properties render it a boon to the sufferer in allaying the cough, mitigating night perspirations, and in relieving pain, &c.

In every stage of those dire diseases it gives an amount of ease not attainable by any other remedy.

In all cases of Chest Affections, as Asthma, Bronchitis, Winter Cough, Palpitation, &c., PRICE'S BENZODYNE is a very valuable medicine, producing a composed and tranquil state of the system, and quickly relieving the cough, assisting expectoration, and in a few days removing the most distressing symptoms.

In Hysteria, Epilepsy, Gout, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nerve Pains it is justly valued, as it is given with immediate benefit, relieving pain and suffering however violent the attack.

In Diarrhoea, Cholera, Alvine Discharges, spasms and colics of the intestines, &c., its effects are signal, as it never fails to check the disease.

CONSUMPTION IN ALL ITS STAGES CURED.

Coughs, Whooping Cough, Asthma, Bronchitis, Fever, Ague, Diphtheria, Hysteria, Rheumatism, Diarrhoea, Spasms Colic, Renal and Uterine Diseases are immediately relieved by a dose.

During the period of Dentition of Children it will be found invaluable, and in curing Whooping Cough, Spasms, dispelling Flatulency, preventing Convulsive Fits, Heats, &c., to which they are so liable.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is specially adapted for Naval, Military or Traveller's medicine chests, and for Hospitals and Dispensaries everywhere.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 14d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s. and 22s., by all chemists

CROSBY'S

BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.

Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills, are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary Diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL.

Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says:—"I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued Cough, Pain, and Irritation of the Chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."

This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers, in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. CROSBY, Chemist, Scarborough.

* * Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.

THE AMERICAN FREEMASON

is Monthly, of sixteen double-column quarto pages of entirely original matter, and translations from the French Italian, and German Masonic papers and periodicals of the day. It is devoted to the discussion of the rights of Lodges and individual Freemasons, in contradistinction to the assumptions of Grand Lodges, and the un-Masonic doctrines and arrangements of "high degrees." Its motto is—Belief in the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man. Its price is Five Shillings a year—a sum so small that no Freemason, for pecuniary reasons, need be a non-subscriber to it.

Trans-Atlantic Subscribers to the AMERICAN FREEMASON will receive it Post-paid from the Office of Publication direct, at their respective Post-offices, upon payment of the subscription to

BRO. GEORGE KENNING

3 & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN, LONDON, E.C.

All Subscriptions begin with March 15th, 1869, and end with February, 1870.

The AMERICAN FREEMASON is not the organ of any Grand Lodge; but speaking the words of truth, manhood, and independence, advocates freedom for Masonry in America, and the rights of Freemasons in their Lodges—rights which, by our Grand Lodges, in their subservency to high degrees, have been invaded, until at present they are nearly obliterated.

Subscribers in the British Colonies will please address all Subscriptions and Correspondence to J. FLETCHER BRENNAN, Editor, 114, Main-street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

TO THE NERVOUS & DEBILITATED EPILEPTIC SUFFERERS AND OTHERS.

HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA, discovered, introduced, and extensively prescribed by the late eminent Dr. MARSHALL HALL, has proved an infallible remedy (by oxydizing the blood and supplying its saline constituent) for Indigestion, Debility, Coughs, Asthma Consumption, Skin, Liver, Stomach, and Nervous Affections, more especially Epilepsy, Apoplexy, and Paralysis. The successful results of this new chemical preparation are beyond all precedent, and the extraordinary cures effected by the late discoverer, and by his successor (Dr. Sutton), in the above maladies are without a parallel in the annals of medicine; and it is confidently believed that in no case need the sufferer despair, for practical experience has demonstrated, and signal success warranted the assertion, that in 99 cases out of every 100 complete cures may be relied on.

Sold in Bottles at 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and Cases of £5 each, by DR. SUTTON, M.D., 15, REGENT SQUARE, LONDON, W.C., and in BOLTON by PRINCELEY, Chemist.

The following are a few Testimonials published by privilege.

Sir Charles Locock, Physician-Accoucher to Her Majesty, stated at a meeting of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society, that in sixteen cases of Epilepsy he had effected permanent cures by the use of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa.

"September 6. 1866.—The Editor of the Bury Gazette returns thanks to Dr. Hall for the great benefit he has received from his Chlorate of Potassa treatment in a severe nervous disease."

Sir J. Ferguson, King's College Hospital, London, says—"I have repeatedly prescribed Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa and found it an agreeable and beneficial remedy."

Extract from the Lancet, April 1, 1867—"In conclusion, we are of opinion that Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is a far superior remedy to the ones in general use for Nervousness, Indigestion, and Liver Complaints, when judiciously prescribed."

Sir Benjamin Brodie says—"What Chloride of Lime is to the foul sewer, Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is to the blood."

Professor Syme says—"The effects of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa in obstinate cases of disease are as astonishing as perplexing."

Dr. Lankester, the eminent coroner, says—"Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is calculated to entirely supersede iron, mercury, sarsaparilla, quinine, and cod liver oil."

Sir Philip Crampton says—"I believe there is no condition of the system that may not be benefited by Dr. Hall's Potassa."

Sir T. Lawrence says—"I have found Dr. Hall's Chlorate an excellent remedy in Skin Diseases. I presume it is by oxydization."

Sir T. Watson says—"I know that it is an invaluable remedy."

Sir Edward Brough, 9, Fitzwilliam-square, Dublin, certifies Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa has been of the greatest benefit to a member of his family.

The Earl of Clarendon certifies that Dr. Hall's Chlorate cured a case of indigestion of 15 years' duration.

DR. HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA may be procured by order through any Chemist. Ask for "Dr. Hall's Chlorate," and do not be imposed on with the common article. It is sold in Bolton by Priestley Chemist, 12, Deansgate; or it may be had direct from Dr. Hall's successor, Dr. JOHN SUTTON, M.D., 15, Regent square, London, W.C., who undertakes the positive cure of all chronic diseases before payment.

Dr. Hall's Chlorate is sold in MANCHESTER by JEWELL, Market-street; in LIVERPOOL by PRIESTLEY, Lord-street.

N.B.—Dr. Sutton will shortly repeat his Lecture on this subject.—The Lecture sent for two stamps.

EACH Paper contains every item of intelligence, from Mail to Mail, specially affecting the country or colony for which it is published, with an exhaustive summary of home and continental politics, science, art, and social news,
and a retrospect of commercial transactions in Great Britain
and on the Continent.

Manufacturers and Merchants may command the greatest markets of the world for their products through the mediums
of publicity afforded by the EUROPEAN MAIL. A demand may be created where none exists at present, or an existing demand may be sustained and increased against the most energetic competition.

The EUROPEAN MAIL gives such perfect mercantile information that it is the highest commercial authority in the vast and prosperous territories through which it circulates. It is therefore an imperative necessity to the merchant who orders goods in bulk, and to the wholesale and retail distributor; it is also the most complete newspaper despatched from England, and is eagerly sought by all classes; it thus, unlike merely commercial newspapers, reaches and leaves the great communities who are the actual consumers of all products, and who must be acted upon by advertisement to require a special article before the merchant will venture to order a consignment.

FREEMASONRY AND THE LAWS OF THE LAND.

BY CIPES.

Do Freemasons obey the laws of the land or do they not? is a question sometimes asked, and asked with great propriety, by those who wish to know what Freemasonry really is, particularly when they are considering the question whether they shall seek admission into the Masonic fraternity or not. The answer to this question must very much determine the resolution of many, who if joining the Masonic body, would be the very best of brethren; men who are resolved to live to the utmost of their power and as God shall help them, in the observance of the moral law, and of the law of the land. Two questions, however, here arise: one as to the principles or rules of Freemasonry; another as to the practice of Freemasons. The first is in many respects the most important, and it is easily decided. Every Freemason, by the obligations which he undertakes, "agrees to be a peaceable subject, and cheerfully to conform to the laws of the land where he resides." "He is to pay a proper respect to the civil magistrate, to work diligently, to live in credit, and to act honourably with all men." A willing and dutiful obedience to the laws of the land runs through all the charges of the Masonic body, and is imperative on all the brethren. It is the pride of Freemasons to be recognised as good subjects or good citizens, everywhere conforming themselves to the laws of the land in which they live. If, indeed, any law of the land were contrary to the moral law, they might find themselves under a higher obligation, and would be bound by their oaths as Freemasons to maintain the moral law in opposition to any statute law disagreeable to it, for one of their obligations is "strictly to obey the moral law." But no question of this kind has yet arisen in any country. The observance of the moral law is everywhere maintained in the observance of the laws of the land, or in perfect harmony with it, so that the one is merely the complement of the other. In this country, particularly, this is happily and notably the case. No instance, we believe, has ever occurred of a Freemason complaining that in obedience of any law of the land he was required to transgress the moral law.

It is evident, therefore, that Freemasonry, according to its laws and principles, upholds and maintains the laws of the land. The only possible exception is, as we have seen, one not of frequent occurrence, and which we believe, has never actually occurred, for whatever faults there may be in the legislation of one country or another, there have been few instances—if there has ever been even one—in which the law of the land required that which was contrary to the moral law. There have, no doubt, been many cases in which Freemasons might deem the statute law wrong, but this is a very different question. In such a case, Freemasons are, of course, entitled, like the other subjects or citizens, to avail themselves of the proper means for obtaining a change of the law. Meanwhile, however, they are bound to submit themselves to it, and thus to show themselves good subjects or good citizens. However it may effect them, they must submit to the law, and act in accordance with it. Nothing is more easy than to give examples for illustration, one may suffice: There are many in Britain both Freemasons and others, who deem the present game laws of the country to be wrong in many important respects. They are entitled, therefore, to seek by the ordinary and proper means, such change of these laws as they think desirable; but Freemasons are under special obligation in the meantime to comply with them, so that it would be extremely disgraceful for to a Freemason to be a poacher, and utterly inconsistent with his professions and obligations.

The relation of Freemasonry to the moral law and to the law of the land must be tried by its rules and principles, rather than by any consideration of the conduct of its members or of lodges which may be too lax in questions as to the conduct of their members. To condemn Freemasonry because of any such faults of individual brethren, or of particular lodges, would be as ridiculous as to accuse the Christian religion with favouring immorality because members or office-bearers of the church are known to be habitual and gross transgressors of the moral law, or because of laxity of discipline in particular churches. On such grounds, indeed, is founded one of the favourite arguments of infidels; an argument, however, so worthless, that it probably never satisfied the mind of any man who used it, but was merely adduced as specious, and in utterance of a deep-rooted, although unreasonable, hostility. But Christianity must be judged by its principles and tendencies, not by the conduct of particular churches or of individuals professing themselves to be Christians. In like manner, Freemasonry ought to be tried by its rules and principles, by its ancient charges, and by the oaths which Freemasons take when they are accepted into the brotherhood. Let Freemasons themselves be judged individually according to their observance or non-observance of the obligations under which they have come; and let lodges be judged according to the respect which they show for the maintenance of the unchangeable laws of the Order. These things are not unimportant, but deeply concern the honour and prosperity of the Masonic Body. It is a great mistake, however, to confound them with the question of the principles and tendency of Freemasonry, which cannot be affected even by the greatest imaginable actual departure from the rules of the Order on the part of any number of individual Freemasons or of Lodges.

Whilst we thus endeavour to state the question of the relation of Freemasonry to the laws of the land on its proper grounds, and to show the answer which must be given to it as thus stated, we cannot but acknowledge the great importance of an endeavour on the part of all Freemasons and of all Masonic lodges to exhibit practically that regard both for the moral law and the law of the land which the rules of the Order so strongly inculcate. It belongs to every brother to do this in his own life. It belongs to every lodge to see to this as to the conduct of all its members. There ought to be nothing like a mean espionage, and yet there ought to be a kindly watchful care of brethren over one another. It is perhaps more easy to distinguish the two things in reality than to state the distinction in words. There ought to be no jealous suspicion, no willingness to listen to evil reports; yet if the character of any brother unhappily becomes the subject of unfavourable public reports, these ought not to be disregarded, but to be made the subject of investigation, according to the laws of the Order, that such action may be taken as will maintain the honour of the Masonic body, whilst at the same time it may prove beneficial to the accused brother himself, even if he is found guilty of the faults laid to his charge. The object of such action on the part of a lodge is twofold—to maintain the laws and credit of the Order, and to promote the welfare of the individual brother concerned, that even if guilty of great offences, he may be brought to such a better course of conduct as may make him worthy of again receiving the right hand of fellowship, and enjoying all the privileges of a member of the lodge and of the Masonic brotherhood. No discussion of politics can take place in a lodge, and it is our duty, according to our obligations, to simply obey the laws of the land as they are laid down in the statute book. Never let it be said a Freemason departs from them.

THE ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE.

Mount Calvary Chapter, S.P.R. x of H.R.D.M.

The annual meeting of this ancient chapter was held on Friday, the 12th inst., at Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street. The M.W.S., Ill. Bro. W. Stone, 30°, presided, and was supported by three members of the 33°, viz., Capt. N. G. Phillips, G. Treas. Gen.; Major Alex. W. Adair, S.G.I.G. of the Supreme Council of England; and Albert G. Goodall, Representative from the S.G.I.C., for the Northern Jurisdiction of the United States; and by a good muster of the brethren, amongst whom were D. M. Dewar, M.W.S. elect; Capt. G. Cockle, 1st. Gen.; F. Binckes, 30°, 2nd. Gen.; S. Rosenthal, and R. J. Hohmasser. Visitors, H. W. Hemsworth, 30°, and G. Kenning, 18°, of the Invicta Chapter, Woolwich.

The chapter having been duly opened, and ballots taken for the candidates on the agenda paper, the Ill. Bro. Hyde Pullen, 32°, took the chair, and the following brethren being in attendance were then perfected as S.P.R., x, or the 18th degree of the Ancient Accepted Rite: V.W. Bro. John Hervey, P.G.D., G. Sec.; W. Bro. Robert Wentworth Little, P.M., P.Z.; Capt. Hastie, P.P.G.W., Surrey; Eugene Cronin, M.D., Treas., 1216. The ceremony was magnificently rendered by the Ill. Bro. in the chair, and the post of G. Marshal, was most ably filled by Ill. Bro. Binckes.

The minutes were then read, after which Bro. Dewar, M.W.S. elect, was presented for enthronization, and this solemn rite was also faultlessly administered by Bro. Hyde Pullen. The following Ex. and Perf. Bros. were then appointed to office for the ensuing year: Capt. G. Cockle, 30°, H.P.; F. Binckes, 30°, 1st. Gen.; S. Rosenthal (33° Italy), 2nd. Gen.; W. Paas, Treas.; C. Swan, Recorder; E. S. Stillwell, R.; Raynham, W.; Stewart, D.C. Several communications from the S.G.C. were then read, and the Chapter was solemnly closed. The S.P.R. x then adjourned to the banquet table. After the cloth was cleared, the M.W.S. proposed the usual loyal toasts, and gave the healths of the members of the 33°, to which Capt. Phillips, G. Treas. Gen., responded.

Ill. Bro. Goodall, 33°, replied in a most eloquent manner, for the "Sister Jurisdiction of the A. and A. Rite." He alluded feelingly to the good understanding which exists between English and American Masons, whose adherence to ancient landmarks was he considered the bulwark of Freemasonry all over the world. Ex. and Perf. Bro. John Hervey returned thanks for the newly admitted members of the 18°, and expressed his gratification at the admirable way in which the proceedings had been carried out. The health of the M.W.S., Bro. Dewar, was drunk with enthusiasm, and gracefully acknowledged by that worthy S.P. The "Past Sovereign" followed, to which Ill. Bro. Stone responded.

The "Members of the 32°," coupled with the name of Bro. Hyde Pullen was the next toast, and was received with great cordiality by all present.

The M.W.S. then gave the toast of the Officers, ex-patiating upon their several merits, and the services they had rendered Freemasonry. Ill. Bro. Binckes, 1st. Gen., replied in his usual effective style. A very enjoyable evening was brought to a close by the Janitor's toast.

Some time since, it is understood, this Chapter was at a very low ebb, but with the recent increase of members and the influential class of candidates introduced it bids fair to be one of the most important in the Rite. We are also informed that it is the intention of the leading members of the Red X Order who are likewise members of the A. and A. Rite, to apply to the S.G. Council for a new Red X Chapter, in order that a number of Red Cross Knights may be enabled to take the 18° in a Chapter of their own. Twenty-five gentlemen of high standing in Red x, have given their names as candidates. Should the Chapter be formed, and all the members of the 18°, 30°, 31°, 32° and 33°, who are Knights of the Red x, will probably sign the petition. We are glad to say that the misconception which led to somewhat unfriendly feelings between the two Councils is now happily removed, and we have no doubt that both these Christian Orders will henceforth be found working shoulder to shoulder together in the good cause of promoting the intellectual advancement of their brother Masons, and the practice of the three theological virtues of mankind.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.—A grateful father is desirous of sending by mail, free of charge to all who wish it, a copy of the prescription by which his daughter was restored to perfect health from confirmed Consumption, after having been given up by her physicians and despaired of by her father, a well-known physician, who has now discontinued practice. Sent to any person free.—Address O. P. Brown, Secretary, 2, King-street, Covent-garden, London.—ADVT.

THE METHODISTS AND THE FREEMASONS.

The following resolution was passed at the last Session of the East Gennesser Methodist Episcopal Church Conference by the favourable votes of thirty-one ministers, including two presiding elders:—

"Resolved—That we disapprove of Freemasonry.

"First. Because it creates disaffection and division in our charges and in our churches.

"Second. Because its associations do not aid religiously, and are derogatory to a holy ministry.

"Third. Because preference, position, or gain is held out as an incentive to become Masons, directly or indirectly, and both sometimes.

"Fourth. Because no holy minister of Christ can affiliate with any organisation which ejects the name of Christ, virtually denying Jesus, without being demoralised and degrading his holy calling.

"Fifth. Because it brings Christians into juxtaposition and affinity with all classes of men, of whatever business, religion, or nation, frowning upon all exclusiveness.

"Sixth. Because Masonic love and sympathy towards a brother take the precedence of the love of Christ.

"Seventh. Because Masonic oaths, obligations, and penalties are not reconcilable to the laws of morality, of Christianity, or of the land."

EASTERN STAR ENTERTAINMENT AT ASTORIA, L.I.

Brother Robert Macoy conferred the Eastern Star degrees on a large number of the members of the Masonic Fraternity and their lady friends, on Friday evening, the 15th Oct., under the auspices of Advance Lodge, No. 635 (Bro. John Oliff, Master), at their lodge-rooms, at Astoria, L.I. The evening was very unpleasant, but notwithstanding that a large company were assembled at 8 o'clock, at which time the doors were closed. About twenty of the members of Hill Grove Lodge, No. 540, of Brooklyn, W. Bro. Bazing, Master, with their lady friends, came up in a large four-horse covered waggon belonging to Bro. Grant, of that lodge, and were present as the invited guests of Advance. A very lively and friendly feeling has grown up between these two lodges during the past year, and fraternal visits on either side have been the consequence, which has in every case been characterized by the utmost cordiality. A large deputation was also present from Whitestone Lodge, L.I., and other lodges in the vicinity. Bro. Macoy was in his usual cheerful and agreeable vein of good humour throughout the evening. After conferring the degrees the company were escorted to Washington Hall, near by, where the festivities of the evening were commenced by part first, consisting of vocal and instrumental music, under the direction of Bro. Gifford, a resident of Astoria, and a member of Hill Grove. Very beautiful solos were performed and sung by Miss Kate Willis and Miss Newton.

Bro. Everett, of Advance Lodge, then presented, on behalf of the lodge, to the members of Hill Grove Lodge, through W. Master Bazing, a very beautifully arranged floral design, the square and compass, alluding to the good feeling which existed between the two lodges, and desiring their acceptance of this slight testimonial, "not for its intrinsic worth," but that it might be a souvenir of the kindly feeling that Advance held towards his lodge. Bro. Bazing received the design in the name of his lodge, thanking the donors, and promising to reserve the same carefully.

Bro. Everett also presented to Bro. Macoy the beautiful emblem of the Eastern Star, the five-pointed star, exquisitely finished, the several colours of the points arranged with choice flowers representing the several degrees, which was, as Bro. Macoy stated, a great surprise, and he being no speechmaker, would accept the same and present it to a certain young lady within his knowledge, with whom he had been acquainted for a long time and whose special society he had enjoyed. He and his lady thanked the lodge a thousand times for the compliment, and stated that they would keep the same as a remembrance of Advance Lodge.

Supper was announced, and the whole party, numbering over three hundred, proceeded to the large dining-room of the hall, where five long tables were loaded with refreshments of every kind. Plenty of coffee, ice cream, fruits, &c., were displayed, but no liquors, which was a decided improvement, we think, upon similar occasions of Masonic festivals. Dancing was commenced soon after, and to the music of the band the festivities were kept up until 6 o'clock in the morning.

The affair was in all its details well arranged and appointed. The ladies were in great numbers, and by their confident looks we judge will know how to guard and keep well the "secrets" which were conferred upon them. Messrs. Marc and Witham, florists, at Astoria, furnished gratuitously the immense number of floral decorations displayed on the table, and also arranged and presented to the lodge the floral designs for presentation.—Exchange.

A PLEASING INSTANCE OF THE VALUE OF FREEMASONRY.

We have this week to record one of the most pleasing and suggestive instances of the social value of Freemasonry that has ever come to our knowledge. True it is accompanied by a subject of the profoundest grief, but this fact only tends the more to brighten the halo of glory which enshrines the incident we are about to narrate. We believe there is not a brother of the Craft, from the greatest to the least, but who will, while dropping a tear to the memory of the departed, feel his heart glow with conscientious pride that he is a brother of those who have been instrumental in performing a good action.

Our readers are already acquainted with the melancholy facts, so far as they have been ascertained, attending the explosion on Wednesday, the 3rd inst., on board Her Majesty's gun-vessel "Thistle," while trying her speed at the measured mile at the Maplin Sands, off Sheerness. Two of those who were killed by the explosion were Masons. Their names were John Daer, a fitter, employed in the Sheerness Steam Factory; and Joseph Lawrence, a stoker, of the Sheerness Steam Reserve. Both, we believe, were brethren of Adam's Lodge (158, late 184); and on the night before he met his death Lawrence attended the lodge, and was present till its close. Daer resided with his family in Green-street, Sheerness; but Lawrence was not known to have any relatives or friends in the town, and it was not known from whence he came. His body would have been interred by strangers, but his lodge forbade it. A few brethren met together, discussed the question, and it was resolved to demand the body of the deceased, and bury it with Masonic honours. The names of the brethren who took the initiative in this praiseworthy step were Bros. Dr. Keddlall, P.P.S.W.; Isaac Townsend, P.P.G.R.; S. L. Townsend, P.P.J.D.; J. G. Green, P.P.J.D.; and J. T. Nixon, O'Brien, Storer, and Mudd.

The meeting was held at Bro. J. G. Green's, the Britannia, Mile Town, Sheerness, and the proposition was taken up immediately, and so heartily that on the funeral procession being formed on Sunday, no fewer than a hundred brethren of the Adam's and De Shurland Lodges were in attendance, and accompanied the remains to their final resting-place. Of Lawrence it may be truly said, he was one of "nature's noblemen." Quiet, reserved, but gentlemanly in his manner and bearing, no one, as he sat night after night in his lodge in his simple uniform of a stoker, suspected that he was more than a Master Mason. But the best possible evidence, that of his certificates and other documents, show that he had gone deep into the mysteries of the Craft. He proved to be a Royal Arch and a Mark Master, and it is also clear that he had passed the several offices in the separate degrees. That he was a careful saving man was proved by the fact that a savings' bank-book was found with the above documents in a tin case in his "ditty-box" in the Naval Barracks; and that he was a religious, thoughtful man was shown by the circumstance that in the tin case was also found a card, on which was printed a most beautiful prayer, and which appeared to have been much used. All these things are at present in Bro. J. G. Green's possession, and may be seen at his house.

We think we have written enough to prove that sometimes beneath the humblest garb beats the heart of a man, and a finer or more truthful illustration of this than that afforded by the career of "Bro. Joseph Lawrence, stoker," it is impossible to imagine. Will not such an incident as this open the eyes of those who look upon themselves as a class distinct from those who are lower than themselves in the social scale, to the fact, that "your true gentleman" does not flourish alone in high places, but that, like the modest violet, he may also be found in the quiet, shady, unthought-of nook? What will be thought in the services? Will not our naval and military brethren be proud to learn that men like Lawrence are to be found under their command, who, while capable of filling a much higher sphere in life, are yet content to humbly do their duty in that state of life to which it has pleased God to call them?

But we have said enough: and in conclusion, we may be permitted to express a hope that the example afforded by the brethren of the Adam's Lodge, coupled with that of Lawrence's brief history, will not be lost upon those who read this short narrative.

PRESTONIAN CLUB OF INSTRUCTION, held at Bro. Hunt's, Lyceum Tavern, Strand, for Master Masons only; Bros. Watson, P.M., President, Bourne, P.M., 749, Sec., Pymm, W.M., 749, Treas. This club of Instruction meets every Tuesday evening, for working the three ceremonies, and at the meeting on the 9th inst., it was proposed and carried, that Bro. Wm. Watson, the President, should work the ceremony of installation on the 4th Tuesday in the months of November, December, January, and February. Young members of the Craft may be assured that the information imparted at this club will be worthy of the brethren above-named, and will well repay a visit.

NOSGLYNGAU, or WINTER'S EVE, 31st OCTOBER.

By BROTHER ROBERT BOND.

"It was an autumn evening, and the rain
Had ceased awhile, but the loud winds did shriek
And called the deluging tempest back again;
The flag-staff on the church tower did creak,
And through the black clouds ran a lightning vein.
And then the flapping raven came to seek
Its home; its flight was heavy, and its wing Seemed weary with a long day's wandering."

This season is celebrated in Monmouthshire and Wales by a "goose supper" and social gatherings, wherein terpsichorean festivities, forfeits and other games are indulged. Thus gladly they welcome the approach of winter, hence realising the sentiments of the poet:—

"Let winter come! let Polar spirits sweep
The dark'ning, wild, and tempest-troubled deep,
Though boundless snows the withered heath deform,
And the dim sun scarce wanders through the storm,
Yet shall the smile of social love repay
With mental light the melancholy day,
And when its short and sullen morn is o'er,
The ice-chained waters slumbering on the shore,
How bright the faggots in the little hall
Blaze on the hearth and warm the pictured wall."

The most popular pastime of the season is that called the apple and candle, an amusement the nature of which would scarcely recommend itself to the favour of the stranger of cultivated taste, except that it excites a laugh, and that would scarcely compensate for the disgust it sometimes creates. The feat is performed thus: a pivot communicating with the ceiling has suspended from it a crossbar or stick, at one end of which an apple, and at the other a candle is affixed; these are made to revolve, and the performance commences. Each of the party, with arms pinioned, stretching himself on tip-toe and eagerly awaiting the return of the apple—a distended mouth not adding to his beauty—ready to close upon it, 'When it appears to be within convenient distance a snap is made at it, and the chances are favourable to his exertions being rewarded by a mouthful of delicious tallow, as his impetuosity to catch the apple generally thwarts his aim; this is, of course, a source of merriment and glee to the spectators, who, as their turn arrives, seldom achieve better success. Another diversion characteristic of the period is the dipping for apples or oranges. An apple or orange is thrown into a tub of water, from which it has to be withdrawn by the mouth, the party who undertakes to accomplish the feat having his arms tied behind him. Thus joyously is the young idea taught to welcome the approach of winter, that period admonishing them that—

"Not many golden hours must pass
Ere grey October's frosty latter days
Knit cold November in the general mass,
And shrouding all things in a yellow haze,
Among the minds of men much doubting raise
Where autumn ends and winter does begin;
And still with us the chilly swallow stay,
And round the rain-spout flutters out and in,
Nor dreams of Biscay's shore, nor southern Limousin."

ST. GEORGE'S HALL, LANGHAM PLACE. — On Saturday last, a concert was given by Herr Jona. Greebe, the celebrated violinist, who has had the honour of playing before the King of Holland, the Crown Prince of Prussia, the Duke of Nassau, &c. The concert commenced with a trio, in which Bros. P.E. Van Noorden, Herr Greebe and Webb, very excellently played. Bro. Frank Elmore, sang a song of his own composition, entitled, "Airy, Fairy, Lillan," very capitally. Bro. Herr Greebe played a solo on the violin, in which he was deservedly applauded. Miss Fanny Muir sang "Non piu Meata." She has a clear flute-like voice. Mdle. Rosamunda Doria sang, Schubert's "Gute Nacht," in German, beautifully. Miss Julia Woolf's brilliant execution on the piano-forte was marvellous, accompanied by Herr Greebe. Miss Fanny Holland's rendering of the jewel song from "Faust" received several well-merited rounds of applause. Mon. Paque played a solo on the violoncello from Irish airs beautifully. Bros. Parker and Webbs playing was capital, also Mr. Tyler's solo on the clarinet. Miss Emily Muir sang "De piace;" she has a pure soprano voice. The gem of the evening were the variations for the violin and voice, by Herr Greebe and Mdle. Clara Doria, Madame Griesenhagen, as an accompanist, and Bro P. E. Van Noorden's conducting, contributed to the success of the concert. A very fashionable audience attended it.

LANDMARKS.—The landmarks of Masonry constitute the foundation of our faith in the system, and it is this coincident which stamps the Order as the handmaiden of religion.

REFRESHMENTS.—'Tis good to be merry and wise, says the old song; and the wisdom which considers mirth or good humour to be a stain on a person's conduct, is a wisdom, which, we hope, for the honour of the Craft, will be for ever excluded from the practice of Masonry; for it will not, most assuredly, produce happiness, either in the lodge or out of it.

PROVINCE OF MIDDLESEX.

A highly important and influentially attended meeting of the Masters, Wardens, Past Masters, and Officers of this newly-constituted Province was held at the Freemasons' Tavern, on Saturday the 13th inst., at half-past 2 o'clock. Among those present were Bros. J. Glaisher, F.R.S., F.R.A.S., P.M. (352 and 1238); J. Green, W.M. (788); J. J. Wilson, W.M. (1237); G. Fehrenback, W.M. (382); H. Briggs, W.M. (865); E. Clark, P.M. (1194); S. Larcomb, P.M. (788); C. Horsley, P.M. (382); W. Smeed, P.M. (946); H. G. Buss, P.M. (1194); W. Platt, P.M., and Sec. (946); J. G. Marsh, P.M. (1194); H. A. Stacey, P.M., Sec. (865); W. Smith, W.M. (1238); T. Cubitt, P.M.; R. W. Little, P.M., Sec. (1194); F. Walters, P.M.; W. Dodd, S.W. (1194); R. Gurney, S.W. (788); A. A. Pendlebury, P.M.; H. A. Allman, J.W. (1194); T. Eendy, J.W. (788); R. T. Witley, J.W. (946); Angelo J. Lewis, J.D. (788); E. T. Osbaldeston, S.D. (1194); T. Smale, I.G. (1194); G. Cattel, P.M., P. G. Deacon, Hunts and Northamptonshire; R. A. Steel, D.C. (1194); D. R. Still (382), W. D. Wheeler, S.W. (865); Dr. Albert B. Day, P.M. (865); W. Needham, J.D. (865); W. T. Kipling, I.G. (946); C. Tye, S.D. (1237); G. King junr., J.W. (1238); R. Kenyon, W. H. Hubbard, P.M.; G. Kenning (1194).

Bro. GREEN, W.M. (788), proposed that the W. Bro. James Glaisher, F.R.S., a P.M. of 382, senior lodge of the province, do take the chair.

Bro. CLARK, P.M. (1194), seconded the proposition, which was carried unanimously.

Bro. GLAISHER accordingly took the chair and requested Bro. Little to act as Secretary to the meeting.

The CHAIRMAN then read the notice convening the meeting, and said the first duty of the brethren was to express their warmest thanks to the M.W. Grand Master for having sanctioned the creation of Middlesex as a Masonic province. He (Bro. Glaisher) felt not only that the brethren would concur in presenting their thanks to Lord Zetland, but as it had been announced only the day before that their noble and venerated chief was about to retire from the exalted post of Grand Master, which he had so long and worthily filled—(cheers)—a deeper sentiment of gratitude would fill the breast of every one present for the manifold services his lordship had rendered the Craft in general. (Great applause.)

Bro. W. SMITH, C.E., rose and enquired if there was any proof that the Grand Master had constituted the county of Middlesex as a Masonic Province.

The CHAIRMAN referred to the acting Secretary, and satisfactory evidence upon this point having been adduced, it was proposed by Bro. CLARK, P.M. 1194, seconded by Bro. Wilson, W.M. 1237, and carried by acclamation, that the warmest thanks of the brethren of Middlesex be respectfully presented to the M.W. Grand Master, for his lordship's compliance with the prayer of their petition.

Bro. SMITH again interposed, complaining that no special notice of the meeting had been sent to his private address, and animadverted in a most unmasonic manner upon the position taken up by the chairman and other prominent members of the Middlesex lodges, until indignant cries of "Order," "Chair," put an end to this unseemly exhibition of bad taste.

The CHAIRMAN having ruled that Bro. Smith's remarks were irrelevant and out of order, proceeded with the next business, when it was proposed by Bro. GREEN, W.M. of Lodge 788, duly seconded and unanimously resolved, that an humble memorial be presented to the Grand Master, praying his lordship to exercise his prerogative by appointing a Prov. Grand Master for Middlesex.

Bro. J. G. MARSH, P.M., then moved, Bro. CLARK, P.M. 1194, seconded, and it was carried without a dissentient voice, in the words of the memorial, that the name of Bro. Col. Burdett, P.G. Warden, be humbly suggested to the M.W.G.M. for appointment as P.G.M. for Middlesex. The Chairman then deputed Bros. Green and Wilson, W.M.'s of 788 and 1237, to introduce the R.W. Bro. Col. Burdett, to the meeting.

The deputation returned ushering the gallant Colonel, whose appearance was the signal for loud and long-continued cheering; in fact there was quite an outburst of enthusiasm, showing clearly the appreciation in which true Masonic qualities are held by the brethren of Middlesex.

The CHAIRMAN announced to Col. Burdett the result of the proceedings, and the R.W. Brother expressed his high sense of the honour for which the Middlesex lodges proposed to recommend him. He alluded to his connection with the Grand Lodge of Ireland, and trusted that the same kindly bond might unite him to the brethren of the metropolitan county of England. (Cheers.) Whatever the result might be—the selection being entirely in the hands of the M.W. Grand Master—he should ever treasure a grateful recollection of the unexpected compliment paid him by such an influential body of Masons. (Bro. Burdett sat down amidst great applause.)

The Memorial to the Earl of Zetland was then signed by every brother present, and the chairman announced that the R.W. Bro. W. W. Bramston Beach, M.P., Prov. Grand Master for Hants, who was to have taken the chair, had sent a letter expressing regret at his inability to attend, and his entire concurrence with the objects of the meeting, concluding by a hope that he might have the pleasure of witnessing the installation of Col. Burdett as Prov. Grand Master for Middlesex. Several other letters from brethren unavoidably absent were also received.

A cordial vote of thanks to Bro. Glaisher for his dignified conduct in the chair, terminated the proceedings of this successful meeting.

[We cannot forbear from expressing our astonishment that a person in the unpleasant position in which Bro. W. Smith is now placed, should have presented himself before the brethren of Middlesex, who, we are well assured, neither desire to follow him as a leader, nor to accept his advice or support as a member of the Craft. Our surprise is increased by the fact that we have received, and for the honour of the Craft, purposely suppress, certain letters which comment very severely upon Bro. Smith's connection with the "Masonic Lifeboat Fund," no account of which, so we are informed, has ever been rendered since it was originated under his auspices. Without at all imputing dishonest motives to Bro. Smith, we think it would be to his interest to remove any question as to the donations which he may have received, by publishing a list of the same, and stating in whose hands they are now placed, or in what manner they have been dedicated. So far as Middlesex is concerned, Bro. Smith is now, Masonically speaking, a "dead man."—Ed. F.]

Obituary.

BRO. HENRY WHITTLE, S.W., 871.

A short but painful illness has deprived the fraternity of a young though energetic and useful member. On the 12th instant, Bro. Henry Whittle, S.W., No. 871, and one of the founders of No. 1275, died at his residence, 361, New Cross-road, Deptford, in the 46th year of his age. Of his character as a man, and his qualities as a Mason, it is impossible to speak in too high terms. He was an affectionate and indulgent husband and father, and a sincere private friend. His home obtained the largest share of his devotion, and after that, Masonry's claims were attended to. In Freemasonry he was very energetic, and his support of the Charities showed the earnestness of his professions. His funeral took place on Monday; he was buried in Brookley Cemetery, and was followed to his last earthly resting place by a numerous body of relations and Masonic brethren, including the W.M. of his lodge. Bro. the Rev. B. Finch, Vicar of St. Paul's, Deptford, performed the funeral service.

The brethren then sat down to a very sumptuous banquet, provided by Bro. Goeden. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to. Bro. Honey, P.M., proposed the toast of the W.M., and stated how pleased he, as well as every brother present, was to see him in that chair again. The W.M. suitably returned thanks. The toast of the Past Masters having been eloquently responded to, the W.M. proposed the health of the officers, and mentioned the name of one who was well qualified in every respect to occupy that chair, and he coupled with the toast the name of Bro. E. J. Lewis, the Senior Warden. (The toast was drank with great applause.) Bro. E. J. Lewis in a very appropriate manner returned thanks. Some very excellent singing emanated from the W.M., Bro. C. Watson, &c., and the Tyler's toast concluded a very agreeable evening.

We are glad to congratulate the W.M. upon the success of this old lodge under his rule, and we hope to see it in a short time, in the same prosperous position it has enjoyed for so many years.

Britannic Lodge, No. 33. at its meeting at Freemasons Hall, on Friday week, nominated Stewards for all the Masonic Institutions' festivals of next year, and after such excellent work, sat down to one of Bro. Goeden's capital banquets at Freemasons' Tavern.

Mount Lebanon Lodge, No. 73.—This lodge met on Tuesday, at the Bridge House Hotel, and was attended by some fifty brethren. Bro. D. Rose, W.M., presided, and raised Bro. Hart, followed, and a choice dessert adorned the table during the proposition of the various toasts. The visitors were represented by Bros. Wells (15), F. Walters, P.M. (78); Mills (299), Bro. Walters responding for them when "The Visitors' health" was proposed, and introduced the Masonic Charities in connection with the case of a Hebrew brother, who seeks election in May to the Benevolent Institution. The lodge promised to support him, and shortly afterwards the brethren separated.

Bedford Lodge, No. 157. met on Friday week, at Freemasons' Hall under Bro. Willis, W.M.; but there was no work for his Worship, and after the closing of the lodge the brethren enjoyed a delightful banquet, supplied by Bro. C. Goeden, in Freemasons' Tavern, and spent a most harmonious evening.

Tranquillity Lodge No. 185.—This influential lodge met on Monday, in the lodge-room, at "Radley's," when the highly respected W.M. Bro. J. Holbrook, in his usual careful and correct style, assisted by his efficient officers, passed Bro. Barney Barnett, of Hull, to the second degree; the visitors were an American brother and Bro. F. Walters, P.M., 73, the latter of whom in an eloquent speech advocated the cause of Bro. Saqui, P.M., and father of the Lodge of Israel, as a candidate for the annuity at the next election, the appeal was most kindly responded to by several additional members becoming subscribers, and a promise of the lodge proxies.

The lodge was honoured by the presence of Bro. John Graydon, P.M., of 13 and 913, P.P.G.S.D., Kent; Allinson, P.M., 913, and several visitors. The three degrees were worked in a very creditable manner by the W.M., assisted by the officer of the lodge. A ballot having been taken, Mr. T. Ward was duly initiated. A letter was read from Bro. Rossiter, who was formerly a member of this lodge, asking for assistance, and a small sum was voted to him. The brethren of the lodge and visitors adjourned to the Red Lion Tavern, and sat down to an excellent supper provided by Bro. Norton. Some capital songs were sung by Bros. Hobson, Norman, Ingles, R. T. Lacey, &c., &c., and every one departed delighted with the evening's proceedings.

Lodge of Friendship, No. 206.—The second meeting of this lodge for the present season took place on the 11th inst., at Bro. Painter's, Ship and Turtle, Leadenhall-street. Bro. H. M. The minutes having been read and confirmed, a ballot was taken for W. T. Seaborn, which being in his favour he was introduced and shewn the light of Freemasonry. Bro. Parsons' proficiency in the noble science was then tested, and he was raised to the third degree. As this was the annual period for the election of W.M., the brethren proceeded with this portion of the business and elected Bro. E. B. Barnard, as their Master for the coming year. Bro. W. Ramsay was re-elected Treasurer, which responsible office he has held upwards of a quarter of a century, and Bro. D. S. Potts, T. The lodge was afterwards closed, and the brethren sat down to one of Bro. Painter's superb banquets, and subsequently spent the evening in the conviviality, in which the proposing and drinking of the various toasts gave occasion to indulge in.

Albert Davis was passed to the degree of F.C. in a very faultless manner by the W.M. Bro. Ough then presented Bro. George Pym, the W.M. elect, to Bro. Bourne for installation. A board of installed Masters to the number of fourteen was then opened, and Bro. Bourne duly installed Bro. Geo. Pym into the chair of K.S., the manner in which the ceremony was performed received the warmest commendation from all the brethren present. After the brethren had saluted the new W.M. in the three degrees, he appointed and invested his officers as follows:—Bros. W. Hester, S.W.; P. Parsons, J.W.; J. G. Froud, P.M., Treas.; H. Garrod, P.M., Sec.; S. Homewood, S.D.; E. J. Scott, J.D.; E. Harper, I.G.; Daly, Tyler. The lodge was then opened in the third degree and Bro. Greenwood was duly raised. A very beautiful jewel was then presented to Bro. Bourne, the I.P.M., which bore the following inscription, "Presented to Bro. Wm. Bourne, P.M., by the Belgrave Lodge, 749, as a token of fraternal regard, and in appreciation of the excellent manner in which he discharged the duties of W.M., 10th Nov., 1869." The lodge was then closed with solemn prayer. A most excellent banquet was served by Bro. Clemow, superintended by Bro. Smith. The following toasts were given, 1st, the Queen and Craft. 2nd, Prince and Princess of Wales, and rest of Royal family; Earl Zetland, M.W.G.M.; Earl de Grey and Ripon, D.G.M., and rest of Grand Officers, and with the latter was coupled the names of G. Sec. Bro. Hervey, and also Bro. Ough, G.P. Bro. John Hervey replied as follows: It is rather difficult to speak to a toast which is really so worn out, as that of the D.G.M., the Earl de Grey and Ripon, and the rest of the Grand Officers, but I am sure we are very grateful to you for proposing and drinking the toast, and I think there is one at any rate among the number whom you have mentioned who is fairly entitled to the good feeling, good wishes and good opinions of the Craft in general, and that is the Deputy Grand Master. With regard to the Grand Officers you have one in your own lodge, and therefore I will leave you to judge of the bulk, by the sample you have. As respects myself, sir, I really have little to say. This is my first visit to the Belgrave Lodge. Certainly I cannot say it is not my own fault, but it has so happened that I was a member of a lodge which met on the second Wednesday, and until the last two months that day has been altered. I have taken the earliest opportunity which circumstances would admit, of becoming your guest on the invitation of my friend, Bro. Ough, and I can only say, sir, that I feel very grateful to you and the brethren for the cordial and kind reception you have given me. I may say that I regretted very much I was not here at an earlier period of the evening than I was, because I heard the third ceremony gone through in such an admirable manner and so well rendered by the I.P.M., that I felt I had missed a treat in not hearing him perform the ceremony which placed you in the chair you so worthily occupy. I need not say how glad I am to see so prosperous a lodge under the banner of the Belgrave. I believe it has been mentioned once or twice that it is a young lodge, but I think there are a great many old lodges in the neighbourhood, and within a half-a-mile of this building which would envy the prosperity of this young lodge, as you term it, which I have now the pleasure of addressing. I said at the outset that it was difficult to say anything to so threadbare a toast as that of the D.G.M. and the rest of the G. Officers, and I always feel a difficulty in returning thanks for the toast, a difficulty which does not wear off, and although as one gets older, one gets more confidence, I do not find I get a better speaker in returning thanks for this threadbare toast. One tries very naturally to give a different tone to the observations. but it is very difficult; yet there is one thing there is no difficulty in, expressing in the first place, my best thanks to Bro. Ough for his kind invitation of me, and in the second place to yourself, W.M., and the brethren for the warm, and I may say, more than fraternal reception you have given me. I can assure you that I shall not forget the second Wednesday in the month, the 10th of November, when I had the satisfaction of being introduced to the Belgrave Lodge; and though I have come among you now for the first time, I do most heartily trust that it may so happen that some future evening I may find myself at your board, when I know I shall be as cordially and well received as I have been to-night. (Cheers.) Bro. Bourne proposed, "The W.M.," who in replying said, that although Tallyrand had declared that language was given to man to conceal his thoughts, the few words in which he thanked the brethren for the reception of this toast were sincere. To the toast of "The Visitors" several brethren replied, Bros. Stacey (209), Coutts (27), and Dr. Johnson (134), were the principal speakers. In his reply to the toast of the "I.P.M.," Bro. Bourne said, the brethren had placed him in a greater difficulty than they would have done if they had asked him to perform the ceremony installation or any other ceremony he was acquainted with in Freemasonry, by asking him to return in an adequate manner thanks to the W.M., for the very kind and handsome way in which the W.M. had been pleased to speak of him, and to the brethren for the flattering reception they had given to the toast. He felt deeply touched and could safely say that at all times he had attempted to do his duty, as he always would. As he had given them satisfaction, it was a proof that his efforts had been successful, which was no slight thing in his estimation. Bro. Froud replied for the P.M.'s, and Bro. Garrod, the Secretary, also made some cheerful observations about the dues, and Bro. Hester, S.W., who was delegated to respond on behalf of the officers, remarked that he had had a weakness for the office of Master, and hoped to occupy that position in a twelvemonth. He trusted he should be worthy of the office, and that visitors might always say, the Belgrave working was the most perfect in Masonry. It might appear bombastic to say so, but he thought no one ought to accept office unless he was able to do the work incident thereto. In justice to the officers he would say they would endeavour to support the W.M. in his year of office, and that their style of work should not detract from the honour with which he knew the W.M. would fill the chair. (Cheers.) The evening was most pleasantly spent, and was enlivened by some capital singing by Bros. Leary, Fairman, Wilson, Parsons and Strip.

Dalhousie Lodge, No. 869.—This capital working lodge met at Anderson's Hotel, Fleet-street, on Thursday, the 11th inst. The W.M. Bro. Little having taken the chair supported by Bro. J. Williams, S.W. Hardy, J.W. and P.M.'s Page and Underwood, and Bro. Ingram, Secretary, after the minutes of the former lodge were read and confirmed, Bro. S.D. Warren, was, on showing his proficiency, passed to the degree of a Fellow Craft, by the W.M., he as well as every officer, being thoroughly proficient in their duties. The W.M. then informed the brethren it was his intention to become a steward at the forthcoming festival in January next, for the Royal Benevolent Institution for aged Freemasons and the Widows of Freemasons, and he hoped he should have the support of the brethren in so worthy a cause. A sum of Five Guineas was then voted from the funds of the lodge, to the family of a deceased brother. Bro. Ingram, the Secretary of the lodge, and also the Secretary of the Lodge of Instruction informed the brethren, that a sum of Five Guineas had been voted from its funds to be placed on the list of the W.M., on the occasion of his being a steward. The lodge was then closed in due form and with solemn prayer. There was no banquet, it being one of those evenings when Masonry was carried out as it should be, and the brethren separated early.

Capper Lodge, No. 1076.—This very prosperous lodge held its meeting on Thursday, the 11th inst., at the Marine Hotel, Victoria Docks, presided over by Bro. S. Watkins, supported by Bros. Pickering, W. Master of the Upton Lodge, as S.W.; H. G. Sisley, J.W., and W.M.-elect; Pincombe, S.D.; B. Ashdown, J.D.; Brown, I.G.; Park, Treas.; Henderson, P.M. and Sec. The lodge was opened in due form with solemn prayer. The minutes of the last lodge meeting were read and confirmed. The lodge was opened in the second degree, and Bros. Ward and Jones, candidates for the third degree, were examined, entrusted, and retired. The lodge was opened in the third degree, and Bros. Jones and Ward were admitted, and duly raised to the sublime degree of M. Masons. The lodge was then resumed if the second degree, and Bro. Watkins presented Bro. Sisley to Bro. West, P.M., to receive from him the benefit of installation, which ceremony was proceeded with, the lodge being opened in each degree. A Board of Installed Masters was then opened, and Bro. Sisley was installed in the chair of K. Solomon according to ancient custom, and saluted accordingly, he then invested his I.P. Master, and the board was closed. The M. Masons were then admitted, and the W. Master was proclaimed and saluted. The lodge was resumed in the second degree and the Fellow Craft was admitted, and the W.M. was saluted and proclaimed, the lodge was resumed in the first degree, and the W.M. was for the third time proclaimed and saluted, he was then presented with the Warrant, Book of Constitution, and the bye-laws of the lodge, with very appropriate remarks by the Installing Master, he was then pleased to appoint the following brethren as officers for the ensuing year, viz., Bros. Gaakell, S.W.; Pincombe, J.W.; Henderson, P.M. Sec.; Ashdown, S.D.; Brown, J.D.; Brayshaw, I.G., who with Bro. Park, Treasurer, and Bro. Alison, Tyler, were invested with their collars, &c., by the Installing Master, Bro. West, after which he delivered the usual addresses to the W. Master, Wardens, and the lodge, which ended the ceremony of installation. It was proposed, seconded and carried unanimously, that five guineas be given from the funds of the lodge through Bro. Watkins, to one of the Masonic charities. Nothing further being offered for the good of Freemasonry, the lodge was closed in due form. The brethren adjourned to a very excellent banquet, served by Bro. Old, to which eighty-five of the brethren did ample justice. After the cloth was withdrawn, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to. Bro. Sisley then presented to Bro. Watkins a P.M. jewel, voted to him at the last meeting of the lodge, for the very able manner in which he performed the duties of W.M. for the past year, which was received and responded to in a very appropriate speech, in which he included thanks for the health of the Past Master, which had been given by the W. Master. Amongst the visitors we noticed, Bros. Willet, W.M., of the Euphrates Lodge; W. D. May, S.W., Nelson Lodge; J. Graham, J.W., Nelson Lodge; Hawks and Ellis, Nelson Lodge; Phillips, Union Waterloo Lodge; Smith, Pattison Lodge, and several others.

Buckingham and Chandos Lodge, No. 1150.—The meeting of this lodge at Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday last, was of a mournfully interesting character. The lodge which is of a semi-military character, meeting in uniform, is connected with the 1st Middlesex Artillery, and it appeared from the summons, that Major H. F. Smith of that corps, the W.M. of the lodge, had died since last meeting. The members consequently assembled in Masonic mourning, and the usual banquet was dispensed with as a mark of respect to the deceased Master. The chair of the lodge was taken in accordance with the Book of Constitutions by Bro. J. B. Monckton, the I.P.M., the whole of the lodge officers being punctually in their places, an example many older lodges might well follow. The circumstance above alluded to, had caused several initiations to stand over till next meeting, and the only business before the lodge therefore was, the usual election of W.M., and Treasurer. The ballot being taken for the W.M., the election was announced to have fallen upon the S.W., Bro. Captain G. Hunt, who appropriately thanked the lodge for the honour the lodge had done him. Bro. Captain Whichcord was re-elected Treasurer, and the Auditors were appointed. The W.M. in the chair then rose in order to refer to the melancholy circumstances attending their present meeting, and after reminding the lodge that their late W.M. had been a Steward of the recent Inauguration Festival, stated that the jewel issued to the Stewards by the order of the M.W.G.M., had been forwarded for their late W.M., in moving that it be forwarded to Mrs. Smith, he proposed that it be accompanied by a letter of condolence and sympathy, to be signed by the W.M., the Wardens, and the Secretary, in the name of the lodge. This was recorded by Bro. Col. Creed, P.M. and unanimously carried, and after discussion several matters of interest to the members, the lodge was closed in due form, and the members separated.

Macdonald Lodge, No. 1216.—The eighteenth monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the head quarters of the First Surrey Rifles, Camberwell New-road, on Wednesday, the 11th inst., under the presidency of Bro. Major A. L. Irvine, the W.M. A large muster of officers, members, and visitors attended, amongst whom were Bros. James Stevens, P.M., S.W.; S. H. Wagstaffe, J.D.; G. Waterwall, I.G.; Dr. E. Cronin, Treas.; J. J. Curtis, Sec.; G. H. N. Bridges, D.C.; W. J. Messenger, and H. Puckle, Stewards; also J. H. Hastie, who officiated as J.W.; W. Dicker, J. W. Carnell, W. H. Thomas, John B. Pike, W. A. Willis, H. Francis, A. Walton, N. W. Shairp, W. S. Larham, Jas. B. Pike, A. Scruby, H. Woodgates, D. Fourdrinier, &c. Visitors: Bros. Conrad C. Dumas, G.A.D.C.; G. Seward (33), E. S. Higgins, S.W. (120); G. Powell, P.M. (142), W. Worrell (766), W. V. Bedolfe, and R. A. Steele (1194), and N. G. Davis (1238). The lodge was opened in due form and the opening hymn was sung by the assembled brethren. The minutes of the previous meeting having been confirmed, the proposition of the Senior Warden, that Bro. Worrell, of Lodge 766, Organist of Beckenham church, be elected an honorary member of the Macdonald Lodge, was unanimously carried, and the W.M., after congratulating Bro. Worrell, appointed him to the office of Hon. Asst. Organist, in which position Bro. Worrell officiated throughout the evening. The W.M. having received a request from the Villiers Lodge, No. 1194, to pass Bro. W. V. Bedolfe of that lodge, that brother, and Bros. Scruby and Woodgates gave proofs of proficiency, and the lodge being opened in the second degree, were separately introduced and passed to the degree of Fellow Craft. The W.M. then in a most able and effective manner explained the tracing board of that degree, and at his request Bro. Stevens, the S.W., delivered the second section in the form of a lecture. The very impressive and perfect manner in which the business of the second degree was carried out, called forth expressions of great satisfaction from the visitors present. The lodge was called off and adjourned to an adjoining room for slight refreshment, in the course of which the W.M. proposed the health of the "Visitors," to which Bro. Conrad C. Dumas, G.A.D.C. (a former member of the corps), responded in terms of high commendation of the lodge working, and with expressions of the considerable pleasure with which his brother visitors and himself had witnessed and heard the proceedings of the evening thus far. He felt it due to the members of the lodge to state that he considered its progress and position most creditable to themselves individually and to the Craft generally, and it would be his duty, as well as a great pleasure to him, to report elsewhere the efficiency he had observed. In concluding a very graceful and telling speech Bro. Dumas, proposed "The health of the W.M., Bro. Major Irvine," to whose skill and ability, and courteous yet firm rule, the honourable position the Macdonald Lodge enjoys is mainly due. This was enthusiastically responded to by the brethren, and the W.M. briefly replied. The charity box was then circulated whilst the "Tyler's toast" was duly honoured, and the acting J.W. then called on the brethren to return to labour. On the resumption of business Bros. Sharp and Pike, proved their proficiency as F.C.'s, and the lodge having been opened in the third degree, were severally introduced and raised as Master Masons with due and fitting solemnity. The lodge was then closed down, the closing hymn sung, and the business of a long but most interesting evening brought to a pleasant and harmonious termination. The next meeting of this lodge will be held on the 8th December, and we are authorised by its officers to state that visitors on that occasion will be gladly welcomed.

James Johnson Armstrong, (who has been a member of the lodge more than five years,) was unanimously elected Worshipful Master for the ensuing year. Bro. Armstrong has risen to the above position step by step, commencing his first office as Steward, and no previous election has given more satisfaction to the brethren of St. Helen's, than that for 1870. Bro. I. M. Procter, was re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. James Mowbray, who has been Tyler for many years, was also re-elected. The installation is fixed for December 2nd, when it is expected that Bro. Bland, when it was resolved that a Masonic Ball should be held in the Town Hall on the 14th January next. The lodge appointed a committee to carry out the necessary arrangements. The fine band of the 1st Life Guards will attend. Several handsome additions to the furniture of the lodge have recently been made through the liberality of individual members.

ELLAND, YORKSHIRE.—Savile Lodge, No. 1231.—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was holden on Thursday evening, the 11th inst., at the Royal Hotel. The officers of the lodge present were, Bros. This being the anniversary of the opening of this prosperous young lodge, after the minutes of the previous regular lodge meeting had been read and confirmed, and some correspondence read, the W.M. for ensuing year was elected by ballot; the list of qualified brethren contained eleven names, but the votes were all given to the two Wardens and W.M. having announced the number to be 10 votes for Bro. Francis Crossley, S.W., and 12 for Bro. Frederick Crossley, J.W., the latter esteemed brother was declared duly elected the representative of K.S. Bro. The lodge was then opened in the F.C. degree, and Bro. Joseph Law, a candidate for the degree of M.M. was examined, and being found worthy, was entrusted and retired. After the lodge had been opened in the M.M. degree, Bro. Law was admitted and raised to that sublime degree, the W.M. who was suffering from indisposition, being very ably assisted in the ceremony by Bro. John Armitage, P.M. 827 and 1231, and Bro. Allen, P.M. 142. The lodge was closed in the two higher degrees, and after a proposition of a gentleman for initiation had been brought forward, the lodge was closed finally in perfect harmony.

and cash accounts of the last convocation were read and confirmed. The ballot was taken for Bro. Mays of the Capper Lodge, 1076, for exaltation which proved unanimous in his favor, but business prevented his attendance. Bro. J. Young, of the Union Waterloo Lodge, No. 19, and Bro. Brown, of the Capper Lodge, No. 1076, were duly initiated in a very impressive manner by Comp. Bickerstaff. This being the meeting for electing the Principals and officers, the following were unanimously elected, viz.: Comps. Norman, M.E.Z.; Taffs, H.; Thomas, J.; Kirk, N.; R. E. Barnes, P.Z., re-elected E.; Henderson, P.Z. re-elected Treas.; Batstone, P.S., and Alison, was by show of hands re-elected Janitor. The chapter being closed the comps. adjourned to Comp. D. Grey's, the Freemasons' Tavern, and partook of an excellent banquet, and parted in harmony.

Chapter of Hope, No. 206.—This Chapter was held on Thursday week, at the Globe Tavern Greenwich. The several chairs were taken by Comps. H. A. Collington, Z.; S. Noble, P.Z. as H.; and James Moore, P.Z. as J. The reading and confirmation of the minutes were succeeded by the appointment of the meeting of the Audit Committee, which it was ascertained is held at the Globe, on the 11th of December. The Comps. elected for the year were, J. Hasler, Z.; W. Noak, H.; A. H. Tattershall, J.; W. Noak, Treas.; J. H. H. Doughney, S.E.; W. R. Orchard, S.N.; T. Perridge, P.S., and Johnson, Janitor. Comp. Noak stated that as he was Steward for this Chapter as well as for lodge 140, for the Benevolent Institution at its festival in January, he should like to have a contribution from this Chapter to his list. The M.E.Z. then gave notice that he would move at next meeting, that two guineas be taken from the Benevolent Fund of the Chapter, and placed on Comp. Noak's list. No other business being before the Comps., they after closing down, adjourned to an admirable banquet, supplied by Comp. Moore, and spent a delightful evening. Comps. Edington, Peckham, Smith and H. Massey, J. 619, were among the Comps who were present in Chapter, and at the banquet table.

Pannure Chapter, No. 720.—This prosperous Chapter held its ordinary quarterly meeting at the Horns Tavern, Kennington, on Monday the 8th instant, when were present, Companions H. C. Levander, M.A., M.E.Z., E. Worthington, H., Joseph Nunn, P.Z. as J., John Thomas, P.Z., P.G.D.C., William Watson, P.Z., James Stevens, P.Z., Scribe E., R. H. Harvey, Scribe N., Henry Smith, P.S., W. B. Church, 1st A.S., Dr. Cronin, 2nd A.S., also Companions Hammerton, Dr. Davison, Perrott, &c., &c. Amongst the visitors we noticed, Companion N. Gluckstein, of Colchester. The Chapter having been duly opened, Bro. G. H. N. Bridges and George Waterall, of the Macdonald Lodge, 1216, were balloted for as candidates for exaltation, and being unanimously approved were duly exalted into Royal Arch Masonry with complete ceremony, and in that able and perfect manner for which this Chapter is so justly celebrated. The M.E.Z. then addressed the Companions in reference to the position of the Chapter and its obligation to the four Past First Principals and Founders. He stated that in consequence of the self-denial and economy which had been practised by them, the Chapter now found itself, not only in full possession of its handsome furniture and appurtenances, but with every claim paid, and a good balance in hand. As each of the P.Z.'s had retired, the proffered Jewel had been firmly declined by him until the Chapter should be free from liability and in a good financial position. That position was now attained; he therefore had great pleasure in performing what he considered a duty, by proposing "That the sum of Sixteen Guineas be voted from the lodge funds for the purpose of providing a suitable P.Z. Jewel for each of the following Companions, viz., John Read, James Stevens, Joseph Nunn, and John Thomas, the four first Past Principals and founders of the Chapter." The M.E.Z.'s proposition was unanimously adopted, and the Chapter having been duly closed, the Companions adjourned for refreshment, and a pleasant evening was spent in social harmony and good fellowship.

THE EARL OF ZETLAND.

THE announcement that the Most Worshipful Grand Master of England intends to retire from the high office he now fills in the Craft is one which, though not unexpected, will excite the most sincere sentiments of regret throughout the vast Masonic Jurisdiction over which he has presided for so many years. We simply echo the feelings of every English Mason when we say that Lord Zetland has endeared himself to all our hearts, not only by his unswerving devotion to the high and holy principles of Freemasonry, but by the courtesy, the urbanity, and the dignity with which he has performed his duties as Grand Master of England. The post that his lordship occupies is one of the most lofty and honourable positions to which a man can aspire during his earthly career. We would rather be the ruler of a glorious fraternity of good and true men, than the monarch of many a European realm. We would rather reign, as the Earl of Zetland has reigned, in the "hearts and affections" of his brother Masons than exercise command over their "lives and fortunes." We would rather have the epitaph placed over our tomb that we had served our fellow-men, and advanced the interests of truth and virtue, than to have recorded there those titles of majesty and dominion which sit so sadly on the cold brow of death. Give us the affectionate remembrance of those whom we loved and cherished, give us a name like that of Bro. Thomas Dundas, a Nobleman in every sense of the word, a Mason in every signification of the name, a Man in the most exalted acceptation of the term. It is true that we have a right to expect in the Grand Master of the Mother Grand Lodge of the world, a knight like Bayard sans reproche; it is true that we rely implicitly on the honor, the integrity, and the zeal of the Brother who rules the Freemasons of England; and it is equally true that in our present Grand Master we have had one to whom we could point with pride, one whose consistency as a gentleman and a Freemason has never been questioned, and who will hand the sceptre of his office to his successor untarnished by a single stain.

The Earl of Zetland comes of a good Masonic stock, as we shall prove in a few words. His grandfather, the first Lord Dundas, was Deputy Grand Master under the Duke of Sussex in 1813, and his father, the first Earl of Zetland, afterwards filled the same post, and died, in 1839, Pro. Grand Master of England. Our Most Worshipful Brother was born on the 5th of February, 1795, and is consequently now in his seventy-fifth year. His Masonic career dates from the 18th June, 1830, when, as the "Honorable Thomas Dundas," he was initiated in the Prince of Wales Lodge, No. 259, in which lodge he eventually occupied the chair of Worshipful Master. His lordship was appointed Senior Grand Warden on the 25th of April, 1832; he succeeded the late Earl of Durham, as Deputy Grand Master, on the 24th of April, 1839, and followed the same lamented nobleman in the office of Pro. Grand Master in 1840; this high post he held at the death of H.R.H. the Duke of Sussex, in April 1843, when by the Constitutions of the Order, the Earl became the ruler of the English Craft until the next period of election, at which time, namely on the 6th of March, 1844, his lordship was elected Most Worshipful Grand Master, and was installed as such on the 24th of April following. In Royal Arch Masonry, Lord Zetland's career has been equally brilliant; he was exalted on the 1st June 1832, in the Prince of Wales Chapter, No. 259, and duly served in each of the principal chairs; he was appointed one of the Grand Sojourners in 1832; as Deputy Grand Master he became, ex officio, Second Grand Principal, and of course as Grand Master he was elevated to the dignity of Supreme Grand Z., in accordance with the Regulations of the Order. His lordship has also been Provincial Grand Master for the North and East Ridings of Yorkshire since 1835.

It now only remains to trace the progress of English Freemasonry under his benign sway. From seven hundred and sixteen lodges at the time of Lord Zetland's installation as Grand Master, we have increased to nearly thirteen hundred! From an estimated membership of twenty-seven thousand, we have increased, in England alone, to eighty-four thousand five hundred, and the increase in our Foreign and Colonial lodges is far greater in proportion. The immense Masonic constellation that now shines in the far Pacific Seas, has arisen in light and beauty during the period of our present Grand Master's rule. Remote and almost mythical corners of the globe have received the benefits of Freemasonry under his auspices. From Japan to Gibraltar, from the Gold Coast to the Himalayan mountains, through the ancient empire of Cathay, and the bleak regions of Newfoundland the blessings of our Friendly Craft have been spread through the fostering care of the Earl of Zetland. This is a result of which any man might be justly proud, and like his great predecessor Sir Christopher Wren, posterity will be able to say of our noble chief, "If you seek his monument, look around." The universe of civilization will bear his name, and the hearts of men will hymn his praises. It is therefore with pain that we shall witness the retirement of one who has for such a lengthened period filled the foremost place in the regard of his brethren; we shall miss the stately presence, and the suave dignity, which so fitly represented the innate nobility of the Masonic Institution.

In this brief notice, we shall say not one word of the future—it is all too feeble a tribute to a loved and venerated name—but as the accepted organ of the great English Craft, as the voice of many thousands of the household of faith, we tender to the Most Worshipful Grand Master, our unfeigned gratitude for his life-long devotion to the interests of the Order; for his recognition and support of those principles which are dear to the hearts of all Masons, and we cordially wish him, on his retirement from the active duties of Freemasonry, that repose and happiness which are ever the accompaniment of a conscience void of offence to all mankind.

Multum in Parbo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

"RES NON VERBA," "CIPES," AND THE TEMPLARS.

The society of Good Templars has quite as good a right to assume the name as the Masonic Templars, for the one had about as much to do with the old Knights Templar as the other; and the assertion that "The Scottish Templars claim to be the original Knights Templar, and have affiliated themselves to Freemasons merely in order to enjoy the protection afforded by law," is an imposition any way you like to take it.

FREEMASONRY AND THE MAIMED, ETC.

I may add to the observations of my friend Bro. D. M. Lyon, that according to the Grand Lodges of England and Ireland, "bastards," if otherwise eligible, may be initiated under their respective Constitutions; and as regards the "maimed," I have just been informed by a well-known Mason in Ireland that the M.W. the Grand Master, his Grace the Duke of Leinster, authorized the initiation of Mr. Kavanagh, the extraordinary M.P., and certainly, if worth and zeal are to be standards, the reception of such a worthy gentleman into our Order was honourable indeed.

RED CROSS OF ROME AND CONSTANTINE.

The following notes have been hastily compiled for the forthcoming new edition of the "Cyclopedia and Dictionary of Freemasonry," edited by my esteemed friend Bro. Robert Macoy, 33°, Past Deputy Grand Master of New York, &c., &c., and they may not prove uninteresting to some of your readers. I may add that I shall be glad to receive biographical sketches of eminent Masons, deceased or living, for insertion in Bro. Macoy's valuable work, which is a credit to Masonic literature.

R. W. LITTLE.

Conclave.—A regular assembly of Knights of the Order of Constantine (better known as the "Red Cross" Order) is thus designated, and the appellation is also applied in England to an assembly of Principals of Royal Arch Chapters when congregated for the purpose of installing Companions as Principals of the Order.

College.—The term applied to the meetings of the priestly order of Eusebius, or second grade in the Order of Constantine, which is styled a "College of Viceroys."

Constantine.—The first Christian emperor of Rome. He was a native of Britain, where his father, Constantius, commanded the Roman forces with the title of Cæsar, and upon the death of Constantius his soldiers unanimously proclaimed Constantine "imperator." The latter, however, had to contend against the power of Maxentius, who ruled in Italy, but after several sanguinary contests, the triumph of Constantine was decided at the battle of Saxa Rubra, which was fought on the 12th October, A.D. 312. A remarkable omen which appeared before the battle to Constantine and his army is thus referred to by the learned Dr. Oliver in his "Historical Landmarks":—"The Red Cross of Constantine commemorates the following circumstance, which is attested by Eusebius. The army of Constantine being on the march to meet the enemies of the Cross, it happened one evening, when the sun was declining and the Emperor was engaged in devotion, that there suddenly appeared a pillar of light in the heavens, like a cross, whereon was an inscription expressed in letters formed by a configuration of stars, TOYTONIKA—in this overcome. Constantine was not a little startled at this sight, and so was the whole army that beheld it. They looked upon it as an inauspicious omen, and even the Emperor himself was confounded. But at night our Lord appeared to him in a dream, with the cross in His hand, commanding him to make a royal standard like that which he had seen in the heavens, and cause it to be borne before him in his wars as an ensign of victory." Smith's "Classical Dictionary" further states that "The miracle of Constantine's conversion to Christianity was commemorated by the imperial standard of the labarum, at the summit of which was the monogram of the name of Christ." It is also alleged that the Emperor was so pleased with the valour of the Christian legion of his army on the day of victory, that he formed them into an equestrian order, or chosen body-guard of cavalry, and the traditions associated with these events are preserved and recorded in a chivalric fraternity which has existed for many years, and now exists, under the title of "Knights of the Red Cross of Constantine."

Generals, Senior and Junior.—The titles of the third and fourth officers in a Conclave of Knights of the Red Cross. Their duties are chiefly symbolic, and refer to the ancient military character of the organization.

Herald.—The tenth in rank among the officers of a Red Cross Conclave. As his name implies, this officer heralds the approach of all who seek admission, and proclaims the installation of the newly-installed Knights of the Order.

High Prelate.—The fifth officer of a Red Cross Conclave; his duty is sufficiently expressed by the title of his office.

Imperial Council, Grand.—The governing body of the Red Cross, composed of thirteen members, supposed to be in commemoration of Christ and the twelve apostles.

Prefect.—The eighth officer of a Conclave of Red Cross Knights. His duties are similar to those of a Senior Deacon in Craft lodges.

Recorder.—The seventh officer of a Red Cross Conclave is thus designated. He corresponds to the Secretary of a symbolic lodge.

Senate.—The meetings of Sovereigns of the Order of Constantine are called Senates.

Sentinel.—The title given to the Tyler or Janitor of a Conclave in the Red Cross Order.

Sovereign.—The designation of the presiding officer in a Rose Croix Chapter or a Red Cross Conclave. In the former he is styled "Most Wise," and in the latter "Most Puissant." Constantine, Sovereign of the East and West, is represented by the last-named officer.

Standard-bearer.—The ninth officer of a Red Cross Conclave. The charge of the imperial standard is confided to this officer, under the supervision of the Generals.

Viceroy Eusebius.—The second officer of a Red Cross Conclave. This dignitary represents Eusebius, bishop of Nicomedia, who was entrusted by Constantine with the command of his body-guard of Christian Knights. He afterwards wrote the life of the Emperor, and is well known as an eminent ecclesiastical writer.

ST. GEORGE'S LODGE OF INSTRUCTION, No. 140, meets every Thursday, at eight p.m., at Bro. Moore's, Globe, Royal Hill, Greenwich. It is the oldest of all the Lodges of Instruction in the district, and has the good fortune to have many experienced local Freemasons among its members.

If Christianity be not responsible for the misconduct of its professors, neither can Masonry.

TRUE POLITENESS.—True politeness is the offspring of Brotherly Love, all other is but ceremonial and superficial, conventional and shallow.

RELIGION AND POLITICS.—A Mason's religion is the faithful worship of God; his politics, a strict obedience to the laws of the country in which he resides.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—Grateful and Comforting.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"The singular success which Mr. Epps attained by his homœopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold by the Trade only, in $\frac{1}{2}$ lb., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. and 1 lb. tin-lined packets, labelled JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London.—ADV'T.

NOTABLE ROSICRUCIAN WORKS.

BY WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

The Rosicrucian's Divine Light or a Synopsis of Physicks: by J. A. Comenius. Exposed to the censure of those that are lovers of Learning, and desire to be taught of God: "Being a view of the world in general, and of the particular creatures therein contained; grounded upon Scripture principles. With a brief appendix touching the diseases of the body, mind, and soul; with their general remedies: by the same author. London: Printed by Robert and William Leybourn, for Thomas Pierrepont, at the Sun in Paul's Churchyard. MDCLI."

The preface is addressed "To the truly studious of wisdom, from Christ the fountain of wisdom greeting," and as it accords with the other works of the class, it is the most important and interesting part of the book. In it, one sees clearly revealed the mind of the writer, and the objects of the author appear on the surface, whereas in the synopsis itself, the real views of Comenius are veiled behind a cloud of obscure and peculiar supposed laws of nature. The preface commences with a short dissertation on book-making, in which it is stated that few writers are the authors of the works which bear their names, for "few being anything of their own, but only steal things and words, of which they make books." The author of the synopsis claims not to belong to such a class, but on the contrary claims to have introduced "something new, and different from the common way of philosophic; and I bring it so, as that I hope, it will be without any one's hindrance or molestation, as containing in a very few leaves, matters of very great moment." The following will be found the chief points in Comenius' philosophy. It is usual for God in his wisdom to communicate light by degrees. The order in which Comenius perceived the truth and from gradually having his mind enlightened by the effect of several sparks, until this had become a torch by which the great secrets of nature and very obscure parts of Scripture were made plain, was thus:—

"1. That the only true genuine and plain way of Philosophie is to fetch all things from sense, reason and scripture.

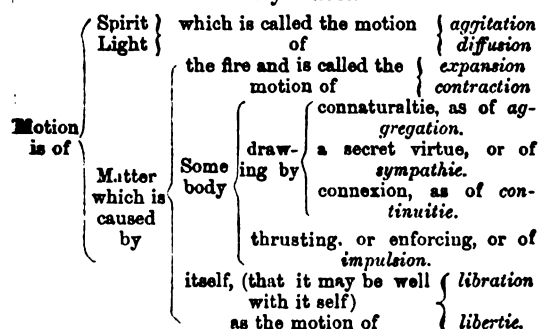

2. That the peripatetic philosophic is not only defective in many parts, and many ways intricate, full of turnings and windings, and partly also erroneous, so that it is not only unprofitable for Christians, but also (without correction and perfection) hurtful.

3. That philosophic may be reformed and perfected, by a harmonical reduction of all things that are and are made, to sense reason and Scripture, with so much evidence and certainty (in all such things as are of most concernment, and have any necessity) that any mortall man seeing may see, and feeling may feel, the truth scattered everywhere."

These divisions Comenius proceeds to explain most fully, according to the light he was blessed with. The Paptists on transubstantiation come in for a share of the writer's sarcasm, and all those who refuse to accept the harmonious evidence of reason, sense and Scripture. He ridicules the fear of investigation, arguing that the Scripture frequently invites us to hear, see, taste and consider, and he that believes, must know what is fit to be believed. An elaborate investigation follows of the claims of revelation and its agreement with reason and common sense. "Philosophy is lame without divine revelation. A truer way of Philosophie may be set out, by the guidance of God, the Light of Reason, and the Testimonies of sense, if Philosophers would labour more after God and the Truth, then after Aristotle and Opinions." So proceeds the preface, which concludes with a fervent prayer for more light. It is dated March 12th, 1650.

It must be beyond the scope of the "Rosicrucian" to give the full synopsis by Comenius occupying as it does some 256 pages. Some of the propositions are certainly most startling and have been exploded, while others have survived the testing crucible of centuries and still lives, being founded on eternal truth. We will, however, just glance at the most prominent doctrines advocated by Comenius. The author takes Genesis as the basis for accounting for the existence of the world and its inhabitants, and that the "analogue of our faith teacheth us to believe that the production of the matter out of nothing is a work of God's omnipotence and is attributed to the Father; that the production of light (by which the world received splendour and order) is a work of wisdom attributed to the Son, and, lastly, the virtue infused into the creatures is a work of His goodness, which is attributed to the Holy Ghost."

Of the substantial qualities, sulphur, salt, and mercury, these flow immediately from the combination of the first principles.

The following is his definition of the created world: "It is a meer harmony, all things by one, all things to one; the highest and the lowest, the first and the last, most straightly cleaving together, being concatenated, by the intermediate things, and perpetually ties, and mutual actions and passions inevitable, so that the world being made up of a thousand thousand parts, and particles of parts, is nevertheless one, and undivided in itself; even as God the creatour thereof, is one from eternity to eternity, nor ever was there, is there, or shall there, be any other God."

GRAND LODGE.

QUARTERLY BOARD OF MASTERS.

THE usual Quarterly Board was held on Wednesday evening. There was a large attendance of brethren, and the following notices of Motion for the consideration of the next Grand Lodge were renewed:—

By Bro. JOSHUA NUNN, G.S.B.

"That provided the Resolution, proposed by the Committee on the Fund of Benevolence, to replace the last paragraph of No. 6 Fund of Benevolence (in the Book of Constitutions), be passed by Grand Lodge."

To move—

"That the form of the Certificate required to be sent to the Lodge of Benevolence with all petitions (and to be signed by the visitor, a member of the Lodge, or some other brother) be referred back to the said Committee on the Fund of Benevolence for details and adjustment."

By Bro. JOHN UDALL, P.G.D.

"That the sum of £50 be given from the Fund of General Purposes. That the money be placed in the hands of the Secretary of the Asylum of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and the Widows of Freemasons, to supply the inmates at Croydon with coals during the winter season."

A notice was given by Bro. R. W. Stewart, P.M., No. 12, to suspend the issue of free votes given to lodges and chapters in respect of the grants from Grand Lodge and Grand Chapter, to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution.

Several notices were also given as to limiting the duration of the reign of future G. Masters to 3, 5 and 7 years, except in the case of a Prince of the blood royal.

A notice was also given by Bro. Stevens, P.M., No. 720, for the purpose of considering the practicability of assimilating the various systems of workings.

THE LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

The usual meeting of the Lodge of Benevolence was held on Wednesday evening, W. Bro. John Newton Tomkins, P.G.D., in the chair; W. Bro. W. Ough, G.P., S.W.; James Brett, A.G.P., J.W.; J. Hervey, G.S.; Col. Burdett, P.G.W., and G. Rep. from G. Lodge, Ireland; J. Udall, P.G.D.; John Savage, P.G.D.; J. M. Clabon, P.G.D.; Jabez Hogg, P.G.D.; H. Browse, P.G.D.; J. Nunn, G.S.B.; Joseph Smith, P.G.P., and between forty and fifty Masters and P. Masters of various lodges. The unprecedented large number of thirty-three Petitions were considered, and twenty-eight Petitioners were relieved to the extent of £506 10s., five of which being recommendations to Grand Lodge; four cases were deferred, and one dismissed.

CHESHIRE EDUCATIONAL MASONIC INSTITUTION.

The fifth annual amateur dramatic performance in aid of the funds of this excellent institution took place last evening, in the Theatre Royal, Birkenhead. The performance was under the patronage of Lord de Tabley, R.W. Prov. Grand Master, Cheshire, and a number of other noblemen and gentlemen belonging to the county. It may be stated that the trustees of the institution are Bros. Lord de Tabley, Lord Combermere, Capt. H. A. Bennet, E. G. Willoughby, Joseph Brattan, and Edward Samuelson.

The object of the institution is to impart a good sound education to the children of deceased Masons who have not left behind sufficient means for that purpose. The children are sent to different schools, and although the institution has only been five years in existence a considerable number have already received the advantage of an excellent educational training. At present there are 15 juveniles under instruction. The amateur performance on behalf of the funds of the institution has been every year exceedingly well supported, and last evening the theatre was crowded in every part, the audience including the élite of Birkenhead and the neighbourhood.

Amongst those present were the Hon. Sir Edward Cust, Mr. W. Laird, Mr. S. Ledward, Lieut.-Col. King, Mr. R. R. Bryans, Major Gaskell, Mr. C. J. Preston, Mr. M. Moccatta, Captain Hornblower, Mr. R. Galloway, T. S. Eddowes, &c.

The performance commenced with the popular drama by T. and J. M. Morton, entitled "All that Glitters is not Gold." The female characters were admirably sustained by professionals from the Alexandra and the Prince of Wales theatres, in this town. Bro. W. J. Hammond, played "Frederick Plum," and Bro. R. T. Parkinson, appeared as "Stephen Plum." The piece, on the whole, was very creditably performed, and at the close the players were enthusiastically applauded. The performance concluded with Charles Selby's celebrated romantic drama, "Robert Macaire, or the Auberge des Adrets." The several characters in this piece were also exceedingly well represented, and the audience expressed their satisfaction with the efforts of the amateurs by frequent bursts of applause.

The costumes were supplied by Mr. Henry Jeffries, and the stage director was Bro. John Chester, of the Prince of Wales Theatre, in this town. The success of the evening's performance in aid of a very worthy object is greatly to be attributed to the following brethren of the Masonic order, who took an active part in the arrangements, namely, Bros. H. Oliver Jones and Walter Theobalds, Honorary Secretaries; Bro. J. P. Platt, Treasurer; and Bros. J. Higsou Johnston, Thomas Leighton, Walter Theobalds, Edward Harbord, John Griffiths, William Smith, C. P. Nosworthy, Joseph Sillitoe, Captain John Jones, and Robert Davis, who officiated as Stewards.

The result will be a handsome addition to the funds of the institution.—Liverpool Mercury, November 16th.

LORD ZETLAND AND THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

Although the intercourse between the Grand Lodge of England and the Grand Orient of France has for many years been confined to an interchange of official publications, there has never been a want of cordial feeling. This has, however, been more openly manifested in a very gratifying manner on a recent occasion. The election of our M.W. Bro. the Earl of Zetland, for the 26th time as M.W.G.M., was naturally calculated to produce a strong impression in the Masonic world, and in the sentiment of friendly acceptance the M.W.G.M. of France, General Mellinet deeply shared. He accordingly wrote a very warm letter of congratulation to the Earl of Zetland, which was despatched by a brother of high rank under the French Jurisdiction. The reply of the Earl of Zetland, breathing the most cordial sentiments, and written by his own hand in the French language, in terms which equally attested his scholarship and his courtesy, has been received with the warmest admiration by General Mellinet, and has produced a very great effect on the high dignitaries of France.

There was a very large attendance of the brethren present on the occasion.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Glasgow was well represented, this being the first turn out, under their new Master; present, Walter Montgomery Neilson, P.G.M.; F. A. Barrow, D.P.G.M.; James Steele, S.P.G.M.; Rev. G. S. Burns, P.G. Chaplain; James Wallace, P.G. S.D.; James Leith, P.G.D.C.; James Gillies, P.G.S.B.; James Balfour, P.G.I.G.; Arch. McTaggart, R.W.M. The Lodge Glasgow was represented by the following office-bearers:—Bros. Matthew Wilson, R.W.M.; Arch. McFarlane, S.W.; William Hutchison, J.W.; A. King, Sec.; Neil Boyle, Treasurer; J. Muirhead, S.D.; Wm. Cuzen, J.D.; A. Arrick Smith, Director of Music; and others.

Deputations were present from the following lodges:—No. 116, Bros. Wm. Kirkwood, R.W.M.; 128, J. Reid, R.W.M.; 275, William Philips, R.W.M.; 362, Jno. Anderson, R.W.M.; 413, Jno. Miller R.W.M.; and 466, James Moir Cousin, R.W.M. The ceremony of consecration was ably conducted by Bro. W.M. Neilson, P.G. Master, and in the course of the proceedings an eloquent oration was spoken by Bro. Burns, the P.G. Chaplain. After the usual elements of consecration had been passed, and the benedictions given and responded too, the proceedings were closed with solemn prayer.

A refreshment lodge was then opened, and the brethren drank to the following toasts:—"The Queen and the Craft," "The Prince of Wales," "The Grand Lodge of Scotland, and Provincial Grand Lodge of Glasgow," "Grand Lodges of England and Ireland," "The Clergy," "Masonic Charities," "Visiting Brethren," "Freemasonry over the world," "Prosperity to the Lodge Glasgow," &c. After spending a very happy evening, as only brethren of the mystic tie know how to enjoy themselves, the gavel was resumed in the West and the lodge closed. We believe this is the finest Masonic Hall in the province, having been carefully adapted for the purpose. The general work was under the watchful eye of Bro. Neil Boyle, the decorations by Bro. Cunningham, the upholstery by Bros. Campbell and Currie, the gas fittings by Bro. Wilson. We hail success to the Glasgow 441; like its motto, "Let it flourish."

"CIPES" AND "RES NON VERBA."

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

RESPECTED FRIEND AND BROTHER.—As "Cipes," while attempting to answer my last letter has introduced a number of unseemingly and un-Masonic personalities irrelevant to the subject into his letter, I beg to decline any further consideration of the subject with such an ungentlemanly opponent.

I might have expected such treatment after the style in which he previously alluded to David Murray Lyon, the Historian of Scottish Freemasonry, but I was led to hope that the remarks subsequently made would have taught him better manners.

One thing is certain—to attempt to show the illegality of Odd Fellows', Rechabites', Foresters', Good Templars' and other Friendly Societies, will never do any harm to these bodies, and will only recoil on the writers of such articles as "Cipes."

RES NON VERBA.

ITINERANT MASONIC BEGGARS.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR AND BROTHER.—I desire to draw the particular and serious attention of the Craft generally, through the medium of THE FREEMASON, to the method adopted by the lodge of which I for some years past have been Treasurer, in dealing with men calling themselves Freemasons, who wander about the country soliciting relief with extraordinary plausible statements, generally alleging that they are in search of employment, and that they come from long distances, poor and penniless.

On such brethren calling upon the W.M. or any of the brethren of our lodge, they are directed to call upon me as the Treasurer, and I thereupon demand their G.L. certificate, and afterwards put them through a severe examination, with a view not merely of proving them to be Freemasons, but also of endeavouring to discover whether they are really poor, and bona fide in search of employment, and deserving relief; or are impostors upon society.

I am sorry to say that in many instances, I have on careful examination, found their statements questionable, ambiguous, and far from satisfactory to me, and have been led to the conclusion that they were impostors, roaming about from town to town and extorting money from worthy brethren by untruthful statements, contrary to the cardinal principles of Freemasonry, and in opposition to the laws of our land; consequently in exercise of the discretion vested in me, by virtue of my office, I have declined to relieve them.

I should, indeed, be deeply sorry to withhold assistance from genuine brethren in distress, but from experience which I have gathered, I very strongly recommend the general adoption of a similar course by every lodge throughout the kingdom, which would most assuredly check the system thus carried on by unworthy men (many of whom possess the blessings of health and ability) imposing on and disgracing the Craft, and would very materially curtail the number of itinerant brethren addicted to a disgraceful begging and imposing practice.

If my suggestions are worthy of publication, and Treasurers or other Brethren appointed by the lodges for the purpose before alluded to, will take pains to remedy and endeavour to put an end to a practice so injurious to real charity, my object will be attained.

Yours fraternally,

J. A. K.

THE writers of clandestine works upon Masonry have overlooked the important fact that that which makes a man a Mason can never be written even though that which enables Masons to communicate might be. These expositions then, at the best, could only be useful to hypocrites. But the truth is they fail to serve even them; for no imposter by their aid ever did or ever can impose himself upon a Mason or a lodge.

In an enumeration of the various mysteries of "human nature" by the celebrated Sam Slick, the following humorous description of that incomprehensible one styled a kiss, is wonderfully Masonic: "A kiss is a great mystery. It is not a thing that can ever be forgot. No language can express it, no letters will give the sound. Imagination can't conceive it. It can't be imitated, or forged. It is confined to no clime or country, but is ubiquitous. It is disembodied when completed, but is instantly reproduced and is immortal. It is as old as the creation, and yet it is as young and as fresh as ever. It pre-existed, still exists, and always will exist. It pervades all natur. The breeze, as it passes, kisses the rose, and the pendant vine stoops down and hides with its tendrils its blushes as it kisses the limpid stream that waits in an eddy to meet it, and raises its tiny waves like anxious lips to receive it. I shall always maintain to my dying day that kissing is a great mystery." Well done, Brother Slick! you'll do for Adoptive Masonry.

RETIREMENT OF THE M.W. GRAND MASTER.

A meeting of the leading brethren of the Craft was held on Friday, the 12th inst., at Freemasons' Hall, when it was announced that the Earl of Zetland declined being placed in nomination for the office of Grand Master at the next Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge, and it was unanimously resolved to support the claims of the D.G.M. Earl de Grey and Ripon, to succeed the present Grand Master. It was also understood that the Prince of Wales, from motives which do him honor, declined being a candidate. In future the chair of Grand Lodge will not, we believe, be held by the same brother for more than three consecutive years.

ANCIENT AND MODERN MYSTERIES.

BY BRO. ROBERT WENTWORTH LITTLE,

President of the London Literary Union, Editor of "The Rosicrucian," &c.

The ceremonies of the ancient Druids possess for English Masons an interest which is enhanced by the fact that their chief seat was in Britain. I have therefore consulted various authorities—such as Godfrey Higgins, and Russel—in order to afford in a brief compass as much information as possible, upon a subject which bears an undefined relationship to some of the observances of Freemasonry.

The Druids were divided into three classes, viz.: Druids, properly so called; Bards, or Sacred Poets; and Eubates, or Vates, who possessed the magic powers of divination or prophecy, from whence we derive the word "vaticination." The first class regulated all public transactions, both secular and ecclesiastical, and were under the direction of a chief elected by themselves, who was denominated the "Arch-Druid." This dignitary possessed plenary power over the princes and the people, and held the scales of life and death in his hands. The second class presided over the education of the children of both sexes, and also, as their name implies, commemorated the deeds of their warriors and kings in spirit-stirring verse. The slaughter of the Welsh bards by Edward I. is a proof of the dread entertained of the power of music even in that comparatively modern period. The third class not only dealt in augury and magic, but practised the more useful art of physic, and in this manner the various grades of Druidism secured their hold upon the minds of the unenlightened mass of the people. Their religious ceremonies were performed chiefly in groves, and the oak was especially regarded by them with veneration, and the mistletoe—which entwines itself round the branches of that kindly tree—also came in for a share of their reverence. Their philosophy in some respects was admirable, but unfortunately it became debased by an admixture of superstitious rites and idolatrous ceremonies. The barbarous custom of offering human sacrifices to the Deity in propitiation of His supposed wrath was enjoined by their precepts, as we find in the following curious verses quoted by Russel:—

"Prisoners of war are doomed by fate to die,
Then sacrifice them to some deity;
Upon the altars let them soon expire,
Or, closed in wicker, feed the sacred fire."

On the other hand, they taught the sublime doctrine of the immortality of the soul, as is evidenced by the same metrical version of their tenets—

"Let no mean thoughts of dissolution fright,
Or damp your spirits with the dews of night:
The soul's immortal, and can never die;
Then death and all his dreadful train defy.
Another world is ready to receive
Immortal souls that earthly bodies leave;
To dust the perishable parts return,
But at the grave eternal spirits spurn.
And if in virtue's paths they trod below,
In heavenly mansions 'tis their fate to glow;
But, if by vice enslaved, their doom's to roam
Without a heavenly or an earthly home."

The island of Anglesey, then called Mona, was the most sacred retreat of the Druids: it was there they established the principal seminary, at which the youthful princes and nobles received instruction in all the branches of education then known. It is believed by antiquarians that Stonehenge was one of the principal temples of this singular and mysterious race, and other parts of Great Britain contain ruins which are unquestionably Druidical remains. The precise nature of their mysteries can only be guessed by analogy to other ancient religious rites, as no authentic records have been handed down to posterity. A general resemblance, however, pervades the occult practices of idolaters in every age, and those of the Druids are no exception to the rule.

THE ROSICRUCIAN.

A Tale of Cologne.

(Re-printed from the Dublin University Magazine.)

I.—THE FIRE.

I know not if men would say that the face of Basil Wolgemuth was beautiful. There were no darkly-gleaming eyes, no sculptured features, no clustering raven locks; all was fair, and clear, and sunny, as his own soul. And what a beautiful and noble soul was that! It lighted up his whole countenance, as the sun lights up a fair landscape—making that which would else have been ordinary, most lovely. It was mirrored in his eyes, as you may see the moon and stars looking out from the depths of a clear lake. It shone in his every gesture; it made music in his voice; it accompanied him like a fair presence, giving life, and love, and beauty wherever he moved.

He sat in a low-roofed, half-darkened chamber, whose gloomy recesses looked strange, almost fearful. Now and then passing sounds of human voices rose up from the street below, and ever and anon the great bell of Cologne Cathedral boomed out the hours, making the after silence deeper still. The student—for such he evidently was—leaned his slight and rather diminutive form in the attitude of one wearied and exhausted; but there was no lassitude visible in his expressive face, and his eyes were fixed with a dreamy and thoughtful gaze on the blazing faggots that roared and sparkled on the hearth before him.

The Fire was his sole companion, and it was good company, in sooth. Not mute either—for it seemed to talk like a human voice. How the live juices hissed out when the damp pine-wood caught the blaze, and chattered and muttered like a vexed child! How furiously it struggled and roared, as the flames grew stronger! How it sank into a low complaining sound, and then into a dead stillness, being conquered by the fierce element at last, and breathing its life out in a ruddy but silent glow. Such was the voice of the Fire; but the student beheld its form, too. Quaint and mysterious-looking were the long fiery alleys, and the red caverns which it made; mingled with dark recesses, out of which mocking faces seemed to peep; and the light flames waving to and fro were like aerial shapes in a fantastic dance. Beautiful and mystic also appeared the Fire.

Basil Wolgemuth was a student and a dreamer. He had pierced into the secrets of nature and of philosophy, not as an idle seeker, mechanically following the bent of a vague curiosity, but as an enthusiastic lover, who would fathom the depths of his beloved's soul. He knew that in this world all things bear two meanings; one for the common observer, one for the higher mind of him who with an earnest purpose for his guide, and a steadfast, but loving heart for his lamp by the way, penetrates into those mines of hidden riches—the treasures of science and of imagination. Basil was still young; and yet men of learning and power listened with deference to his words; wisdom, rank, and beauty had trodden that poor chamber, and felt not degraded, but honored—for it was the temple of mind, the habitation of genius.

And was all this sunshine of fame, all this dawning glory, lavished upon a barren tree, which brought forth, at best, only the dazzling fruits of mere intellect, beautiful to the eye, but deceptive to the heart, as the jewelled apples of Aladdin; or was it rich in all good fruits of human kindness? Ask the mother, to whom the very footsteps of her dutiful son brought light and gladness; ask the sister, whose pride in her noble brother was even less than her love for the gentle and forbearing spirit which made the sunshine of their home. These would speak for Basil, and there was one—one more; but he knew it not then.

The fire sank down to a few embers, and through the small widow at the further end of the apartment, the young moon looked with her quiet smile. At last the door was half-opened, and a sweet girlish face peeped in.

"Are you sleeping, Basil, or only thinking?"

"Is that you, Margareta?" said the student, without changing his musing attitude.

"Yes—it is growing late, brother; will you not come to supper?"

"I do not need it, dear Margareta, thank you."

"But we want you, Basil; my mother is asking for you, and Isilda, too, is here."

A bright smile passed over the young man's face; but his sister did not see it, and continued,

"Come, brother—do come; you have studied enough for to-day."

He rose up cheerfully. "Well, then, tell my mother I will come directly."

Margareta closed the door, and Basil stood thoughtfully by the fire. At that moment a bright flame springing up from some stray brand yet unkindled, illumined his face—it was radiant with the light of love. His finely curved lips, the sole beautiful feature there, were trembling with a happy smile, as they murmured in low tones one beloved name—"Isilda, Isilda!"

II.—THE STUDENT'S HOME.

Let us glance at the home of Basil Wolgemuth. It was a German habitation of the middle ages; a comfortable, but not luxurious, dwelling, such an one as we see in old German pictures. In homes like this was nurtured the genius of Rembrandt, of Rubens, of Vandyck; from such a peaceful German home sprang the fiery spirit and indomitable zeal of Luther; and in like home-nests were cradled the early years of most of the rude but noble men, who either by the sword or the pen, have made their names famous throughout the fair land of the Rhine.

Basil, his mother, Margareta, and another young girl, sat round a table, spread with the ample fare of bread and fruits. The mother was worthy of such a son—a matron of placid but noble aspect; like him, too, in the deep clear eyes and open forehead. Margareta, a sweet bud, which only needed time to burst forth into a perfect flower, sat by her brother's side; the fourth of the group was Isilda.

I hardly know how to describe Isilda. There is one face only I have seen which pictures her to my idea; it is a Madonna of Guido Reni's. Once beheld, that face imprints itself for ever on the heart. It is the embodiment of a soul so pure, so angelic, that it might have been Eve's when she was still in Eden; yet there is in the eyes that shadow of woman's intense love; the handmaid of which is ever sorrow; and those deep blue orbs seem thoughtfully looking into the dim future with a vague sadness, as if conscious that the peace of the present would not endure. Womanly sweetness, feelings suppressed, not slumbering, a soul attuned to high thoughts like a well-strung lyre, and only needing a breath to awaken its harmonious chords—all these are visible in that face which shone into the painter's heart, and has lived for ever in the work of his hand. And such was Isilda.

Basil sat opposite to her; he looked into her sweet eyes; he drank in the beauty of her smile, and was happy. All traces of the care-worn student had vanished; he was cheerful even to gaiety; laughed and jested with his sister; bade her sing old ditties, and even joined in the strain, which made them all more mirthful still. Basil had little music in his voice, but much in his heart. When the songs ceased, Margareta prayed him to repeat some old ballad, he knew so many. The student looked towards Isilda; her eyes had more persuasive eloquence than even his sister's words, and he began—

"COUNT LUDWIG AND THE WOOD-SPRIT.

"Count Ludwig rode through the forest deep,
And he trilled a lightsome song,
And thought of his lady-love's sweet soft eyes,
That would smile his welcome ere long.

"Now whither ridest so fast, sir knight,
On the back of thy good grey steed,
And wherefore dost carol so gay, good knight,
Nor the stranger biddest good speed?"

"Is it the echo, or is it the wind
In the boughs that whispers thus?
No! beside him there standeth a woman fair,
With tresses gold-luminous.

"Her robe is the hue of the forest leaves,
Her eyes like the sky above;
Her voice rings sweet, as in maiden's ears,
The whisper of early love.

"Gaily the young count laughed and bent
In courtesy frank and free—
'Good sooth, I know not, ladye, I rode
In such fair company.'

"He throws the rein on his courser's neck,
And leaps to the grassy dell;
Has he forgotten his ladye waits,
For his coming she loveth well?"

"He has drank strange poison from those wild eyes,
He is lured by that angel air,
And far through the forest's mazes dim,
He follows the damsel fair.

"She bound him fast with unholy spells,
And bore to her magic cell;
Three months, as it seemed, in those forest bowers
Did the night and the wood-nymph dwell.

"She has charmed all memories of earth away,
(As she deems) with her beauty's power,
And fearless leads him beyond the bounds
Of the spell enwoven-bower.

"He hears the sound of a vesper bell,
And the mists from his spirit roll,
And the long-forgotten joys of earth
Rush o'er his enfranchised soul.

"I must go, I must go, for my loved one waits—Aroint thee, fell witch," he cried;
"Oh, erring heart! to be lured away
From my own troth-plighted bride."

"Wild lightnings flash from her calm blue eyes,
And her face grows foul to see:
When thou hailest thy bride, at the altar's foot,
Kiss her as I kiss thee."

"Pending, she kisses Count Ludwig's brow,
And he starts with the burning pain;
He turns—she is gone! and in fear and haste
He seeks the known path again.

"It was broad noon-day when he left the track,
Now the shadows of eve grow dim;
And, O wonder! his steed by the wayside stands,
And patient awaiteth him.

"He rides like the wind, nor looks behind,
And the past seems like a dream,
As he sees his lady-love's castle-towers
Afar in the moonlight gleam.

"Count Ludwig sits at his ladye's feet,
And looks in her eyes so fair;
And feels the light touch of her soft white hand,
As it wanders amidst his hair.

"Now, what is this?" cried the maid in fear;
'What meaneth this blood-red ring?
Thou hadst no such signet upon thy brow
When last thou went'st journeying.'

"A shade passed over the young knight's face—
'Tis nothing sweet love,' he cried;
'A troubled dream I would fain forget,
When again by thy dear side.'

"He calmed her fears with his tender words,
And the maiden smiled again;
Nor over the sunshine of their love
Frowned one dark shadow of pain.

"Bold knights, proud nobles, and ladies bright,
Are thronging the chapel aisles;
And the fair bride stands, rich in happy love,
With her changeful tears and smiles.

"The rites are o'er, and Count Ludwig turns Unto her, now for ever his;
With heart full of joy, on her fairest brow
He presses a husband's kiss.

"One cry of wild agony—one look
In his face of love untold;
And the young bride lies at the bridegroom's feet,
Death-stricken, pale, and cold.

"A mark is on the pure forehead laid,
A ring of crimson stain;
Count Ludwig saw, and with maniac shriek,
He fled from the holy fane.

"They wept o'er the bride of a moment, dead
Through him who her life had been:
But never more on the face of earth,
Was the sinful bridegroom seen."

The student ceased; and there was a deep silence. Basil's young sister glanced round, almost fearfully. Isilda moved not; but as the clear tones of Basil's voice ended, one deep-drawn sigh was heard, as if it were the unconscious relief of a full heart.

"You have chosen a gloomy story, Basil," said the mother at last. Her voice broke the spell; and Margareta added, with the earnest feeling of youth—

"I do not pity that false-hearted knight; his was a just punishment for a heavy sin: but for the poor bride to die thus in her youth and happiness—oh, it was very sad."

"Not so," said Isilda, and she spoke in a low dreamy tone, as if half to herself. "It was not sad, even to be slain by him she loved, since she died in his arms, having known that he loved her. It was a happy fate—not mournful!"

There was such an expression of intense feeling in the girl's face as she spoke, that Margareta looked at her in wondering silence; but Basil gave an involuntary start, as if a new light had broken in upon his mind, and the living crimson rushed immediately over Isilda's face and neck; she seemed shrinking into the earth for shame, and said no more. Basil, too, kept silence. No marvel was it in the timid girl who rarely gave utterance to her thoughts, but that he whose heart was so full of poetry, whose lips were ever brimming over with eloquence, should be dumb—it was passing strange! The student felt as if though there was a finger laid on his lips, an unseen presence compelling him to silence; but the finger and the presence were those of the angel of love.

Angel of love! invisible, mysterious shadow, that encompasseth the whole world—that walketh over the hearts of men, ruling them at thy will, making them bud and bring forth flowers of joy and goodness, or changing, as thou passest, the fair garden into a wilderness! Angel of love, who shall speak of thee? Silent and swift as the lightning, or stealing in by slow degrees, bringing light and leaving darkness, finding gloom and creating sunshine; with footsteps invisible as the wind, of which none can tell "whence it cometh and whither it goeth," who may define thee, Angel of Love? We see thee not, we comprehend thee not; we can only bow our hearts at thy presence, and feel.

There was a constraint visible in all but Margareta; she, too young to understand what was passing in the hearts of the two she loved so much, began to sport with her friend.

"Well! I should not envy Count Ludwig's bride, though you do, Isilda; I would much rather live."

Isilda smiled; and, just at the moment, a voice was heard in an inner apartment.

"It is poor grandfather," cried the blithe maiden, starting up; "I must go to him—he has been left a long time alone." And she vanished with the swiftness of a young fawn. The mother followed her with her eyes.

"A sunny and loving heart is thine, my child!" she murmured. "God bless thee, and keep all care from that gay spirit!" And Madame Wolgemuth leaned back in her chair, closing her eyes. The mother's heart seemed absorbed in the past, or else dreaming of her child's future.

But, by the two thus left together, past and future were alike unregarded. With Basil and Isilda it was all the present—the blissful present, fraught with strange and new feelings, full of hope and love. They talked but little, and in broken sentences, flitting from subject to subject, lest each should lead to the unveiling of the delicious secret that was uppermost in both their hearts, and which they at once feared, yet longed to utter. At last the lamp grew dim, and the moonlight streamed in through the narrow window. Isilda noticed and spoke of it—it was a relief.

"How lovely the moon looks, setting behind the cathedral," she said; and rising, walked to the window. It might be she was glad to escape from the passionate tenderness of Basil's gaze, as he sat facing her.

The young student followed her, moving noiselessly, for his aged mother had fallen asleep through weariness. And now the two stood together, silent, alone with their own hearts, looking up to the quiet starlit sky, and drinking in love, pure, and deep, and boundless as that heaven itself.

"How beautiful is this world! how happy!" murmured the girl.

"I feel it so; and most when thus with thee, Isilda," answered Basil; and with what unspeakable sweetness and tenderness the name lingered on his lips! "Isilda—my Isilda!"

There was a moment of tremulous silence, and then the girl felt herself drawn closer, until her head rested on his bosom, and she heard his voice whispering in her ear—

"May I call the my Isilda? all mine—mine only—mine for ever!"

She raised her head and looked timidly but searchingly in his countenance.

"Is it, indeed, true—dost thou then love me?"

"As my own soul!" passionately answered the student.

Isilda hid her face again in his bosom, and burst into a shower of tears.

The girl and her lover went home together that night, through the cold clear starlight, to Isilda's abode. Many and many a time had they trod the same path, but now everything was changed. They had become all in all to each other—an infinity of love was around them—all was light, hope, and trembling gladness. The crisp snow crackled under Isilda's feet, and the sharp frosty air made her slight form shiver, but she felt it not. She only clung the closer to Basil's arm. He was all her own now, he—her life's joy—her pride—the idol of her dreams, the delight of her soul. Such happiness was almost too much to bear; and therefore, when she first knew that he loved her, had Isilda wept—nay, even when she had parted from Basil and was alone, her full heart poured itself forth in tears. That he—the noble—the gifted—so rich in the greatest of all wealth—the wealth of genius—honoured among men, with a glorious harvest of fame yet unreaped before him—that he should love her, who had nothing to give but a heart that worshipped him! The girl, in her humility, felt unworthy of such deep happiness; all that her lips would utter were the blessed, joyful words—"He loves me! he loves me! my Basil, mine own!" and even in her sleep she murmured the same.

Man's love is not like woman's; yet Basil was very happy—happier than he had ever been in his life. The student, the philosopher, felt that all his wisdom was as nothing compared to the wondrous alchemy of love. So far from being weakened, his lofty mind seemed to grow purer and richer, beneath the light of beloved eyes; it was like the sunshine to the ripening corn. Basil now knew how long Isilda had filled his thoughts, and been mingled with all his hopes. He did not even then fathom the depths of her spirit—but he felt it was one with his; and man, proud man, ever rejoices to see his soul's image reflected in a woman's loving heart.

AN ESSAY

Concerning the most productive and most useful method of Masonic activity most in accordance with the ideas of Freemasonry. By Bro. B. A. CRAMER, at Eichenbarleben, Member of the Lodge at Aschersleben.

[Specially translated for THE FREEMASON, by Bro. W. LITTAUR.]

II.—ACTIVITY AMONGST NON-MASONS.

The nucleus of a society having been found amongst the united brethren, endeavours must be made to enlist from among non-Masons men of knowledge and heart, for the purpose of forming together with them an association which should in the first place promote popular scientific lectures for the general public on generally interesting topics. In many cases the task to be accomplished will be to endeavour to change the hitherto frivolous pursuits of many existing societies into profitable ones. The subject for these lectures must be attractive, both in their matter and form, and carefully chosen on a stated plan. It must be understood that these lectures should not be for the mere parade of learning, but for the formation of sound judgment. "The individual character, which is the highest possession of man and the basis or foundation of the enjoyment of all other possessions, must be formed and raised by acquiring more enlarged views of the world and its affairs." These lectures must embrace the history of civilisation and mental culture, and we must ultimately pass on to a consideration of the social question. As the latter can only be solved by the co-operation of all classes, and demands an energetic action, we must call for aid on behalf of the lower classes, so that their existence may be rendered more useful and civilized, and made to be a struggling for the highest purposes of civilisation; but in doing this, we do not propose mistaken philanthropy, in fact no philanthropy at all as is generally understood by the abstract ideas of doctrinaires who from the height of their principles would shape the world of realities according to their mould. On the contrary, we must by no means underrate the difficulties of real life, but look at the questions which lie before us with a calm and unbiassed eye, and disprove the totally erroneous and unfounded opinion that we intend to incite class against class, and render the working classes dissatisfied with their position, as this is the very opposite purpose pursued by the friends of the people.

But the indolence and thoughtlessness of the great mass of the educated classes hinders their being moved to any charitable action by any oratorical influence we may possess; they have unlearned their habits of self-denial; few now-a-days seem willing to deny themselves any enjoyment or give themselves any trouble on behalf of the poorer classes. For this reason we must always secure towards the attainment of this object, the co-operation of the periodical press, and endeavour to bring about that it become a point of honour with the higher classes, and a fashionable question at least with weak minds, to concern themselves with remedying the social evils. Here, again, we must not be too sure of obtaining a rapid success, yet many an individual co-operator will be recruited and drafted into our community. We also think that this is exactly the field where Freemasonry will without any labour of its own make proselytes to our cause.

We must seek to avail ourselves of all powers and means, and endeavour to strengthen and increase them as much as possible, not forgetting the material means, which may be gained either by bazaars—got up by noble-minded women—or by subscriptions and donations. On behalf of our work, we should gladly welcome all active means conducive to the public good, not excluding any, either from antipathy or self-will; for aspirations having for their object the welfare of all, must necessarily possess a moral basis, and moral powers are the very things which are indispensable for the solution of the social question.

In order to bring about a systematic discussion of these matters, the association must become an active centre among the educated classes, where the various elements will have to be organised, in order to bring about a harmonious co-operation; for now the principal task must be taken in hand, viz., to perfectly realise the social question, after having studied it in all its bearings. As to those who stand alone, let them take up the work where and how they can, but let them always endeavour to obtain the advice of a central body, which would thus be enabled to develop the movement in all directions. Even a single energetic character can do much, and shame the pusillanimous, selfish inertness of those who excuse themselves from the work by saying: "no help of theirs will be of any use," when it is their very assistance that alone is wanting.

The material wants of the lower classes are the main cause of their misery and depravity, and the process of curing these must be based on the comparatively still healthy and self-healing powers of nature, viz.:—On individual self-help, which is to be brought about by the means of the Free Associations; for the power of a single individual does not extend far, it is only by association and co-operation that all human development is brought about. Those who are resolved, therefore, to think and to act on behalf of the helpless majority, so as to awaken the slumbering powers they possess, have first of all to found an association among the working classes, under which we not only comprise workers in factories, journeymen, day labourers, and domestics, but also the peasant and artisan. It is in this association, and particularly among the educated portion of it, that the workers will find their first point of support, and upon which their endeavours towards self-help may obtain a firm foundation. On the other hand, the leading minds find in the association only the means of really penetrating into the depths of social misery, and then only are they able to direct their attention to that which is primarily necessary.

For the meetings of these workers a humble building would suffice, where, besides the ordinary transactions for the various useful institutions to be called into life for the good of the people, the friends of the cause are to provide by appropriate lectures amusing and instructive means for social intercourse. The membership of this association should not be obtained without payment of a small fee, which would aid in supporting the Institution, and at the same time preserve the self-respect of the workers. The lectures, above all, should show how and by what means, education and morals, trade and commerce, agriculture and the social status may be raised. Biographical accounts of great men should be given, which would produce moral influences, and show what is to be followed and what avoided. It should particularly be shown that it is only by labour wealth is obtained, and that it is only through domestic economy and moral power that a larger share in the enjoyment of the highest objects of life is obtained. The lectures must of course be adapted to the wants and capacities of the workers, always observing the greatest variety in the selection of those subjects which will at once excite, amuse, and instruct. In case of need, groups may be formed amongst the members for the purpose of instruction in various subjects, which may be given in the evenings or on Sundays.

A box for the reception of questions should be kept, to give workers the opportunity to get advice on all subjects of a social and domestic kind in which they feel an interest and which have not been brought before the association. In order to keep the interest in the association alive, it will also be necessary to afford rational amusements suited to the tastes of the people, and at the same time to cultivate the love of that which is beautiful, viz., by productions of art and dramatic entertainments, games, excursions, public fêtes, etc., the choice and management of which to be left to the educated leaders of the cause.

It is from the association of the workers that co-operative movements must emanate, which create the well-known useful institutions, viz., sick and pension funds, burial clubs, savings' banks for the smallest investments and others for larger ones, co-operative store-houses, loan funds, &c. As such associations, and hints for their establishment are already in existence, it is absolutely necessary that those who desire to take a leading part in these associations, should obtain a complete knowledge of the literature appertaining to such associations generally, and a practical insight into the working of societies which are already successfully carried out. Other institutions prosper most when conducted by ladies, more particularly those which are established for the benefit of mothers and children; we must therefore call the attention of our sisters to this field of labour. We must take care that these associations shall not be formed upon a wrong basis, nor that they degenerate by importing into their discussions political and religious subjects, which would undermine their existence; for the ground upon which an association is ruined, remains for a long time incapable of producing a new one.

Now if the friends of the people in spite of the indifference of the world would only persist in their humane efforts, a result however small in its commencement, will nevertheless become the most efficacious and powerful means towards the propagation of our cause, for it is proved that the workers redouble their efforts when they perceive the smallest success resulting therefrom. It is certainly true that the material improvement of the lower classes does not keep equal pace with their mental and moral improvement, but these are nevertheless advanced, although only by degrees, and the very feeling that we can only improve by united action has a moralising effect.

We have hitherto only spoken of workers, who possess a capital in their bodily strength, which separates them from the totally destitute. For these the parish and government have to provide. However, as the provisions in this respect, particularly in small places, are very inadequate, it becomes the duty of every philanthropist to endeavour even here to bring about improvements by interesting on behalf of those poor with the proper authorities, or calling upon his fellow-men, by means of the public press or otherwise, for charitable contributions. The greatest merit, however, would be due to those, who assist the impoverished to once more regain an independent position.

With this we conclude our treatise; we do not desire to make any innovation, but only to suggest improved methods of using the means to further the end we have in view, which is a more powerful development of individual character and action by means of the free association; and outside the lodge, the uniting of the individual endeavours towards the formation of a grand centre, to bring about the realisation of our worthy and lofty task, which would render our fraternity an important and dignified element of civilisation. Would that the belief in the moral and sacred mission of our order could give us the requisite strength and power to attain our great object!

THE HOUSE OF LA GRANDE MARQUE, AT COGNAC.—A Correspondent of the Yorkshire Post writes: "Some friends and myself having received an invitation from Mr. Victor Jouannet, the manager of that extensive brandy house, at Cognac, which is known in England under the title of La Grande Marque, we availed ourselves of it, in order to inspect their enormous stock, and also that we might obtain some general information respecting the production of Brandy in the Charente district. The Charente district, or as we should call it in England, the county of Charente, is one of the most interesting parts of France. This is owing to its production of brandy, the finest and most delicate spirit that can be distilled, and represents one of the most important sources of the general wealth of France. The largest town in the district is Angouleme. Cognac, however, is the most important, although having a population of only about 9,000. This town is situated in the neighbourhood of the finest brandy producing vineyards, known as the champagne district of Cognac. The district which surrounds this, and produces brandy next in quality and value, is called Borderies; and the last, or, as I may say, the third growth, is produced in the outside district, which extends round Angouleme, Saintes, and Mirambeau, and is called the Bois district. The pure Cognac brandy is distilled from wine grown in the three districts, Champagne, Borderies, and Bois, and these the leading houses of Cognac are most anxious to preserve in that native purity which has made Cognac so famous. Any merchant is regarded by them as acting fraudulently who dares to mix with the brandy of the Charente district, spurious spirit or even spirit made from wine grown in any other district. The average crop of the Cognac district is not less than six hundred gallons per acre, and the surface cultivated being 250,000 acres, yields about 150,000,000 gallons, which when distilled represent 15,000,000 gallons as the average annual yield. It is the general impression in England that the distillation of brandy is performed by the Cognac houses, and that large firms are necessarily holders of large farms; but the brandy merchants are no more producers than our English brewers are cultivators of hops and barley. No large farms, indeed, exist in the Charente district. It is stated on good authority that there are not five proprietors who hold 75 acres of vineyard, not 10 landowners possessing 40 acres, while holders of 12 acres do not exceed 30 in number. As in England the farmer goes to market with his sample of corn, so in the Charente district the French farmer once a week attends the Cognac market with samples of the brandy he intends to sell, and thus the trade have to make up their stock by the purchase of a number of small parcels. The stores of La Grande Marque, which are situated at the south end of the park of Cognac, cover two acres of ground, and hold 25,000 hogsheds, which contain about one and a half million gallons of brandy, and to accumulate this enormous stock they had to purchase from thousands of different farmers. The quality of the different samples of brandy varies very considerably, so that the superiority of the stock of a Cognac house depends entirely upon great judgment in their selections, and the holding sufficient capital to be always able to buy at the right time, and then direct from the farmer."

MASONRY.—It is useless to profess a knowledge of Freemasonry, if we do not frame our lives according to it. It is not enough to be acquainted with its doctrines and precepts, if we fail to reduce them to practice. In such a case, our knowledge will rather tend to our dishonour in this world, and will certainly be an additional article of accusation against us in the next. It would be very unreasonable to doubt the beneficial effects of our Masonic precepts, but to admit them to be true and yet act as if they were false, would be unwise in the highest degree. I will not, however, do my brethren the injustice to believe that many of them are capable of such a perversion of reason. And it is my firm persuasion, that they who practice the duties which Freemasonry teaches, in conjunction with the faith propounded in their religion, will inherit that eternal city of God, where they will be associated with a holy and happy fraternity of saints and angels, and enjoy the sweet communings of brotherly love for ever and ever.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE,

The Great Cure for Cholera and Consumption.

Newly-discovered principle residing in Gum Benjamin (Styrax Benzoin), the chief chemical product of which has hitherto been Benzoic Acid, well known and highly valued by medical practitioners. The great difficulty which the discoverer encountered in bringing out this important remedy was the form in which to present it to the faculty and the public, the new chemical being amorphous and incapable of crystallization. It has therefore been deemed advisable to prepare a highly-concentrated solution of the product, combining it with such adjuncts as are considered natural auxiliaries. PRICE'S BENZODYNE is stimulant, anodyne, and mechanically astringent, arresting fluxes and hemorrhages of all kinds both external and internal, possessing singular efficacy in the following diseases:—Ague, Bronchitis, Consumption, Colic, Cholera, Cold, Cough, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Debility in all its various forms, Fevers, Influenza, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Spasms, Tiodolereux, &c., &c. PRICE'S BENZODYNE has been tried repeatedly in these cases and has never failed to cure.

It immediately relieves all pain, actually sheathing the organs with a protective matter, which defies the action of the most virulent blood-poisons, and thus PRICE'S BENZODYNE acts as the most powerful styptic now known to science, being the only effective external application for cuts, bites of insects, and all open wounds. In Cholera, as in Consumption, its effects are astounding, while Chronic Cough yields to its curative influences in a few hours.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is acknowledged by the highest Medical authority to be the most wonderful medicine yet introduced to the public; it may be taken at any time by both young and old with the most beneficial effects in all cases, leaving no bad effects like Laudanum, Chlorodyne, or any other poisonous and imperfect preparations, and can be given when no other could be tolerated.

In Consumption and Cancer its peculiarly soothing properties render it a boon to the sufferer in allaying the cough, mitigating night perspirations, and in relieving pain, &c.

In every stage of those dire diseases it gives an amount of ease not attainable by any other remedy.

In all cases of Chest Affections, as Asthma, Bronchitis, Winter Cough, Palpitation, &c., PRICE'S BENZODYNE is a very valuable medicine, producing a composed and tranquil state of the system, and quickly relieving the cough, assisting expectoration, and in a few days removing the most distressing symptoms.

In Hysteria, Epilepsy, Gout, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nerve Pains it is justly valued, as it is given with immediate benefit, relieving pain and suffering however violent the attack.

In Diarrhoea, Cholera, Alvine Discharges, spasms and colics of the intestines, &c., its effects are signal, as it never fails to check the disease.

CONSUMPTION IN ALL ITS STAGES CURED.

Coughs, Whooping Cough, Asthma, Bronchitis, Fever, Ague, Diphtheria, Hysteria, Rheumatism, Diarrhoea, Spasms Colic, Renal and Uterine Diseases are immediately relieved by a dose.

During the period of Dentition of Children it will be found invaluable, and in curing Whooping Cough, Spasms, dispelling Flatulency, preventing Convulsive Fits, Heats, &c., to which they are so liable.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is specially adapted for Naval, Military or Traveller's medicine chests, and for Hospitals and Dispensaries everywhere.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s. and 22s., by all chemists

CROSBY'S
BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.

Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills, are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary Diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL.

Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says:—"I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued Cough, Pain, and Irritation of the Chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."

This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers, in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. CROSBY, Chemist, Scarborough.

BRO. GEORGE KENNING

3 & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN, LONDON, E.C.

All Subscriptions begin with March 15th, 1869, and end with February, 1870.

The AMERICAN FREEMASON is not the organ of any Grand Lodge; but speaking the words of truth, manhood, and independence, advocates freedom for Masonry in America, and the rights of Freemasons in their Lodges—rights which, by our Grand Lodges, in their subservency to high degrees, have been invaded, until at present they are nearly obliterated.

Subscribers in the British Colonies will please address all Subscriptions and Correspondence to J. FLETCHER BRENNAN, Editor, 114, Main-street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

TO THE NERVOUS & DEBILITATED EPILEPTIC SUFFERERS AND OTHERS.

HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA, discovered, introduced, and extensively prescribed by the late eminent Dr. MARSHALL HALL, has proved an infallible remedy (by oxydizing the blood and supplying its saline constituent) for Indigestion, Debility, Coughs, Asthma, Consumption, Skin, Liver, Stomach, and Nervous Affections, more especially Epilepsy, Apoplexy, and Paralysis. The successful results of this new chemical preparation are beyond all precedent, and the extraordinary cures effected by the late discoverer, and by his successor (Dr. Sutton), in the above maladies are without a parallel in the annals of medicine; and it is confidently believed that in no case need the sufferer despair, for practical experience has demonstrated, and signal success warranted the assertion, that in 99 cases out of every 100 complete cures may be relied on.

Sold in Bottles at 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and Cases of £5 each, by

DR. SUTTON, M.D., 15, REGENT SQUARE, LONDON, W.C., and in BOLTON by PRIESTLEY, Chemist.

The following are a few Testimonials published by privilege.

Sir Charles Locock, Physician-Accoucher to Her Majesty, stated at a meeting of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society, that in sixteen cases of Epilepsy he had effected permanent cures by the use of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa.

"September 6, 1856.—The Editor of the Bury Gazette returns thanks to Dr. Hall for the great benefit he has received from his Chlorate of Potassa treatment in a severe nervous disease." Sir J. Ferguson, King's College Hospital, London, says—"I have repeatedly prescribed Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa and found it an agreeable and beneficial remedy."

Extract from the Lancet, April 1, 1857.—"In conclusion, we are of opinion that Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is a far superior remedy to the ones in general use for Nervousness, Indigestion, and Liver Complaints, when judiciously prescribed."

Sir Benjamin Brodie says—"What Chloride of Lime is to the foul sewer, Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is to the blood."

Professor Syme says—"The effects of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa in obstinate cases of disease are as astonishing as perplexing."

Dr. Lankester, the eminent coroner, says—"Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is calculated to entirely supersede iron, mercury, sassa-parilla, quinine, and cod liver oil."

Sir Philip Crampton says—"I believe there is no condition of the system that may not be benefited by Dr. Hall's Potassa." Sir T. Lawrence says—"I have found Dr. Hall's Chlorate an excellent remedy in Skin Diseases. I presume it is by oxydization."

Sir T. Watson says—"I know that it is an invaluable remedy." Sir Edward Borough, 9, Fitzwilliam-square, Dublin, certifies Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa has been of the greatest benefit to a member of his family.

The Earl of Clarendon certifies that Dr. Hall's Chlorate cured a case of indigestion of 15 years' duration.

Dr. HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA may be procured by order through any Chemist. Ask for "Dr. HALL'S Chlorate," and do not be imposed on with the common article. It is sold in Bolton by Priestley Chemist, 12, Deansgate; or it may be had direct from Dr. Hall's successor, Dr. JOHN SUTTON, M.D., 15, Regent-square, London, W.C., who undertakes the positive cure of all chronic diseases before payment.

Dr. HALL'S Chlorate is sold in MANCHESTER by JEWELL, Market-street; in LIVERPOOL by PRIESTLEY, Lord-street.

N.B.—Dr. Sutton will shortly repeat his Lecture on this subject.—The Lecture sent for two stamps.

EACH Paper contains every item of intelligence, from Mail to Mail, specially affecting the country or colony for which it is published, with an exhaustive summary of home and continental politics, science, art, and social news, and a retrospect of commercial transactions in Great Britain and on the Continent.

Manufacturers and Merchants may command the greatest markets of the world for their products through the mediums of publicity afforded by the EUROPEAN MAIL. A demand may be created where none exists at present, or an existing demand may be sustained and increased against the most energetic competition.

The EUROPEAN MAIL gives such perfect mercantile information that it is the highest commercial authority in the vast and prosperous territories through which it circulates. It is therefore an imperative necessity to the merchant who orders goods in bulk, and to the wholesale and retail distributor; it is also the most complete newspaper despatched from England, and is eagerly sought by all classes; it thus, unlike merely commercial newspapers, reaches and leaves the great communities who are the actual consumers of all products, and who must be acted upon by advertisement to require a special article before the merchant will venture to order a consignment.

Scale of Charges for ADVERTISEMENTS each insertion per Paper as follows:—

FOR PAPERS C, F, & G ONLY.	FOR PAPERS A, B, D, E, & K ONLY.

* * The above Scale of Charges is subject to a Discount of 10 per cent. for Advertisements appearing in the consecutive issues of a paper for 3 months; of 15 per cent. for 6 months; and 20 per cent. for 12 months.

When an Advertisement is ordered for insertion simultaneously in all the Papers, the lowest rate above is charged all through.

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the Cannon-street Post Office, London.

Remittances payable to William Vaughan.

The EUROPEAN MAIL may be ordered through the Local Agent, direct from the London Office, or through any Firm having representatives in England. In the last case, the usual system is to order the EUROPEAN MAIL to be forwarded until countermanded; the representative of the Firm in England being directed, under similar conditions, to make payment annually.

GLENFIELD STARCH

is the only kind used in
Her Majesty's Laundry.

THOSE LADIES who have not yet used the GLENFIELD STARCH, are respectfully solicited to give it a trial, and carefully follow out the directions printed on every package. It is rather more difficult to make than other Starches, but when this is overcome, they will say, like the Queen's Laundress, that it is the finest Starch they ever used.

THE POWERS OF A GRAND MASTER.

BY CIPES.

There is nothing in Freemasonry concerning which misapprehension seems more extensively to prevail among Freemasons, than the office and the powers of a Grand Master. On the one hand, a Grand Master seems often to be regarded as if he were merely regarded as the Master of a Grand Lodge, whose office derives its existence from that of the Grand Lodge; on the other, it appears to be supposed that he possesses an absolute power, which he may exercise in the most arbitrary manner and without control. Both of these notions are utterly erroneous, are contrary to the whole spirit of Freemasonry, and betray great ignorance at once of its nature and of its history.

The office of Grand Master existed long before there was any Grand Lodge, and derives its origin from the very constitution of the Masonic Fraternity. His powers are great, but they are limited by the very landmarks of the Order, as well as by the regulations of the Grand Lodge over which he presides; and in the exercise of them he is subject to the control of assembled brethren, according to that principle of liberty and brotherhood on which the whole system of Freemasonry is based.

The fourth landmark of the Order is the government of the Fraternity by a Grand Master, elected from the body of the Craft. "No brother can be a Warden, until he has passed the part of a Fellow Craft; nor a Master, until he has acted as Warden, nor Grand Warden, until he has been Master of a Lodge; nor a Grand Master, unless he has been a Fellow Craft before his election." The fifth landmark is the prerogative of Grand Master to preside over every assembly of the Craft, whosoever and whensoever held. It is in virtue of this landmark, derived from ancient usage, and not of any special enactment, that the Grand Master assumes the chair, or, as it is called in Scotland, the throne, at every communication of the Grand Lodge, and that he is also entitled to preside at every communication of any lodge holding charter of the Grand Lodge, when he may happen to be present. The sixth landmark is the prerogative of the Grand Master to grant dispensations for conferring degrees at irregular times, without the usual probation, so that a candidate may be initiated at once. This prerogative anciently belonged to all Masters, before the enactment of a law requiring probation. The R.W. Masters of lodges no longer possess it, although an assembled lodge in a case of emergency may, but the Grand Master possesses it unimpaired. The seventh landmark is the prerogative of the Grand Master to grant dispensations for opening and holding lodges, "lodges under dispensations," which are created by him at his pleasure, and which he in like manner can dissolve. The eighth landmark is the prerogative of the Grand Master to make Freemasons at sight, which follows of necessary consequence from that just noticed, for whenever a Grand Master grants his dispensation to an unchartered lodge to dispense with the necessary probation, and personally presides at the conferring of the degree, he virtually makes a Mason at sight.

Such are the powers of the Grand Master; ancient and unquestionable powers, secured by the very landmarks of the Order. Beyond these, however, he has no power but what is conferred by special statute or regulation of the Grand Lodge over which he has been elected to preside. Nothing can be more contrary to all principles of Freemasonry, than the notion apparently entertained by some, that the Grand Master can make a Freemason "at sight," without the presence or concurrence of any of his brethren; that he can, if he so chooses, retire with the candidate into a private room, and there at once confer the degrees of Freemasonry upon him. A Freemason can only be made in a lodge, and the Grand Master's only mode of exercising his prerogative of making Freemasons at sight, is by summoning to his assistance at least six other Masons, constituting a lodge by which the degrees are then conferred on sight of the candidate, without any previous probation. This commonly takes place when sovereigns or princes are admitted into the Masonic body. When the purpose for which the lodge has been constituted is fulfilled, it is dissolved by the Grand Master. A lodge thus convened and constituted for a special purpose, is called an occasional lodge. The Grand Master's prerogative, according to the seventh landmark, entitles him to convene such a lodge at his pleasure, but he has no right to confer Masonic degrees except in a lodge duly constituted. Individually, he has no more power in this matter than any other member of the Craft; he must act with the concurrence of a number of brethren sufficient to constitute a lodge. The power of convening an occasional lodge for a special purpose has been often exercised, especially in England, when a member of the Royal Family was to be made a Freemason, but it has never been exercised otherwise than in the manner just described. The Grand Master's prerogative of making a Freemason at sight, is thus subject to a most important and necessary limitation, a limitation without which it might be abused to the entire subversion of the first principles of the Order, and would in fact be, in its very nature, inconsistent with them.

The Grand Master presides in the Grand Lodge at any communication of a lodge holding charter from it at which he may happen to be present. But he presides because his brethren have appointed him to preside. He is elected to his office, which may be likened to that of the President of a Republic, rather than to that of an absolute monarch, who occupies his throne by right of conquest or by hereditary descent. He has no despotic authority. In the lodge, he is amongst brethren, not amongst subjects. He is the chairman of the meeting, and it belongs to him to maintain order. He may call a brother to order who is guilty of any irregularity in conduct or in speech, and he is entitled to expect the fullest support of the assembled brethren in doing so. He is entitled to interrupt any brother who, in speaking on any question, introduces things plainly irrelevant to it, and, if necessary to compel him to be silent. It belongs to him, also, to put questions to the vote, and to declare the result, but he has not the power of preventing a question from being brought before the lodge. When the nature of the question is such as it is proper for the lodge to consider, he has not the power of preventing the fair discussion of it; he has not the power of determining it himself, but must put it to the vote; and if there is any uncertainty as to the mind of the lodge, the roll must be called, that each brother present may vote in answer to his name. The Grand Master has not the power of refusing to allow the roll to be called when there seems to be a difficulty of ascertaining the judgment of the assembled brethren, for this power, if admitted, would make him virtually despotic, and the bringing of a question before the lodge at all, would be a mere farce. In like manner, if a pretext is taken by any brother against the decision of the lodge, it must be taken. It is THE PRIVILEGE OF EVERY BROTHER TO PROTEST WHEN HE THINKS IT NECESSARY TO DO SO, and the Grand Master has no more power than any other member of the Craft to shut his mouth, and to refuse him the privilege of protesting.

Nothing could be more fatal to the interests of Freemasonry than to invest the Grand Master with despotic power, or in other words with power to debar the members of the Fraternity from the exercise of the rights which belong to them as such. It would, in fact, be a subversion of the whole system of Freemasonry. The Grand Master is the officer and organ of the Craft, and is responsible to his brethren. He is placed at the head not merely of the Grand Lodge, but of the whole Craft. He is never styled "Grand Master of the Grand Lodge," but always "Grand Master of Masons." The election of the Grand Master by the Grand Lodge, is a mere arrangement of convenience, which was first adopted in England in 1717, and has since been adopted in Scotland and other countries. The power exercised by the Grand Lodge in the election of Grand Master is to be regarded as a mere delegated power. As to his responsibility to the Craft for the discharge of the duties of his office, nothing can be plainer than the language of one of the regulations adopted in 1721:—"If the Grand Master should abuse his power, and render himself unworthy of the obedience and subjection of the lodges, he shall be treated in a way and manner to be agreed upon in a new regulation; because hitherto the ancient Fraternity have had no occasion for it, their former Grand Masters having all behaved themselves worthy of that honourable office." No new regulation on this subject, however, has yet been made or found necessary. Grand Masters having always conducted themselves in a manner generally satisfactory to the Craft, showing respect to the landmarks, and duly recognising the rights and privileges of their brethren.

Freemasons are free men. There whole system is one of liberty, although it is one of order also, and in no community have order and liberty ever been more perfectly reconciled. Their office-bearers, particularly Masters and Wardens, Grand Masters, and Grand Wardens, are appointed for the maintenance of order, and to secure to every member of the Craft the full enjoyment of his rights and privileges. The Freemason is under no monkish vow of absolute obedience, he is not like a Jesuit bound to obey the commands of a superior, in whose hands he is taught to regard it as his highest merit to serve as a mere tool—as a stick in a man's hand. The Grand Master of Masons does not occupy a position in the least degree resembling that of the General Order of the Jesuits.

The views which we have stated as to the office, powers, and responsibilities of the Grand Master, are founded on the essential principles of Freemasonry and on its ancient landmarks. The regulation of 1721, just quoted, affords the strongest possible confirmation of them. It might not have been necessary to state them at all, if notions very opposite to them were not prevalent, notions the prevalence of which is extremely to be regretted, because they are inconsistent with that sense of liberty and dignity which every Freemason ought to possess; and because, if the Grand Master himself in any measure adopt them, they necessarily lead him to an extreme and arbitrary exercise of authority, on occasions such as must sometimes arise in every lodge or Grand Lodge, the very occasions on which a full recognition of the rights of every individual member is most important. NEGLECT OF GRAND VISITATIONS.

By Bro. J. B. TAYLOR.

Among the many causes which have operated to reduce, as it were, the standard of Masonic principles among the Craft, there is, perhaps, no single cause which has exerted a greater influence than the neglect of the Gr. Officers to visit and instruct the Lodges, thereby encouraging them to raise their standard of work high, and lead them to seek for and practise the moral principles of our institution.

Is it reasonable to expect from a lodge that has not been visited for years, perfect work—in some lodges which have been in operation two or three years and have not received an official visit from a Grand Officer since the installation of their first W. Master, and he was, perhaps, a novice, having the responsible duties of his office to learn, and that without a competent instructor or one duly authorized?

To such an extent has this prevailed in some sections of our country, that some Masters are so imperfectly qualified in the lectures and charges that they are driven to the expediency of postponing them to a future occasion, and so, gradually falling into a disuse of them. The result is, the work of such a Lodge becomes gradually imperfect, and its members are not able to work their way into strange Lodges, from defective instruction, when there is no voucher at hand.

Is this as it should be? Certainly it is not, and the remedy at once suggests itself—let it be applied where needed and the result will be welcomed by all.

Let the Lodges look to the proficiency of the applicant for the second or third degrees in the preceding one, and we shall soon see a marked difference in work wherever this is attended to.

INFORMATION WANTED.

In July, 1868, Joseph Palmer, who was made a Mason in Gibraltar, and subsequently affiliated with the Downshire Lodge, No. 594, in Liverpool, England, left the latter port for the United States, in company with a servant woman. His wife was left without means, and has not heard of or from him since his desertion. As it is possible he may visit some Lodge in this country, any brother who can give information of his whereabouts to Mrs. Palmer, care of Mr. Scott (Past Master of Downshire Lodge), No. 92, Pitt street, Liverpool, England, will confer a great favor and forward the ends of justice.—Pomeroy's Democrat, New York.

THE INTERNATIONAL MASONIC FETE AT LIEGE.

We have great pleasure in placing before our readers a translation of the Minutes of the Lodge la Parfaite Intelligence et de l'Etoile Reunies at Liege, under whose auspices the brilliant fête to the foreign brethren was held during the late Tir International. The friendship which exists between the British and Belgian nations is clearly exemplified by the reception accorded to King Leopold II., who is now in this country, and we trust that such feelings of amity and mutual respect may ever prevail amongst the two peoples. For the original minutes we are indebted to our accomplished Bro. Captain Francis George Irwin, Provincial Junior Grand Warden, Somersetshire, and P.D.G. Warden, Andalusia.

In the name and under the auspices of the Grand Orient of Belgium.

To all Masons spread over the surface of the earth—Unity, Fraternity, and Health.

The 19th day of the ninth month in the year of the True Light 5869, the respectable Lodge of St. John, regularly constituted at the Orient of Liege under the distinctive title of the "Parfaite Intelligence et de l'Etoile Reunies," held a special assembly, duly convoked and fraternally gathered together, in a very secure and enlightened place where silence, peace, and charity reign, at the hour of mid-day.

The lodge was opened in the usual manner in the first degree by Bro. Lafontaine, W. Master, illumining the East; by Bro. Marquet, S. Warden, and Bro. Bonniver, J. Warden, illumining the West; by Bro. F. Grün, Orator, Bro. Docteur, Secretary, and all the other officers and members of the lodge, duly clothed and occupying their respective places. * * *

The fêtes at Liege have not passed over without Freemasonry deriving some advantages therefrom. The Lodge La Parfaite Intelligence et l'Etoile reunies of this Orient having resolved to hold a solemn and especial meeting in honour of the foreign masonic volunteers and riflemen present at Liege, and this fête having been announced in the principal journals of Europe, the brethren assembled in great numbers at the place of meeting of the Lodge, on Sunday, the 19th of September last, about six o'clock p.m. At seven o'clock the W.M., Bro. Lafontaine, opened the lodge in the presence of a large number of Belgian brethren assembled from all the Orients of the country. The foreign brethren were then introduced in the customary manner under the arch of steel, preceded by the Master of the Ceremonies, the gavels sounding the usual Masonic battery.

The W. MASTER bade them welcome in the name of the lodge of Liege in particular and of Belgian Masonry in general, with affectionate sentiments impressed with a frank cordiality and the purest Masonic spirit. He said it was the province of Freemasonry to unite, without cessation, nations the most widely separated, in order to make them understand that all men are brothers. In this, the lodge of Liege only followed the example formerly given by the Lodge of Berne at the Congress for the Promotion of Social Science, by the lodges of Paris during the Exhibition of 1867, and finally by the Lodge of Brussels at the last international rifle meeting. In spite of the obstacles which politics and even nature raised between nations, sooner or later they remembered that they are sisters, and it is the mission of Masonry to prove that such is the case. He therefore invited the brethren to consider themselves at home, and thanked them for having responded with so much promptness to the summons of the Lodge of Liege.

The foreign brethren replied with a Masonic fire.

The visitors who were Past Masters took their places in the East, and all the brethren then seated themselves. The room presented a fairy aspect—the French national guard, the Belgian civic guard, the chasseur éclairé, officers of the volunteers of Brussels, Ghent, &c., were mingled with English and Scotch volunteers in their brilliant and varied uniforms. Upwards of 600 brethren of various nations were present, the English, French and Belgians predominating in numbers.

The W.M. then called upon Bro. KARL GRUN, jun., the Orator of the Lodge of Liege, who expressed himself as follows:—

Very dear and very illustrious Brethren,—Those who have the gratification of being present at a meeting like this, where the Masonic deputies of several great European nations are assembled, can return in spirit to the profane world with a legitimate sentiment of pride. They will be able to contemplate with unmingled satisfaction this great Masonic Association which covers like a vast network the whole of the globe. Wherever civilization has planted its standard, wherever the human race has pushed its conquests, Masonry has cast its mighty anchors. France reckons at the present time 230 lodges, Germany 287, England 1200, Belgium and the Netherlands 80, Switzerland 27, Sweden, Norway, and Denmark 12; the United States shine in the first rank by the number of their temples, they have 4000, Brazil has 65, Italy 45, Egypt and Tunis 7, Persia, Turkey, China, and the Indies have also their lodges: besides which a multitude of islands and sea-ports have erected columns in order to build the Temple. The entire globe actually contains nearly 9000 lodges, and several millions of brethren. The vivifying institutions of Masonry extend from pole to pole. The gavels of the W. Master, the joyous "battery" of the two columns, the words of peace and concord of the brethren, everywhere resound. Masonry girdles the earth with a fraternal chain. If after having yielded to this sentiment of pleasure, based on the knowledge of our strength, we ask ourselves what can be the reason of this cosmopolitan nature of Freemasonry? Oh! then a subject of satisfaction much greater still is reserved for us. It is, that Masonry by its own essential merits elevates itself above all barriers, and overleaps the narrow limits which separate nationalities, in order to proclaim this axiom—that human nature is one; that all men are equal, and respect themselves from the moment that they have felt vibrate within their hearts that principle of human dignity which constitutes man, in the fullness of his development, the crown and summit of the creation. And this unity of human nature is shown externally in the normal man by that instinctive cry which the great poet Goethe uttered when dying, "Light, more light!" Light should take the place of darkness; thus do we see the sun of truth illumining with its thousand rays human existence in general, and individual life in particular. It penetrates the most secret recesses of the heart, as well as the cabinets of statesmen and the laboratories of art and science. Frequently the light shines suddenly like a flash of lightning, and burns to the very root the ruins of the past. But it often proceeds, with a quiet and sure progression, to blaze eventually in power and to scatter far and wide its marvellous lustre. Sometimes error disappears in a night, and when we awake we ask ourselves with astonishment how we have been able to tolerate it so long, sometimes it gives way but slowly, with a kind of obstinate rage, but it is finally obliged to succumb. Wherever this truth shines, light progressively increases, and liberty is the spontaneous cry of those who at one time groaned in the bonds of error, falsehood, prejudice, and superstition. It is this tendency to liberty which constitutes the progress of humanity; and who dare deny this progress? Do we not see incessantly new ideas more nearly allied to truth overthrowing former ideas? And if we look back to the right or the left, one step behind, do we not find the new shoot of the human tree producing branches still more verdant? Thus it is that reform has not only abolished a part of the errors which with many men were sacred dogmas, but it has again revived religious spirit, and produced liberty of conscience. This is what even the enemies of reform cannot deny. Onward, onward! Such is the thought of the lodges, and under this powerful impulse all the brethren set to work; each one brings his stone to the edifice, which is ever rising without ever being finished. It is progress which we elaborate in our lodges; always in advance of the profane world by several stages, we prepare the realities of to-morrow by our theories of to-day. It is the fever of work, the incessant march towards the promised land, so beautifully described by the great Victor Hugo, thus—

O'er the vast earth, through barren wastes of sand,
Or charmed with odours from the meadow'd land,
Linked in procession under heaven's blue arch,
Behold the race of man in endless march;
Eternal travelling spirits bound to roam,
And yet on earth they never find a home.
One lifts the banner, others rear on high
The holy ark of godlike liberty;
Thought answers thought, in voices like the roar
Of giant waves upon a rock-ribbed shore:
But still in their career they bear along
Laws, manners, customs, science, art, and song.
What means this sacred journey? It is known

As Human Progress. From the frigid zone
Of ignorance and vice the pilgrims haste
To one with knowledge, light, and wisdom graced;
From time to time, o'ercome with solemn fear,
They falter in the race, but soon appear
Again in motion. By their mutual cries
And mutual help they win the victories.
Onward they go—scene following after scene,
And Alps succeeding Alps, with vales between,
While new horizons rise before the view
They still pursue their march in order due;
But at the summit, or the wished-for goal,
When shall arrive the restless Human Soul?*

It is this tendency towards perfection in one's self, the interest which we take in all real progress, and the struggle undertaken for the conquest of intellectual liberty which constitute the wisdom of which we Masons call ourselves the disciples. Far from placing itself in the same narrow point of view with religious and political parties, on the contrary, Masonry advances to the conquest and maintenance of intellectual liberty, systematically setting aside those points of view. Humanity, at first sight, appears only a prey to the contentions of a hundred different parties. But if the picture be examined more closely, it will be discovered that humanity no longer presents itself as the reunion of pieces of a broken mirror, but much rather as an organization in which the parties are in agitation, but perfect themselves reciprocally in order to form a harmonious whole. It is the consciousness of this ideal unity of humanity which is the true basis of Freemasonry, and it is this idea which she should always seek to preserve. The lodges of all Orients include aristocrats and democrats, pietists and free-thinkers, monarchists and republicans, Protestants, Catholics, Jews, Mahometans, and Hindoos; Liberals and Conservatives—in short, the representatives of all religious and political shades. Whence, then, in spite of this apparent disunion, comes the intelligence of the Lodge? From the intellectual liberty of each of the Brethren! Freemasons raise themselves above the narrow platform of the profane world; they set aside the domestic struggles of nation with nation, faith with faith, and party with party; they study all the great questions of morals, philosophy, politics, and religion from a superior point of view, and with the light of reason; they seek truth with an eye to general interest without preconceived opinion and without partiality. Thus, by elevating themselves in a vigorous manner above profane spheres, all the brethren can shake hands. It then follows that they no longer acknowledge more than one religion—that of the heart; and have but one divine service—that of truth and love, which they owe to their fellows. They form but one political party which demands everywhere and always, the rights of man, and intellectual liberty, by which alone we can hope to draw near the truth. The convictions which we do not share—and here I would be understood to say, honest convictions, acquired by a sincere search after truth—have not only a right to our tolerance but also to our respect, and we ought properly to admit them to the same title as our own. Intellectual liberty understood in this manner is the most precious jewel of lodges; it constitutes in itself the whole secret of Freemasonry. Let it then be the device inscribed on the banner around which all the friends of the true light have just fraternally assembled; let them be nevertheless in politics and religion, what their individual conscience directs them to be. It is the universal nature of Masonry, viewed in the light that I am about to demonstrate it, which renders our association eternal, and which has made it accomplish so many great things in history. It is this nature which since the constitution of York in 926, has made it in Germany and England, first a sanctuary where the artistic ideal was cultivated, and which afterwards caused all those fine Gothic cathedrals to rise which cover Europe; and also at a later period developed a school of moral philosophy, unique and sublime. It is this which has made it in the United States a feature of the union amongst a thousand modes of worship opposed to each other. It is this which under different aspects has exalted Italy above the yoke of all other powers. It is this which for forty years has saved Belgium from clerical domination, the spectre of the middle ages, which utters cries of rage from the gulf into which it has been precipitated; it is, in fine, this influence, which by an almost marvellous concurrence of circumstances produced that great and admirable French revolution, which has been the most splendid practical consecration of Masonic ideas the world has ever beheld. If it were permitted for me to frame a wish as to the way in which I should wish to see modern Freemasonry engaged, I would say, let us occupy ourselves above all things with education and peace. Instruction, my brethren, is the knot of all the pending questions of the day; it is the hinge especially of that terrible social question, which rises up anew on the horizon of nations. Let us then educate the masses, both men and women, especially the latter; let us enlighten them again now and for ever, let this be the care of every moment. We have seen with pleasure, France stirred at the voice of Bro. T. Mace, and actively engage herself with this popular question of instruction still so neglected. Seven years ago we founded in Belgium, that line of teaching, which Bro. Mace has succeeded in introducing into France, and the model of which we ourselves had taken from the Dutch society, "Tot 'A' nut vant algemeen." Italy has just entered, likewise, into this path. Here at Liege, in our limited circle, we hold conferences every winter, forming complete instruction. These conferences create a neutral ground, my brethren, a ground which shall be Masonic in every country, for where is the Mason who would ever dare to deny the necessity and utility of instruction. Education is that light of which I spoke just now, by which we can overcome and disperse the darkness which surrounds us. The second point to which I desire to call your attention is peace! Let us employ our thousands of lodges and millions of brethren to one mighty effort to render the sanguinary butcheries of war henceforth impossible; the recurrence of which we still dread, even in the middle of the nineteenth century, and which are a shameful anachronism at our epoch of civilization. Let us fight against national prejudices, and eradicate those secular antipathies amongst peoples which nothing can justify. Let us teach a lesson to men who injure all, especially the conqueror, and let us proclaim that there is only one just and holy war—that which a people undertakes to defend their liberty against oppression. Here again, we shall all be able to tender the hand to each other and act in concert, for war is a most anti-masonic practice, it is the reverse of that law inscribed in all morals and in every religion,

"Love each other as brothers and sisters."

The most precious result of the cosmopolitan nature of Freemasonry, is the solidity which unites all the brethren, the fraternity which makes them all as the members of one and the same family; the fraternity which knows how to redress gently the wrongs of the brother, without feebleness, but also without asperity. Masonry knows no such word as "stranger" a Mason is everywhere at home; in every clime where a Masonic hand meets his, when travelling, he repairs to the Lodge of the East, where he finds himself as much at home as in the house of his parents. Does he want information, aid, help? he knows where to find it, and have we not seen in the thickest of the battle, when two hostile armies precipitate themselves on one another to exterminate and destroy; have we not seen, I say, the sign of distress appear, and the soldier just before ready to slaughter his adversary, offer a friendly hand and save him? The reason is that the Masonic fraternity is not one of command or interest, as in certain religious orders; it is a real fraternity, based on the esteem that the brethren have for each another. An Indian proverb says,

"The greatest enemy of mankind is man."

The Redskin who utters this exclamation, without discussing the matter further, can perhaps be excused up to a certain point. He knows no other humanity than that in the far West, where man is obliged to dispute his dinner with his fellow with the tomahawk or the carbine. Unfortunately, this deplorable philosophy has found its way into Europe. How many wealthy men are there not who affirm, without knitting their brows, that fraternity does not exist, and that the most generous men are moved only by ideas like these. "Go away from there, that I may take thy place; each for himself, and God for all." Now it is incumbent on us masons, who have sworn to aid and succour each other in every circumstance of life, to oppose a barrier to this demoralizing tendency which is spreading more and more. It is incumbent on us to show by our acts that we believe in fraternity, and that we repel egotism. Humanity is bound up in common interests, my brethren; and evil can but result to her when she forgets that devotedness, charity and mutual assistance are necessary to her existence and her development! And you, very dear and illustrious brethren, who have come to us as visitors from the lodges that circle the earth, do you not feel happier than the profane friends who have accompanied you in your excursion. You not only have come to rejoice in your skill as marksmen, but also to fraternize with the Liege branch of our great Masonic family, and when you return you will carry back to your hearths (at least such is our fervent hope), the remembrance which a brother bears who has pressed the hand of a well-beloved brother. Let us concentrate for a moment all our attention on this point. What is perhaps to day the highest and best justified ambition of a well-thinking man, is to be able to live happy and free in a free state, not only in a political view, but especially above all in a moral view of the philosophical family. No where has this ideal been better realized than in Freemasonry; it is a free state in the midst of human struggles, and all its citizens are happy and free. It will be still a long time before the profane world attains the Masonic ideal, even if it ever does; let us therefore congratulate ourselves on possessing a safe retreat, where we can live in the plenitude of our liberty and cherish this Masonic Institution, venerable in its age and human principles. Let us love it with all our strength, let us ameliorate and develop it unceasingly, for only that which improves and transforms itself can exist in perpetuity. As for those who excommunicate, scoff at and calumniate us, and as for all the emanations of the evils pertaining to our persecution, while we march, let us content ourselves with answering them by our ancient rallying cry Semper vivat!

The Worshipful Master interrupting the applause which had been several times repeated, ordered a Masonic fire of thanks to the Orator. Then, on a sign from the Worshipful Master, the door at the end of the room opened and one could see beyond a second double folding-door open, the banqueting hall brilliantly illuminated, and where were placed four long series of tables covered with shrubs and flowers.

The Orator preceded by stars, led the way to the banqueting hall, and his colleagues formed in procession behind him.

During the whole of the time that the ceremony of drinking toasts in honor of the foreign brethren lasted, the greatest fraternity and the most perfect order prevailed.

The following are the toasts which were given on this occasion:—1st. The toast of the Worshipful Master to the foreign brethren, a toast of thanks, hope and fraternity. This toast was answered by an English Brother and a French one.

The English Brother, Capt. IRWIN, Prov. J.G.W. Somersetshire, congratulated himself on having his ideas in perfect accordance with his brother orator, and should be happy if he were able to communicate this impression to the brethren in England; he thanked the Lodge of Liege for the fraternal reception which it had given to the English riflemen, and as a proof of gratitude he would propose to the lodge of which he was a member to name the Worshipful Bro. Lafontaine an honorary member of the lodge.

Brother ROY-GUIBERT, on behalf of the French Masons thanked, in his turn, the Lodge of Liege. He expressed a wish that the fête might soon be returned at Paris, and added that the French intend not only to imitate the Belgians with respect to an International Shooting Match, but also to follow them in the path of liberty. (Enthusiastic and long-continued applause). He too, would propose to the lodge of which he was a member to receive Brother Lafontaine as an honorary member, out of gratitude for the brilliant reception made to the French brethren by the Lodge of Liege.

Brother VAN DAMME, from the Lodge of Ghent, returned thanks on behalf of the Belgian visitors.

Brother DE LEAN D'ANDREMONT, from the Orient of Brussels, proposed a hearty toast in honor of Brother Oscar Masset, a member of the Lodge of Liege, and to whom the town owed the shooting fête. It was he who had been the promoter and mainspring of this great event.

Brother LAFONTAINE drank to the health of Bro. Henry Michet, of the Orient of Paris, the promoter of the movement which had brought the National Guards to the Liege Shooting ground. Brother MICHET expressed his thanks by a few cordial words.

Finally, the WORSHIPFUL MASTER gave the usual toast to all Masons spread over the surface of the two hemispheres; he then circulated the Almoner's box for the poor, and closed the lodge.

All the English speeches were translated into French by Brother Forgeur, of the Lodge of Liege.

This fraternal International Fête will remain engraven in the remembrances of all those who took part in it, as much on account of its humanitarian objects, as by the complete success and unexceptional beauty which attended the entire proceedings.

THE FREEMASON'S CALENDAR for 1870 is now ready, and may be had at the Grand Secretary's Office, Freemasons' Hall, and of all Booksellers.

Banning was in like manner, elected Steward to represent this lodge at the ensuing annual festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution. The lodge afterwards had its usual banquet. This lodge is restricted to Present and Past Grand Stewards. The joining premium is one guinea, and the annual subscriptions two guineas, including in both cases, G Lodge dues.

Tuscan Lodge, No. 14.—This lodge met on Tuesday, the 23rd inst., under the presidency of Bro. Frank Richardson, W.M.; Cornwell, S.W., and Walter Richardson, P.M., as J.W. Bro. Cornwell was unanimously elected W.M. for the year ensuing, Bro. Glover, P.M., was also unanimously re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. Wm. Bristow, J.W., was in the like manner elected Steward for the Boys' School, at the next annual festival. The W.M. proposed two candidates for initiation at the next lodge and also a joining brother and there being time, the lecture on the tracing-board in the second degree was given. The members afterwards adjourned to the tavern and partook of the customary banquet.

Old King's Arms Lodge, No. 23.—The second regular meeting of this old and influential lodge took place at Freemasons' Tavern, on Monday, the 22nd inst., Bro. E. Farmer, W.M., in the chair, supported by Bros. G. H. Wright, I.P.M., and his officers; C. Tighe, S.W.; J. Horwood J.W.; S. H. Miller, J.D.; H. B. Dunn, I.G. There was also present a goodly number of old and well-known P.M.'s, viz., Bros. W. Paas, Treas.; W. Jaques, Sec.; J. G. Marsh, and Geo. Gurney, including also Bro. R. Farquharson, a respected Hon. Member of nearly twenty years' standing, some minor matters of business having been disposed of, the lodge proceeded to the election of Master for the ensuing year, which resulted in the election of Bro. Tighe, S.W., being carried nemine contradicente, and Bro. Paas, who has filled the office of Treasurer for many years so much to the satisfaction of the brethren, was again re-elected to that responsible office, there being no other business, the lodge was closed in ample form. The brethren then retired to refreshment, under the presidency of the W.M. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to with much effect, including one for the Masonic Charities, which was ably responded to by Bro. Patten, P.G.S.B., and the respected Sec. of the Girls' School, who happened to be the only visitor present, and who was successful (as is usual in this lodge), in obtaining the name of a brother to serve the office of Steward to that institution at the forthcoming festival, in the person of Bro. Horwood, J.W. During the evening, Bro. R. Farquharson delighted the company with his usual talent, in singing several beautiful songs, with the piano-forte as an accompaniment, which added much to the enjoyment of the evening. In the course of the evening Bro. J. Wheeler, P.M., presented to the lodge a handsome album, which is intended to contain the photographs of all the members, and which we trust will be carefully presented and handed down as a memento to future generations. The brethren retired from the festive board at an early hour, after having spent a delightful evening.

Lodge of Temperance, No. 169.—The usual monthly meeting of this old lodge was held at the White Swan Tavern, 217, High-street, Deptford, on Thursday, Nov. 18th. Bro. J. D. Woodland, W.M., presided, and in an able manner initiated Mr. Cole into Freemasonry. Apologies were received from the other candidates for their absence, and the lodge was then closed. There were present Bros. A. Pulley, S.W.; Marshall, J.W.; J. Brown, P.M., Treas.; J. T. Tibbals, P.M., Sec.; J. Rosenstock, S.D.; Tippet, J.D.; T. Littlecott, I.G.; G. Bolton, P.M.; J. Barrett, P.M.; N. Wingfield, P.M.; and others. Visitors: F. Walters, P.M. (73), W.M. (871); R. G. Batt, W.M. (147); C. G. Dilley (147); J. Roper (147); J. Carver (1155); and others. The proceeds of the charity box were given to the unfortunate Tyler, Bro. J. L. Winn, P.M. (147), who lies in a dying state.

Oak Lodge, No. 190.—On Wednesday evening, 17th inst., this lodge (removed from Radley's), held its first meeting for the session, at the Freemasons' Hall, under the presidency of Bro. H. W. Hemsworth, W.M., who was re-elected Master for the ensuing year. Bro. T. D. P. Jones, cashier of the Union Bank of London, was elected Treas. Mr. W. J. Philp was then initiated, and Bros. Kemble and Hogg were passed to the second degree by Bro. Morrin, P.M., in his usual efficient manner. Bros. Capta. Bisson and Mercier were subsequently admitted as joining members; the W.M. in presenting the latter to the lodge, expressed the pleasure he felt in introducing him. This brother is at the present time well-known as the Hon. Sec. to the committee for the reception of their majesties the King and Queen of the Belgians, he had likewise acted in the same capacity to the Anglo-Belgian Committee at Liege. Bro. Mercier is one of the most eminent public portrait painters of the day. His last great work was a portrait of Wright, the philanthropist, painted for the city of Manchester. Sir Charles Barry, the celebrated architect of the Houses of Parliament, was formerly a member of the Oak Lodge, and the W.M. hoped that Bro. Mercier would prove as great an honour to the lodge as that distinguished gentleman. After four hours' work, the brethren adjourned to refreshment, and it is but due to Bro. Gosden to say that the banquet was served in the most recherche style to the satisfaction of all present.

Lodge of Israel, No. 205.—This numerous and influential lodge held its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday last, in the lodge room at Radley's Hotel, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars, where the highly efficient Master, the Worshipful Bro. J. Chamberlin, ably supported by Bros. M. J. Emanuel, S.W.; H. M. Harris, J.W.; A. M. Cohen, P.M., Sec.; Turner, S.D.; Van Denbosch, J.D.; Hogard I.G., and P.M.'s Stanton Jones, J. M. Harris, Coote, and P.M. Harris, who, in his usual impressive manner, initiated Messrs. Donald, Deacon, Richardson, Collins and Willing into our mysteries; conferred the degree of F.C. on Bro. Mawbey, and that of M.M. on Bro. Cohen, after which a long and tedious debate ensued respecting an alteration in the by-laws. A poor brother (after a strict examination) who was going to a situation in the country was liberally assisted, and the lodge was closed in the usual form with solemn prayer, and adjourned to Thursday, the 2nd prox., when an emergency meeting will be held for the initiation of several gentlemen on the list of candidates, and other business. The only visitors present were the W. Bros. Weaver, Master of the Whittington, and H. M. Levy, P.M. Joppa. We cannot conclude without bearing testimony to the careful attention paid to the requirements (in the shape of refreshments), of the brethren by the W. Bro. J. Hart's nephew and his assistants.

Whittington Lodge, 862.—The Installation Meeting of this united and prosperous lodge was held on Monday, the 15th, at Anderson's Hotel, Fleet Street, when a very large number of brethren attended to welcome the accession to the royal hall of Brother James Weaver, whose abilities in the musical profession are so well known, and whose masonic acquirements and gentlemanly demeanour are equally appreciated by his brethren in Freemasonry. Among the visitors were Brothers Col. Burdett, P.G.W. representative from the Grand Lodge of Ireland; John Hervey, P.G.D., Grand Secretary of England; E. H. Patten P.G.S.B.; J. Smith P.G. Purst; F. Binckes P.G. Steward; C. Coote, Sen.; C. Coote, Jun.; E. Stanton Jones; H. Johnson, C.C., and about twelve other brethren. Brother D. J. Davies, W.M., passed Brother Watier to the second degree, and Brother Brett, P.M., Asst. G. Adutt, Purst., initiated Mr. Leon after which he proceeded with the installation of Brother James Weaver, W.M. elect who was installed in the presence of about eighteen Past Masters. On the re-admission of the brethren the usual salutes were given, and the Officers for the ensuing year were then appointed or invested as follows:—Br. S. S. Davies, S.W.; J. Salisbury, J.W.; J. G. Thompson, P.M. Treas.; R. W. Little, P.M. Sec.; Rev. J. W. Laughlin, P.G. Chap., Herts, Chaplain; W. J. H. Jones, S.D.; A. Frickenhaus, J.D.; W. F. Smith, I.G.; B. Sealeg, D.C.; J. Brett, P.M. Wine Steward. The installing Master then delivered the addresses in the style for which he is so renowned in the Masonic world, and after the transaction of some formal business the Lodge was closed. The brethren then adjourned to the banquetting room, where a sumptuous dinner was provided under the immediate supervision of Brother G. Smith the efficient manager. Ample justice having been done to the good things provided, and the cloth having been removed, the W.M. gave in happy terms our gracious Queen's health, which was loyally received. A similar compliment was accorded to that of the Grand Master, whose popularity was perhaps never so great as at present. The Dep. Grand Master, Lord de Grey, and the other Grand Officers is a toast always well received and no deficiency in this respect can be laid to the charge of the Whittingtonians; on this occasion, however, the presence of such esteemed brethren as Col. Burdett, John Hervey, E. H. Patten, and Joseph Smith as representatives of the Grand Lodge stimulated the enthusiasm of the brethren to fever heat, and quite a demonstration of applause ensued. A suitable response having been returned, the W.M. in appropriate terms proposed the health of the "Initiate," and Brother Adutt replied with evident feeling. Bro. Davies, I.P.M., then introduced the toast of the "W. Master," whose name elicited loud cheers from all parts of the room. When the applause had subsided the toast was drunk with all the honours, and one of the musical brethren favoured the company with a choice morceau on the piano-forte. Brother Weaver then rose and said:—Brethren, I thank you very sincerely for having drank my health; believe me I feel the compliment you have paid me to night greatly. Indeed I think the greatest compliment that could possibly be given to a brother is to elect him unanimously Master of his lodge, more especially if there is not a blank in the ballot box when opened. This, brethren, is the manner in which you have elected me, and again I thank you sincerely. Our worthy Bro. P.M. Laughlin, Chaplain of our lodge, has told you that I have gone through the whole of the offices, commencing from the very bottom of the ladder. He is quite correct, and as we have several young Masons here to-night, it may not be out of place to give you my Masonic career in this my mother lodge. I was initiated in March 1863, passed April, and raised in May, in the same year. My first appointment was that of Organist, which I have retained throughout the whole time; having once been appointed an officer of our lodge, my ambition then was to go up the ladder until I reached the roof of the building. I was informed that the post of Organist was stationary. However in due time I held my first progressive appointment as Wine Steward, a very honourable office, and the easiest of any, for, I assure you brethren that I never ordered a bottle of wine for the Banquet Table during my year of office, Bro. P.M. Brett, took especial care of that, and quite right to, because I being inexperienced in my duties I might have flourished the wine vouchers in such a manner as to get myself into disgrace and the lodge into difficulties, (no, I do not mean difficulties, we are to well armed with experienced and careful Past Masters to allow that, I should have sidd debt) thanks to Bro. Brett, I steered clear of that difficulty. My next appointment was that of J.D. (I did not fill the office of I.G.), then S.D., J.W., S.W., and now W.M. I have to-night put my foot on the roof of the building and it shall not be through my own folly or wantonness that shall cause me to fall, but the ladder still reaches beyond the roof, and it is my intention to endeavour to get to the top round, but of course must wait for time and circumstances, during the years of my several offices I have done the best that laid in my power, to fulfil the duties appointed to each. It is very difficult for a musical man to keep any but business appointments in the evening, as his profession always occupies him at that time, but during my year of office as W.M. I shall not neglect the lodge, and it will be some very important circumstance that will keep me away from our happy and united little lodge. The health of the Past Masters followed, and was received with great cordiality especially when the W.M. affixed a P.M.'s jewel to the breast of Bro. D. J. Davis the outgoing Master, as a mark of esteem and in recognition of his services to the lodge, Bro. Davis suitably responded. The "Visitors" the "Officers," and the "Masonic Charities" were given in due succession, and the last toast elicited a powerful speech from Bro. Binckes, who appealed warmly on behalf of the Boys' School. The Tyler's toast, at 11 o'clock, closed the proceedings of this highly successful meeting.

New Concord Lodge, No. 813.—This lodge was held on the 20th inst., at its usual place of meeting, Hoxton. The lodge was opened in due form, all the officers being present. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the ballot was taken for the following gentlemen, Messrs. Gabb, jun., Hofbauer, Shellard and Phillips. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, and Bro. Mountford having shown his proficiency, retired, and the lodge being opened in the third degree he was raised to the sublime degree of Master-Mason. The lodge was resumed to the first degree, and Bro. Cain being a candidate, answered the usual questions and retired, and the lodge being resumed to the second degree, he was passed to the degree of Fellow Craft. The Master again resumed to the first degree, and Messrs. Taylor, Gabb, Hofbauer, and Shellard were severally initiated into the mysteries and privileges of Ancient Freemasonry. An application was made for the sanction of this lodge to a petition for a warrant for a new lodge at Canonbury, which was unanimously granted. The S.W. (Bro. Bartlett,) being the Steward for the Aged and Decayed Freemasons and their Widows, was granted five pounds to be placed on his list, and the brethren very heartily responded to this appeal on behalf of the Charity. The lodge being closed in solemn form, the brethren adjourned to a very excellent supper, provided by the host, Bro. Gabb, presided over by Bro. J. Hart, W.M., assisted by his Wardens, Bros. Bartlett and Atkins. Among the visitors were, Bros. Forbes (65), Wild (172) Sheppard (27), Linn (871), Harman (73), and Macrea (27). After the cloth was withdrawn, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to. Bro. J. Kimmens, P.G.P., founder, and P.M., replied on behalf of the G. Officers, and afterwards in proposing the health of the W.M., dilated upon the very efficient manner he had performed the ceremony in the third degree. The W.M. in acknowledging the toast, expressed his pleasure that his working had given satisfaction and instruction to the brethren, and wished to convey to his officers his gratitude for their able assistance, also to Bro. Main, P.M. and Hon. Sec. The visitors severally expressed their delight at the working of the lodge in every particular. Bro. Wm. Davitt, Organist, officiated during the evening, and enlivened the company with some excellent playing and singing assisted by Bros. Blyth, J.D., Taylor Wyld, &c.

and correctly rendered by the W.M. and his Officers, to whom too much praise cannot be awarded for their successful endeavour to maintain the prestige of the lodge, and keep it equal to former years. Bro. Sledge explained the tracing-board in a faultless manner which well merited the warm applause of the brethren. The lodge was then closed to the first degree, when it was proposed, seconded, and unanimously agreed, that five guineas be given out of the funds of the lodge, in aid of the distressed widows and orphans of the fishermen who were lost in the late gale. Hearty good wishes were expressed for the welfare of the lodge by the distinguished visitors and brethren. After which it was closed in due form and the brethren retired to refreshment. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and duly responded to, including the W.M.'s of the two Scarborough Lodges, 200 and 1218, to both of whom high tributes were justly paid for their many excellent qualities, the exertions they had used in bringing their lodges to their present prosperous condition, and in having so harmoniously, and ably assisted, in the getting up of successful Masonic demonstrations for the benefit of the Masonic Charities. The W.M.'s both returned thanks in a very able manner, both stated that what they had done was with a willing heart, and that they sincerely hoped their successors would do likewise, of which they had no fear. The Tyler's toast brought a very agreeable meeting to a close.

LEICESTER.—John of Gaunt Lodge, No. 523.—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge took place at the Masonic Hall, on Thursday, the 18th inst., under the presidency of their excellent W.M., Bro. Geo. Toller, jun., who most efficiently conducted the ceremonies of the evening. The first business, after the confirmation of the minutes, was to ballot for four gentlemen, proposed at the last lodge as candidates for Freemasonry, viz., Rev. John Halford M.A., of Wistow, Rev. William Targett Fry, M.A., curate of St. Andrew's, Leicester, Mr. Charles Whitaker, of Leicester, colonial merchant, and Mr. F. J. Smith, of Oadby, farmer, all of whom were unanimously elected. The first two gentlemen were prevented attending on this occasion, but the others being present, were severally introduced and initiated into our mysteries. On the conclusion of the ceremony the lecture on the tracing-board was delivered by the W.M., and the charge to the candidates by the D.P.G.M. The lodge was then opened in the second and third degrees, when Bro. Fletcher, who passed a most satisfactory examination as a Fellow Craft, was regularly raised to the sublime degree of M.M., the impressive effect of the solemn ceremony being greatly enhanced by a full musical service conducted by Bro. Charles Johnson, on the organ. On the lodge being closed down to the first degree, several matters of business came before the brethren, inter alia, a long discussion took place on a motion by the Rev. Bro. Haycroft, D.D., on the expediency of either having the present organ, (which was purchased by subscription, on the erection of the hall, ten years ago,) put into thorough repair, or of replacing it by a more efficient instrument. This resulted in a committee being appointed to ascertain the cost of efficiently repairing the present organ. On the conclusion of the business, the brethren adjourned to refreshment, and spent an hour or two most harmoniously and pleasantly. The attendance at lodge was numerous, and comprised the following members, Bros. Toller, W.M.; P.M.'s Kelly, D.P.G.M., and W.M. 279; Duff, W. B. Smith, Treas.; and C. Johnson, Org.; Buzzard, S.W.; Scaltherpe J.W.; Baines, Sec.; Rev. Dr. Haycroft, S.D.; Partridge, J.D.; Atkins and Sargeant, Stewards; Lewin, I.G.; C. Spencer, Marr, Richardson, Fletcher; Dunn and Bembidge, Tylers. The visitors comprised Bros. Pettifor, P.M.; Weare, P.M. and Treas.; Miller, Pegg, Ride, Palmer McAllister, and Davisthorpe, of St. John's Lodge No. 279, the most fraternal feeling existing between the members of the two lodges.

LOUGHBOROUGH, LEICESTER.—Howe and Charnwood Lodge, No. 1007.—This once prosperous lodge, after being dormant for two years or more, has just resumed work with it, it is hoped, a good prospect of permanent success. A lodge was summoned some weeks ago for the election of W.M. for the ensuing year, which resulted in the election of Bro. John Wilson, a Past Warden of the lodge, and a meeting was summoned for Thursday, the 18th inst., at the Bull's Head Hotel for his installation, &c. There was a good attendance from the Leicester lodges. The chair was taken by Bro. Major Brown, one of the P.M.'s and P.M. of No. 523, and P.P.G.S.W., who performed the ceremony of installation in his usual impressive manner assisted by Bros. Pettifor, P.M. 279, and P.P.G.S.W. and Weaver, P.M. 279, and P.P.G.S.D. and others. The newly-installed W.M. having appointed and invested his officers, a ballot was taken for two candidates, viz., Mr. William Grimes Palmer, jun., surgeon, Loughborough, and Mr. Arthur George Chamberlin, Poor Law Auditor, Leicester, who being unanimously elected, were afterwards duly initiated. On the conclusion of the business, the brethren adjourned to a banquet, under the presidency of the newly-installed W.M.

GUILDFORD.—Royal Alfred Lodge, No. 777.—A meeting of this flourishing lodge was held on the 18th inst., at the Angel Hotel, when a large number of brethren mustered. The lodge was duly opened, and two brethren having proved themselves proficient in the first degree were subsequently passed to the rank of Craftsmen. The chief business of the evening, however, was the presentation of a magnificent gold jewel to Bro. J. Nealds, P.M., in recognition of his valuable services as Treasurer, and also in the capacity of Secretary for a very lengthened period. The jewel itself was of exquisite design and workmanship and gave the greatest satisfaction to the members of the lodge, and we may add that it was manufactured by Bro. George Kenning, of 3 and 4, Little Britain, London. This presentation was quite unexpected on the part of the worthy brother who received it, thus rendering it doubly pleasurable. Bro. Nealds expressed his acknowledgments for the handsome gift in feeling terms, and said that he accepted it as a proof of the good will of the brethren. (applause) He had endeavoured to do his duty in a Masonic point of view, and rejoiced to find that the lodge with which he was so intimately associated, was so united, prosperous, and happy. The lodge was then closed with the usual solemnities.

OAKHAM, RUTLAND.—Vale of Catmos Lodge, No. 1265.—This newly-established lodge held its second meeting since its consecration, at the Agricultural Hall, on Wednesday, the 17th inst. The lodge having been opened and the minutes of the previous meeting read and confirmed, a dispensation was read for the initiation of Mr. William Hibbit, of Oakham, baker, as a serving brother, and the ballot being in his favour, he was afterwards duly initiated. The Rev. E. Hawley, of the Pelham Lodge, No. 939, (a native of Oakham,) was elected a joining member of this lodge. Bros. Morris and Fisher, were then examined in the first degree, and having been approved and entrusted retired, and the lodge having been opened in the second degree they were passed thereto; after which the D.P.G.M., (who presided during the ceremonies,) delivered the lecture on the tracing-board. Some business relating to the by-laws having been transacted, and several propositions of joining members and candidates having been made, the lodge was closed by the W.M., and the brethren adjourned to the Crown Hotel, for refreshment. Amongst the members present were, Bros. Kelly, D.P.G.M.; Brown, W.M., P.G.J.W.; the Revs. W. Langley, W.M. 1130, and P.G.S.W.; W. K. Robinson, P.M. 1130, and P.P.G.C.; and Frederick Orme, Prov. Bailey, Org., (who performed on the harmonium during the ceremonies), Crowson, Morris, Fisher, and others.

MELTON MOWBRAY.—De Mowbray Chapter, 1130.—A convocation of this recently formed and flourishing chapter was held at the George Hotel, on Thursday, the 18th instant, when the following companions were present:—Rev. W. Langley, W.A., M.E.Z.; Fird. Fern Newcome, H.; W. Kelly, P.Z., 279 and 779, P.G.H., J.; Geo. Brown, E.; Rev. W. K. Robinson, B.A., N.; G. M. Ashforth, M.D., A.S.; Adcock, Treas.; Chester, P. Newcombe, and several other members. A ballot having been taken and three out of five candidates being in attendance, viz., Bros. Letty, No. 1130; J. Clarke Duncombe, No. 466; Stamford, and J. M. Kew, No. 1265, Oakham. They were duly exalted by the M.E.Z., assisted by E. Comp. Kelly, as P.S. in the deeply regretted absence of Comp. Douglas, M.R.C.S., through severe illness. The M.E.Z. subsequently gave the introduction to the lectures which were afterwards delivered by Comp. Kelly. On the conclusion of the business the chapter was closed in solemn form and with prayer, and the companions adjourned to refreshment.

MARK MASONRY.

IPSWICH.—The Albert Victor Lodge of M. Masons.—This Lodge held a meeting on Monday the 22nd instant, which meeting was well attended by the members. After the preliminary business had been disposed of, Brother George Cresswell, of the Prince of Wales Lodge, No. 559, was regularly introduced and advanced. Brother Henry Thomas, the W.M. elect, was installed into the Chair of Adonirai by Brother C. T. Townsend P.S.G.D., and Brother the Rev. R. A. Ganderon, Grand Chaplain, who having appointed and invested his Officers congratulated the Lodge on its present prosperous state as shown by the auditors' report, and returned thanks to the brethren for the honour they have done him in electing him to the important office. Brother Emma Holmes, Junior Warden of the Electric Lodge of M.M., No. 39, was proposed as a joining member.

INSTRUCTION.

Prestonian Club for M.M.s.—The usual weekly meeting of this excellent club of instruction, which is held every Tuesday evening at 8, at Bro. Hunt's Lyceum Tavern, Strand, took place on Tuesday the 23rd inst. Bro. W. Saegert worked the first. Bro. G. Pym the second, after which Bro. William Watson rehearsed the ceremony of Installation in such a masterly manner as to elicit the warmest expressions of approbation from the Brethren and a unanimous vote of thanks, after this Bro. C. Long went through the ceremony of raising in a very impressive style. Taken altogether we are assured there is no Lodge of instruction in the Metropolis, where Officers of Lodges can acquire more Masonic knowledge and good practice as they can at the Prestonian Club.

ORDERS OF CHIVALRY.

RED CROSS OF ROME & CONSTANTINE.

BIRMINGHAM.—Rose of Sharon Conclave, No. 19.—An assembly of emergency was held at the Masonic Hall, on Wednesday the 18th inst. Sir Knight the Rev. W. B. Smith, M.P.S., presided, supported by Sir Knt. Thomas Partridge, V.E., the other officers of the conclave, and a goodly number of Knts. Companions. The conclave was opened in Imperial form and then in the Priestly order, when Colonel John Machen, D.P.G.M., was duly consecrated R., and afterwards enthroned as an honorary M.P.S. The Knts. on re-entering the conclave saluted him as Sovereign of the Order and Inspector General for Warwickshire, six candidates were in attendance, and the ballot proving unanimous in their favour, they were admitted, properly prepared, and installed as Knights of the Order. At the conclusion of the work five more brethren were proposed for installation the conclave was then closed, and the Knts. adjourned to the banquet room and after the usual toasts had been proposed and responded to, they separated highly pleased pleased with the success attending this newly-formed conclave, sixteen candidates having been installed since the first meeting in July last.

GRAND LODGE.

Motion on the Agenda for Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge, Dec. 1st. 1869.

By Bro. JAMES STEVENS, P.M., P.Z., &c.

"That with a view to securing greater uniformity of working and observance of the 'same usages and customs' throughout the several lodges held under the authority of the Grand Lodge of England, a committee of Past Masters be appointed to enquire into the merits of the respective systems of working now in practice, and to report to Grand Lodge thereon, with such recommendations as they may think necessary to prevent deviation from the established mode, such deviation being according to the Constitution of Freemasonry improper and not to be justified or countenanced."

BRO. T. ROBERTS, late acting manager of the Theatre Royal Princess's, announces his benefit for the 18th and 14th December. It is expected from the numerous friends of that well-known and popular Brother, (being a member of the Lodge of Israel, No. 205), that he will have a bumper. Tickets can be had at the Box Office, and at Bro. T. Roberts; address, 95, New-bond-street.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

We have great pleasure in announcing that we have decided to publish THE FREEMASON—commencing with Volume III., January 1st, 1870—on toned paper, and with old-faced type, similar to that used by the Pall Mall Gazette and other high-class publications.

The size will also be permanently enlarged to Sixteen Pages, and, with other improvements contemplated, THE FREEMASON will then be the leading weekly organ of the Craft throughout the globe.

Answers to Correspondents.

PARACELSUS.—The English Rosicrucian Fraternity is not, we believe, a proselytising body, but if you write to Dr. Woodman, Vittoria Villa, Stoke Newington-road, N., that very obliging Brother will give you every information. The Fraternity has no connection with the Red Cross Order, although it is true that many gentlemen are members of both societies, just as a man may be a Freemason and also a Civil Engineer.

NUMA.—According to the strict letter of the law, the W.M. was right, his decision, therefore, cannot be questioned, although his demeanour in announcing it may be open to objection. Some men however, hide under a very rugged exterior a true and kindly heart. "Let it slide," as our New York cousin says.

J.C.—We duly received the Programme of the Ceremony at Stockton, but irrespective of the late period—nearly a month after the event—at which it came to hand, we really cannot undertake to manipulate reports out of such scanty materials. If brethren desire such reports to appear in THE FREEMASON we shall at times be glad to give them the benefit of our large circulation, free of charge, but if the proper officials neglect to send a fair account of the proceedings it is impossible for us to supply their deficiencies. The vast increase in the circulation of this Journal now necessitates our going to press by mid-day on Thursdays.

Obituary.

BROTHER AUGUSTUS UNION THISELTON.

The late Brother Augustus Union Thistelton, whose death we recorded last week, was initiated in the Vitruvian Lodge, now No. 87, in the year 1823. He joined St. Thomas's Lodge, No. 142 on the 21st June, 1824, and continued a member for many years.

Brother Thistelton occupied the post of Secretary to the Lodge of Antiquity, No. 2, for a considerable period, his connection with the Lodge dating from the 22nd November, 1837. He was also a member of the Lodge of Hope and Unity, No. 214, Romford. Our deceased brother held the position of Secretary of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys for more than thirty years, and retired on a pension of £100 per annum about nine years ago.

Another link in the chain which binds the present generation of Masons to the old worthies of the past is broken by the death of Augustus Union Thistelton.

BUSINESS TO BE TRANSACTED IN GRAND LODGE.

THE next meeting of Grand Lodge will be in many respects a remarkable one. In the first place, the M.W. Grand Master will confirm personally, the announcement we made last week, that his lordship intends to retire from the sovereignty of the English Craft. This in itself opens out an unknown vista—for no man can pierce the depths of the future, or predicate the results of time or change.

To the Earl of Zetland we have already expressed our sentiments of fraternal regard and affection, in which every English Freemason who is worthy of the name will most heartily join; but we have now to turn to the rising sun, and to consider calmly and impartially the path that spreads itself before us. One of the first problems to be solved is the term of office of the Chief of the Craft, and upon this subject no less than four notices of motion stand upon the agenda paper for the next quarterly Communication, thus clearly evincing the importance which is attached to a limitation of the period in future. These notices range from three to seven years as the limit, and no doubt each view will be supported by plausible arguments. We, however, unhesitatingly declare ourselves in favour of the shortest term proposed, which is promulgated by Bro. J. Rankin Stebbing, P.G.D., an old and esteemed Mason, and we are satisfied that the weight of opinion in Grand Lodge will incline to his side. It is generally conceded that the Grand Mastership should not be held for an indefinite period, and the reasons which are adduced in favour of restricting the term to a certain number of years all tell in favour of an infusion of new blood as frequently as possible. When the Earl of Zetland was elected Grand Master, there was, certainly, no Brother then living with greater claims to the distinction, or one more justly entitled to the confidence reposed in him. However, with the great increase of lodges, and the enormous multiplication of the Craft in numbers and influence, it has followed as a natural result that we have now amongst us many able men—statesmen and senators—leaders in the social and political world; men in every respect qualified by their position, ability, and zeal for the high station of Grand Master of England. We will take for example the Earl de Grey and Ripon, whose services to Freemasonry as Deputy Grand Master, have been manifold and brilliant. Is there a member of Grand Lodge who would gainsay the claim of such a brother to succeed Lord Zetland in the Oriental chair? We anticipate the answer; but at the same time we are bound to maintain that there are also other noblemen eminently fitted for the post; men who are sterling Masons, and who rule the provinces over which they preside with admirable impartiality, integrity and success. To all such brethren we would open the door of preferment. We would say, "The Grand Mastership of England is the legitimate object of your ambition—your labours in the provinces are not unnoted by the brethren at large, and the zeal that you have shown to advance the interests of the Order has not been exhibited in vain."

But if we extend the duration of the Grand Master's term of office to seven years, we shall be practically excluding distinguished brethren from the post; because, as a rule, efficient Deputy Grand Masters may confidently rely upon being elected Grand Masters in their turn, and the prospect of succession to the chair would thus be really closed to all other brethren for fourteen years.

We are satisfied that such experienced Masons as Bros. John Savage, Joseph Smith, and Raynham W. Stewart, who have adopted a longer period than three years as their peculiar views of the desired limitation, will be easily led to reconsider the question, and to support the proposition of Bro. Stebbing. In any case, we prognosticate for the latter motion a complete victory, for in this instance, as in many others, it will be seen that when a reform is considered advisable, it will be accomplished thoroughly, and unmistakeably. The feeling of the London brethren below the dais is unanimously in favour of the period named by Bro. Stebbing, and we cannot imagine that it will be seriously opposed by any considerable section of the Craft.

Let us now turn to the nomination of a successor to our present revered Chief, and in this respect we may safely prophesy the name of the future Grand Master of England. The whole fraternity, wheresoever dispersed throughout the globe, respects and esteems the Earl de Grey and Ripon. In the Grand Lodge of England, over which he has often presided in the unavoidable absence of Lord Zetland, there is but one opinion as to his merits, and in his own especial Province, West Yorkshire, we are well assured he is venerated and beloved. It would be out of place to expatiate upon his lordship's abilities as a statesman, but it is not too much to say that we are all proud to see him holding such an exalted position in the national Councils. Yes, with one voice and one soul, the Freemasons of England are ready to attest their estimation of Lord de Grey's services by electing him to preside over them as Most Worshipful Grand Master.

We may now glance at the other business which will come before Grand Lodge. The report of the Committee on the Fund of Benevolence will be further considered, and we trust the various recommendations to extend the powers of the Lodge of Benevolence, and those of the Grand Master, in the award of grants to petitioners, will be carried unanimously. We shall also be glad to find instituted a more rigid scrutiny into the personal character of each applicant for relief, as we are decidedly of opinion that many undeserving cases are relieved under the present system. To quote a recent instance we may state that a man who received £20 at the October meeting of the Lodge of Benevolence, is advertised in the American papers as having absconded with a servant woman, leaving a wife and children to mourn his loss. It is possible that a stricter investigation of this and other similar cases would have elicited the truth. We may also refer to Bro. Raynham W. Stewart's proposal to discontinue the issue of free votes to lodges and chapters in connection with the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, a measure which has our hearty support.

There is likewise an important notice of motion by Bro. James Stevens, in reference to uniformity of working. Bro. Stevens asks for a Committee of enquiry, and this modest request we are sure will be granted by Grand Lodge. Recent events have shown that ignorant men presume upon the differences which now exist between the two systems of working, known as the "Emulation" and "Stability," in order to raise a clumsy and ludicrous superstructure of their own. Educated brethren will not suffer Masonry to be thus travestied; and the least we can do is to take the various modes of working into consideration, and devise means to check such presumption in future. English Freemasonry has a glorious mission—through her instrumentality the light of truth has been scattered over distant lands, while at home she cements the bond of unity between men who, to use the language of our ancient charges, "might otherwise have remained at a perpetual distance." Without encouraging the extravagancies of extreme political parties, English Freemasonry has ever stood forth as the champion of the oppressed, and the palladium of the free. By a moral influence, which is not surpassed by that of any human organization, English Freemasonry asserts itself over the entire globe, marching steadily onward, undismayed by the paper pellets, of priests, or the discordant diatribes of foolish and factious men. Such has been our career in the past—may such be our course in the future. Consistency ever wins respect—and we have but to persevere in the good work of toleration benevolence and mutual friendship, to retain for the Masonic Order in England the esteem and admiration of the world.

FREEMASONRY AMONG THE NATIVES OF VAN- COUVER'S ISLAND.

The following extract will, I think, be found interesting to your readers:—

I should not omit in this account to mention that there is a secret association or fraternity among the Aht natives, composed of persons who are united for some purpose which has not been discovered. Meetings are held at different places about once a year in a house covered round inside with mats. All non-members and women are excluded. As many as seventy natives from various tribes on the Vancouver shore, and also on the American side, have been known to attend one of these meetings. It is not a tribal affair, chief's affair, nor a medicine man's affair; these persons may or may not be members of the association, but unless they are members they are not permitted to enter the house, and seem to be quite ignorant of what is going on. The members wash and paint themselves and wear their best blanket, and now and then come out of the house to wash and put on fresh paint. The proceedings inside the house are conducted in silence, there is no singing nor noise during the meeting of this secret association. Is this fraternity likely to be in any way connected with Freemasonry? Freemasonry has been displayed in quarters least suspected.—From "Scenes and Studies of Savage Life," by G. M. Sproat.

VIATOR.

Can an Entered Apprentice propose for affiliation a brother Mason who is a F.C. and M.M., nothing being said to the contrary in the Constitutions; if the W.M. thinks the E.A. is not entitled to do so, whether the W.M. can properly refuse to allow the E.A. to propose a F.C. or M.M. for affiliation. ? P.M.

NOTABLE ROSICRUCIAN WORKS.

BY WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

* "The Rosie Crucian Infallible Axiomata; or General Rules to know all things past, present, and to come: usefull, pleasant, and profitable to all, and fitted to the understanding of mean capacities. By JOHN HEYDON, Gent., a servant of God, and Secretary of Nature. Penes nos unda Tagi. London. Printed in the year 1660. (Preface, &c., and 126 pages.) Dedicated to the Most Honourable, Valiant, and Successful, his Highness, James Duke of York."

John Heydon states that "being bound to the Duke of York, by the band of these his great virtues, he is so far a debtor as to communicate without envy by the true account of all opinions these Rosie Crucian Infallible Axiomata, which we have read and learned, especially their precious medicines and their greatest secret, the Pentarva, with their gift of healing, according to our complexion and capacity." Heydon, it seemed, expected to suffer for loyalty to his sacred Majesty the King, for John Hewitt, "Doctor of Divinity, and others who were spitefully thrust into jail with him, were cruelly murdered by the tyrant Oliver Cromwell, because they loved our sovereign lord the King," by his estates procured his ransom. The epistle dedication was written 4th August, 1660.

The preface reveals the fact that the author was not a Rosicrucian, although profoundly acquainted with its principles and philosophy. He narrates the generally-received account of the origin of the society, and of their actions, which were accounted fabulous, and in many respects accepts the version of "Fama Fraternitates" to be the correct version of so extraordinary an institution. The work itself is veiled in allegory, and to any but the diligent and careful student it is, without doubt, either a sealed volume or a stumbling-block. He describes the Pentarva of Rosicrucians to be "a water and no stone, it after night discovers a fire as bright as day; and if you look on it in the day-time it dazes the eye with certain glances or coruscations, for in it is a spirit of admirable power to long life, wisdom, and virtue."

A diagram of peculiar construction, displaying much ingenuity and considerable knowledge of the cabalistic philosophy. Its study is a most interesting and curious one, but its character is unfitted for reproduction here. The work is mainly an elaborate treatise on the signification of numbers from one to twelve:—"Of the wonderful secrets of numbers, of their signification; how Moses, showed so many signs by them, how Joshua made the sun stand still by numbers, how by numbers Elijah called down fire from heaven upon his enemies; how by these following numbers the Rosie Crucians foreknow all future things, command whole nature, have power over devils and angels, and do miracles, &c.; how by this number a river spake to Pythagoras (i.e., one). Two is called a number of memory and of light, and the number of man, who is called another and the lesser world. Three, Justice, which is the highest perfection, and is not without many mysteries; it is an uncompounded number, a number of perfection, and most powerfull, for there are three persons in one God, there are three theological virtues in Religion, hence it is that number conduces to the ceremonies of religion, and the Pythagoreans use it in their sanctifications and purifications, and it is most fit in bindings and legations. The number Four is the four square plain, which consists of two proportions, whereof the first is one to two and two to one. Five is of no small perfection or virtue, being the great middle of the universal number ten; five senses, five powers in the soul, five fingers on the hand, name of God expressed with five letters, Eloim; name of Christ with five, Ihesu; in the elementary world five kinds of corruptible things, water, air, fire, earth, and a mixed body. Six is called the balance of the world. Seven, the hebdomad or septenary, is a fit symbol of God, as he is considered, having finished these six days' creation, for then, as this

* I am indebted to my friend Bro. Captain Irwin, a most zealous Mason, for the favour of perusing this work.

infallible Axiomata intimates, He creates nothing further, and therefore His condition is then very fitly set out by the number Seven. All numbers within the Decad are cast in the three ranks, as Plato observes: 'Some beget but are not begotten, others are begotten but do not beget, the last both beget and are begotten;' the number 7 is only excepted, that is neither begotten nor begets any number, which is a perfect emblem of God. The number Ten is called every number compleat, signifying the full course of life, for beyond that we cannot number within itself or explain them by itself and its own by multiplying them."

THE GRAND MASTER.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR,—A paragraph has been going the round of the papers announcing the resignation of our revered chief, Lord Zetland, after a reign of 27 years over the brethren of the mystic tie, and it has been stated that Lord de Grey and Ripon is to succeed him, as the Prince of Wales is too young a Mason to occupy that position.

I should like to know on whose authority this statement was made.

Might I ask if Her Majesty were suddenly called from hence [may Heaven long avert so great a calamity] would it be said that His Royal Highness was too young to ascend the Throne of England? The Prince of Wales, afterwards George the 4th, was elected G.M. on the decease of his uncle the Duke of Cumberland in 1790, though he had been only three years a Mason, and his accession to the throne of the wise king was hailed as an augury of a bright future for Masonry.

Is there any one will say that our Prince of Wales will not as worthily fill the throne as his great uncle did before him?

When H.R.H. the Duke of Cumberland was elected Grand Master in 1782, he appointed the Earl of Effingham, acting Grand Master, and the Book of Constitutions expressly provides that if a Prince of the Blood Royal is made Grand Master, he may appoint a peer of the realm as his substitute, with the title of Acting Grand Master. Let the brethren elect the Prince of Wales as Grand Master of England, and no doubt he will willingly nominate Earl de Grey and Ripon, to that office.

I venture to make these remarks on behalf of a large number of provincial Masons who believe that the best interests of the Craft will be served by the elevation of the Prince to the Masonic Throne; who feel that there should be no politics in Masonry, no suspicion of Whig influence in the government of Grand Lodge; who would rather see a change in the aspect of affairs at head quarters; and who cannot but feel that there are other eminent noblemen who have as good a claim for the Grand Mastership, as the Lord President of the Council.

Where is my Lord Carnarvon, P.G.M., of Somerset, that he should be passed over? where the Dukes of Manchester and St. Albans, the Earl of Limerick, Lord Holmesdale, and a host of others too numerous to mention? As a country Mason I ask, why is the Prince of Wales to be slighted? and, like Brutus, "I pause for a replay?"

Yours fraternally,
Æ, 31^o P.M., &c.

"FREEMASONRY AND THE LAWS OF THE LAND."

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER.—In your last impression, in an article headed "Freemasonry and the Laws of the Land,"—"Cipes" speaks of "Christian Orders of Freemasonry." I always understood and rejoiced, that Freemasonry ignored and discounted all sectarianism, that it unites "man of every country, sect and opinion," and that it is well calculated to "bind man in mystic ties of fellowship as in a bond of paternal affection and brotherly love." Indeed, I humbly opine that its chief value, beyond its mission of benevolence, consists in having been foremost, and in now being instrumental in aiding to rid the world of the still formidable remnants of prejudice and consequent persecution, induced through difference of opinion, particularly on theological questions.

Wishing "God speed" to every association having for its object the cultivation of those paternal feelings which our Order so persistently inculcates, I venture to submit that there is and ought to be a marked distinction between "Freemasonry proper, and those societies who will admit as members none but those, who have gone through the ordeal of being made Freemasons," and that to speak of "Christian,"

"Jewish," Mahometan, and other Orders of Freemasonry is totally incompatible with the true principles of our institution.

All who have the real interest of the Craft at heart should zealously guard against the slightest encroachment on the ancient landmarks of our Order, and especially prevent the baneful influences of sectarianism to take root and eventually spread destruction amongst us.

I am, &c.,
E. GOTTHEIL.

"A CAUTION."

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER.—It appears to me of the utmost importance that some of the cases that come before the almoners of the different lodges should now and then be "reported" for the guidance of others. Within the last fortnight application has been made to me by two persons, and I beg to forward to you a short statement of the particulars of each case. The first called himself Louis Gounart, and said he was a Frenchman, he had been many years in New Orleans, was a merchant there at one time, had served as a soldier in the Southern army and was badly wounded on several occasions, he determined to return to his native country, and left Quebec (so he stated to me) not long ago in the ship China, bound from Quebec to Liverpool with timber, but the ship was wrecked near the Isle of Wight, he saved himself by clinging to a piece of the wreck, and after much exposure he was picked up by a Prussian ship, the Minna, bound to Sunderland, she put into Burlington Bay from stress of weather, and he was landed there. He at once (so his story goes) went to the W.M. and brethren of the lodge there, they, pitying his wretched and forlorn condition, at once sent him to a temperance hotel where he remained for three days to recruit his strength, they paid all his expenses and also his railway fare to Hull. He waited upon me and stated that he was desirous of getting to London and from thence to Paris, his mother who lately lived there was dead and had left him property, but he had not the means to pursue his journey. I put a series of questions to him, the answers to which were not quite satisfactory to me, and I determined to make enquiries respecting him, and therefore told him to call again. I then consulted a worthy brother here, the Secretary of a society for the relief of really destitute foreigners. I found that he had been to him before he came to me, representing himself to be a German and that he wanted to go to Mayence. I then wrote to the Almoner of the Burlington Lodge, he in reply stated when he presented himself to them he said he had come from a "ship in the Bay;" he had no papers or documents of any kind to prove this, he was given three shillings and sixpence and told to make his way from there as soon as possible, he also got a shilling from some one else. Some days after that he presented himself again to the Almoner with a message from the W.M. that he, the Almoner, was to lend him five shillings, and that the Master would make it "all right," this he declined to do, at the same time giving him to understand that if he did not go away soon he might be getting into the hands of the police. He told them he was wrecked in a ship bound from New York to Liverpool. He had the appearance of a Frenchman, he is clean shaven except a very large moustache and imperial, he is also lame of one foot the shoe of which has a thick sole, he has a walking stick which he related he had saved from the wreck. When I found that the several accounts he had given of the same circumstance varied considerably I of course declined to help him, and as I consider it very probable that he will still be "working his way" I trust these few notes may be of service to those whom it may concern. The other case only occurred to-day, a person calling himself John Anderson, Master Mariner, late of Halifax, Nova Scotia, waited upon me with the following statement: He had been master and part owner of the brig Rose of Halifax, Nova Scotia, she was run down off Beachy Head on the 27th October last, he and part of the crew had only just time to save themselves in the jolly boat, they were picked up and taken to Hamburg and landed there, he had no documents to show any of those circumstances, the only proof he could give was a letter containing a statement signed by several persons who had put their names down for donations from £2 to £5 each; he further stated that he had come from Hamburg to Lynn in a Dutch galliot, but on looking over his paper with an expert brother I found he had been to Norwich to East Dereham, to Lynn, to Boston, and Grimsby, the lodges of which places appear to have given him assistance; on being pressed he said he had landed at Yarmouth, he was then asked how long it took him to go from Hamburg to Yarmouth, he said twelve hours, and as the passage by steam is generally forty-eight hours it struck me that he must have been on board of the "Flying Dutchman" to have made so wonderful a passage. The result of my examination was that I declined to add my name to his already too long list of sympathizing brethren. No doubt he also will be "working his way." If he had been the person he represented himself to be I feel sure the English Consul at Hamburg would have sent him to Halifax, Nova Scotia, and not suffered him to be begging his way through Masonic England.

I am, Sir, yours fraternally,
P.M., 57,
And Almoner for the Hull Lodges.

ANCIENT AND MODERN MYSTERIES.

By BRO. ROBERT WENTWORTH LITTLE,

President of the London Literary Union, Editor of "The Rosicrucian," &c.

The Rev. Dr. Henry has collected all that is interesting or valuable respecting the doctrines of the Druids, which he asserts were much the same with those of the Gymnosophists and Brahmins of India, the Maji of Persia, the Chaldeans of Assyria, the priests of Egypt, and all the other mystagogues of the ancient world. Their public theology differed from the dogmas revealed to the initiated, the one being used as the means of attracting the superstitious multitude, while the secret rites bound their disciples to the system by awful and irrevocable vows. I have already mentioned that the Sun may be considered the earliest and most universal object of worship, and it will be found that the Druids were not exempt from this particular form of idolatry. Like the Shebers celebrated in Moore's poem, they worshipped in extinguished fire which was tended with the greatest care.

Higgins in his "Celtic Druids," page 283, refers to one of the chief seats of this Sun-worship being at Kildare in Ireland, where a famous round tower still exists in proximity to the ruins of an ancient abbey, part of which is now used as the parish church. I have had an opportunity of inspecting this marvellous structure, which has for so many ages withstood the ravages of time and decay, and the impression it produces on the mind is melancholy in the extreme. Few can view so stately a relic of antiquity without reflecting on the past history of humanity, on the constant succession of races and religions, dynasties and empires which time has now almost utterly swept into oblivion, leaving but here and there a sculptured stone or marble column, to attest that such things were. The height of the Kildare round tower is in itself most remarkable, and it must have been a most commanding post for the Druids or rather Druidesses, as it was a female order of priests that officiated here as guardians of the sacred fire.

In later days a sisterhood of nuns flourished in their turn; now, all around bears the impress of ruin and desolation. A short account of the dress and customs of the Druids may be found useful in tracing the resemblance which, as many writers have professed to prove, is to be perceived in the observances of Freemasonry at the present day. The garments of the sacrificial priests were extremely long, and when engaged in religious ceremonies they invariably wore a surplice of the purest white; they carried a wand in their hands, and their necks were decorated with gold chains, and while their hair was clipped very short, their beards, on the contrary, were of immense length.

They worshipped the Supreme Being under the name of Esus or Hesus or the god of strength, symbolised by the oak, and their temples, as I have already indicated, were simply woods or groves, unless on special occasions when they resorted to vast upathric temples like that on Salisbury Plain.

No person was permitted to enter their sacred recesses, unless he carried with him a chain as a token of his entire dependence on the Deity. The consecrated groves in which they performed the exoteric religions were guarded by inferior Druids, who suffered no stranger to intrude upon their privacy. By these means they maintained their hold over the minds of the people, and were enabled in secret to perfect their knowledge of the arts and sciences then practised amongst the wise and learned few.

After the Roman invasion of Britain, Mona or Anglesey became their head quarters and seat of government, until the island was attacked by Suetonius Paulinus in A.D. 61. This general having utterly defeated the Britons who attempted to defend the isle, cut down the sacred groves, demolished the temples, and burned the Druids and Druidesses in the fires which it is said they had kindled for the sacrifice of the Roman prisoners, if the Britons had proved successful. After this event the power of the ancient British priesthood was effectually broken, and they became merged in the Welsh Bards, whose subsequent slaughter by Edward I. has been referred to previously. It is a curious fact that modern or convivial Druidism is founded upon a legend in which Suetonius Paulinus plays a conspicuous part.

RED CROSS OF ROME & CONSTANTINE.

INAUGURATION AND DEDICATION OF THE KENLIS CONCLAVE, No. 20, AT KENDAL.

For some time past a general desire has existed amongst the leading members of the Craft in Westmorland, for the establishment of a Red Cross Conclave at Kendal, in the vicinity of which town is situated Underley-hall, the seat of Lord Kenlis, who is the Chief of the Order, and also Provincial Grand Master for Cumberland and Westmorland. It was therefore resolved to confide the preliminary arrangements to Bro. Edward Busher, whose high position in the chivalric Order as G.S. General of England, and Inspector General of the local division, eminently qualified him for the pleasing task.

With his usual zeal and ability Bro. Busher left nothing undone that might add to the success of the convocation. The magnificent room at the Albert-buildings, the property of Bro. Busher's firm, was fitted up superbly for the Inauguration Ceremony, which it was arranged should take place at one o'clock on Thursday, the 18th instant. Accordingly at the hour appointed a Grand Conclave was opened by the M. Ill. Lord Kenlis, G. Sovereign, assisted by the V. Ill. Edward Busher, G.S.G., Inspector General for Cumberland and Westmorland, Robert Wentworth Little, G.R., Inspector General for Middlesex, and Ill. J. Daniel Moore, M.D., Inspector General for N. Lancashire.

The following brethren being in attendance were then admitted, received, constituted, and installed Knights of the Order and founders of the Kenlis Conclave, viz.:—

Colonel John Whitwell, M.P. for Kendal, Deputy Provincial Grand Master for Cumberland and Westmorland.
Samuel Iredale, P. Dep. Prov. Grand Master for Cumberland and Westmorland.
Lieut. Samuel Gawith, W.M. 129, P.S.G.D.
John Holme, S.W. 129, Prov. G.D.C.
Dr. Robert T. Leeming, J.D., 129.
Dr. William Jones, 371, Prov. G. Steward.
John Pearson, P.S.W. 1002, P.P.G.D.
Henry Ranthmell, S.D., 129.
James Summers, I.G. 129, P.G. Purst.
Richard Robinson, W.M., 1002.
Thomas F. Taylor, S.W., 1002.
William Taylor, S.D. 1002.
Edward Friend, P.M. 1013, W.M. 1289.

Nearly all these brethren hold office in the Prov. G. Lodge. Lord Kenlis conferred the accolade of Knighthood in each instance.

The formal inauguration of the Conclave was then proceeded with, under the presidency of the Grand Recorder, R. Wentworth Little, assisted in a most masterly manner by Inspector-General Moore, of Lancaster, who acted as High Prelate, and delivered the prayers and orations in a faultlessly perfect style; in fact we may say with truth, that the working of this important ceremonial on this interesting occasion has never been excelled.

The Conclave was then dedicated and constituted as No. 20 on the roll of the Grand Council of England, and the members were called upon to name the first M.P.S. and V.E., when Col. Whitwell, M.P., was unanimously chosen for the post of Sovereign, and John Holme, for that of V.E.

A College of Viceroys was then opened for the reception of several candidates upon whom the G. Sovereign proposed to confer the second grade of the Order, and after the usual preliminaries, seven Knights were admitted to the rank of Viceroy, after which a Senate was held for the enthronement of Col. Whittle as M.P.S. of No. 20, honorary rank being also conferred upon other representatives of lodges in Cumberland and Westmorland.

The Conclave was then resumed.

It was proposed, seconded, and carried by acclamation, that the Ill. Bros. Little and Moore, be elected Hon. Members of the Conclave for their services during the various ceremonies of the day.

Lord Kenlis then announced that the Executive Committee of the Grand Council having elected Col. Whitwell a member of the Grand Senate, his lordship had resolved to appoint that distinguished brother to the office of Grand Preceptor, an intimation which was received with great satisfaction.

The Conclave was then closed, and the Companions adjourned to the banqueting room, under the presidency of Lord Kenlis, where an admirable repast was prepared under the superintendence of Mr. Huicks, manager of the Keswick Hotel, to whom the cuisine for the Masonic Ball which took place the same evening had been entrusted.

We must not omit to mention that to the musical talent of Dr. Jones, one of the newly-installed Knights, much of the success of this inaugural meeting is due, as he presided at the harmonium at the proper intervals, with consummate judgment and effect.

The ball was given for the benefit of Masonic charities, and nothing on the part of its promoters (Brothers Busher, Holme, Atkinson, Ranthmell, and S. Gawith, W.M.) was omitted that could impart "eclat" to the festival, or give satisfaction to the brilliant company, including the "elite" of the county, and many of the most distinguished brethren of the Craft. It was under the immediate patronage of the Provincial Master (Lord Kenlis), whose reception at the entrance of the ball-room took place under the arch of steel. At the upper end of the hall there was a "dais," beautifully adorned by Masonic emblems, where the youthful Lady Kenlis, dressed in exquisite taste and resplendent with diamonds, occupied the seat of honour. The remaining seats and the steps leading to the throne were filled with a bevy of her ladyship's fair friends, producing altogether a most effective "coup d'œil" of female loveliness. Never before was seen a brighter cluster of terrestrial stars. The brethren, attired in the costly clothing of the order, and glittering with badges and jewels—the ladies young, blooming, and animated, clad in toilets of the most "recherche" description—the enlivening strains of sweet music—the graceful motions of the dance—the subdued lustre of the lamps—the rich decorations of the assembly room—all combined to awaken agreeable sentiments, and to bring to mind those happy associations which, in the spring-tide of youth, strewed the path of existence with thornless flowers. The attendance was so good as to leave nothing to be desired. The dancing terminated at about half-past three in the morning, and all present seemed highly gratified with the style of the entertainment, voting it unanimously to have been a most brilliant "re union," honourable alike to the Masonic spirit by which it was animated, the liberality of its promoters, and to those who by their presence showed that they could appreciate meritorious efforts, and impart to it the vital element of success.

We were glad to notice that the Grand Lodge of Ireland was represented in the person of our eminent Bro. James Vokes Mackey, 31°, the confirmation of whose election to the Lord Mayorship of Dublin last year was opposed, as our readers may remember, by Cardinal Cullen and the Romish party, as an indication, we presume, of their tolerance and liberality.

It only remains to congratulate the Masons of Westmorland upon the formation of the Kenlis Conclave, and to assure our brethren of Cumberland that on the following day when Bro. Busher and Little, called on Lord Kenlis, at Underley-hall, his lordship was pleased to approve of the establishment of another conclave at Cockermouth, which is to be named the "Dykes" Conclave as a tribute of respect to the memory of the late Provincial Grand Master; and we are satisfied that under the auspices of such good Masons as their present P.G.M. and his Deputy Freemasonry and its appendant Orders are destined to flourish exceedingly in the united Provinces of the North of England. With a word of praise for Bro. Edward Busher, whose Masonic honors as Past Grand Sword Bearer of the Grand Lodge of England, and Provincial Senior Grand Warden of his native Province, are well known to our readers, we must close this notice. To his untiring perseverance, kindly courtesy, and fore-seeing tact, the brethren of Kendal are greatly indebted for the pre-eminent position in which the Union Lodge, No. 129, now stands, and we trust he may have a long career of usefulness before him. The various representatives of the Grand Council of the Red Cross and the candidates for the order from distant parts experienced, we need hardly state, at Bro. Busher's hands, a hospitable and genial reception, which will form a bright link in the chain of memory in connection with the auspicious Inauguration of the Kenlis Conclave.

GRAND LODGE OF IRELAND.

A special meeting of the Grand Lodge was held on the 10th inst., at the new Masonic Hall in Molesworth-street, Dublin, on which occasion the splendid hall devoted to the purposes of Freemasonry was filled to overflowing by members of the craft, each vying with the other to do honour to the noble Duke, who for nearly sixty years has presided over the Order in Ireland. Peculiar circumstances tended to enhance the interest felt by the Brethren on this occasion. The meeting was convened at the special request of the M.W. the Grand Master, who had expressed his intention of being present, in order to announce to the Grand Lodge the gratifying intelligence that his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales had, in the most gracious manner, consented to accept the position of Patron of the Masonic Order in Ireland, the highest honour the body had it in their power to bestow, and one which had in bygone days been held by many of her Most Gracious Majesty's predecessors on the throne of England.

Among the Grand Officers present were:—Robert W. Shekleton, Dep. Grand Master; Right Hon. Lord Athlumney, S.G.W.; Sir Edward Grogan, Bart., J.G.W.; Arthur Bushe, Grand Treas.; Rev. J. J. MacSorley and the Hon. and Rev. W. C. Plunket, Grand Chaplains; C. A. Cameron, and E. R. D. LaTouche, Esqrs., Grand Deacons; C. D. Astley, G. Sup. of Works; Alderman J. Manning, G. Dir. of Cer.; Theophilus E. St. George, Grand Steward; George Hepburn, Grand Sword-bearer; S. N. Lane, Grand I. Guard; Charles T. Walmisley, Dep. G. Sec.; Samuel B. Oldham, Secretary Masonic Female Orphan School; A. Maxwell Harte, Secretary Masonic Orphan Boys' School; Professor Wilkinson and Humphrey Minchin, M.D., Secretary of G. Lodge of Instruction; Philip C. Smyly, Rep. G.L., Prussia; the Right Hon. Major-General F. P. Dunne, P.G.M. of Midland Counties; Andrew Browne, P.G.M., S. Connaught; Rev. Henry Westby, P. Grand Chap.; John Cottle, Rep. G. L. Virginia; Richard B. De Burgh, Rep. G.L. Illinois; Henry B. Haffield, Rep. G.L., Tennessee; John H. Goddard, Rep. G.L., Lisbon; Captain Vesey Davoren, Rep. G.L., Spain.

Amongst the assembled brethren we noticed:—Sir John Barrington, D.L.; the Lord Mayor Elect; George Woods Maunsell, D.L.; Lowry V. T. Balfour, the President of the College of Surgeons, the President of the College of Physicians, Colonel Snow, Major Adams, Edward H. Kinahan, J.P.; Dr. Beatty, Dr. Tuffnell, Dr. Owens, J.P., &c.

Precisely at four o'clock his Grace entered the Grand Lodge-room, attended by the Grand Officers, several Provincial Grand Officers, and representatives from foreign Grand Lodges, and assumed his place on the throne. The Grand Lodge having been opened in ample form, the Grand Master stated that the Grand Lodge, being desirous of bestowing some mark of distinction on his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, had referred the matter to him. In accordance with the usual etiquette, he had, in the first instance, consulted the wishes of his Royal Highness, and had been favoured with the most gracious answer, saying that his Royal Highness would gladly accept the intended honour. He had very great pleasure in making this announcement, and proposing that the Grand Lodge should confer on his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the title of Patron of the Order in Ireland. This title, which had been held by his Royal Highness's grand-uncle, his late Majesty King William IV., would not confer upon him any Masonic rank that would in the slightest interfere with the rights or privileges of their Grand Master; but if his Royal Highness should ever come amongst them, he felt sure that they would all be glad to see him, and receive him with all the honour and respect to which he was entitled.

His Royal Highness was then proclaimed and saluted with full Masonic honours.

The Right Hon. Lord Athlumney, who occupied the Senior Grand Warden's chair, stated that the Portrait Committee were desirous of submitting to the Grand Lodge a report of their proceedings.

Lucius H. Deering, Esq., one of the honorary secretaries, then read the report of the Committee appointed by order of the Grand Lodge (dated the 7th of November, 1867), for the purpose of having portraits of the Most Worshipful the Grand Master, His Grace the Duke of Leinster, the Right Worshipful the then Deputy Grand Master, the Hon. Judge Townsend, and the Right Worshipful the then Grand Treasurer, Thomas Mostyn, Esq.

While the report was being read the three pictures were uncovered, and their striking appearance in the very beautiful and massive frames, which had been specially carved for them by the Messrs. Strahan, of Leinster street, elicited loud and long-continued applause; all the brethren rising simultaneously.

The R. W. Rev. J. J. MacSorley, Senior Grand Chaplain, moved, and the Rev. W. Sir John Stewart, Bart., Provincial Grand Master of Tyrone, seconded that the report now read be received and adopted.

The Grand Master, in putting the resolution, congratulated the Grand Lodge on the magnificent hall in which they were now assembled. It was, indeed, a credit to their Order, and he hoped the Grand Lodge would long continue to prosper and flourish therein.

On the motion of the Hon. Judge Townsend, P.D.G.M., a vote of thanks was passed to the Grand Master for his attendance on the occasion, and for the deep interest he has at all times manifested in the welfare of the Order.

The proceedings then terminated.

The Quarterly Communication of this body was held in Freemasons' Hall, Edinburgh, on the 8th current, having been postponed from the 1st in consequence of the local Sacramental Services. Charters to new Lodges, "St. Munn," Ardnadam, and "St. John," Catrine, were ordered, to be expedite, and dormant Lodges, "St. David," Tarbolton, and "St. Lyle," Anstruther, were on petition duly recommended by Grand Committee, reposed to their former position on Roll of Grand Lodge. hand of fellowship and recognition to the new Grand Lodge.

On the motion of the R.W. Substitute Grand Master, Bro. Walter Montgomerie Wilson was appointed Prov. Grand Master for Glasgow (city province).

The other business was of a routine character, being the discussion of notices of motion continued from last meeting and those tabled then.

One of these being a resolution that in future all lodges dormant for a period of twenty-five years should only be resuscitated on the understanding that they be placed at the bottom of Grand Lodge Roll, was carried.

The arrangements for the celebration of the Festival of St. Andrew, on the 30th current, was remitted to the Board of Grand Stewards, and thereafter the Grand Lodge was closed in ample form.

THE PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF DURHAM.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Durham was holden in the Freemasons' Hall, Gateshead, on Tuesday, 26th October, when the following brethren were present:—R.W. Brother John Fawcett, Esq., P.G. Master; R.W. Brother Sir H. Williamson, Bart., M.P., D.P.G.M.; Bros. Rev. J. P. De Pledge, P.S.G.W.; George Canney, M.D., P.J.G.W.; Rev. G. P. Wilkinson, P.G. Chaplain; Rev. John Cundill, P.G.T.; John Trehitt, P.G.R.; W. H. Crookes, P.G.S.; William Morrow, P.G.S.D.; John Potts, P.G.J.D.; John Tillman, as P.G.S. of W.; S. J. Wade, P.G.D. of C.; Joseph Stainsby, P.G. Sword Bearer; Joseph Walton, as P.G.O.; Joseph Robertson, P.G.P.; William M. Laws, P.G. Tyler, and many Past Provincial Grand Officers and Brethren.

The Lodge was opened in due form. The minutes of a Provincial Grand Lodge held in Wetherall's Assembly Rooms, Durham, on Tuesday, 27th October, 1868, were read and confirmed. The Treasurer's accounts were read, approved, and signed by the R.W.P.G. Master. The Fund Committee's report was read, which stated that the sum of £5 had been granted for the relief of the widow of a deceased brother of St. John's Lodge; also £5 to the widow of a brother of the Phoenix Lodge—but considering this a case of extreme necessity they recommended a further grant of £5 for her relief, to which the P.G. Master cordially assented. They also reported that the sum of £5 had been granted for the relief of a brother of the Granby Lodge, and recommended that the following donations be given to our great Masonic Charities, which on the proposition of the R.W. Sir H. Williamson, Bart., M.P., D.P.G.M., seconded by the Rev. John Cundill, P.G.T., was agreed to unanimously by P.G. Lodge, viz.:—

To the Boys' School	£52 10 0
Girls' School	10 10 0
" Royal Institution for aged Freemasons and Widows, Men's fund	10 0 0
" Royal Institution for aged Freemasons and Widows—Widows	10 0 0

The Fund Committee's report also recommended that £100 in the Treasurer's hands be funded as heretofore; which proposition having been moved and seconded was agreed to unanimously.

The roll of lodges was then called, when all appeared by their representatives, who gave satisfactory accounts of all their lodges, and the R.W.P.G.M. expressed his satisfaction at the same. One subject he thought worthy of his congratulation, and that was the efforts making throughout the Province to build Masonic Halls, where the brethren could meet under their own roof. He was pleased to learn that eleven out of nineteen lodges would meet in halls of their own.

The R.W.P.G. Master thanked the Provincial Officers for the past year for their services, for which he had had more than ordinary need.

Brother Rev. John Cundill was re-elected treasurer. The R.W.P.G. Master then appointed and invested the following officials:—Sir H. Williamson, Bart., M.P., Lambton and Palatine, D.P.G.M.; Rev. G. P. Wilkinson, 1121, P.S.G.W.; John Stokoe, 48, P.J.G.W.; Rev. G. R. Bulman, 124, P.G. Chaplain; Rev. John Cundill, 124, P.G.T.; John Trehitt, 949, P.G.R.; W. H. Crookes, 80, P.G. Secretary; John H. The Lodge was then closed in due form. The brethren afterwards dined together at Brother Carmon's, Queen's Head Hotel.

ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE.

WILLIAM DE IRWIN CHAPTER OF SOVEREIGN PRINCES, ROSE CROIX, H.R.D.M., WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

This new Chapter held its first Convocation in the Chapter-rooms, Carnarvon Hall, Weston-super-Mare, on Wednesday, the 17th inst., under the presidency of the Ill. Bro. Francis George Irwin, 30°, Past M.W.S., who was assisted in the business of the Chapter by Bro. Joseph F. Starkey, 30°, of the Metropolitan Chapter (the fitting up of the Chapter-rooms were under the superintendence of Cox and Gregory, and whose arrangements were highly approved by the Supreme Grand Council 33°, on their visiting this Chapter the following day. Of the 14 Master Masons mentioned in the agenda paper for exaltation, nine were in attendance. The Ill. Bro. Irwin opened a Council of Princes of Jerusalem, and conferred the degrees from the fourth to the sixteenth inclusive. After which he opened a Rose + Chapter, and exalted Bro. Major-Gen. G. B. Munbee, (Royal Engineers), J.P. (Senior Grand Warden of Somerset); Capt. Townsend, R.N., F.R.G.S., &c.; Rev. J. C. Pigot, B.D.; Rev. R. C. Browne, B.A.; F. Vizard, P.M.; B. Cox, Sec., 1222; T. Clarke, S.W., 1222; E. Gregory, Org., 1222, and J. G. Matthias. Each of the recipients was created and duly constituted a "Knight of the Eagle and Pelican, and Prince of the Order of Rose Croix Heredom." The ceremonies of the degrees were beautifully rendered by the Ill. Bro. Irwin, being of the most imposing and impressive character, while the symbolic teaching was not only pleasing, but consistent with the Christian faith, figuratively expressing the passage of man through the Valley of the Shadow of Death, accompanied and sustained by the Masonic virtues, Faith, Hope and Charity, and his final reception into the abode of Light, Life, and Immortality; in short, from beginning to end, everything bore the impress of Christianity and truly deserves the significant designation of "Ne plus ultra" of Masonry.

The M.W.S. having informed the Knights of the intended visit of the members of the S.G.C. on the following day, and invited all to be punctual in attendance, then closed the Chapter.

The William de Irwin Chapter of S.P.R. X, again assembled in Convocation on the 18th inst., and was inaugurated in full form, when there were present some very distinguished brethren connected with the high degrees of the Order, viz., C. J. Vigne, J.P., P.P.G.W. of Somerset, Prov. Grand Commander of Dorset, M.P. Sov. G.C. of 33°; Col. H. C. Vernon, J.P., P. Prov. G. Master, and Prov. Grand Commander of Worcester, Lieut. G. C. of 33°; Capt. N. G. Philips, Prov. G. C. of Cambridge and Suffolk, member of S.G.C. of Rites of Ireland, G. Treas. General, H.E. 33°; Capt. Alex. Wm. Adair, M.A. P. Prov. G.M. of Somerset, G. Sec. Gen. of 33°; Ill. Bro. Hyde Pullen, 32°, P.G.S.B., and Past D.P.G.M. of Isle of Wight, Asst. G. Sec. Gen.; Major-General Doherty, 32°; F. G. Irwin, 30°, (Junior Grand Warden of Somerset), M.W.S., (designate); Major-General G. B. Munbee, J.P. 18°, (S.G. Warden of Somerset); Col. Ford, J.P., 18°; Bro. J. F. Starkey, 30°; Capt. Phayre, R.N., J.P., 18°; Capt. J. Townsend, R.N., 18°; Rev. J. C. Pigot, B.D. 18°, (Prov. G. Chap. of Somerset); Rev. R. C. Browne, B.A. 18°; T. R. Lord, 18°; F. Vizard, 18°.

The first business of the chapter was the perfecting and exalting three candidates, viz.—Bros. W. H. Davies, E. T. Inskip, and S. Jones. After the M.P. Sovereign, C. J. Vigne, 33°, had expressed satisfaction as to arrangements made in reference to furnishing this new chapter, he requested the Ill. Bro. Hyde Pullen to enthrone the Sov. Prince Rois Croix, F. G. Irwin, 33°, as M.W. Sov., and this ceremony was most effectively delivered by the Illustrious brother. After which Ill. Bro. Irwin appointed the officers of the chapter as follows:—

E. & P. Princes, Rev. J. C. Pigot, High Prelate; Major Gen. G. B. Munbee, 1st General; Capt. J. Townsend, R.N., 2nd General; Rev. R. C. Browne, G. Marshal; F. Vizard, Raphael; E. T. Inskip, Treasurer; B. Cox, Recorder; T. Clarke, Capt. of Guards; T. J. Mathias, Herald; E. Gregory, Organist. From the known and recognised Masonic ability of the M.W.S., F. G. Irwin, and the zeal and position of his officers in regard to Masonry generally, we have every reason to hope that the William-de-Irwin Chapter of Rose Croix, H.R.D.M., will be a complete success, and thus religiously and numerically be a lasting honour to its promoters, who by every means endeavour to extend the principles of Christianity, by giving a greater prominence to its pillars of Faith, Hope, and Charity than is to be found in Craft Masonry, for all the pomp, all the glitter, and all the distinctions of life appear despicable as the plaything of a child, when amid the sublimities of nature, we commence with our Creator and his works.

"For in heaven there's a lodge,
And St. Peter keeps the key;
But none shall enter there,
Except they are good and free."

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY, Nov. 29th.

(Before Mr. Registrar Roche).

RE WILLIAM SMITH.—This was a meeting for choice of assignees. The bankrupt was a Civil Engineer, and newspaper proprietor, and editor. His debts amounted to several thousands of pounds, and the creditors have a prospect of realising tenpence in the pound, a resolution to pay that amount of dividend having been come to. Mr. Evans, and Mr. Dubois were chosen assignees.

Messrs. Walker and Sons appeared for the creditors and Mr. Maynard for the bankrupt.

WE are informed that the eminent artist Bro. Sigismund Rosenthal, of Red Lion-square, is engaged upon a large picture of the Inauguration Ceremony which took place at Freemasons' Hall last April. From the marvellous fidelity of Bro. Rosenthal's portraits, as well as from the artistic skill displayed, this great work will possess an historical value, and we trust it will be reproduced in photography for the benefit of the Craft.

BREAKFAST.—EPPE'S COCOA.—Grateful and Comforting.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"The singular success which Mr. Eppe attained by his homoeopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Eppe has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold by the Trade only, in ½ lb., ¼ lb. and 1 lb. tin-lined packets, labelled JAMES EPPE & CO., Homoeopathic Chemists, London.—ADVT.

The New Vade Mecum (invented and manufactured by Charles H. Vincent, optician, of 23, Windsor-street Liverpool) consists of a telescope well adapted for tourists, &c., to which is added an excellent microscope of great power and first-class definition, quite equal to others sold at ten times the price. Wonderful as it may seem, the price of this ingenious combination is only 3s. 6d., and Mr. Vincent sends it (carriage free) anywhere, with printed directions, upon receipt of post-office order or stamps to the amount of 8s. 10d.—ADVT.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.—A grateful father is desirous of sending by mail, free of charge to all who wish it, a copy of the prescription by which his daughter was restored to perfect health from confirmed Consumption, after having been given up by her physicians and despaired of by her father, a well-known physician, who has now discontinued practice. Sent to any person free.—Address O. P. Brown, Secretary, 2, King-street, Covent garden, London.—ADVT.

THE BLOOD IN OLD AGE.—As age advances, the blood becomes thin and cloudy—or, in a full habit, thick and cloudy. The failing of the powers of life requires extra nutrition and support, and the blood yielding the excess required is soon overcharged with carbon, which gives to it the cloudy appearance. Being then impure, day by day the vitiated matter increases, and the body suffers from a thousand ailments. "The Blood Purifier"—Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla—supplies the extra nutrition to the blood, and restores to it its florid hue, and then the progress of decay is arrested, and the ailments disappear; man lives out his days, and the sunset of life is unattended with suffering. Testimonials with each bottle from the Hon. the Dean of Lismore, General Wm. Gilbert, of the Indian Army; and Rev. Francis Monck, of "The Gospel Evangelist." Ordered also by the Apothecaries' Hall, London. Sold by all Druggists, in bottles 2s. 6d., 4s., 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 11s. Pills and Ointment each in boxes 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d.—Caution, Get the red and blue wrappers, with the Old Doctor's head in the centre. No other genuine.—ADVT.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Lives Saved.—How happy would those sufferers be whose whole system is in danger of breaking down through the daily drain of discharges from ulcerations and skin diseases, if they only knew, that a day rarely passes without new cases of cure being brought to the knowledge of the discoverer of these peerless remedies. For ulcers, sores, burns, bad legs, skin diseases and similar maladies, the insufficiency of ordinary applications is admitted by all; but none, thus afflicted, have been disappointed in their expectations when a fair trial has been given to Holloway's Ointment and Pills. The pain and swelling usually attending this class of ailments will diminish daily under the cooling and soothing unguent.—ADVT.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE,
The Great Cure for Cholera and Consumption.

A Newly-discovered principle residing in Gum Benjamin (Styrax Benzoin), the chief chemical product of which has hitherto been Benzoic Acid, well known and highly valued by medical practitioners. The great difficulty which the discoverer encountered in bringing out this important remedy was the form in which to present it to the faculty and the public, the new chemical being amorphous and incapable of crystallization. It has therefore been deemed advisable to prepare a highly-concentrated solution of the product, combining it with such adjuncts as are considered natural auxiliaries. PRICE'S BENZODYNE is stimulant, anodyne, and mechanically astringent, arresting fluxes and hæmorrhages of all kinds both external and internal, possessing singular efficacy in the following diseases:—Ague, Bronchitis, Consumption, Colic, Cholera, Cold, Cough, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Debility in all its various forms, Fevers, Influenza, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Spasms, Ticdolereux, &c., &c. PRICE'S BENZODYNE has been tried repeatedly in these cases and has never failed to cure.

It immediately relieves all pain, actually sheathing the organs with a protective matter, which defies the action of the most virulent blood-poisons, and thus PRICE'S BENZODYNE acts as the most powerful styptic now known to science, being the only effective external application for cuts, bites of insects, and all open wounds. In Cholera, as in Consumption, its effects are astounding, while Chronic Cough yields to its curative influences in a few hours.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is acknowledged by the highest Medical authority to be the most wonderful medicine yet introduced to the public; it may be taken at any time by both young and old with the most beneficial effects in all cases, leaving no bad effects like Laudanum, Chlorodyne, or any other poisonous and imperfect preparations, and can be given when no other could be tolerated.

In Consumption and Cancer its peculiarly soothing properties render it a boon to the sufferer in allaying the cough, mitigating night perspirations, and in relieving pain, &c.

In every stage of those dire diseases it gives an amount of ease not attainable by any other remedy.

In all cases of Chest Affections, as Asthma, Bronchitis, Winter Cough, Palpitation, &c., PRICE'S BENZODYNE is a very valuable medicine, producing a composed and tranquil state of the system, and quickly relieving the cough, assisting expectoration, and in a few days removing the most distressing symptoms.

In Hysteria, Epilepsy, Gout, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nerve Pains it is justly valued, as it is given with immediate benefit, relieving pain and suffering however violent the attack.

In Diarrhoea, Cholera, Alvine Discharges, spasms and colics of the intestines, &c., its effects are signal, as it never fails to check the disease.

CONSUMPTION IN ALL ITS STAGES CURED.

Coughs, Whooping Cough, Asthma, Bronchitis, Fever, Ague, Diphtheria, Hysteria, Rheumatism, Diarrhoea, Spasms Colic, Renal and Uterine Diseases are immediately relieved by a dose.

During the period of Dentition of Children it will be found invaluable, and in curing Whooping Cough, Spasms, dispelling Flatulency, preventing Convulsive Fits, Heats, &c., to which they are so liable.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is specially adapted for Naval, Military or Traveller's medicine chests, and for Hospitals and Dispensaries everywhere.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s. and 22s., by all chemists

CROSBY'S
BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.

Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills, are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary Diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL.

Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says:—"I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued Cough, Pain, and Irritation of the Chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."

This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers, in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. CROSBY, Chemist, Scarborough.

THE AMERICAN FREEMASON

is Monthly, of sixteen double-column quarto pages of entirely original matter, and translations from the French Italian, and German Masonic papers and periodicals of the day. It is devoted to the discussion of the rights of Lodges and individual Freemasons, in contradistinction to the assumptions of Grand Lodges, and the un-Masonic doctrines and arrangements of "high degrees." Its motto is—Belief in the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man. Its price is Five Shillings a year—a sum so small that no Freemason, for pecuniary reasons, need be a non-subscriber to it.

Trans-Atlantic Subscribers to the AMERICAN FREEMASON will receive it Post-paid from the Office of Publication direct, at their respective Post-offices, upon payment of the subscription to

BRO. GEORGE KENNING

3 & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN, LONDON, E.C.

All Subscriptions begin with March 15th, 1869, and end with February, 1870.

The AMERICAN FREEMASON is not the organ of any Grand Lodge; but speaking the words of truth, manhood, and independence, advocates freedom for Masonry in America, and the rights of Freemasons in their Lodges—rights which, by our Grand Lodges, in their subservency to high degrees, have been invaded, until at present they are nearly obliterated.

Subscribers in the British Colonies will please address all Subscriptions and Correspondence to J. FLETCHER BRENNAN, Editor, 114, Main-street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

TO THE NERVOUS & DEBILITATED EPILEPTIC SUFFERERS AND OTHERS.

HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA, discovered, introduced, and extensively prescribed by the late eminent Dr. MARSHALL HALL, has proved an infallible remedy (by oxydizing the blood and supplying its saline constituent) for Indigestion, Debility, Coughs, Asthma, Consumption, Skin, Liver, Stomach, and Nervous Affections, more especially Epilepsy, Apoplexy, and Paralysis. The successful results of this new chemical preparation are beyond all precedent, and the extraordinary cures effected by the late discoverer, and by his successor (Dr. Sutton), in the above maladies are without a parallel in the annals of medicine; and it is confidently believed that in no case need the sufferer despair, for practical experience has demonstrated, and signal success warranted the assertion, that in 99 cases out of every 100 complete cures may be relied on.

Sold in Bottles at 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and Cases of £5 each, by

DR. SUTTON, M.D., 15, REGENT SQUARE, LONDON, W.C., and in BOLTON by PRIESTLEY, Chemist.

The following are a few Testimonials published by privilege.

Sir Charles Locock, Physician-Accoucher to Her Majesty, stated at a meeting of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society, that in sixteen cases of Epilepsy he had effected permanent cures by the use of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa.

"September 6, 1858.—The Editor of the Bury Gazette returns thanks to Dr. Hall for the great benefit he has received from his Chlorate of Potassa treatment in a severe nervous disease." Sir J. Ferguson, King's College Hospital, London, says—"I have repeatedly prescribed Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa and found it an agreeable and beneficial remedy."

Extract from the Lancet, April 1, 1857.—"In conclusion, we are of opinion that Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is a far superior remedy to the ones in general use for Nervousness, Indigestion, and Liver Complaints, when judiciously prescribed."

Sir Benjamin Brodie says—"What Chloride of Lime is to the foul sewer, Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is to the blood."

Professor Syme says—"The effects of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa in obstinate cases of disease are as astonishing as perplexing."

Dr. Lankester, the eminent coroner, says—"Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is calculated to entirely supersede Iron, mercury, sarsaparilla, quinine, and cod liver oil."

Sir Philip Crampton says—"I believe there is no condition of the system that may not be benefited by Dr. Hall's Potassa."

Sir T. Lawrence says—"I have found Dr. Hall's Chlorate an excellent remedy in Skin Diseases. I presume it is by oxydisation."

Sir T. Watson says—"I know that it is an invaluable remedy." Sir Edward Borough, 9, Fitzwilliam-square, Dublin, certifies Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa has been of the greatest benefit to a member of his family.

The Earl of Clarendon certifies that Dr. Hall's Chlorate cured a case of indigestion of 15 years' duration.

Dr. HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA may be procured by order through any Chemist. Ask for "Dr. Hall's Chlorate," and do not be imposed on with the common article. It is sold in Bolton by Priestley Chemist, 12, Deansgate; or it may be had direct from Dr. Hall's successor, Dr. JOHN SUTTON, M.D., 15, Regent-square, London, W.C., who undertakes the positive cure of all chronic diseases before payment.

Dr. HALL's Chlorate is sold in MANCHESTER by JEWELL, Market-street; in LIVERPOOL by PRIESTLEY, Lord-street.

N.B.—Dr. Sutton will shortly repeat his Lecture on this subject.—The Lecture sent for two stamps.

EACH Paper contains every item of intelligence, from Mail to Mail, specially affecting the country or colony for which it is published, with an exhaustive summary of home and continental politics, science, art, and social news,
and a retrospect of commercial transactions in Great Britain
and on the Continent.

Manufacturers and Merchants may command the greatest markets of the world for their products through the mediums
of publicity afforded by the EUROPEAN MAIL. A demand may be created where none exists at present, or an existing demand may be sustained and increased against the most energetic competition.

The EUROPEAN MAIL gives such perfect mercantile information that it is the highest commercial authority in the vast and prosperous territories through which it circulates. It is therefore an imperative necessity to the merchant who orders goods in bulk, and to the wholesale and retail distributor; it is also the most complete newspaper despatched from England, and is eagerly sought by all classes; it thus,
unlike merely commercial newspapers, reaches and leavens the great communities who are the actual consumers of all products, and who must be acted upon by advertisement to require a special article before the merchant will venture to order a consignment.

Scale of Charges for ADVERTISEMENTS each insertion per Paper as follows:—

* * The above Scale of Charges is subject to a Discount of 10 per cent. for Advertisements appearing in the consecutive issues of a paper for 3 months; of 15 per cent. for 6 months; and 20 per cent. for 12 months.

When an Advertisement is ordered for insertion simultaneously in all the Papers, the lowest rate above is charged all through.

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the Cannon-street
Post Office, London.

Remittances payable to William Vaughan.

The EUROPEAN MAIL may be ordered through the Local Agent, direct from the London Office, or through any Firm having representatives in England. In the last case, the usual system is to order the EUROPEAN MAIL to be forwarded until countermanded; the representative of the Firm in England being directed, under similar conditions, to make payment annually.

is the only kind used in
Her Majesty's Laundry.

THOSE LADIES who have not yet used the GLENFIELD
STARCH, are respectfully solicited to give it a trial, and car-fully follow out the directions printed on every package. It is rather more difficult to make than other Starches, but when this is overcome, they will say, like the Queen's Laundress, that it is the finest Starch they ever used.

OPINION OF FREEMASONRY EXPRESSED BY THE LATE LORD DERBY.

THE motives of the ancient and honourable Order of Freemasons have often been regarded with suspicion by those who do not belong to it, and who have no knowledge of its affairs. It might be supposed, indeed, that the rules and principles of Freemasons were so far known that the public mind should be inclined to regard them with respect, and the character of the members of the Order is generally such as to command respect in all circles of society. All this, however, does not prevent a feeling of doubt and suspicion on the part of some who can give no reason for it, but who are perhaps ready to entertain such a feeling as to everything beyond the sphere of their own immediate observation. There are many, however, who do not belong to the Masonic Order who judge more justly, and a strong testimony in favour of its high and estimable character was recently borne by the late Earl of Derby in a speech made by him in the House of Lords on the 7th of June, 1869. Referring to the Order of Freemasons, he said:—“ I am not a member of that body, but I believe that a more loyal, peaceable, charitable, and benevolent body does not exist.” Higher commendation could hardly be given, nor could it be given by one whose opinion is more worthy of respect. Such a testimony borne by Lord Derby cannot but be very gratifying to the members of the Order of Freemasons, and ought to have some effect on the minds of those who do not belong to it. Freemasons themselves, indeed, are well aware of the high and noble principles on which their ancient Order is founded, and of the excellence of the rules by which it is governed—of the landmarks in constant adherence to which its true nobility is maintained. These ancient landmarks have not often been over-looked, and can never be broken down. Whilst they subsist, and are kept clearly in view by Freemasons themselves, the character of the Order must appear in the eyes of the world, such as Lord Derby declared it to be. Loyalty, is, indeed, one of the essential principles of Freemasonry; and a Freemason is bound by the most solemn obligations to live as a good member of society, observing the laws of God and of his country. Peaceable he therefore must be, whilst these obligations are remembered. As to charity and benevolence, we need hardly say that Freemasons are distinguished by their readiness to aid any brother in circumstances of want or distress; and instances could easily be adduced, in very great number, of the relief of the poor by the Masonic Lodges both of this and of other countries. Let a brother from any part of the world come to England or Scotland and make himself known, he will find himself amongst brethren, and the money requisite for his relief will be forthcoming, even to a large amount. There have been many recent instances of distressed foreigners—sufferers from the political troubles of their native countries, or from other causes—being not only relieved from destitution here, but provided with the means of proceeding home again, when circumstances became such as to permit it, by contributions from Masonic lodges. Nor are the lodges in other parts of the world less attentive to this great law and duty of charity.

OUR EXCHANGES.

We have to welcome to our desk many valuable Masonic magazines, or newspapers with Masonic departments, from all parts of the world. The United States, as usual, heads the list.

We continue to receive the New York Dispatch, so ably edited masonically by Bro. Holmes.

There is also Pomeroy's Democrat, with the political views of which we need not concern ourselves, though anything more piquant or rousing than some of Mr. Pomeroy's articles it is impossible to conceive. He wields a hammer like that of Thor, and every stroke is a thunderbolt. The Masonic department is managed by Bro. F. G. Tisdall, 33°, and among other interesting matter it contains a series of articles on “ Masonic Rites,” which we hope to quote from when the pressure on our space of home items becomes less intense.

The Keystone, published at Philadelphia, is another addition to our file, and one at which we rejoice. The number for Nov. 13 is a double one, and replete with Masonic information in the shape of sketches and news. The paper itself is a beautiful specimen of typography, and altogether we do not wonder at the popularity which, it is said the Keystone has achieved in the “ City of Brotherly Love.”

MASONIC ADDRESS TO H.R.H. THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH IN NEW ZEALAND.

The following address was presented to His Royal Highness Prince Alfred Ernest Albert, Duke of Edinburgh, K.G., K.T., &c., when in New Zealand:—

“ We, the District Grand Master, Deputy District Grand Master, and Officers of the Ancient Order of Freemasons in Canterbury, New Zealand, desire on behalf of the District Grand Lodge, and of the Masters and members of the various lodges of the district, to express our gratification, as dutiful and loyal subjects of Her Majesty, at your visit to this distant part of her wide empire.

“ We gladly avail ourselves of this opportunity of expressing our undiminished loyalty to the Queen, and our attachment to all the members of the Royal Family.

“ We heartily bid your Royal Highness welcome to Canterbury. We pray that the Great Architect of the Universe may vouchsafe every blessing and a long life to Her Majesty the Queen, and may conduct you safely through every peril by sea and land, and accord you a brilliant and happy future.”

NEW ZEALAND.—A Masonic lodge, constituted under a dispensation from the Provincial Grand Master of Canterbury, New Zealand, was opened at Greymouth on the Queen's birthday. Applications for dispensation and warrant of constitution to open a Masonic lodge at Charleston have been forwarded to Brother Vincent Pyke, R.M., P.G.M., S.C. for New Zealand.

WHAT BETTER THEME THAN MASONRY ?

MASONIC SONG.

Words by Brother JAMES STEVENS, P.M. 720, S.W. 1216, P.Z. 720, &c.

Music by Brother WILHELM GANZ, P.M. 485, Org. No. 4, and of British Chapter, No. 8.

HOPWOOD AND CREW, Publishers, 42, New Bond-street, London.

What better theme can claim our lays,
And lend its aid to Harmony;
What noble art sheds brighter rays
Than glorious Freemasonry?
What other virtues can compare
With those 'tween “ compasses and square ”
For Faith and Hope and Charity,
Brotherly Love and Unity,
With Order, Peace, and Harmony,
Are found in true Freemasonry.

When first to us the light is shown
That governs true morality
Others' distress we make our own
In natural equality.
Our steps are then taught to ascend
The ladder staves that upward tend—
Faith, first upon the muster-roll,
Hope, the sheet-anchor of the soul,
And Charity, that crowns the whole
Foundation of Freemasonry.

When Craftsmen's labours we attend
We're taught the hidden mystery,
By science led to comprehend
The scope of nature's history;
From nature up to nature's God
Our minds are raised above the sod,
And Wisdom comes to shield from harm,
Strength our hurtful passions to disarm,
Whilst Beauty lends a crowning charm
To all our works in Masonry.

And next, as Master Masons, we Share the sublimest mystery,
And prove how potent then can be Fortitude and Fidelity;
The terrors of the darkest hour
Are lessened by the Mystic Power,
And Virtue's portal opens w
Our steps to Honour's fane to guide,
Whilst Mercy pleads upon our side
To Him who rules Freemasonry.

And when, our glorious labours o'er,
We meet for brief hilarity,
Amidst our joys, our Brethren poor
Remembered are in charity:
Each thankful heart expands to bless;
Each willing hand relief will press;
With Temperance God's gifts we share;
Prudence extends her watchful care,
And Justice, symbolled by the Square,
Perfects our works in Masonry.

CONSECRATION OF THE KENLIS LODGE, EGREMONT.

The consecration of the “ Kenlis ” Lodge, Egremont, took place last week, under the auspices of Bro. Whitwell, D.P.G.M. of Cumberland and Westmorland, assisted by Brothers Simpson, Cook, M'Kelvie, Kenworthy, Robertson, Spittal, and others. A large number of the fraternity from various parts of the province were present at the interesting and somewhat rare ceremony of constituting a new lodge, on the completion of which Brother Morton, P.P.S.G.W., was installed as the first Master, the officers selected being Brothers Lawson, S.W., Chapman, J.W., and Sandwith, T.

There was not sufficient brethren belonging to the Kenlis Lodge to fill each office, but such offices as remain unoccupied will be filled by officers from the two lodges at Whitehaven until they have members of their own; this will soon take place, as there are several who have applied for admission. The lodge is in a central position, surrounded by numerous influential families, and will ere long prove to the Masonic body that it is really the “ Kenlis Lodge ” in the right place.

The brethren afterwards partook of a banquet in the Oddfellow Hall, the newly-installed master presiding, the chair being supported by Bros. Whitwell, Cook, W. B. Clarke, Puxley, Faithful, M'Kelvie, and others. After the usual loyal toasts, several speeches of unusual excellence were given by the D.P.G.M. and other brethren, the intervals being filled up by some first-class music rendered by Bros. Cook, Glover, and Cooper.

After a most enjoyable meeting the brethren departed for their respective abodes shortly after six o'clock.

Mrs. Roberts, the caterer for the banquet, supplied every delicacy of the season in first-class style.

[A fuller report will appear in our next.]

P.M., and seconded by Bro. Poor, that Mr. Roushlmn, be a candidate for admission into Freemasonry, the next regular Lodge, night providing the ballot be clear. The Secretary then read the financial account of the lodge for the past year, which was considered very satisfactory for this young lodge. The lodge then closed down in solemn form at 8.50, when the brethren then adjourned to Bro. Haymain's for the annual banquet, which was served up in the usual style, where the brethren spent a pleasant evening and left at 11.30 p.m. in peace and harmony. Visiting brethren Bros. Williams, P.M., 70; Nicholls, 202; Tretheway, S.W., 159; Elliott 215; Kent, P.M., 1091; Welch, P.M., 1136 Elphinstone, Walsh, Courn, Truscott.

DENBIGH, NORTH WALES.—Royal Denbigh Lodge, No. 1143.—The installation festival of this well-managed and prosperous lodge was held at the Town Hall, Denbigh on Friday, the 19th inst., present Bro. John Copuer Wyne Edwards, W.M., attended by his Wardens, Officers, and a goodly number of brethren, members, and visitors. The lodge having been opened in due form, and Bro. John Ormiston, of Wig air, Flintshire, the W.M.-elect, being presented, he engaged to accept the office of Master, and was afterwards, before a board of Installed Masters, duly installed in the chair by Bro. John Preece, P.P.S.G.W. P.M., (who, an accomplished Master in Craft Masonry is about removing from Denbigh to the city of Lichfield.) The W.M., upon the lodge being resumed in the third degree, proceeded to appoint and invest his Officers, viz.:—Bros. J. C. W. Edwards, P.M.; Richard Lloyd Williams, S.W.; the Rev. J. H. Roberts, J.W.; the Rev. Henry Parry, Bylchau, Chaplain; John Parry Jones, Treasurer; W. P. Beecham, Secretary; Martin Underwood, S.D.; Robert James Sisson, J.D.; John R. Hughes, I.G.; and Bros. Thomas Sleight and Robert Harrison, Stewards. Bro. Preece having retired, the W.M. brought forward the subject of their approaching loss of his valuable assistance, which all—whilst feeling glad at his preferment by the eminent banking company (the N. P. Bank of England) whose successful and faithful manager he has been for many years in Denbigh—deeply regretted. And it was resolved—"That the brethren of this lodge have heard with regret of the intended departure of Bro. Preece, P.P.S.G.W., North Wales and Shropshire, out of the Province; and that fully recognising the great services rendered by him to the Craft, and in order to mark their sense of the loss which will be sustained by his departure, do invite the neighbouring lodges that have benefited by his experience, to unite with them in some suitable expression of their lasting regard." A subscription amounting to nearly £30 was at once entered into in the lodge. The business of the circular, including the initiation of Dr. Evan Pierce Williams, of the Abbey, Denbigh, having been satisfactorily concluded, and the lodge closed in ancient form, the brethren adjourned to a banquet at the Crown Hotel, supplied in the best taste by mine host Bro. H. Creswell Murless, late of the Isle of Wight. The Royal Denbigh Lodge, so much distinguished for its having been presided over in the last century by H.R.H. the Duke of Sussex, and by that Prince in Wales. Sir Watkin W. Wynn, Bart., M.P., P.G.M.; recently, possesses in its new rank some very worthy and distinguished brethren, maintains its character for hospitality, and is already noted, since its resuscitation some few years ago, for its constant and liberal support of the charities. The good Masonic spirit of many of its members always insures an evening of pleasurable enjoyment, and amongst them—well-deserving of the posts of honour given them—have been Bros. J. Preece, R. Vaughan Williams, J. C. W. Edwards, P.M.'s, and the W.M.; who, by their genial warmth of disposition, kindness of manner, and courteous attention have contributed materially to the success of the lodge. On the present occasion, the usual loyal and masonic toasts were proposed and responded to in excellent speeches, intermixed with some good singing, which rendered the evening a most pleasing one. The visitors attending the festival were Bros. C. Hunter, Lodge of St. Tudor, No. 755, and John Jones, Zetland Lodge, No. 15, Montreal, Canada.

The Chapter was afterwards solemnly closed, and the Comps. sat down to a substantial repast. After dinner, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed by the M.E.Z. and cordially responded to. The principal toast of the evening being the newly-exalted Comps. After some appropriate remarks upon the subject by the 1st Principal; Comp. Morley responded, and in doing so remarked that he was much pleased with the ceremony he had passed through, the kindness which had been shown him, and trusted that so long as he lived he should be always actuated by true Masonic principles, and that the Temple Chapter would never have occasion to regret having admitted him into Companionship. The Chapter has not yet been in existence twelve months, and already numbers nearly forty members.

MARK MASONRY.

GRAND MARK LODGE.

The half-yearly Communication of the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters took place at Freemasons' Tavern, on Tuesday evening. The Grand Master, the Rev. G. R. Portal, presided, with Bro. John Udall, Acting S.G.W.; Bro. Sir John Conroy, J.W., and Bro. Sir E. H. Lechmere, D.G.M. There was a numerous attendance of the brethren of the degree, and among those who were present we noticed Bros. T. Meggy, T. Wescombe, Joshua Nunn, James Stevens, T. J. Sabine, H. C. Levander; the Revs. T. F. Ravenshaw, John Huyshe, and D. Shaboe, A. D. Loewenstark, M. A. Loewenstark, R. Spencer, J. H. Wynne, Geo. Lambert, Major Brewin, Langley, Morton Edwards, F. Binckes (G. Secretary), T. Fenn, W. E. Gumbleton, C. Swan, S. Rosenthal, F. Davidson, J. G. Marsh, W. H. Warr, James Weaver, and H. Massey. Previous to Grand Lodge being opened a Lodge of Improvement was held, at which the ceremony of advancement was exquisitely performed with Bro. Meggy as W.M.; Bro. Sabine, S.W.; Bro. A. D. Loewenstark, J.W.; Bro. H. C. Levander, M.O.; Bro. R. Spencer, S.O.; Bro. Jas. Stevens, J.O.; Bro. Wynne, I.G.; and Bro. Binckes, D. The performance gave the G.M. so much satisfaction that he immediately appointed Bro. Meggy as W.M. of that Lodge of Improvement.

Grand Lodge having been formally opened Bro. Binckes, G. Secretary, read the minutes of last half-yearly Communication, and the next business being the nomination of a Grand Master for the ensuing year:

Bro. LEVANDER rose and said; I have great pleasure in bringing before the notice of Grand Lodge, and to nominate as Most Worshipful Grand Master for the ensuing year, the Brother who so excellently fills that office at present. I feel that all the brethren here present will agree in electing him to fill the office of M.W.G.M. for next year. (Cheers.)

Bro. A. D. LOEWENSTARK seconded the motion, and mentioned that as Bro. Goutly, G. Sup. of Works, had died since his appointment, it would be necessary to invest some one else.

Bro. BINCKES said the matter had not been forgotten, and would be considered later in the evening.

The Report of the General Board was then read by the G.S. Among other matters it alluded to the Scotch Grand Chapter, which had advised its own Mark Lodges in the Colonies not to admit Mark Maons advanced in Lodges holding warrants from this Grand Lodge. It also referred to the subject of the Hebrew letter on the reverse of the Mark Jewel, and then took up the question of the Benevolent Fund attached to Grand Lodge. Respecting the Festival held in July, at which ladies were present, it stated that the festival was most successful, something like £80 having been contributed to the Benevolent Fund on that occasion. The funds of Grand Lodge were in a prosperous state, 150 new brethren having been advanced, and £291 11s. 7d. having been received. Against this £123 9s. had been expended; leaving a balance of £168 2s. 7d. in hand. Two brethren had been relieved with sums of £5 each.

Bro. MEGGY moved that the Benevolent Fund Festival be repeated next year, that the Board of Stewards should be entrusted with its promotion, and that ladies should be admitted to it. On the last occasion that festival was very successful, although power to organise it was given to the Stewards only in June. Such a result, he thought, justified them coming again and asking Grand Lodge to empower them to do a similar thing next summer. The M.W.G.M. deserved the best thanks of the brethren for the kind way in which he came forward and presided at that festival. He thought that if Grand Lodge gave the powers asked for to the stewards at once they would be able to get more brethren and ladies together than before, and obtain a still larger contribution to the Benevolent Fund next year. Perhaps next festival might be conveniently held a little earlier in the year.

Bro. SABINE in seconding the motion, said that as one of the festival Stewards he could bear his testimony to the success of the experiment. It was true it was the first of the kind, and was imperfectly understood; added to which the short notice the stewards had of it, prevented so large an attendance as he was sure would be the result of a future trial. The M.W.G.M., the D.J.M., and the other brethren present, who were partakers of the enjoyment of that fele must be impressed not only with the necessity of such a gathering, but with the advantages it gave to the Fund of Benevolence. He hoped however that in future ample provision would be made for the accommodation of an increased number of visitors.

Sir E. LECHMERE thought there should be some understanding whether the brethren should wear Mark clothing at these festivals. There was no doubt that the last festival was most successful, but there was the one defect to which he had alluded no one knew whether he was to appear in Masonic clothing or not. The circulars to brethren might state what was expected in this way. Again, a larger room might be engaged; the festival was numerously attended both by brethren and ladies, and it was certainly a most pleasant gathering, but it was a hot day and the room was small, which he thought slightly marred the pleasure of some ladies who felt a little inconveniently crowded.

Bro. ROSENTHAL explained that on account of the doubts expressed at last Grand Lodge that the festival would be successful, the Stewards were very cautious about engaging a large room.

Bro. UDALL would suggest that in future the tickets should state that brethren should attend in Mark Master's clothing.

Bro. BINCKES believed that was the general feeling. With regard to the size of the room, the G.M. would remember the doubts which had been entertained by many brethren of the possibility of the festival succeeding. Those brethren were now converts to the views of the promoters. Next time there would be a larger room, but it was felt that success depended much on the filling of the apartment; that it was better to have a moderate sized room well filled than a large room scantily filled.

Bro. MEGGY informed the G.L. that up to the day of the festival only 40 replies had come in, and the Stewards engaged a room capable of holding 40 persons; but 53 came, and as the dimensions of some of the brethren were considerable, the room was rather closely packed (laughter).

Bro. WYNNE testified to the encouraging results of the experiment. Bro. Rosenthal provided the harmony, and a vote of thanks to him and the professional ladies and gentlemen who assisted was but their due, seeing that no charge was made for their services; and he (Bro. Wynne) would move such vote of thanks.

Bro. SHABOE seconded it, M.W.G.M. then asked the Grand Lodge.

The motion that the festival be repeated next year, and that the brethren wear Mark clothing on that occasion was then put and carried unanimously.

The motion that the thanks of Grand Lodge be given to Bro. Rosenthal for providing the music was also put and carried nem. con.

It was also proposed to give the Grand Master further powers with respect to the action which had been taken by the Grand Chapter of Scotland in advising Mark Lodges in the colonies holding Scotch warrants not to recognise English Mark Masters. At a time when the English Grand Mark Lodge was trying its best to get the Scotch Grand Chapter at any rate to admit its members into their lodge on producing their English certificates, he thought it a very aggressive attitude for their Scottish brethren to assume, and it would strengthen, he thought, the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters of England if power were given to him to grant, if he saw fit, warrants for English Lodges in Scotland.

Bro. HUYSHE would not be willing to see such a power used towards a friendly body; but when he found that the Grand Chapter of Scotland not merely cast us off, but actually compelled their own lodges abroad not to receive Mark Masons acting under the authority of this Grand Lodge, it became necessary that the G.M. of English Mark Masonry should have the additional power he sought. Such power might be used in a very tyrannical manner no doubt, but in the hands of such a Grand Master as Bro. Portal, he was sure it would not be used in a way that would not redound to his courtesy.

After a few remarks from Bros. LAMBERT, GUMBLETON, BINCKES, and LOEWENSTARK, as to different jurisdictions, Bro. JOSHUA NUNN wished to ask, if he was not treading on dangerous ground, whether as a new Grand Master of England was about to be proposed it would not be better to seek recognition by Grand Lodge, of the Mark Degree. He thought it would be a happy thing for all branches of Freemasonry if such a proposition was put forward at the proper time.

Bro. SHABOE thought the suggestion a good one, and Bro. Sir E. LECHMERE highly commended it. Not being recognised by the United Grand Lodge grated on Mark Masons' feelings. If there was the slightest opportunity or the slightest hope of such a recognition being secured it ought not to be lost sight of. The brother who it was expected would be chosen for Grand Master was a brother of broad and enlarged views, and of great liberality of feeling, and would most likely look on this question most favourably. In the meantime he thought they should place in the hands of Bro. Portal the power he asked for, and he hoped Bro. Nunn would bring his suggestion forward again.

Several brethren having recommended that the subject should be brought before Earl de Grey and Ripon, Br. JAMES STEVENS thought that no name should be mentioned on the minutes of this meeting, as the new Grand Master was not yet even proposed; he was merely spoken of as likely to be nominated head and chief of the craft, and if this Grand Lodge were to place anything on its minutes which took it for granted that Earl de Grey would be Grand Master, when it was not a matter of certainty that he would be elected, it might give offence. Under those circumstances it would be as well that the minutes should state that the matter should be brought before the Grand Master, on the change of Grand Master, whoever that Grand Master might be.

Bro. SIR F. LECHMER said the matter required a great deal of diplomacy and tact.

Bro. JAMES STEVENS having moved in accordance with his remarks, Bro. NUNN seconded the motion.

MAJOR BREWIN, from Leicester, invited Grand Lodge to hold the next moveable Grand Lodge in that place, promising the G. M. and his officers a suitable reception.

The W.W.G.M. then invested Bro. J. G. MARSH, with the collar of G. S. of Works, in place of Bro. Goulty deceased, and afterwards closed the Grand Lodge.

The brethren subsequently dined together, and spent a most pleasant evening. The G.M. proposed the various toasts, which was drunk with enthusiasm. The musical arrangements were under the direction of Bro. James Weaver, W.M., Whittington Lodge (No. 862), who was assisted by Bro. H. Baker, Globe Lodge (No. 23). In the course of the evening the music of which the following is the programme was given. Humorous song, "The Leather Bottle," Walcot; Selection "Il Trovatore," (cornet obligato), Bro. H. Baker; Masonic song "What better theme than Masonry?" Bro. J. Stevens, humorous song, "Little Binks," Walcot cornet solo, Bro. H. Parker; humorous song "King James and the Tinker," Walcot. Post Horn Galop, Bro. H. Baker.

The banquet was supplied by Bro. C. Gosden, and gave every satisfaction.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF LEICESTERSHIRE.

The annual meeting of this Provincial Grand Lodge was held at the Freemasons' Hall, Leicester, on Thursday, the 25th ult., under the presidency of the K.W. Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Kelly. Apologies for absence were received from the D.P.G.M., the Rev. Bro. Robinson, B.A., from the P.G.J.W., Bro. Douglas, on account of illness; and from a number of other P.G. Officers and members of the Howe Lodge, No. 21, Melton Mowbray, owing to the annual dinner of the Agricultural Society for the county of Rutland, being fixed for the same day. Among the P.G. Officers present, were Bro. Major Brewin, W.M. No. 19, P.G.S.W.; Rev. W. Langley, M.A., W.M., No. 21, P.G.C.; W. B. Smith, M.O.; W. Weare, S.O.; C. Stretton, P.G. Reg.; A. M. Duff, P.G. Sec.; T. H. Buzzard, P.G.J.D.; J. E. Hodges, P.G.S.B.; C. Johnson, P.G. Org.; W. Moor, J. B. Leadbeater, and John Hunt, M.R.C.S., P.G. Stwds.; Bembridge, P.G. Tyler; W. Pettifor, P.P.G.S.W.; Toller, Partridge, Sculthorpe, the Rev. N. Haycroft, D.D., and others.

The Prov. G. Lodge having been opened in due form, and the minutes of the last annual meeting read and confirmed, a ballot was taken for the Prov. G. Treasurer for the ensuing year, when Bro. Stretton, Treas. of No. 19, was unanimously elected.

The P.G.M. announced that the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters had ordered a change to be made in the names of two of the officers, viz. Grand Recorder, in lieu of Grand Registrar, and Grand Timekeeper, instead of Grand Pursuivant. The following brethren were then appointed as the P.G. Officers for the ensuing year, and those who were present were invested, viz.: Major Brewin, W.M. No. 19, Dep. Prov. G.M.; Rev. W. Langley, M.A., W.M. No. 21, P.G.S.W.; W. B. Smith, P.G.J.W.; the Rev. N. Haycroft, D.D., P.G. Chap.; Geo. Brown, P.G.M.O.; Wm. Adcock, P.G.S.O.; A. M. Duff, P.G.J.O.; C. Stretton, P.G. Treas.; J. E. Bright, P.G. Recorder; S. S. Partridge, P.G. Sec.; T. Markham, P.G.S.D.; J. B. Leadbeater, P.G.J.D.; Chas. Johnson, P.G.D. of C.; R. W. Johnson, (Melton), P.G. Asst. ditto; J. Jevons, Past P.G. Insp. of W.; W. Mann, P.G. Sword-bearer; G. Toller, P.G. Timekeeper, and Clarke, G. M. Ashforth, M.D., and W. Sculthorpe, P.G. Stewards. Bro. Bembridge was re-appointed P.G. Tyler, and the P.G.M. intimated that the collar of P.G. Org. was retained for Bro. E. J. Crow, Fellow of the College of Organists, who was to be advanced at a latter period of the day.

On the suggestion of the P.G.M., it was unanimously resolved that in lieu of giving an annual subscription of two guineas to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, the sum of five guineas should be contributed every alternate year, so as, in course of time, to give to each of the Provincial Grand Officers for the time being, a life subscription in one or other of the Masonic Charities. It was unanimously resolved that an invitation should be given to the Grand Lodge of Mark Masters, to hold the next moveable Grand Lodge in this town, and that such invitation be conveyed by the D.P.G.M., and the P.G.S.W., they intending to be present at the meeting of Grand Lodge, on Tuesday, the 30th inst.

The Prov. Grand Lodge was then closed in due form and with prayer.

DEVONPORT.—Lodge of Friendship of Mark Masters, No. 16.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Oct. 21st, for the purpose of installing the W.M. and electing officers the ensuing year, also to advance Bro. Potts to the degree of M.M. Officers present, Bro. Tripp, W.M.; Price, P.M.; Ryder, S.W.; Elms, J.W.; Rockett, M.O.; Harrington, S.O.; Harper, J.O.; Nicholls, S.D.; Kerswell, J.D.; Elphinstone, P.M., I.G., and Murch Readmore, Tyler. The minutes of the last lodge were read and confirmed. The installation of the Master, Bro. Murch, was then performed by Bro. P.M. Chapple and Gover in a most able manner. The W.M. then appointed his officers for the year as follows, Bro. Ryder, S.W.; Elms, J.W.; Rockett, M.O.; Harrison, S.O.; Harper, J.O.; Nicholls, S.D.; Smith, Sec.; Price, Treas.; Rogers, R.M.; Kerswell, J.D.; Readmore Tyler. Bro. Potts was then balloted for, and having been found accepted was advanced to the degree of M.M., by the newly-installed W.M., assisted by his officers in a most able manner. The business having been ended, the lodge was then closed in due and ancient form at 8.40 p.m., and adjourned to the refreshment board, to which they did ample justice, and spent a very pleasant evening together, left at 10 p.m. Visiting brethren, Bro. Metham, P.G.W.; Gover, P.M.; Chapple, P.M.; Rae, P.M., and Radford, P.M.

LEICESTER.—Fowke Lodge of Mark Masters, No. 19.—A bi-monthly meeting of this lodge was held immediately after the Prov. G. Lodge was closed, the same brethren being present; The W.M., Bro. Major Brewin, D.P.G.M. in the chair. A ballot was taken for Bro. Frederic Eachan Wilkinson, M.D., Sydenham, Kent, W.M., No. 766, and P.M. 181, as a candidate for advancement, when he was unanimously elected, but was unable to be present on this occasion. Bro. E. J. Crow, Sec. and Org. of St. John's Lodge, No. 279, was regularly advanced by the W.M., who subsequently invested him with the collar of office as Organist of the lodge, and from the P.G.M. he received the appointment of Prov. G. Organist. The Rev. Dr. Haycroft was invested as Chaplain of the Lodge. Two brethren were elected as members of the Freemasons' Hall Committee, and Bro. Dr. Pearce, John Wright Smith, and Alfred Palmer, all of the John of Gaunt Lodge, having been proposed as candidates for advancement, the lodge was closed and the brethren adjourned to refreshment and spent an hour or two very pleasantly.

SCARBOROUGH.—Star in the East Lodge of Mark Masters, No. 95, E.C.—This select and prosperous lodge met in the Masonic Hall, Globe-street, on Wednesday, the 24th of November, at four o'clock. The following officers and members were present:—Bro. W. T. Farthing, W.M.; J. W. Woodall, P.M., G.M.O.; Walter Reynolds, P.M., P.G.D.C.; R. H. Peacock, S.W.; W. Peacock, J.W.; J. Spurr, M.O.; J. Groves, S.O.; J. Parker, J.O.; H. C. Martin, Sec. and Regr.; J. A. Chapman, Treasurer; G. H. Walshaw, S.D.; J. Hardgrave, J.D.; J. E. Green, Organist; W. Pattison, I.G.; J. Verity, Tyler; Surtees; J. W. Taylor, M.D.; Donner, Allan, Williamson, and Kendall. The lodge was opened at half-past four. The minutes were read and confirmed. Bro. W. H. Smyth, P.M., D.P.G.M., Lincoln; E. Locock, P.M., P.S.G.W., Lincoln; J. Fisher, P.M. and P.Z., were balloted for, and elected candidates for advancement, and they were, with Bro. R. Land, previously elected, prepared, admitted, and advanced to the degree of Mark Masters. Bro. J. Kendall, of the York Mark Lodge, was also affiliated a joining member, the ceremony being ably and beautifully performed by the W.M. and his officers. Bro. Reynolds now took the chair as installing-officer, and with the assistance of Bro. Woodall and Farthing, installed Bro. H. A. Williamson as W.M. of the Lodge for the ensuing year, who invested the following brethren as his officers:—Bro. W. T. Farthing, I.P.M.; W. Peacock, S.W.; J. O. Surtees, J.W.; H. C. Martin, Sec.; R. H. Peacock, Reg. of Marks; J. F. Spurr, M.O.; W. Pattison, S.O.; J. W. Taylor, M.D., J.O.; J. A. Chapman, Treasurer; J. Hardgrave, S.D.; J. Inskip, J.D.; J. E. Green, Organist; A. Allan, I.G.; J. Verity, Tyler. The S.W. and J.W. proposed a vote of thanks to Bro. Reynolds, for his kindness in having attended from Hull, and so ably and efficiently performed the duties of installing Master. In returning thanks, Bro. Reynolds stated, in his usual very kind and fraternal manner, that he would always feel a pleasure in attending, knowing as he did so many able and worthy Masons in Scarborough. Bro. Fisher and Walshaw were elected to audit the lodge accounts. Bro. the Hon. Percy Stanhope and Bro. Cooke, of 1248, were proposed for exaltation at the next meeting. Bro. Woodall, P.M., G.M.O., and Peacock, Regr. of Marks, proposed a vote of thanks to Bro. Farthing, for the conscientious manner he had performed the duties of W.M., and an expression of hope for his future welfare, which was carried unanimously. Bro. Farthing returned thanks for the good feeling shown towards him. The lodge was closed in due form at seven o'clock. The brethren then adjourned to the annual banquet, which was provided by Bro. J. A. Chapman in his usual very superior style, and we feel bound to say that everything in connection therewith gave the greatest satisfaction, both in quality and quantity. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and responded to, including that of the newly-advanced candidates (three out of the four of whom are P.M.'s, R.M., and K.P. Masons, including that of D.P.G.M. and S.G.W. for the Province of Lincoln). Bro. Fisher P.M., P.Z., K.T., &c., returned thanks for the newly advanced, and in doing so stated that the Mark, of all the degrees he had taken he believed to be the most instructive and interesting, the other distinguished brethren also bore testimony to the same, which is very pleasing to all Mark Masons. On retiring, the brethren stated it seldom had been their good fortune to spend a more social or agreeable evening.

ORDERS OF CHIVALRY.

RED CROSS OF ROME & CONSTANTINE.

ORIGINAL OR PREMIER CONCLAVE OF ENGLAND.

A quarterly assembly of this the mother Conclave of England was held on Monday, the 29th ult., at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, when in consequence of the expected installation of the V.W. Brother John Hervey, Grand Secretary, there was a large muster of the leading members of the Order. The chair was occupied by the Grand Recorder, Sir Kt. R. Wentworth Little, who was supported by the following members of the Imperial Council and Senate, viz.:—Edward Busher, G. S. Gen.; Col. F. Burdett, G.H.C.; Wm. H. Hubbard, G. Treas.; Henry G. Buss, G.H.A.; Wm. E. Gumbleton, J.P. G.O.; J. G. Marsh, G.A.; H. C. Levander, M.A., G. A. Treas.; T. Wescombe, G. Stand. B.; Geo. Powell, G.S.B.; H. Parker, G.O.; Angelo J. Lewis, M.A., G.A.M.; T. Cubitt, G.H.; and Sir Knt. A. B. Cook, S.B.; E. J. Applebee, J. Hills, J. Dyer, H. B. Dean. Visitors:—W. F. N. Quilty, K.G.C., P.S., No. 6; A. A. Pendlebury, K.G.C., P.S. and Rec., 6; G. A. Taylor, J.G. 18; E. Silli-vant, H.P. 18; C. B. Payne, No. 2. The conclave was duly opened and ballots were taken for several candidates when the following brethren being in attendance were duly installed as Knights of the Order:—

V.W. Bro. John Hervey, P.G.D. Grand Secretary.

W. Bro. John W. Barrett, P.M.

Bro. Christopher Gardner Thompson, Coroner for Kendal.

Bro. Morton Edwards

Bro. Thomas W. Boord.

A College of Viceroy and a Senate of Princes were subsequently held for the admission of Bro. Hervey, Barrett, Thompson, and Edwards, all of whom were enthroned as Princes of the Order. The Knights were then requested to withdraw, when a special meeting of the Grand Council was held, a majority of members being present. Col. Burdett took the chair, and the G. Recorder informed the Councilors that the meeting was called in accordance with Lord Kenlis's directions, to elect a qualified Knight to the vacancy in the Council. His Lordship therefore recommended that, as Sir Kt. Busher had kindly consented to retire from the position of G.S.G., the Earl of Jersey be promoted to that office, that Col. Burdett be elected G.J.G., and Sir Kt. John Hervey G. High Chancellor, a post formerly held by his predecessor in the Craft, the late lamented Sir Kt. William Henry White, for more than forty years; and finally that Sir Kt. Busher be elected Grand Marshal, thus completing the Council.

The various recommendations of the Grand Sovereign were put seriatim, and agreed to by unanimous votes. The new Grand Chancellor was then called in, and informed by the Chairman of the honour conferred upon him, and Sir Kt. Hervey, in accepting the appointment, expressed his thanks to the illustrious brethren for his election.

The ceremonies were compelled to be considerably abbreviated, as Sir Knt. Hervey had to leave town to attend the installation of R.W. Bro. Beach, M.P., as Prov. Grand Master for Hants and the Isle of Wight, but notwithstanding this drawback everything went off in a most satisfactory manner.

Ballots were then taken for the undermentioned Knights as joining members, and they were declared duly elected: Henry C. Levander, G. A. Treas., M.P.S. (6); Wm. Robt. Woodman, M.D., G.A. Rec., M.P.S.-elect (8); Thomas Kingston (6).

Sir Knt. Little moved, Sir Knt. Hubbard seconded, and it was resolved without a dissentient voice that the rank of Honorary member be conferred upon the following distinguished Knights:—

T. Douglas Harrington, 38th (P.G.M. of Canada), Inspector General, Ontario and Quebec; Colonel John Whitwell, M.P. (Deputy Prov. Grand Master Cumberland and Westmoreland); Grand Preceptor; John Daniel Moore, M.D. (Prov. G. Supt. Works, West Lancashire), Inspector General, North Lancashire; William J. Huggan (Prov. G. Sec. Cornwall), Grand Vice Chancellor. Joseph Andrew Horner, Inspector General, Norfolk.

The conclave was then closed, and the chevaliers adjourned to the banquet hall, where the usual "Premier" banquet was served and gave entire satisfaction. In the course of the evening the Red Cross Song, "Let's rally round the Standard," and other appropriate songs were sung, accompanied by Sir Knt. H. Parker, the highly efficient Grand Organist, whose musical abilities at all meetings are greatly appreciated. The customary loyal and chivalric toasts were duly honoured. The brethren then adjourned to the banquet, which was of a recherche description.

The musical arrangements were under the able direction of Bro. James Weaver, W.M., of the Whittington Lodge, No. 862.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

SCARBOROUGH.—Geoffrey-de-Bouillon Encampment.—This Encampment met at the Masonic Hall, Globe-street, on Friday, the 28th ult., at seven o'clock. The following Sir Knts. were present: J. W. Woodall, P.E.C. as E.C.; H. W. Garnett, 1st Capt.; J. O. Surtees, 2nd Capt.; J. Sleede, Prelate; W. H. Smyth, Expert; J. F. Spurr, Captain of Lines; H. C. Martin, Reg. and Treas.; J. Verity, Equerry, and J. A. Chapman. The Encampment was opened at 8 p.m. The minutes were read and confirmed. Sir Knt. J. O. Surtees was elected for the ensuing year, and Sir Knt. H. C. Martin, the Registrar, was re-elected Treasurer. Sir Knt. J. Kendall, of the Hull Encampment, was proposed as a joining member. After which the Encampment was closed in due form.

THE Macdonald Mark Lodge, No. 104, will meet on Saturday, 11th December, at the Head Quarters of 1st Surrey Rifles, Camberwell New-road, at 4 p.m.

We have the greatest pleasure in announcing that our revered Grand Master has been pleased to appoint, Col. F. Burdett, P.G.W., and Representative from the Grand Lodge of Ireland, to the post of Provincial Grand Master for Middlesex, information which will be hailed with intense satisfaction, not only by the brethren more immediately interested, but by all who have known the gallant Colonel during any part of his eminent Masonic career.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—In the struggle for comfort, fame, or fortune, the maintenance of good health becomes an urgent necessity. When colds refuse to depart under judicious nursing, when coughs distress alarmingly, and when formidable fevers and other contagious complaints are prevalent, Holloway's purifying Pills are the best correctives of the system, and the surest cleansers of the blood. No one should permit any disordered action to continue when it can be so easily rectified by these pills; even one day's delay may bring bitter cause to rue that slight neglect. There can arise no danger from taking Holloway's medicine, and no difficulty can occur in administering it to the young and delicate. Clear and definite instructions envelop every box.—ADVT.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

We have great pleasure in announcing that we have decided to publish THE FREEMASON—commencing with Volume III., January 1st, 1870—on toned paper, and with old-faced type, similar to that used by the Pall Mall Gazette and other high-class publications.

The size will also be permanently enlarged to Sixteen Pages, and, with other improvements contemplated, THE FREEMASON will then be the leading weekly organ of the Craft throughout the globe.

TO ADVERTISERS.

THE Circulation of THE FREEMASON being now at the rate of nearly Half-a-Million per annum, it offers peculiar facilities to all who advertise.

It is well known that the Fraternity of Freemasons is a large and constantly increasing body, mainly composed of the influential and educated classes of society; and as

The Freemason

is now the accepted organ of the Brotherhood in the United Kingdom, and also enjoys an extensive sale in the colonies and foreign parts, its advantages as an advertising medium can scarcely be overrated.

AT HOME AND ABROAD.

WE have frequently had occasion to indicate to our foreign friends the position which the Craft holds in England, and we have endeavoured, however feebly, to exemplify its teachings and to demonstrate the harmony which exists between Masonic precepts and the broadest principles of free thought and action.

But at the same time we have been careful to lift our voice, and to record our protest, against the doctrine that Freemasonry may be made a political engine, or a lever for the advancement of communistic views. It is this misconception of the object and aims of the institution which has given rise to so much abuse and persecution on the part of our ill-informed antagonists—it is the erroneous idea that in every Masonic lodge religious and social questions are debated, and that Masons are banded together in an unholy alliance against all laws human and divine. It is this which strengthens the hands of our enemies, and gives point to a thousand satires on the Fraternity. Unhappily, the language of some of our Continental brethren is not calculated to remove this impression, and their rash utterances in favour of democracy and scepticism are accepted as the real doctrines of the Brotherhood. It has been truly said by a writer well versed in the subject, that "one evil to which secret societies are always exposed is, the chance of the objects and principles of their members being misrepresented by those interested in resisting their power and influence;" to which we are bound to add that a greater danger arises to a society like that of Freemasonry when some of its neophytes presume to engraft upon its pure and simple morality, which embraces the whole duty of man, dogmas of a nature not only foreign to those primeval principles, but in the highest degree opposed to them in scope and operation.

It cannot be said with truth that we have advocated in these columns any but the most comprehensive views of Freemasonry, and the most cosmopolitan interpretation of her mission and importance; we may therefore, without the fear of being misunderstood, candidly avow that sooner than see our Order made a cloak for conspirators we would multiply the tests for admission, and allow neither anarchist nor atheist to approach our sacred retreat. In England they cannot, as we all well know; but a different spirit prevails abroad, and should it continue to spread we may assert without dread of contradiction that Freemasonry on the Continent will soon be an empty name—or rather, it will have become the home of all that is evil, the abode of revolutionary and bloodthirsty men. This is no fanciful picture; we appeal to brethren who have visited French lodges, Italian lodges, aye, and even German lodges, whether the ancient landmarks have not been removed in those countries to such an extent as to render Freemasonry "a mockery, a delusion, and a snare."

It is not only that the Bible has disappeared from the pedestal, and that men are obligated on the sword or on a book of constitutions—grave as we admit such a fact to be—but it is also unfortunately the case that political discussions are not only permitted, but form the staple business before the lodge; that sentiments the most profane and theories of the wildest and most anti-social character are not only broached but approved; while of the latitude allowed to the Voltairean school of scepticism, the less we say the better. Now the question arises, to what extent are we—that is to say, English Freemasons—supposed to fraternise with such men? It is true that they may know our signs, our pass-words, and—so far as it suits their purpose—our ceremonies, but we contend nevertheless that they have lost the true essence of Freemasonry; that they have wilfully severed themselves from that great family of brethren which, thanks to the vast increase of the Anglo-Saxon race, now encircles the earth, and which holds the future in its grasp. We contend that they are darkening the glory of the noblest fraternity ever established amongst men; that by their own acts they are sully the purity of that banner under which they profess to march. We would, however, fain believe that this is but an exceptional state of affairs with our Continental brethren; that it is but one of the phases of our intensely intellectual age, when all things seem narrowed within the compass of scientific definition, and truth itself is overborne by dogmatism. It may be that out of the clouds and darkness which now obscure her divine aspect, Freemasonry in Europe is but approaching a grander era of splendid utility, a more superb recognition from the sons of civilization and progress. Be this as it may, it is our bounden duty to sound a warning note—like the sentinel on the watch-tower, let us descry the danger, and arouse the garrison. From the position of the Grand Lodge of England in the world of Freemasonry, she is eminently qualified for the task of pointing out to erring brethren in other lands their divergencies from the true path, and their proclivities to new and anti-masonic ideas.

In this duty—for duty it is—we look for the support of our Scottish and Irish brethren; and we confidently reckon upon the influence of the vast Masonic confederation in the New World.

There, as here, no political hydra pollutes the hallowed halls of Freemasonry; there, no spectre of blood haunts the minds of the Craft. If what we have stated be no delusion—and we know that facts are stubborn things—it is surely not much to ask that those who value the real principles of the Order will unite with us in one great effort to demonstrate to the world that Freemasonry is founded upon a sincere belief in the Supreme Architect of the Universe; a desire for knowledge and enlightenment, and a rational hope that in following those sublime maxims which are taught to every brother, we are not only promoting the good of our fellow-creatures, but the eternal welfare of our immortal souls.

THE Annual Banquet of the Faith Lodge of Instruction will be held on Tuesday next, 7th Dec., at 8 o'clock, at Bro. Fisher's Restaurant, Metropolitan District Railway, Victoria Station, where tickets may be obtained, 4s. each.

WE have great pleasure in calling the special attention of our readers to Bro. Henry Parker's Concert, full particulars of which will be found in our advertising columns. Bro. Parker is himself a musician of great ability, and has acquired an honourable name in the profession, and with the galaxy of talent he has secured for next Monday evening we are satisfied his concert will be an entire success.

Mulum in Harbo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

"LEO" AND THE TEMPLARS.

"Leo" ventures to express an opinion as to the Knights Templars of Scotland. It is evident that he does not belong to the order, and is quite ignorant of their workings, as he calls them Masonic Templars, whilst the fact is that they are not a Masonic Order, and that men who are not Freemasons have been admitted as members. The Order of Knights Templars in Scotland, indeed, consists chiefly of Freemasons, but Knight Templar is not a Masonic degree. It might be expected that any one who writes to THE FREEMASON, and professes to give information on any point, or to correct an error into which some other writer has fallen, should know something of the subject on which he writes. In the present case, "Leo" certainly knows nothing, for the statements which he makes are thoroughly erroneous. Had he belonged to the Order of Knights Templars, he would not have fallen into such mistakes. He would have expressed an opinion more worthy of respect, but it would have been to a different purpose. However, I respect "Leo" although I differ in opinion from him. CIPES.

BRO. HUGHAN AND THE MAIMED, ETC.

Worth and zeal are not all that are required of a soldier in the battle-field; he must have his arms and his legs, that he may perform his part there. So must every one who is to act up to his obligations as a Master Mason, if required to do so. A Mason not having arms and legs could not save a brother in danger. It is to little purpose that Bro. Hughan adduces the fact of the initiation of "Mr. Kavanagh, the extraordinary M.P., by the authority of the Duke of Leinster, the M.W. Grand Master of Masons of Ireland." The question is not what has been done, but what ought to have been done or what ought to be done; and it is to be determined solely by reference to the ancient rules and landmarks of the Order. These I have already shown to exclude the possibility of the acceptance of a deformed or maimed man into the Order, and I only ask Brother Hughan to read and consider my last letter on this subject in THE FREEMASON. I lately heard from a brother, an Englishman newly returned from America, that a few months since he heard bastards and maimed persons declared to be inadmissible, by a Grand Master in a Grand Lodge assembled. If it were proclaimed or known that a candidate is a bastard, before he is ballotted for in a lodge, I believe his chance of admission would be very small. As to maimed or deformed persons, their admission is not only contrary to the landmarks, but to the whole symbolism of Freemasonry. CIPES.

SWEDEN.

Freemasonry was introduced into this country in 1735 by charter from the G. Orient of France granted to the Governor by Count Sparre. But little is known of this lodge, as its operations were closed in 1738 by Royal Decree, forbidding Masons to meet on pain of death. This prohibition was rescinded in 1740, when the order spread and flourished. It soon enjoyed such a position that the brethren did not hesitate to publicly acknowledge their association with the institution. In 1762 King Adolphus Frederick declared himself the protector of the Swedish lodges, and desired to participate in the labour and expenses of the fraternity. In 1765 Lord Blaney Grand Master of England, granted a dispensation to Bro. Charles Fullman, Secretary to the English Embassy at Stockholm, to establish a Prov. G. Lodge for Sweden. In 1799, a union of the Grand Lodges of Sweden and England was effected, which was the cause of great rejoicing among the fraternity. In 1809, Charles XIII. ascended the throne of Sweden, who, May 27th, 1811, founded an order of Knighthood under the title of "Charles Thirteenth," for the purpose, it is stated in the manifesto, of establishing the Order, to do honour to those virtues which are not prescribed by law, and which are seldom offered to the public. The statutes exacted that this Order, the distinctive badges of which were to be worn openly, should only be communicated to Freemasons; it therefore formed the highest degree of Swedish Freemasonry. The reigning King was always to be Grand Master of the Order, and, besides the Princes of the Royal House, the order could only consist of twenty-seven secular and three ecclesiastical members. Charles XIII. remained an active and zealous member of the order during his lifetime. Freemasonry is still protected by the Crown, and is therefore one of the most respectable institutions in the country.—Macoy's Cyclopaedia.

A QUERY.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER.—Will you kindly inform me through your correspondence column, if a W.M. or P.M. should visit a lodge of which they are not members, are they entitled to wear their collars, W.M. or P.M. as the case may be; or are they only allowed to wear their aprons? Your early answer will oblige, Yours fraternally,

UNITED GRAND LODGE.

The usual Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge of England, took place on Wednesday evening, at the Freemasons' Hall, and was probably the largest gathering of Grand Officers Past Grand Officers, Officers and Past Officers of private lodges ever witnessed. About 660 brethren being present, seats were not to be obtained for all; and a great number of the brethren remained standing during the whole of the evening. The cause of such an assemblage, was the announcement that the Grand Master, the Earl of Zetland, would on this night, which is the regular night for the nomination of a Grand Master for the ensuing year, state that it was his wish to retire from the office he had held for twenty-six years, and not allow himself to be put in nomination. A visit to hear his valedictory address, and an anxiety to have the earliest information of who should be his successor, consequently brought together brethren from all parts of the kingdom; and had it been known, that on this occasion the Heir to the throne of England would be introduced to Grand Lodge, invested, and placed in his position as a Past Grand Master of the Order, probably a still larger gathering would have been witnessed. When the brethren entered lodge, they found the Past Master's chair surmounted by the Prince of Wales's plume, and were much disappointed when the Grand Master entered to find that the procession did not contain His Royal Highness; forgetful of the rules of Grand Lodge that until the minutes of the former meeting which elected him a P.G.M., were confirmed he could not be admitted in that character among the rulers of the Craft. When it was made known that the Prince of Wales was waiting outside Grand Lodge, the greatest enthusiasm was displayed by the brethren.

Among those brethren who occupied seats on the dais and in the body of the hall, we noticed the following:—

The Right Hon. the Earl of Zetland, M.W.G.M.; the Right Hon. the Earl de Grey and Ripon, Deputy G. Master; Algernon Perkins, as S.G.W.; John Dobson, M.P., J.G.W.; the Duke of St. Alban's, Prov. G.M. Doughney, and W. Dodd, Grand Lodge having been opened in ample form and with solemn prayer, the G. Secretary, (Bro. John Hervey), read the minutes of the Quarterly Communication of 1st September, which were afterwards put by the Grand Master, and carried unanimously.

THE GRAND MASTER then rose and said, Brethren, I have now to inform Grand Lodge that His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, is waiting to be admitted into this Grand Lodge. (applause). By the confirmation of the minutes His Royal Highness is now a member of Grand Lodge, and enjoys the title of Past Grand Master. I am sure there can be but one feeling of rejoicing, at the accession of our illustrious brother as a member of Grand Lodge. (Hear, hear, and loud applause). As His Royal Highness, is now waiting I do not think it necessary to say another word. I am quite sure you all rejoice, and feel as I do the highest gratification at our illustrious brother coming among us. (Hear, hear, and cheers). The two Grand Wardens, the Grand Director of Ceremonies, the Grand Deacons, and four Grand Stewards, will therefore retire and conduct His Royal Highness into this Grand Lodge. (Cheers,) and on the entering of His Royal Highness every brother will rise.

The brethren then, on the on the announcement by Bro. C. B. Payne, G. Tyler, of His Royal Highness's approach, rose en masse, the sight was one not easily to be forgotten. The hall being closely packed the brethren near the walls could not get a sight of the new brother without standing on the seats, and this gave the concourse the appearance of a shelving sea of heads, the collars and jewels forming a groundwork of blue and gold. Up the centre of this mass was left a narrow avenue just sufficient for the procession to move, and as it approached the Throne the Prince appeared to be quite impressed with the imposing sight. The plaudits which greeted His Royal Highness were loud and long-continued, and the brethren then maintained absolute silence while the following address was delivered by

THE GRAND MASTER: May it please your Royal Highness, it is my duty, sir, to welcome most cordially your Royal Highness to the Grand Lodge of England; and I assure your Royal Highness that this epoch has long been wished for and expected by the body of Masons forming the Craft of England. (Hear, hear). I can further assure your Royal Highness that the advent of your Royal Highness to Masonry was welcomed most enthusiastically by every private lodge in England. The Craft in general in England is so much indebted to the patronage of your Royal House that they cannot but be most desirous to shew their cordial good wishes and gratitude to your Royal House, and their delight at receiving your Royal Highness amongst them as a Brother Mason. (Hear, hear, and applause). It is hardly necessary for me to enumerate the members of your Royal House who have been Patrons, Grand Masters, and members of the Craft in England. Your Royal Highness has only to look around [pointing to the Paintings of Royal Masons which adorn the walls of the Temple] to see George IV., the Duke of York, and your Royal Highness's more immediate ancestor, the Duke of Kent. (Hear, hear, and cheers). To know what great advantages the Craft in general have derived from such illustrious patronage, and to make your Royal Highness well aware of the delight which your coming into Masonry has caused in this Country (Hear, hear, and applause). There is one member more especially, I may allude to, your Royal Highness's immediate ancestor, the Duke of Kent, who was Grand Master of the Athol Lodge, and associated with his late Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex, in forming the Union between the Grand Lodge of England and the Athol Lodge, so much to the advantage of the Craft in England. I will now ask your Royal Highness to allow me to have the honour of investing you with the clothing of a Past Grand Master, and I invite you to take your seat in Grand Lodge as a member of the Grand Lodge of England. (Great cheering).

Bro. Payne then handed the clothing to Sir Albert Woods, who handed it to the Earl of Zetland, and the noble earl invested Bro. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales with the gorgeous insignia of his rank. The Prince had, up to this time, worn only the ordinary Master Mason's apron as Masonic clothing, but the blue riband of the Garter was also observable.

SIR ALBERT W. WOODS read aloud the numerous titles by which the Prince is honoured, and proclaimed him a Past Grand Master of the Order. Taking the time from Sir Albert, the brethren saluted the new Past Grand Master with the Grand or Royal Sign.

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS before taking his seat said: Most Worshipful Grand Master, Deputy Grand Master, Grand Officers of Grand Lodge, and Brethren, allow me to tender you my warmest and most sincere thanks for the great honour that you have conferred upon me this evening. For a long time past it had been my wish to become a Freemason and a member of the ancient Craft; and although, brethren, I was initiated in a foreign country, I at the time felt—and you will all agree with me—that Freemasonry is one and the same in all countries (hear, hear), you are all fellow Craftsmen, and I can assure you I feel it a great honour to be here to day, and to be admitted into the Grand Lodge of England (hear, hear). Allow me Most Worshipful Grand Master to thank you once more for the kind words you have spoken, and to the brethren for the kind and cordial manner they have received me this evening (applause).

THE GRAND MASTER: May it please your Royal Highness, Brethren, I have another communication to make to Grand Lodge, which I assure you is a very painful duty for me to perform; but nevertheless I feel confident that you will all agree in the conclusion that I have come to, namely, that I am too old longer to continue Grand Master of England (no, no). I assure you, brethren, it is with great regret I have come to this conclusion myself, because I hope by my conduct and by my assiduity and attention to the duties of my office I have proved myself a zealous Mason (hear, hear). But, brethren, after a period of service of 26 years as Grand Master, and of two years previous to that as Pro. Grand Master to H.R.H. the Duke of Sussex, I think I may fairly say I have earned my retirement (hear, hear); and I must beg you therefore not to put me in nomination again to fill the office of Grand Master. After having succeeded in carrying out that great work which was finished and inaugurated in the course of this year, namely, the building of a new Freemasons' Hall, and seeing all the charities in a most flourishing position, I do not think that I could select a more happy opportunity of asking you to accept my resignation of office, and to select a younger man in my stead. Although I may no longer fill that distinguished office, to which your kindness has so often re-elected me, yet I cannot but assure you that as long as the Almighty spares me health and strength I shall take a lively interest in everything connected with you (hear, hear). I cannot conclude this address without expressing what I have so often expressed before that it must be almost tiresome to you to hear me express again—but I must express it for the last time—the gratitude I feel to my brethren for the kind support they have invariably given to me, and for the confidence they have placed in me by electing me seven-and-twenty times to the highest office in the Craft. I assure you, brethren, though I wish to retire from the office of Grand Master I shall not cease to take an interest in everything that concerns Masonry so long as life remains (hear, hear, and great applause). I now request, brethren, that I may not be put in nomination for the office of Grand Master for the ensuing year.

The noble Earl, who was deeply affected during the delivery of this address, then resumed his seat amidst loud and long-sustained applause.

THE DEPUTY GRAND MASTER gave notice that at next quarterly communication in March, he should move a resolution expressive of the regret of the brethren at the retirement of the Right Hon. the Earl of Zetland, from the Grand Mastership.

BRO. RAYNHAM W. STEWART said that while thanking the Grand Master for the able and zealous manner in which he had performed his duties the brethren were also much gratified that the Prince of Wales had come among them. As the Grand Master had expressed a wish not again to be put in nomination it became their duty to ask another Brother who so nobly followed his Lordship's example to take that office. In doing so they would be guided by no feeling to choose one who was not well versed in the duties and responsibilities attached to that office. He (Bro. Stewart) thought they would not have occasion to look very far from Grand Lodge for a brother who was capable of discharging those duties, one who with hearty respect he would say although he occupies a very important position in the councils of Her Majesty had always found time to discharge his Masonic duties (cheers). Brethren (said Bro. Stewart), wherever the name of the Earl de Grey and Ripon is heard (applause), it is received with the greatest respect and regard. Long may that name remain illustrious in England! May that name grace the roll of the Grand Masters of England! and that it may, brethren, without detaining you longer,—for we have a long list of business before us—I beg to nominate the Earl de Grey and Ripon for Grand Master for the year ensuing (loud cheers).

THE GRAND MASTER having put the question whether any brother had some one else to put in nomination for the office as Grand Master there was a simultaneous cry of "No, no."

The brethren already on the Board of Benevolence were re-appointed.

The report of the Board of Benevolence for the last quarter was then submitted for confirmation, when a grant of £50 to a brother of No. 539, and £30 to the widow of a late brother of No. 116 were made. Upon a grant of £30 being proposed to a brother of No. 13, Bro. John Henderson objected on the ground, that having enquired into the merits of the case, the lodge had found that they could not honestly and fairly support the case before the board.

After some remarks from the Grand Registrar in defence of the vote, Bro. HAYERS advocated referring the matter to the Board of Benevolence. Bro. Binckes, as the brother through whose instrumentality the case was brought before the board, supported the grant. Bro. Joseph Smith thought a case had been made out for referring the matter back to the board. Bro. Udall also defended the grant. The recommendation was put to the lodge and lost, and the amendment to send the case back to the board was carried.

THE GRAND MASTER: I am anxious to interrupt the business of Grand Lodge for one minute. I beg to inform the brethren that our Illustrious Brother, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, is anxious to retire from Grand Lodge at this time, and I believe he wished me to give the reason why, viz., this day is the birth day of Her Royal Highness, the Princess of Wales. (Immense cheering.) I perceive it is quite unnecessary for me to say more. You are perfectly aware how anxious His Royal Highness must be on such an occasion as this to be present at his own table to celebrate the birth-day of his Illustrious Consort.

The brethren hereupon rose, and the Prince of Wales accompanied by the Duke of St. Alban's, and escorted by Bro. Havers and Sir Albert Woods, left the hall amid the ringing cheers of the brethren.

The following grants were then passed, £30 to a brother of 87, £100 to a brother of 29, and £30 to a brother of 461.

Bro. L. EVANS then brought forward the report of the Board of General Purposes, which was taken as read, and ordered to be entered on the minutes.

G. SECRETARY announced that by an omission, the blame of which he took entirely on himself, the second report of the Masonic Benevolent Institution had been omitted from the agenda paper.

Bro. SAVAGE thought the matter would keep very well till next meeting, and after a discussion in which Bros. Browne, Savage, Clabon, and Udall took part, the subject was ordered to stand over till the next meeting.

Bro. Udall's motion, seconded by Bro. Clabon—

"That the sum of £50 be given from the Fund of General Purposes. That the money be placed in the hands of the Secretary of the Asylum of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for aged Freemasons and the Widows of Freemasons, to supply the inmates at Croydon with Coals during the winter season," was carried.

Bro. J. H. WYNNE then brought forward the following motion:—

"That those brethren, who were candidates at the last election, and did not succeed to be elected on the Annuity Fund, shall receive £15 per annum from the Benevolent Fund, until they shall be elected on the Annuity Fund," (sic.)

and was proceeding at great length when

The G. REGISTRAR interposed, and submitted that Bro. Wynne was out of order in that he asked Grand Lodge to deal with the Fund of Benevolence, when the constitutions committed the care of that Fund to a Board.

Bro. HAYERS made a few observations respecting the effect of the motion being carried.

The motion, being out of order, was withdrawn.

Bro. RAYNHAM W. STEWART, W.M., Nos. 12 and 453, rose to move—

"That in future the issue of free votes in consequence of the grants from Grand Lodge and Grand Chapter be hereafter discontinued, and that the rules and regulations of the Institution be amended as follows, viz. :—

"Rule 17. Expunged"

"Rule 31. To omit the words 'Lodge Chapter and' in the 7th line."

Bro. JOHN SYMONDS said it was out of order. The Benevolent Institution was an independent body, passing its own laws, although it was enacted that those laws and every alteration in them should be submitted to Grand Lodge for approval.

Bro. R. W. STEWART had felt the same difficulty. Grand Lodge was asked to give up a privilege, and he apprehended it was quite within the power of Grand Lodge to send this motion down as an instruction to the Committee to consider it.

Bro. HAYERS thought it was quite in order.

Bros. COL. COLE, H. BROWSE, J. SAVAGE, JOSEPH SMITH, and F. BINCKES, continued the discussion, and the general feeling appeared to be that all the resolutions Grand Lodge had at any time made on the subject would have to be brought forward and compared, the searching out of which, G. Secretary said, would take a considerable time.

After some remarks from Bro. SYMONDS, Bro. J. R. STEBBING, said they ought then to go back to Bro. Clabon's motion, and have a discussion on all his scheme.

Bro. STEWART then consented to postpone his motion.

Bro. JAMES STEVENS, P.M., No. 720, in introducing his motion,

"That with a view to securing greater uniformity of working and observance of the same usages and customs throughout the several lodges held under the authority of the Grand Lodge of England, a Committee of Past Masters be appointed to enquire into the merits of the respective systems of working now in practice, and to report to Grand Lodge thereon, with such recommendations as they may think necessary to prevent deviation from the established mode, such deviations being according to the Constitutions of Freemasonry, improper and not to be justified or countenanced," observed that he would have preferred that it should have been brought forward by much more able brethren than himself, but as it was a recognised principle among them that even the most humble might be able at times to do some good to the Craft he did not consider himself out of place in submitting this motion to Grand Lodge. He chiefly desired to call the attention of Grand Lodge to the fact that the Book of Constitutions stated that there was an established mode, and that any deviations from that could not be justified and ought not to be countenanced. He used the words of the clause in the Book of Constitutions, in order that the subject might be fully understood. After some other remarks Bro. Stevens concluded by asking Grand Lodge to appoint a Committee of Past Masters to consider the question; he did not care how many members the committee was composed of, whether ten, twenty, thirty or forty, he wished that they should be selected from all grades in Freemasonry, and only asked that they should be men who had a little common sense. (Cheers.)

Bros. STEBBING, BROWSE, and MATTHEW COOKE, made a few remarks, and the motion was carried.

Bro. J. RANKIN STEBBING, P.G.D., moved,

"That in the opinion of this Grand Lodge no future Grand Master should hold that office for more than three years in succession, unless in the case of a Royal Prince, when, the restriction should apply to the Pro. Grand Master."

but did not wish to oppose himself to the general wish of the majority of the brethren if they were in favour of five or seven years. After passing a high eulogium on the Grand Master, who in everything he had done had ennobled himself and gilded Freemasonry, he thought that, like a change in our ministries, there should be a change in Grand Masters now and then. He found that during sixty years after 1721 there were thirty-two Grand Masters, all of them peers of England. That would not be more than two years on an average to each. Yet the institution flourished and was indeed eminently successful. At one time, there sat on the dais no less than ten or twelve peers of the realm. It was no uncommon thing then to have five or six peers on committees, and 400 brethren at Grand Festival. And then the number of Masons in England was only one-third of what it was now. If the limit of duration of one Grand Mastership was three, or five, or seven years, there would be a greater possibility than now of men of rank attaining that position; consequently more men of rank would join Masonry, and it would become more influential.

Bro. BENNOCH seconded the motion.

Bro. VICTOR WILLIAMSON enquired whether the brethren thought it desirable to limit the tenure of Grand Master's office. If they did, then let them pass their motion. But he would earnestly entreat them to pause before committing themselves to so suicidal a course. He had as a young Mason the profoundest respect for Bro. Stebbing as an old and valued Mason; but he thought that under the present regime, the brethren enjoyed more freedom—electing a Master annually—than they would if they appointed him for three or more years. They might have a highly efficient Grand Master; they might have the reverse. Was that desirable? He thought not. The qualifications for the office of Master were no ordinary qualifications. The office required an immense amount not only of intellect, but of willingness to devote that intellect to the good of the Craft. When they got a Grand Master who could do all this, was it expedient or wise to replace him by some one else?

Bro. HAVERS opposed the motion; he could perceive that the discussion was not directed at the Grand Master, but at the advisers of the Grand Master, and he perfectly admitted the right and title of every individual brother to question their acts. He had listened to the very able and eloquent speech of Bro. Stebbing, but had not heard one argument or a reason for agreeing with the motion. He would say at the outset—they would forgive him for being egotistical—that having enjoyed a large share of his Lordship's confidence, and worked very hard for the brethren, his powers would expire in a few days, and some fresh blood would come in. He was not there to pronounce a panegyric on Lord Zetland, but although Bro. Stebbing had stated how Masonry flourished in former years, it had never flourished so much as during his Lordship's reign. His wise conciliatory judgment and good management of the Craft after the storms it had weathered, had produced harmony, peace, and contentment, which had paved the way for the prosperity the Craft now enjoyed. There were certain qualifications necessary for the office. The first was high rank, next influence, a man who could influence his peers to take office under him, then assistance for the charities, and great administrative capacity. Amongst the large number of noblemen whose names graced Masonry's roll there were many who would be most willing to accept the office of Grand Master, and yet how few would be able to do the work. They wanted men high in the councils of the Sovereign, men whose opinion carried weight, and would those men be Grand Masters and perform all the onerous duties of Freemasonry while they had to perform the duties of the State. Let them take such men, and see if they possessed another necessary qualification—zeal in the cause of Masonry. It was very difficult to find a man qualified for Grand Master. It took him some time to get into working order, and if Bro. Stebbing's motion was carried, a man who had learned the duties would be thrown out just at the time he had acquired a knowledge of them. It appeared to him (Brother Havers) that the carrying of this motion would be tantamount to Masons acknowledging that they distrusted themselves. He was one of those who believed that the occasion had not yet arisen when a Master has given proofs that there should be a change, but he was also one of those who believed that when the occasion did arise Freemasons would make that change. He had the fullest confidence in Freemasons; they were the most intelligent of men, who would not be humbled by having a Grand Master who it was felt ought to be removed. He was not one to deny for a moment that circumstances might occur in which it might be held desirable to make a change in the Grand Master, and he was quite sure Grand Lodge would make it when the time arrived. But it was first their duty to decide whether the change proposed by the motion was a beneficial one. The difficulties which would surround a Grand Master removable every three years were insuperable. He (Bro. Havers) would trespass still further by drawing attention to the fact that what was true of the Grand Master was equally true of the Provincial Grand Master. If the whole of England were polled and asked whether under the present system they had the right men in the right place, the answer would be "yes." And yet if a new Grand Master was appointed every third year, they must a fortiori make a similar change in the Provincial Grand Masters. It would take three years for a Master to become competent, and then, when they began to feel the benefits of a good Master, they found their hands were tied, and they were obliged to get rid of him.

The GRAND REGISTRAR supported Bro. Havers and contended that the brethren had the greatest liberty at the present time.

Bro. Col. Cole, Clabon, Udall, Stewart, Symonds, and Nunn, added a few words, and after Bro. Stebbing had replied a division was prepared for, but as the numbers upon careful inspection appeared to be as nearly as possible 3 to 2 against the motion in a lodge then mustering 500, Bro. Stebbing waived the division and Grand Lodge was thereupon duly closed.

GRAND LODGE NOTES.

The Meeting of Grand Lodge, on the 1st December, 1869, will long be remembered. After considerable experience, we can safely say that we never witnessed such a muster of the brethren—it was indeed an assemblage of which the Craft may well be proud. For the first time since the death of the Duke of Sussex, an English Prince has taken his place amongst his brother masons in the Grand Lodge of England, and the enthusiastic, the rapturous cheers which greeted the entrance of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales into Grand Lodge on Wednesday, was an evidence of the high importance attached to such an illustrious accession to our ranks.

The reception accorded to the Heir Apparent was truly royal—it was magnificent; and as an expression of feeling on the part of six hundred and sixty representative English Masons, it is an assurance that they believe His Royal Highness will persevere in the path of usefulness in which he has hitherto held so conspicuous a place, and will in every respect emulate the virtues of his father, who was foremost in every good work.

We are glad to notice that Bro. Stevens' motion for a committee of enquiry into the various modes of working was carried, and we trust it will lead to a practical result.

With reference to Bro. Stebbing's proposition for the limitation of the Grand Master's tenure of office, we say deliberately that the decision arrived at is not the conviction of one-tenth of the Freemasons of England.

The strongest argument that can be used in favor of the limitation is this—that by the present arrangement we in reality exclude all other distinguished masons from even the chance of obtaining the Grand Mastership.

It is true that the Grand Master is nominated annually—so he would be if the limitation were adopted, but it is also true that a most invidious task would be imposed upon any brother who desired a change, if he were compelled to oppose the nomination of the Brother who wielded the power, and prestige of actual Grand Master.

We feel so certain that we have not heard the last of this question, that our disappointment at the defeat of Bro. Stebbing's motion on this occasion is not so great as it would otherwise have been. It will be brought on again, and all the eloquence and talent that may be arrayed against it will not, we are assured, prevent the members of Grand Lodge from asserting the principle involved, and reserving to themselves the real power of selection instead of the nominal choice they exercise at present.

DEDICATION OF THE FREEMASONS' TEMPLE AT HALIFAX.

If the occasion of the laying of the corner stone of the Freemasons' Temple, on the 30th of June, 1868, was a dletter day in the annals of Freemasonry in Halifax, in an especial manner was Wednesday week a day ever to be remembered by the fraternity, not in Halifax only, but throughout the province of West Yorkshire. The dedication of the building to Masonic purposes by Earl de Grey and Ripon was an event which Halifax Freemasons had looked forward to with very considerable interest, and no effort on the part of either of the two lodges interested had been spared to carry out the ceremony with success. Their efforts were abundantly crowned with success, for there never was seen in Halifax so large a gathering of Freemasons as assembled on Wednesday when the spacious and handsome lodge room was densely crowded by Masons from all parts of the province of West York, from London, Lincolnshire, and East Lancashire; and at the banquet which was held subsequently to the ceremony of dedication there were nearly 250 present.

The Temple has been erected in the Italian style of architecture, having in the front a projecting portico of 7 ft. 6 in. The lodge room, which is on the principal upper floor, is 48 ft. long by 24 ft. wide, and 24 ft. high, and is enriched with a handsome cored and panelled ceiling with ornamental marginal counter lights. The walls are divided into compartments by pilasters, having carved bases and capitals, and a Corinthian cornice with full enrichments. The east end is adorned with a large canopy, supported by two massive pillars with carved capitals; and the west end of the room has single columns, forming central projections. This room is approached by a spacious staircase of stone and opposite the foot of the staircase is the entrance to the dining room, which is the same size as the lodge room, except that it is only 14 feet high. The interior also contains instruction and other rooms, for both the lodges of Probity and St. James, together with smoke rooms, cloak rooms, lavatories, &c.; and the basement contains living apartments for hall-keeper, with every requisite for cooking, &c. The architects were the late Bros. J. E. Oates, B. W. Jackson, W.M. of Probity, and W.H.D. Horsfall, J.W. of No. 408. The cost of the building is about £4,254, exclusive of furnishing, which is calculated to cost £500, so that when completed the entire cost will be £4,754.

The ceremony was commenced shortly before two o'clock, by the lodge of St. James, No. 408, being opened in the three degrees by Bro. Richard Lord, W.M. From that time to the entrance of the P.G. lodge the room began to fill, and by the time the business of the P.G. lodge commenced, the room was densely crowd. The P.G. officers formed a procession in the corridor of the hall, and entered the room in the following order:—Prov. Grand Tyler, two Prov. Grand Stewards, the Past Prov. Grand Pursuivants, and Assist. Prov. Grand Pursuivants, the Prov. Grand Pursuivant, Past Prov. G. Swd-Bearers, Past Prov. G. Dir. of Ceré., Past Prov. G. Supt. of Wrks., Past Prov. Grand Deacons, the Cornucopia with corn, two ewers with wine and oil, borne by Masters of Lodges, Grand Supt. of Wrks., with plans of building, Members of the Building Committee, Past Prov. Grand Registrars, the Prov. Grand Registrar carrying the seal of the P.G., Lodge, the Prov. Grand Treas. and Prov. Grand Sec., Past Prov. Grand Chaplains, Past Prov. G.W's.

Visitors of distinction, the Column of Prov. Junior Grand Warden, borne by the Master of a lodge; Prov. J.G. W. with plumb rule, the Column of Prov. Hope, M.A., P.P.G.C., after which the roll of lodges was called, there being, with two exceptions, representatives from every lodge in West Yorkshire, with visitors from East Lancashire, Lincolnshire, &c. The ceremony of consecration and dedication was performed by Earl de Grey and Ripon, according to ancient usage and custom. Amongst the P.G. Grand Officers Past and Present, were:—W. Lucas, P.G.S., Linc.; W. P. Binckes, Sec. Boys' School; T. Alexander, Masonic Life Assurance Co.; Capt. Coates, Capt. Malcolm, and several other visiting brethren.

At the conclusion of the ceremony of dedication, his lordship congratulated the brethren on the successful completion of the building. Other P.G. Lodge business having been transacted, the P.G. Officers retired in the same manner of procession as they entered, and the lodge was subsequently closed in the three degrees by the W.M. and Officers of No. 448.

THE BANQUET.

A banquet was provided in the Assembly-rooms, Harrison-road. The orchestra was occupied by Bro. Hemingway's quadrille band, which played a selection of music during the banquet. Earl de Grey and Ripon presided, and was supported on his right by Bro. Bentley Shaw, P.G.D. of England, D.P.G.M.; Rev. J. Senior, L.L.D., P.G.C. of England, and P.P.G.W. of West Yorkshire; Bro. R. R. Nelson, P.G.S.; Bro. Fred Binckes, Secretary of the Boys' School, London; Bro. Lucas, P.G.S., Linc.; and Bro. T. Alexander. On his left hand were Sir Henry Edwards, Bart., P.P.G.W.; Rev. James Hope, M.A., P.P.G.C.; Bro. E. Armitage, P.J.G.W.; Bro. C. Oldroyd, P.G.T.; Bro. S. Waterhouse, M.P.; Bro. J. H. Tweedale, P.P.G.R. of East Lancashire; and the Hon. and Rev. P. Y. Savile, M.A., P.S.G.W.

After dinner, the noble Chairman gave the usual loyal and patriotic toasts, which were responded to with musical honours, Bro. Hemingway presiding at the pianoforte.

Captain Malcolm, of the 10th Regiment of Foot, responded for the army, Major Waterhouse, M.P., on behalf of the Yeomanry, and Captain Coates for the Volunteers.

The CHAIRMAN next proposed "The M.W.G. Master of England, the Right Hon. the Earl of Zetland" (loud cheers). He said it had always been to him a source of great gratification to have the honour of proposing that toast upon occasions like the present. It was with feelings, he might almost say of deep emotion, that he rose to ask them to drink the toast at the present time; because within the last few days it had been made known to the Craft at large that it was the intention of his lordship at the conclusion of his present year of office finally to resign into the hands of the Craft the trust twenty-six years ago they for the first time placed in his hands. If they desired to rear a monument to the Masonic fame of Lord Zetland they would have to write upon it the famous one of the great architect, "Si monumentum quarum circumspecte." If they wished to see his monument, look around. Look at the increase of the Order in numbers and its advance in public estimation, its numerous lodges, its wide-spread influence, its enlarged charities, its beneficent labours and then they would know the best proof to which they could appeal for the spirit in which Lord Zetland during that lengthy period had governed this illustrious fraternity; and, indeed, those who knew as he knew, the unwearied spirit of devotion and of zeal for the interests of the Craft in which that distinguished man had laboured with a single object—for the good of his brethren—and the advancement of the sound principles of Masonry, must be impressed with a deep sense of the loss which was about to fall on the Masons of England by the retirement of their chief; but they could not begrudge him at the close of a valued life the repose which he sought, but they would give him a double amount of esteem and affection to follow him in that retirement. In that spirit he gave them the "Health of Lord Zetland" (loud cheers).

The CHAIRMAN then proposed, "The Right Worshipful the D.P.G.M. of England, the Right Hon. the Earl de Grey and Ripon, and the rest of the Officers of the Grand Lodge past and present" (cheers). He spoke in high terms of the way in which the business of the Grand Lodge was conducted by its present staff of office bearers, and they showed, he said, that they were worthy of the trust which was reposed in them.

The Rev. Dr. SENIOR responded, and spoke of the time when he first had the pleasure of seeing the present Grand Master placed in his office, 26 years ago, and valued as the present Earl of Zetland was, he was rejoiced to believe that in their present chairman they possessed one who would fill that lofty position with great ability.

Sir H. EDWARDS, Bart., rose to propose the next toast, and was received with immense cheering, the whole company rising. The toast was "The Right Worshipful the P.G.M. of West Yorkshire, the Right Hon. the Earl de Grey and Ripon." Sir Henry said that never had he stood forward with greater satisfaction and purer pride than at that moment (loud cheers). He had to propose the health of a man who was esteemed above every other man in the craft, not only in Yorkshire, but throughout Great Britain (cheers and applause). He had the honour to propose the toast of the man who presided at that great meeting—that magnificent meeting of Freemasons (loud cheers). It was indeed a proud pleasure to him to have such a toast to propose to them, and he thanked the brethren for having placed it in his hands (cheers). No man in West Yorkshire was more highly esteemed or more deeply respected than Lord de Grey and Ripon (loud cheers). He (the noble chairman) had long been a Mason—he had long presided over this province, not only with great credit to himself, but he had done great credit to the Masons of this great riding, which will never be forgotten. He had presided over its councils with firmness, and had shown an ability which had fascinated every member. The loss of such a man to West Yorkshire would be very difficult to fill. He did not mean to say Lord de Grey was about to depart never to return, but one who would depart from them as their chief in Freemasonry (No, no). He deeply regretted to say that from infirmities and age the noble Lord Zetland was about to retire from the position of chief amongst Masons in England. A successor must be found, and who more likely for a successor than that noble lord who sat at his right hand (loud cheers oft repeated)? No man would deplore more than he did the loss of Earl Zetland to Freemasonry, and no man would be more delighted to place their present chairman in that position than he (Sir Henry) would. Earl de Grey was popular everywhere, and he would be popular still throughout the country. Again he deeply regretted the loss of Earl de Grey from West Yorkshire, but should be delighted to be associated with him in carrying on the work of Masonry in his exalted position of Grand Master (loud cheers). He was delighted to inform his lordship that he would have the votes of the entire province of West Yorkshire (cheers). The toast was drunk with Masonic honours.

The CHAIRMAN rose to reply amidst a perfect ovation, the company rising to cheer again and again. His Lordship said he had often received from the brethren of West Yorkshire proofs of their regard, but had never risen with deeper feelings of emotion to reply to the toast which had just been offered to them as he did upon this occasion, for never as it seemed to him, had they been pleased to accord to it a warmer or more cordial reception. No man could have exercised the high office which he had filled in that riding now for several years, among such a body of men as the Masons of West Yorkshire, without having become united to them by ties closer and closer (hear, hear, and applause). No man be his heart ever so cold—and his, he trusted, was not of such material (hear, hear)—but must have been warmed by that hearty zeal for the interests of Masonry, by that cordial confidence which they had displayed towards him, and by the hearty co-operation which he had received from them on every hand, for it was the happy constitution of the Craft, whether they looked to its organization in the Grand Lodge and under the Grand Master, or whether they looked to those minuter grand lodges which were spread throughout the Provinces of the country—it was their happy constitution that, while sufficient power was placed in the hands of those who presided over the councils of the Craft, they had of necessity constantly to apply to the co-operation of their brethren of every order; and without that co-operation it would be impossible for any man to conduct the government of Masonry. He had always held it to be the duty of those who were set to rule in the Craft, whatever might be the position which they held, steadily to set before them the ancient landmarks of the Order (hear) and firmly and constantly to enforce adherence to those landmarks, and the time-honoured traditions upon which the Craft was based, but at the same time always to exercise whatever authority might be placed in their hands by the confidence of their brethren or the choice of their chiefs, with an earnest desire to merit and secure the confidence of the brethren over whom they were called to rule, with an earnest and ever-present conviction that unless they could secure that confidence and the co-operation which followed it they had no hope of being able to do good to the craft. It had been in that spirit that he had endeavoured to discharge the duties of the high office that he had held in that province, and that he had learned as he watched the conduct and principles which guided the rule of his great chief, Lord Zetland—a rule which, as they now knew, was about to cease among them, and hard indeed would be the task of the man who might be chosen, whoever he might be, to succeed to such a ruler. It was only by endeavouring, however unequally, to follow the footsteps of him who was about to retire from the greatest position in the art, with the spirit that animated Lord Zetland, that any man could hope to discharge the duties of so great an office; and the more they reflected, as naturally they were led to do at such a moment, upon the past history of Freemasonry in this country, and upon the great and improved position which it now occupied here, the more deeply must every one be impressed with the duty which lay upon them in their respective spheres to demean themselves both within the walls of their lodges and to the outer world as became good and honourable Masons, for they were taught by their ceremonies of the deeper meaning which underlay the outward things of the craft; and when they learned almost now from day to day of the progress of their institutions, of the new lodges which were being added and the new members being enrolled, the greater, naturally must they feel, especially those who might be called upon to take any government of the order, the responsibility which rested upon them to maintain unsullied and unimpaired those great and noble and lovely principles upon which the order was built centuries ago, and which amidst all the changes of the past had imprinted upon their order an imperishable stamp (applause). It would ill become him to touch upon the delicate ground upon which some of the speakers had not unnaturally entered that evening. No man who felt the responsibility that attached to the office of Grand Master would put himself forward for such a post. If it should fall to the lot of any man to be called upon to fill it by the suffrages of the craft, then indeed he would be called upon to consider whether it would not be his duty to accept the office. Deep as his regret was at the loss which they were about to sustain, he felt confidence that even the loss of so great a man as him who had ruled over them for the last 26 years would not wreck the stability of Masonry, would not weaken the foundation or impair their progress, because that progress was not dependent upon the presence of any single man, however good, for those foundations had been laid in times the memory of which had almost perished, upon one eternal and enduring basis (applause).

The CHAIRMAN next gave the toast of the W.D.P.G. Master and the Officers of Provincial Gaand Lodge Past and Present, to which Bro. Bentley Shaw, replied.

The following toasts were then given and responded to:—"The Visiting P.G.O.'s from other districts," responded to by Bro. Lucas, from Lincolnshire; "The health of W.M.'s and Officers of the Lodges of Probity and St. James's," responded to by Bro. B. W. Jackson, W.M. of the Lodge of Probity, and Bro. R. Lord, W.M. of St. James's Lodge; "Success to the Masonic Temple," "The Chairman, Vice-chairman, and Members of the Building Committee," responded to by Bro. Fisher; "The Secretaries," responded to by Bros. Harry J. Franklin and Austin Roberts; "The Architects," responded to by Bros. Jackson and Horsfall; "The Visiting Brethren," responded to by Bro. Binckes, Secretary of the Boys' School, London; "The Countess de Grey and Ripon, Mrs. B. Shaw, and the Ladies," proposed by Sir H. Edwards, and responded to by the Chairman on behalf of Lady de Grey, and by Bro. Bentley Shaw; "The Distressed Masons."

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—Grateful and Comforting.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"The singular success which Mr. Epps attained by his homoeopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold by the Trade only, in $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. and 1 lb. tin-lined packets, labelled JAMES EPPS & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London.—ADV'T.

THE BLOOD PURIFIER.—Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla. Other Medical Testimony.—In speaking of the "Blood Purifier," old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla, G. C. Kernott, M.D., L.S.A. Lond., says:—"I strongly recommend it in cutaneous diseases and all impurities of the blood." March 24, 1869.—In a letter to the proprietors, June 6, 1869, Dr. Irvine, of Irvine's-town, says:—"I have been in the habit of ordering your Sarsaparilla for my patients with the best results. Send me six quarts and six mammoth bottles." For all skin diseases, for purifying the system of mercurial poisons, and building up the broken constitution it is the only safe and certain remedy.—In Bottles 2s. 6d., 4s., 6s., 7s. 6d., 11s. PRICE'S BENZODYNE,

The Great Cure for Cholera and Consumption.

A Newly-discovered principle residing in Gum Benjamin (Styrax Benzoin), the chief chemical product of which has hitherto been Benzoic Acid, well known and highly valued by medical practitioners. The great difficulty which the discoverer encountered in bringing out this important remedy was the form in which to present it to the faculty and the public, the new chemical being amorphous and incapable of crystallization. It has therefore been deemed advisable to prepare a highly-concentrated solution of the product, combining it with such adjuncts as are considered natural auxiliaries. PRICE'S BENZODYNE is stimulant, anodyne, and mechanically astringent, arresting fluxes and hemorrhages of all kinds both external and internal, possessing singular efficacy in the following diseases:—Ague, Bronchitis, Consumption, Colic, Cholera, Cold, Cough, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Debility in all its various forms, Fevers, Influenza, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Spasms, Tic-dolereux, &c., &c. PRICE'S BENZODYNE has been tried repeatedly in these cases and has never failed to cure.

It immediately relieves all pain, actually sheathing the organs with a protective matter, which defies the action of the most virulent blood-poisons, and thus PRICE'S BENZODYNE acts as the most powerful styptic now known to science, being the only effective external application for cuts, bites of insects, and all open wounds. In Cholera, as in Consumption, its effects are astounding, while Chronic Cough yields to its curative influences in a few hours.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is acknowledged by the highest Medical authority to be the most wonderful medicine yet introduced to the public; it may be taken at any time by both young and old with the most beneficial effects in all cases, leaving no bad effects like Laudanum, Chlorodyne, or any other poisonous and imperfect preparations, and can be given when no other could be tolerated.

In Consumption and Cancer its peculiarly soothing properties render it a boon to the sufferer in allaying the cough, mitigating night perspirations, and in relieving pain, &c.

In every stage of those dire diseases it gives an amount of ease not attainable by any other remedy.

In all cases of Chest Affections, as Asthma, Bronchitis, Winter Cough, Palpitation, &c., PRICE'S BENZODYNE is a very valuable medicine, producing a composed and tranquil state of the system, and quickly relieving the cough, assisting expectoration, and in a few days removing the most distressing symptoms.

In Hysteria, Epilepsy, Gout, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nerve Pains it is justly valued, as it is given with immediate benefit, relieving pain and suffering however violent the attack.

In Diarrhoea, Cholera, Alvine Discharges, spasms and colics of the intestines, &c., its effects are signal, as it never fails to check the disease.

CONSUMPTION IN ALL ITS STAGES CURED.

Coughs, Whooping Cough, Asthma, Bronchitis, Fever, Ague, Diphtheria, Hysteria, Rheumatism, Diarrhoea, Spasms, Colic, Renal and Uterine Diseases are immediately relieved by a dose.

During the period of Dentition of Children it will be found invaluable, and in curing Whooping Cough, Spasms, dispelling Flatulency, preventing Convulsive Fits, Heats, &c., to which they are so liable.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is specially adapted for Naval, Military or Traveller's medicine chests, and for Hospitals and Dispensaries everywhere.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s. and 22s., by all chemists

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.

Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills, are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary Diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL.

Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says:—"I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued Cough, Pain, and Irritation of the Chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."

This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers, in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. CROSBY, Chemist, Scarborough.

THE AMERICAN FREEMASON

is Monthly, of sixteen double-column quarto pages of entirely original matter, and translations from the French Italian, and German Masonic papers and periodicals of the day. It is devoted to the discussion of the rights of Lodges and individual Freemasons, in contradistinction to the assumptions of Grand Lodges, and the un-Masonic doctrines and arrangements of "high degrees." Its motto is—Belief in the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man. Its price is Five Shillings a year—a sum so small that no Freemason, for pecuniary reasons, need be a non-subscriber to it.

Trans-Atlantic Subscribers to the AMERICAN FREEMASON will receive it Post-paid from the Office of Publication direct, at their respective Post-offices, upon payment of the subscription to

BRO. GEORGE KENNING

8 & 4, LITTLE BRITAIN, LONDON, E.C.

All Subscriptions begin with March 15th, 1869, and end with February, 1870.

The AMERICAN FREEMASON is not the organ of any Grand Lodge; but speaking the words of truth, manhood, and independence, advocates freedom for Masonry in America, and the rights of Freemasons in their Lodges—rights which, by our Grand Lodges, in their subservency to high degrees, have been invaded, until at present they are nearly obliterated.

Subscribers in the British Colonies will please address all Subscriptions and Correspondence to J. FLETCHER BRENNAN, Editor, 114, Main-street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

TO THE NERVOUS & DEBILITATED EPILEPTIC SUFFERERS AND OTHERS.

HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA, discovered, introduced, and extensively prescribed by the late eminent Dr. MARSHALL HALL, has proved an infallible remedy (by oxydizing the blood and supplying its saline constituent) for Indigestion, Debility, Coughs, Asthma Consumption, Skin, Liver, Stomach, and Nervous Affections, more especially Epilepsy, Apoplexy, and Paralysis. The successful results of this new chemical preparation are beyond all precedent, and the extraordinary cures effected by the late discoverer, and by his successor (Dr. Sutton), in the above maladies are without a parallel in the annals of medicine; and it is confidently believed that in no case need the sufferer despair, for practical experience has demonstrated, and signal success warranted the assertion, that in 99 cases out of every 100 complete cures may be relied on.

Sold in Bottles at 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and Cases of £5 each, by

DR. SUTTON, M.D., 15, REGENT SQUARE, LONDON, W.C., and in BOLTON by PRIESTLEY, Chemist.

The following are a few Testimonials published by privilege.

Sir Charles Locock, Physician-Accoucher to Her Majesty, stated at a meeting of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society, that in sixteen cases of Epilepsy he had effected permanent cures by the use of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa.

"September 6, 1856.—The Editor of the Bury Gazette returns thanks to Dr. Hall for the great benefit he has received from his Chlorate of Potassa treatment in a severe nervous disease." Sir J. Ferguson, King's College Hospital, London, says—"I have repeatedly prescribed Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa and found it an agreeable and beneficial remedy."

Extract from the Lancet, April 1, 1857.—"In conclusion, we are of opinion that Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is a far superior remedy to the ones in general use for Nervousness, Indigestion, and Liver Complaints, when judiciously prescribed."

Sir Benjamin Brodie says—"What Chloride of Lime is to the foul sewer, Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is to the blood."

Professor Syme says—"The effects of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa in obstinate cases of disease are as astonishing as perplexing."

Dr. Lankester, the eminent coroner, says—"Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is calculated to entirely supersede iron, mercury, sarsaparilla, quinine, and cod liver oil."

Sir Philip Crampton says—"I believe there is no condition of the system that may not be benefited by Dr. Hall's Potassa." Sir T. Lawrence says—"I have found Dr. Hall's Chlorate an excellent remedy in Skin Diseases. I presume it is by oxydization."

Sir T. Watson says—"I know that it is an invaluable remedy." Sir Edward Borough, 9, Fitzwilliam-square, Dublin, certifies Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa has been of the greatest benefit to a member of his family.

The Earl of Clarendon certifies that Dr. Hall's Chlorate cured a case of indigestion of 15 years' duration.

Dr. HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA may be procured by order through any Chemist. Ask for "Dr. HALL'S Chlorate," and do not be imposed on with the common article. It is sold in Bolton by Priestley Chemist, 12, Deansgate; or it may be had direct from Dr. Hall's successor, Dr. JOHN SUTTON, M.D., 15, Regent-square, London, W.C., who undertakes the positive cure of all chronic diseases before payment.

Dr. HALL'S Chlorate is sold in MANCHESTER by JAWA, BURY, Market-street; in LIVERPOOL by PRIESTLEY, Lord-street.

N.B.—Dr. Sutton will shortly repeat his Lecture on this subject — The Lecture sent for two stamps.

OUR EXCHANGES.

The Landmark. New York.

This is another interesting addition to our list, No. 17, for 13th November, having duly reached us. Tales, poetry, sketches, and essays—well selected and replete with instruction—are comprised in this periodical. There is also an Odd Fellows' department.

The Craftsman. Hamilton, Ont., Canada.

This very handsome magazine for November is to hand. Its contents are varied, but all are good, and the arrangement is capital. We note that certain brethren in Quebec have seceded from the Grand Lodge of Canada and formed an independent Grand Lodge of their own, but, like our contemporary, until we know the whole, we refrain from comment.

The establishment of the Red Cross Order in Canada under Ill. Bros. Col. Moore and Douglas Harington is favourably noticed, and the editor promises to give "some remarks on the origin and history of the Order in a future number." Upon this subject we may observe that our valued contributor, "The Son of Salathiel," is now preparing for our columns his "Freemasonry in England," which will comprise an account of all the degrees now practised under regular authorities in this country. This may give our esteemed confrere of the Craftsman some information as to the Order of Rome and Constantine.

We heartily commend this magazine to our readers.

Die Bauhütte. Leipzig.

This weekly Masonic journal is edited by Bro. Findel, whose "History of Freemasonry" is well known, and whose connection with the German Union of Freemasons is also patent to most of our readers. With many of the objects of this association we have no sympathy, but at the same time we are pleased to admit that Bro. Findel himself is a learned and zealous Mason, and we believe him to be quite conscientious in his advocacy of extreme views.

We gladly note in the number for November 20th that the Hungarian lodges at Pesth, Temesvar, and Oedenburg contemplate establishing a Grand Orient for Hungary, an effort in which we wish them every success. Our readers will remember that we reported the opening of the last-named lodge, giving the Masonic pseudonym to the first W.M. Dr. Rosenbaum, who writes upon the subject to Die Bauhütte, is an active and well-informed member of the Craft, and we should not be surprised to hear that he has been chosen as the first Grand Master of Hungary. We are also happy to note that the German Masons have nobly assisted their Hungarian brethren in the work of forming lodges; and at the Temesvar lodge a brother from Missouri, U.S.A., one from the Grand Lodge of Ireland, and one from Verona, in Italy, lent their countenance and aid. At the Oedenburg lodge, as we have already stated, even more nationalities were represented. Bro. Carl Gross, Secretary of the German lodge "Zur Einigkeit," recited some very appropriate verses at the latter meeting.

Die Bauhütte for Nov. 27th is also full of news. The manifesto of the German lodge in Paris called "Concordia," on the principles of Freemasonry, is given at length, and there is a good article on the proposed Masonic Convention at Paris in opposition to the Œcumenical Council at Rome, by Bro. Hermann Hirsch, corresponding member of the German Union. The reports of lodge meetings are unusually copious—Kentucky, Berlin, Cothorn, Darmstadt, Dresden, Leipzig, and Worms being amongst the number.

We hope to notice all the papers and magazines we receive in due time, but the pressure on our space is now so great that for the present we must content ourselves with expressing the pleasure it affords us to learn the progress of the Craft in every part of the globe, through the medium of the many well-edited journals we are favoured with, and as with some of our distant friends Christmas will have arrived before they read these lines, we heartily wish them a pleasant time and that prosperity may attend them during the coming year.

Obituary.

BRO. THOMAS HENRY AMOS, M.W.G.M., LIBERIA.

Bro. Thomas Henry Amos, M.W. Grand Master of Masons for the Republic of Liberia, departed this life about low twelve on the 10th July, A.L. 5869, in the city of Monrovia, Republic of Liberia, in the forty-third year of his age.

Our lamented G.M. was a shining light in Masonry, and well deserved the respect and esteem accorded him by the Craft. He was made a Freemason in Philadelphia, U.S.A., and received, in order, the second and third degrees, as well as the chapteral degrees. His high opinion of Masonry evinced itself in his punctuality of attendance, and due obedience to all proper signs and summonses.

Bro. Amos applied himself so assiduously to the study of Masonic Jurisprudence that in a short time he was enabled to render great and invaluable service to the Craft in Liberia. He was twice elected to the honourable position of G.M., and had his life been spared he would have been returned to that post for the succeeding year.

A great man has fallen in Masonry, whose memory will always be respected, and whose loss is deeply regretted. We can comfort ourselves, however, with the belief that he has been transferred to the Celestial Lodge, where he will be able to work in greater peace and harmony under the immediate guidance of the G.A.O.T.U. A LIBERIAN M.M.

THE "DAILY NEWS" ON FREEMASONRY.

The bulk and growth of Freemasonry, the traditions of the Order, the meaning of its symbols, its undoubted antiquity and universality, its connexion with the secret societies of the dark ages, or with the mysteries of Greece, of Egypt, of Chaldea—all these subjects of inquiry are beyond the contemplation of the profane, and perhaps very seldom in the thoughts of the "free and accepted" themselves. The order as it exists in modern times has survived a good deal of ridicule, and has flourished without the prestige of persecution. There must be something more than a mere convivial frolic which brings together men of the most various classes, conditions, professions, opinions, and creeds—the clergyman, the lawyer, the doctor, the artist, the shopkeeper, the publican, the man-at-arms, the man of peace, the man of the world, the man of large estate, and the man of none—and unites them by a common bond of goodfellowship and a common vow of secrecy. Without pretending to know more of the "labours" of the Lodges than they are permitted to disclose, we know at least that the principles at the root of Freemasonry are Labour and Goodwill, and that nothing in the Liturgies or the symbols of the Order savours of sectarianism, inequality, or exclusive privilege. In some Continental countries, we believe, Freemasonry, under the pressure of the times and of surrounding circumstances, has become a refuge for political and revolutionary sympathies. But this is not the fault of Masonry; it is the result of the unjust suspicions in which Masonry was held by arbitrary Governments in Church and State. At the present time Freemasonry is anathematized by the dominant party in the Church of Rome. In England, however, where everything is possible and permitted except anarchy and persecution, Freemasonry has become a vast social communion, a grand neutral territory for the meeting of all sorts and conditions of men, of good-fellowship and good-will, and a vast fraternal organization of charity, which has its own schools and orphanages and other institutions of beneficence. When the Prince of Wales—of whom it must be said in simple justice that he is never wanting to good offices and good works, and that there is no pleasanter example to his countrymen of good fellowship and good company—is admitted a member of the United Grand Lodge of Freemasons of England, we feel that he is following the excellent traditions of his Royal House, and that if he should not be quite so scientific a Mason as the Duke of Sussex—for there is such a thing as "science" in the craft—he is certain to present a most agreeable and accomplished type of the Order as it exists and flourishes in England.

IMPROMPTU

Lines written by a young lady on the Skibbereen Bazaar, held on the 12th and 13th of August last, in aid of the funds for the erection of a Masonic Hall in that town, and presented by her, in the room, to the W.M. of Lodge 15.

One solitary bee ne'er filled a hive,
One coral insect never built an isle;
A toiling Hercules in vain would strive
The everlasting Pyramids to pile,
For as they frown amid the desert sands
They show the might of myriad human hands.

Joint labour can work miracles—we see
Proof of this holy truth on every side;
The lightning writes our thoughts, and thought is free;
We speed o'er earth 'gainst adverse wind and tide.
The present and the past alike can prove
The mighty power of unity and love.

Dear friends and helpers, we have met to-day
To raise a peaceful Hall of Brotherhood,
Beneath whose roof no discords shall have sway,
No strife political shall ere intrude.
The liberal man doth liberal things devise:
Let help be fully given—our Hall, D.V., shall rise.

Then let us meet in love and harmony,
Our conduct, brethren, always on the square,
The compass of our mind be charity
Including all mankind in circle fair.
Our motto and our watchword, brethren, then
Be peace on earth—peace and good will to men.

BRO. ERNEST FRÖLICH, 30°, Knight of the Order of Vasa Ambassador Extraordinary from the Swedish Court, has paid a visit to the studio of Bro. S. Rosenthal, 33°, at 2, Red Lion-square, W.C., with whom he had a long conference on masonic matters.

supplied by Bro. Clemow, and personally superintended by Bro. G. Smith, and at its conclusion honoured the customary toasts with their usual fervour. About 90 brethren partook of the banquet, and among them were P.M.'s H. Potter, H. Thompson, H. Elmes, J. Simpson, M. Haydon, W. Carpenter, T. Marshall, and Joseph Smith. Several visitors were also present, and Bros. R. Wentworth Little and F. Walters were among the number.

Lion and Lamb Lodge, No. 192.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, on Thursday, the 2nd inst., Bro. E. King, W.M., in the chair. The officers present were Bros. E. Roberts, J.W., as S.W.; Geo. Newman, as J.W.; W. Goodyer, P.M., Treas.; J. G. Marsh, P.M., Sec.; F. Trott, J.D., as S.D.; G. Abbott, I.G. There were also present, amongst a large number of other members, Bros. E. Lacy, P.M., H. Cates, P.M., Charles Hoggood, P.M.; George Kenning, P.J.W., H. Davis, E. Raffe, Chas. Arkell, R. E. Bright, C. D. Page, E. Taylor, T. Cobu, J. Glinnan, A. J. Dickenson, S. Haynes, J. R. France, W. R. Baker, W. Younger, J. Kent, J. Elliott, E. L. Roberts, B. Marsland, H. Legg, J. Harvey, P.M., W. Harwood, Chas. Cann, J. McKiernan, Dr. Bringleos, and George Parker. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, the lodge was duly opened in the first and second degrees. Bro. J. W. Marsden, being present, underwent the usual examination; the lodge was then opened in the third degree and the said brother was duly raised to the sublime degree of M.M. The lodge was then resumed in the first degree, and Messrs. H. Griffin and Thos. Fisher, being present, (after having been ballotted for and approved), were initiated into ancient Freemasonry. A ballot was also taken for Mr. A. F. Isleton for initiation, which was also unanimous. The ceremonies of raising and initiation were worked by Bro. J. G. Marsh, P.M. and Sec., in an impressive manner. A ballot was then taken for two joining members, viz., Bro. George Parker (Angel Lodge) and Bro. Dr. Bringleos (late member of the Lion and Lamb), which proved to be an unanimous election. The lodge then proceeded to the election of Master and Treasurer for the ensuing year by ballot, when Bro. Ebenezer Roberts, J.W., was elected to the high and responsible office of W.M., and Bro. W. Goodyer, P.M., (who has filled the office for many years), was re-elected Treasurer. Bro. J. G. Marsh, P.M., who has discharged the duties of Secretary, under the sign-manual of the W.M., during the last twelve months, was formally invested by the W.M. with the collar and jewel of that office. Some minor business having been disposed of, the lodge was closed in ample form and adjourned. The brethren then retired from the well-spent labours of the lodge and partook of a banquet of the most recherché description, served in Bro. Sydney Spencer's usual good style, for which the Cannon-street Terminus Hotel so deservedly recommends itself. The Lion and Lamb, as usual, was honoured with the presence of several distinguished visitors, including Bros. Magnus Ohren (33), W. C. Miller (766), H. T. Thompson (P.M. 742), A. Prince (1139), C. W. Ohitte (831), T. W. Tucker (933), A. Bryant (P.M. 192 and S.D. 12), R. W. Williams (73), T. H. Hick (9), R. H. Hall (206), and J. W. Marsden. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and elicited some very excellent speeches from the brethren of the lodge and the visitors, the W.M. not forgetting the toast on behalf of the Masonic Charities, which also met with a hearty response from the brethren by their subscribing a sum of upwards of £20 in support of the funds of the Royal Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and their Widows at the forthcoming festival. Between the toasts Bros. Harvey, Ohren, Abbott, and others greatly contributed to the pleasures of the evening by singing several very excellent songs. The proceedings at the festive board terminated with the Tyler's Toast, when the brethren, after having spent a delightful evening, retired in peace and harmony.

Lodge of Stability, No. 217.—The lodge met at Anderson's Hotel, Fleet-street, on Tuesday, 7th inst., at 5.45 p.m. Bro. Edward Hughes, W.M., in the chair. The business before the lodge was the initiation of Mr. Thomas Goodman Clappott and the election of W.M. and Treasurer for 1870. The former was satisfactorily performed by the W.M. and his officers, and Bro. James, S.W., was unanimously elected W.M., and Bro. Brodey, P.M., was re-elected Treasurer for the ensuing year. The "Stability Charities Fund" was inaugurated, and the first ballot fell to the lot of Bro. Thorpe, who gave his subscription to the Annuities Fund on Bro. P.M. Taylor's list, Bros. James, S.W.; Brodey, P.M. and Sillifant, P.M. each gave £5 on Bro. Taylor's list and he announced that the Mount Zion Chapter, No. 22, had also given him £5, which with the lodge and other subscriptions had now brought his list up to about £35, and he expressed his acknowledgments for the support he had received on this the first occasion of a steward going up from the lodge. Bros. James and Brodey returned thanks for the election. The petition of the daughter of the late Bro. Brown was signed in open lodge by the W.M. and brethren. Nothing further being offered for the good of Freemasonry in general or of Stability, No. 217, in particular, the lodge was closed in due form and with solemn prayer. Visitors, Bros. Mackey and Williams. There was no banquet.

Montefiore Lodge, No. 1017.—The installation meeting of this select lodge was held on Wednesday, December 8, at the Freemasons' Hall, W.C. The W.M., Bro. Rev. M. B. Levy, opened the lodge at half-past three, assisted by his officers Bros. S. Pollitzer, S.W., and W.M.-elect; F. S. D. Phillips, J.W.; Braham, S.D.; Bloom, J.D.; J. L. Rosenthal, I.G.; E. Palbert, P.M. Sec.; L. Jacobs, Treas.; S. V. Abrahams, P.M.; Ekel, P.M.; De Solla, P.M.; Brandon, P.M. The minutes of the last lodge were read and confirmed; Messrs. Knight and Zweigler were then balloted for, as also Mr. Julius Spier, and each ballot being unanimous in their favour, they were severally introduced and admitted into the mysteries and secrets of Freemasonry in that impressive manner usual with the Rev. W.M. Bro. Beck likewise received his second degree. The Grand Secretary, Bro. John Hervey, having been announced, he was admitted and received most heartily by the W.M. and the brethren. Bro. S. V. Abrahams, I.P.M., then presented Bro. S. Pollitzer, S.W. and, W.M.-elect to the W.M., Bro. the Rev. M. B. Levy, to receive at his hands the benefit of installation. The usual charges having been read over by the Secretary, the brethren below the chair retired, and a board of installed Masters was formed. When the brethren were again admitted Bro. S. Pollitzer was proclaimed W.M. of the Montefiore Lodge, and saluted in the three degrees. The charges and the entire ceremony were delivered by Bro. the Rev. M. B. Levy, in a manner which elicited the greatest admiration from many old P.M.'s present, who observed it was seldom that the beautiful exhortations were so impressively and solemnly rendered. The officers were then appointed as follows: Bro. Phillips, S.W.; Braham, J.W.; Bloom, S.D.; Rosenthal, J.D.; Ehrman, I.G.; De Solla, D.C.; E. Palbert, P.M. Sec., re-invested; L. Jacobs, Treas., re-elected. Immediately after the installation ceremony was completed, Bro. S. V. Abrahams, rose and said a most pleasing duty had devolved on him, which he would have preferred to have seen done by a more able speaker than himself, but as the brethren were all thoroughly satisfied and highly gratified with the talented and efficient manner in which the new I.P.M., Bro. the Rev. M. B. Levy, had performed the duties of Worshipful Master during the past two years, it needed but little for him to add, except to those who were unaware of the fact that the Rev. Bro. was the first who thought of a benevolent fund attached to the lodge, and who had succeeded by dint of perseverance and great zeal in establishing that fund, to assist members of the lodge in time of need; and he was happy to say it received the hearty support of the members, and was now in a most flourishing condition. He concluded by presenting him with a magnificent P.M. jewel of fine gold and adorned with three lustrous brilliants which had been subscribed for by the brethren. The Rev. Bro. returned his thanks in a feeling speech, and assured the brethren that he would spare no trouble or labour to assist in the good working and harmony of the lodge, and it was to him a source of great pleasure that throughout his term of office the brethren had all vied with each other in carrying out the business of the lodge with perfect harmony and unanimous good feeling. The lodge was then called off, and the brethren retired to the banqueting room where a sumptuous banquet was provided by Bro. Gosden. The musical arrangements were under the direction of Bro. E. P. Van Noorden, who was assisted by Bro. F. Elmore, Miss Mabel Brent, and others. The visitors were Bros. John Hervey, Grand Secretary; Holbrook, W.M. (185); Lazarus, P.M.; Cote, P.M.; J. The sanction of the lodge having been some time passed, granted to hold a lodge of instruction under its warrant, it was proposed that the same be held in future at Bro. On the arrival of the W.M. the ceremonies were further completed by him, and the lodge having been closed down to the first degree, was called off for the usual refreshment. On the resumption of business, Mr. Daniel Alexander Ross was duly initiated into Freemasonry, and the lodge was then closed in due form. We were much gratified by the new arrangement made by this lodge for perfecting its musical accessories. The opening and closing hymns have been arranged by the Hon. Asst. Organist to the lodge, Bro. W. Worrell, and published in very handsome style for the use of members and visitors by Bro. Kenning, of Little Britain. The assistance which this arrangement gave to the musical accompaniment was very great, and was highly appreciated by all present on the above occasion. The ensuing meeting of the lodge is appointed for Wednesday, the 12th January.

BATH.—Lodge of Honour, No. 379.—This lodge met at the Masonic Hall, Old Orchard-street, Bath, on Monday, the 13th inst., for the purpose of installing the newly-elected Worshipful Master. A tolerable attendance of brethren took part in the proceedings, amongst whom were several Provincial Grand Officers. The lodge was opened at five o'clock p.m., by the W.M. Bro. The brethren then adjourned to the Castle Hotel, where a most recherché banquet was provided for them, after doing ample justice to which, the W.M. called upon the brethren to honour the usual Masonic toasts. In replying to that of the "Visitors," Bro. James Stevens, P.M. and S.W. of a London Lodge, Macdonald 1216, took occasion to refer to the resolution of last Grand Lodge on his motion for securing greater Uniformity of Ritual. His remarks were received with much cordiality, and the co-operation of many members of this lodge in the efforts he is making was heartily accorded. The new song, "What better theme than Masonry," by Bro. Stevens, was with several others, sung in the course of the evening, and after one of the most pleasant meetings we have had the privilege to attend, the brethren separated.

MANCHESTER.—Blair Lodge, No. 815.—On Friday evening, the 10th inst., this lodge met at the Hulme Town Hall, and was honoured by the presence of Bros. Stephen Blair, the R.W.P.G.M. of this Province of E. Lancashire;

Hine, P.P.G.S.W.; Rev. Figgins, P.P.G.C.; Barker, P.E.G.T.; Kennedy, P.G.T.; Heywood, P.G.R.; Dr. Dill, P.P.G.P.; Smith, P.G.P., and others who had accepted the initiation of the W.M. The chair was occupied by Bro. James Redford, W.M., supported by W. F. Towle, I.P.M.; Worthington, S.W.; Norris, T.; W. J. Towle, Sec.; M. Robinson, Dir. of Cer., and other minor officers. There were also present many P.M.'s and brethren numbering upwards of sixty. The lodge was opened in due form, and Bro. Ellis was passed by the W.M. to a F.C. Bro. Moore was raised to the sublime degree of a M.M. by the I.P.M., and other business was transacted. The prayers throughout the various ceremonies were impressively given by the Rev. — Figgins, P.P.G.C. After a substantial repast, the customary loyal and Masonic toasts were given with appropriate remarks to each. The W.M. then proposed the health of Bro. Stephen Blair, R.W.P.G.M. of East Lancashire, and in a feeling speech, said their P.G.M. was endeared to them by his many munificent acts of benevolence, and a P.G. Mastership of firm and gentle rule with which he had governed during his office the large accession of members to the order, ensuring in a remarkable degree, that unanimity which is ever required in Freemasonry. The W.M. thanked the R.W.P.G.M. for the honour he had done them by his presence that evening. The R.W.P.G.M. in replying, thanked the brethren for the hearty reception given to him that evening. He had been connected with Masonry for forty years, and was appointed to his present office by the Earl of Zetland, twenty-three years ago, to succeed the Earl of Ellesmere, and he had been ably supported by the P.G.O.'s and brethren of his province during that time. Bro. Cheetham, P.M., proposed the health of Bro. R. Gallender, R.W. D.P.G.M., and the P.G.O.'s Past and Present. The toast was responded to by Bros. Dr. Dill, P.P.G.P., and Dr. Smith, P.G.P. The R.W.P.G.M. then proposed the toast of the W.M., and congratulated him on the way in which he did his work, and upon the success of the lodge. Bro. James Redford, the W.M., in responding, said that when initiated he was delighted to find that Freemasonry contained so many beautiful ceremonies, and that the tools which were around him daily, and with the more delicate of which he had pursued his avocations in this, his own, and in many foreign countries—that these tools and old friends were made "to paint a moral and adorn a tale." With a zealous I.P.M. and an efficient staff of officers, he had found the duties of W.M. lighter than he anticipated. In five years their numbers had increased from ten to seventy, and they had accommodation which very few lodges apart from the metropolitan Freemasons' Hall, possessed. They had a splendid suite of rooms, and in one of them could seat eight hundred people, and had every appliance on the premises for ministering to their wants. He looked forward to a glorious future for the Blair Lodge, and said it was an honour to be the W.M. of it. Bro. Kennedy, P.M. and P.G.T., gave the toast of the Masonic Charities, and said that Bro. Binckes, the able Sec. of the Boys' School, had £50 promised to that charity when he was at the Blair two meetings ago. Bro. Hine, P.M. and P.P.G.S.W., responded, and as Chairman of the Charity Committee of the Province, complained of the proposed alteration by Grand Lodge of the presentation of votes, and in a lucid speech explained how it would affect East Lancashire. Bro. Royle, Knight, and Smith agreeably enlivened the evening with songs; other speeches followed, and at an early hour, the brethren dispersed, after spending one of the pleasantest and most successful evenings in connection with the lodge since it was formed.

COCKERMOUTH.—Skiddaw Lodge, No. 1002.—The usual meeting of the above lodge was held on Tuesday week, in the Masonic Temple, Market-place, under the presidency of Bro. Robinson, W.M., Knight of the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine. Owing to the absence of the initiates on other business, the W.M. intimated that he would give the first section of the second degree, if agreeable to the brethren, which was cordially agreed to. Nothing further remained to be done for the good and welfare of Masonry, a vote of thanks was unanimously passed to the W.M. for his kindness in getting up the sections, and the lodge was closed according to ancient custom. There were present: Bros. T. F. Taylor, S.W.; E. Thwaites, Past J.W. as J.W.; Pearson, Prov. G.S.D., Treasurer; Williams, Sec.; Evening, S.D.; Lewthwaite, Allison, Brown, and W. Taylor; J. After the usual business had been transacted the lodge proceeded to the election of a W.M. for the ensuing year, the list of brethren who were qualified for the chair was read over and the ballot taken, which resulted in the unanimous election of Bro. Hall, who had efficiently filled the post of S.W. during the last two years. On the motion of Bro. Moore, the Treasurer, Bro. W. Barker, was re-elected to that office with thanks for his past services; Bro. Richard Taylor was also re-elected Tyler. It was resolved that the installation of the W.M.-elect take place at the lodge-room, on Tuesday, 21st inst., at four o'clock in the afternoon, and that a suitable banquet be provided at the King's Arms Hotel, at six o'clock. The necessary arrangements for that day's proceedings were left in the hands of Bro. Moore. The business of the evening being ended, the lodge was closed in due form.

SCARBOROUGH.—Denison Lodge, No. 1248.—This flourishing and select lodge held its regular meeting in the lodge room, Grand Hotel, on Thursday the 9th inst. The working tools were ably explained by the S.W., the duties of the Deacon (Bro. Green), were also very nicely performed, and the ceremony, being so carefully gone through by all, we are happy to state had an impressive effect on the candidate (as will be seen by his speech at the refreshment board.) Bro. J. W. Woodall, P.M., &c., announced that he had accepted the office of Steward for the Masonic Boys' School at the next election, and he warmly advocated the claims of the same, saying that he would be happy at any time to receive subscriptions from the brethren. Bro. Dr. Sloman played one or two nice airs on a new harmonium, to prove its worth to the brethren, after which they unanimously agreed to purchase it at a price of forty guineas. Five guineas were voted from the lodge funds, in aid of the widows and orphans of the fishermen who were lost in the late gale. The lodge was now closed in due form, and the brethren spent a pleasant hour at the refreshment board. The usual toasts were given and responded to, including that of the newly-initiated. In returning thanks, Bro. Foster stated he was very much obliged to the brethren for having admitted him as a member of the Denison Lodge, that he was much impressed with the ceremony, and that he had long felt that there must be something good in Masonry, and from the deep impression made upon him this evening, he should persevere, and hoped ultimately to fill a chair.

THE ROYAL ARCH.

METROPOLITAN.

Royal Jubilee Chapter, No. 72.—The installation meeting of this chapter was held on Thursday, the 9th inst., at the Horns Tavern, Kennington, when about twenty-five companions were present, amongst whom we noticed Comps. W. H. Webb, M.E.Z.; W. Platt, P.Z., H.; W. Watson, P.Z.; H. Webb, P.Z., Treas.; J. Nunn, P.Z., S.E.; W. H. Wright, E. Dodson, and several visitors: Comps. J. Thomas, P.G.D.C.; T. A. Adams, P.Z.; W. Ough, P.Z.; R. Wentworth Little, P.Z.; W. West Smith, and J. Griffin. Comp. Platt was installed as Z., and Comp. T. Foxall as H., but the J. was unable to be present. Comp. Wright was invested as S.N., and the other offices were also filled up. The chapter was then closed, and the Companions adjourned to an excellent banquet. During the evening Comp. Dodson sang in his usual inimitable style, and Comps. Griffin and West Smith gave some interesting recitations, while the M.E.Z., with his usual urbanity, favoured the Companions with his eminently descriptive "Punch." The entertainment was all that could be desired, and our only regret was that there were no exaltees upon the occasion to appreciate the bonhomie and good-fellowship of such worthy Royal Arch Masons as Comps. Thomas, Adams, Webb, Nunn, et hoc genus omne.

Beacon Chapter, No. 619, held its customary convocation at the Greyhound, Dulwich, on Thursday week. Comp. F. Walters, P.Z. (73), took the Z. chair; Comps. R. Watts, P.Z., the H.; and H. A very pleasant evening both in the chapter and at the table was spent, and the companions' enjoyment was increased by some good singing, which was given by Comps. Smith, Walters, and Deering.

The whole of the music, newly arranged for this lodge by the Organist Bro. W. Worrell, and published for the lodge by Bro. The lodge having been duly closed the brethren adjourned for refreshment, during which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and the evening enlivened by some excellent singing. Bro. Stevens sang his new Masonic song, "What better theme than Masonry," which appears to give unqualified satisfaction and to be a great success. THE name of Sir Kt. G. Kenning, P. Sov. and Prefect, was accidentally omitted from the list of members present at the last meeting of the Premier Conclave.

ROUGH AND PERFECT ASHLARS.

THE choice of good material for an edifice intended to endure is an imperative duty on the part of the architect or builder. Unsound timber, ill-burnt bricks, crumbling granite, are uncereemoniously rejected by the superintendent of the work, when he is, as he ought to be, a man of integrity and honour. The same principle should guide us in our selection of material for the construction of a temple, grander by far than any mansion or palace—a temple composed of living stones, cemented together by the bond of fraternity and affection—a temple which, in a word, is Freemasonry.

Now it cannot be gainsaid, that there is a lack of caution in the admission of candidates into the Order which is painful to all thoughtful brethren, and absolutely perilous to the stability of the institution itself. A. B. proposes C. D. for initiation, because he has met C. D. occasionally, either in business or otherwise, thinks him a good fellow, and knows nothing against his character. The brethren of A. B.'s lodge knowing him to be a fair sample of humanity, accept C. D. without the slightest inquiry. C. D. is initiated, and within a brief period he figures in the gazette as a bankrupt under "shady" circumstances, or mayhap is advertised in the "Hue and Cry," as having levanted to parts unknown with sundry incumbrances, in the shape of pieces of gold and silver, to which other parties not unreasonably fancy they have a prior claim. In other instances which have fallen under our own observation, the newly-admitted brother turns out to be an incorrigible sot, whose proclivities in that respect must, to some extent at least, have been known to his proposer. Or if he be free from those more hideous failings, he sometimes proves to be a Marplot, a thorough cynic, an unmitigated "disagreeable," never better pleased than when disturbing the harmony of the lodge and promoting dissensions amongst its members. We want stricter enquiry into the antecedents of our candidates; we want greater discrimination on the part of the proposers and seconders, and if the institution is to hold its own in the estimation of mankind, inflexible rules and regulations on these heads must be enforced by the rulers of the Craft. At present the use of the ballot-box in many English lodges is a perfect farce; "yea" being looked for by the brethren with as much certainty as they expect receipts for their subscriptions, indeed so much is this the case, that when a few bold and upright men have the courage to blackball an obnoxious candidate, vague threats are held out to them about the "Board of General Purposes," "suspension," and so forth, as if they had been guilty of some great crime.

This is contrary to one of the first principles of Freemasonry, and although we deprecate the improper use of the black ball as much as any one can, we must maintain the indefeasible right of every brother to exercise his own judgment in the selection of members of his lodge, and to reject all upon whose reputation there rests a stain of misconduct or crime. On the other hand, we would rigorously punish the Mason who betrays the great trust reposed in him, for the purpose of indulging in personal or vindictive feelings; one, for instance, who would exclude E. F., because he is proposed by G. H., or is a friend of J. L. Such a man is simply desecrating the Masonic sanctuary by the introduction of his own base passions. We are taught that "perfection is not given to man," and we can make allowances for many shortcomings and errors. We know that the high standard of morality which it is the privilege of the Masonic Order to unfold for our guidance, is one seldom—perhaps never—to be fully attained by mortal men, but we should all nevertheless strive to conform our lives and actions to its precepts, and to avoid placing stumbling-blocks before the uninitiated world.

It ought to be our constant study to demonstrate what Freemasonry really is by our own conduct; to show that the solemn ceremonies, the august rites, in which we have participated, tend to make us better men in every relation of life. A great responsibility therefore rests upon the conscience of every upright brother when he proposes what our Continental freres call a "profane" for admission to our mysteries, and nothing but a thorough conviction of the moral fitness of the neophyte should induce him to incur this responsibility. We have too many "rough ashlar," too many warped and worm-eaten planks, in the building; there are individuals in the Masonic Order now who ought never to have been admitted, and whose continued connection with a fraternity like ours is a reproach and a disgrace. If we cannot get rid of such men, let us at least be more careful for the future; let us reflect that every one who enters our portals becomes a member of a society whose principles are founded upon honour and virtue, and that the fact of his being a Freemason will entitle him to the recognition, companionship, and friendship of the best men of every clime and creed.

We have no right to admit men tainted with ignoble vices into a brotherhood of the free, the wise, and the good. We have no right to confer the inestimable privileges of our Order upon persons whose deeds will give the lie to all its teachings; we have no right to leaven the mass of truth and integrity with samples of mental and moral depravity. The desire to increase our numbers must not be allowed to sway our minds. Freemasonry does not depend upon numerical strength for its influence; nay, the reverse is the case when the material is otherwise than "perfect ashlar." This is a subject which comes home to every Mason; many must have seen with sorrow instances like those to which we refer, and it behoves all to make a vigorous effort for reform in this direction, for let us be assured that with true men as the pillars of our temple, Freemasonry can never be shaken from its lofty seat, but will remain throughout the revolving cycles of time a perfect monument of Wisdom, Strength, and Beauty.

We deeply regret to learn (from Pomeroy's New York Democrat) that our esteemed confrere of the New York Dispatch, Bro. R. D. Holmes, is seriously indisposed; but we sincerely trust soon to hear that the G.A.O.T.U. has restored him to health, and to the sphere of his useful Masonic labours.

Multum in Parbo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

I, for one, thoroughly endorse the comments of our esteemed Bro. Hughan upon the evil doings in certain lodges on the Continent English brethren have no conception of the "fantastic tricks" they play, or of the scandalous doctrines with which they seek to identify Freemasonry. It is time that some notice were taken of such flagrant violations of the ancient and fundamental laws of the Craft. VIATOR.

It is a matter for congratulation that the "unrecognised degrees" are going to amalgamate, they may then be able to lay down fixed rules for admission into each degree or order, rules to be equally binding on all. It will be, as stated in THE FREEMASON last week, a stroke of true policy if this alliance can be effected. ALPHA, 30°.

"CIPES" AND FRIENDLY SOCIETIES.

I notice a letter from "Cipes" respecting some noted Friendly Societies. Not having had time to examine into the merits of the late discussion between him and a writer styling himself "Res non Verba," I do not write now to offer any opinion on the subject; I simply desire to express my surprise at the concluding statement in the letter by "Cipes" (page 261.) He states that the "Odd Fellows, Rochabites, Foresters, Good Templars, &c., are illegal because they require an oath of secrecy from their members; but for this they would be legal." I speak as an "Odd Fellow," and most emphatically deny the statement of "Cipes." We take no "oaths" whatever, either at initiation or during the subsequent degrees; neither do the Rechabites, Foresters, or the Good Templars. That being the case according to the position laid down by "Cipes," these societies are legal. I beg to draw the attention of "Res non Verba" and "Cipes" to this view, and hope the latter will take the earliest opportunity of acknowledging his error. WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

BRO. "LEO" AND THE SCOTTISH TEMPLARS (p. 263).

Adopting the same argument as Bro. "Leo," any one who is not a Freemason at all could easily post himself up upon, and become acquainted with all its workings, and be able to discuss the whole subject as well as those that have been admitted into the Order for years. I deny this, and am ready to dispose of any man who may have "Less" notions, and dispel his fancy. I repeat, the Order of Knights Templar, as practised in Scotland, is not a Masonic degree. It may possibly owe its revival and present existence to Freemasons, but from the fact that a few cannot be admitted, clearly and distinctly proves it to be not Masonic. I can easily give the names of those admitted as members into the Order who were not Freemasons, but see no reason why their names should be paraded. CIPES.

BRO. "LEO," AND THE MAIMED, ETC. (p. 263).

Bro. "Leo" seems to dispute the very first principle adopted by Masons, whether operative or speculative or combined, when he says, "a Speculative Mason may be able to do all his needful work with a good head and a good heart." I deny this; they are unable to uphold the recognised modes of recognition, and although they number many, there is only one mode of recognition among Freemasons over the world, in which the one can know the other in the light as well as in the dark. For the maimed to recognise a Freemason in the dark is impossible. The modes of recognition admit of no variation, but are the same in all countries where Freemasonry is practised. CIPES.

BRO. W. J. HUGHAN, BRO. "LEO," AND THE LANDMARKS.

In an admirable and honourable intention to uphold the Order in its entirety and purity, Bro. Hughan alludes to the "landmarks of the Craft for centuries," while Bro. "Leo" tells us, a few lines further on, that "we have no landmarks in Speculative Freemasonry older than 1717." Perhaps Bro. W. J. Hughan would kindly for the good of the Craft settle this with Bro. "Leo." CIPES.

FREEMASONRY AND THE LAWS OF THE LAND.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER.—I have inadvertently attributed to "Cipes" the expression "Christian Order" as applied to Freemasonry, which occurs in the report of a meeting of the Mount Calvary Chapter, A. and A. Rite. I can scarcely say how the mistake happened, but as I made the blunder I crave his forgiveness.

The object of my former communication was to find fault with the sectarian principle the above words implied, and not as "Cipes" supposes with his essay on "Freemasonry and the Laws of the Land," which I read, as I do most of his writings with interest and pleasure. Neither is he quite correct in his surmise that I had "rushed into print without a due consideration of the subject," for even a superficial observer cannot fail to perceive the desire which exists amongst the most intelligent and influential members of the Craft, to Christianize, that is to sectarianize, Freemasonry. The Masonic Press shows the same tendency; read the paragraph headed "Love" in the last number of THE FREEMASON.

I am pleased to find that my antagonism to "Cipes" was only imaginary, and that I do not fight against, but with him under the same banner.

As bearing upon the same question, I would ask, can "Cipes" or any other brother inform me firstly whether a Jew, Mahometan, or Parsee, may conscientiously enter the ranks of what are (as I think erroneously) termed the higher degrees of Freemasonry? and secondly, is there anything beyond the Royal Arch entitled to be considered as part of the "Ancient and Honourable Order of Free and Accepted Masons?"

Yours fraternally,

E. GOTTHEIL.

"E.A." AND THE BYE-LAWS.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR,—I much doubt if the Bye-law quoted by E.A. in your last number, with reference to the exclusion of a member who neglects to pay his subscription, is in accordance with the Constitutions.

The method of dealing with such members has always been a difficulty, but the Book of Constitutions seems to leave no alternative to the course clearly prescribed, page 65, and much trouble has, in my experience, arisen from a deviation from the strict letter of the law.

I should recommend your correspondent to submit the Bye-law in question to our worthy Grand Secretary, for his opinion on its legality.

Yours fraternally,
P.M.

DISGRACEFUL INTOLERANCE.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I enclose the following clipping from last week's newspaper:—"Nineteen students of the Wesleyan University at Mount Pleasant, Iowa, have petitioned for the removal of a coloured student from their class."

Anything more intolerant could hardly be conceived; because the skin of one of the students happens to be darker than that of his fellows, he is therefore to be excluded! We wonder if he was the best scholar in the class? If the "cat-o'-nine-tails" had ever a duty to perform, it has it now in claiming acquaintance with the backs of these "Nineteen Students." We further ask, will there be separate classes in heaven, so that these white-skinned Wesleyans may not be contaminated by being forced to intermix with "coloured" saints? Or I, ask, will there be separated parlours in hell for classifying the differently "coloured" inmates? If the latter, these "Nineteen Students" have a bad chance (unless they "turn over a new leaf") of getting an extra shovelful or two of coals placed under their hot-plate. However, be that as it may, if there was any "removal" took place upon this "petition" we trust that the subjects of it were the aforesaid "Nineteen Students."

I am, yours fraternally,

LEO.

BRO. FINCH, P.M. (217).

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR,—In your last week's impression Bro. Finch, P.M. (217), at a meeting of the Lodge Temperance in the East, is reported to have invited the brethren from the newly-initiated to the officers, even up to the Installing Officer, to apply to him when in doubt, and he would give them the correct working.

There surely must be some error in this. Bro. Finch, I should hope, would not give utterance to such presumption and egotism; at any rate, if he did I trust it was a lapsus linguae. I should sincerely hope, however, that it is a mistake on the part of your reporter misunderstanding the remarks which fell from Bro. Finch.

I write this in no antagonistic spirit, but simply that such remarks as the above should not pass unchallenged. For the respect in which Bro. Finch is held witness the testimonials he has received—gold watch, purse of sovereigns, diamond ring, &c.—and a denial on his part, or a correction on the part of your reporter, would ease the minds of those who never heard such remarks drop from the late Bros. Peter Thompson, Barton Wilson, or our present esteemed preceptor, Henry Muggeridge.

I remain fraternally,

Your obedient servant,

P.M., 217.

ANCIENT AND MODERN MYSTERIES.

BY BRO. ROBERT WENTWORTH LITTLE,

President of the London Literary Union, Editor of "The Rosicrucian," &c.

Since writing the few remarks on the Collegia Artificum which appeared in last week's FREEMASON, I have seen in the Philadelphia "Keystone"—a very valuable organ of the Craft in America—an article from the facile pen of Bro. Albert G. Mackey, upon the same subject, which is so interesting that I gladly avail myself of the opportunity of reproducing it for the benefit of your readers. Dr. Mackey, is, I need hardly observe, a great stickler for the truth of Masonic traditions, and his "Lexicon," though not at all times reliable, contains much information of an instructive character:—

"It was, I think, the German writers on the history of the institution, such as Krause, Heldmann and some others of less repute, who first discovered, or at least first announced to the world, the connection that existed between the Roman Colleges of Architects and the Society of Freemasons.

"The theory of Krause on this subject is to be found principally in his well-known work, entitled, Die drei ältesten Kunstzirkeln der Freimaurer Bruderschaft, or 'The three oldest professional documents of the Brotherhood of Freemasons.' This work is very elaborate, for the subject is pursued with all that microscopic tenacity of enquiry so peculiar to the modes of Teutonic thinking, so that scarcely anything is left in the field to reward the investigations of subsequent gleaners.

"But while it may be difficult to add to the facts which this German antiquary has so industriously amassed, there is abundant room for discussion of the theory which he has advanced. We may admit the authenticity of his historical statements, but we may have good reason to deny or to doubt the correctness of the conclusions to which he has arrived.

"His theory is, that Freemasonry as it now exists, is indebted for all its characteristics, religious and social, political and professional, its interior organization, its modes of thought and action, and its very design and object, to the Collegia Artificum of the Romans, passing with but little characteristic changes through the Corporationen von Baukünstlern or 'Architectural Guilds' of the middle ages up to the English organization of the year 1717, so that he claims an almost absolute identity between the Roman Colleges of Numa, seven hundred years before Christ, and the lodges of the nineteenth century. We need not, according to his view, go any further back in history, nor look to any other series of events, nor trouble ourselves with any other influences for the origin and the character of Freemasonry.

"I propose in the present article to discuss the correctness of this theory, and to discover from the historical data of which we are in possession, what is the true connection between the Masonic institution and the political organizations established under the name of 'Colleges' by the second King of Rome.

"In the prosecution of such a task, the first thing to be done will be to investigate, so far as authentic history affords us the means, the true character and condition of these Roman Colleges.

"It is to Numa, the second King of Rome, that historians, following after Plutarch, ascribe the first organization of the Roman Colleges, although as Newman reasonably conjectures, it is probable that similar organizations previously existed among the Alban population, and embraced the resident Tuscan artificers. But it is admitted that Numa gave to them that form which they always subsequently maintained.

INSTALLATION OF THE PROVINCIAL GRAND MASTER OF HAMPSHIRE AND THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

There was a large and influential gathering of Freemasons at Southampton on Tuesday the 30th ult., on the occasion of the installation of the Right Worshipful Bro. W. W. B. Beach, Esq., M.P., as Provincial Grand Master of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight. The Hartley Hall had been, by permission of the Council of the institution, placed at the disposal of the brethren, of whom upwards of 250 attended to meet their Masonic Chief, including a large number of Past Prov. Grand Officers. The ceremony of installation was ably performed by the Right Worshipful Bro. the Earl of Carnarvon, Prov. Grand Master of Somersetshire; Bro. the Rev. C. Pettat, officiating as P.G. Chaplain; Bro. R. S. Hulbert as P.G.S. Warden; Bro. W. H. Ford, as P.J.G. Warden; and Bro. S. D. Forbes, P.P.G.W., Essex, as Director of Ceremonies, assisted by Bro. R. Holbrook, P.P.G.D.C., and Bro. Dr. Eagles, P.P.G.A.D.C.

At the conclusion, the P.G.M. appointed and invested his officers as follows:—Bros. C. E. Deacon (394), Deputy Prov. G.M.; W. Hickman (130), P.G.S. Warden; J. Douglas (487), P.J.G. Warden; Rev. C. Pettat (694), P.G. Chaplain; Dew (694), P.G. Reg.; M. E. Frost (487), P.G. Treas., (re-elected by the Prov. G. Lodge); J. E. Le Feuvre (130), P.G. Sec.; C. S. Woollons (309), P.G.S. Deacon; Wilkinson (359), P.G.J. Deacon; Lemon (394), P.G. Superintendent of Works; E. S. Main (903), P.G. Dir. of Ceremonies; Bettesworth (804), P.G. Asst. Dir. of Ceremonies; Caffs (35), P.G.S.B.; Bradbear (804), P.G. Org.; Rebbeck (195), P.G. Pursuivant. Bros. Snelling (76), Jones (130), De Fraine (257), G. A. Green (309), Harle (359), and Hine (394), P.G. Stewards; Bros. Dawkins (394), and Biggs (130), P.G. Tylers.

In the course of the Prov. Grand Lodge business it was referred to the Committee of Benevolence to report on a better mode of ensuring a more efficient election of Hampshire candidates to the various Masonic charities than now exists, and a proposition by Bro. J. R. Stebbing, P.G.D. of England, expressive of opinion that no future Grand Master of England should hold that office more than three successive years, was carried by a large majority.

The financial and other routine business of the Province was subsequently transacted, and the lodge was closed about four o'clock, after sitting nearly four hours.

During the ceremony of installation a special ode and a hymn for the occasion were sung by a choir composed of members of the Craft, who were under the skilful direction of Bro. F. G. Bradbear, P.M., the Prov. Grand Organist.

A sumptuous banquet was subsequently served in first-rate style by Bro. Dartuall, of Southampton, at the Victoria Assembly Rooms, Portland-terrace, at which about 200 of the brethren attended. The Prov. Grand Master presided, and was supported by the Earl of Carnarvon, Prov. Grand Master of Somerset; Bros. Wyndham Portal, P.G. Warden of England; C. E. Deacon, D.P.G.M. and P.G. Deacon of England; J. R. Stebbing, P.G. Deacon of England; John Hervey, Grand Sec.; Patten, Sec. of the Masonic Girls' School; Spiers, D.P.G.M. of Oxfordshire; Sir Nelson Rycroft, Bart., &c.

In proposing the toast, "The Queen and the Craft," the Prov. Grand Master expressed his gratification that the Prince of Wales had lately been admitted into the Fraternity, and hoped that his appreciation of what he learned on the threshold of Masonry would lead to his taking every means for being admitted into the inner precincts.

By the choir "God Save the Queen."

The Prov. Grand Master next gave "The Most Worshipful the Grand Master, the Earl of Zetland," whose signal efforts in behalf of Masonry he eulogised, and the toast having been drunk, thanks were cordially tendered to the Earl of Carnarvon, who had to leave by an early train, for the proficiency he had shown and the kindness he evinced in acting as installing master.

The EARL OF CARNARVON, who was received with great enthusiasm, made an admirable speech in reply, assuring the brethren that he at all times experienced great pleasure as a Hampshire man in meeting Hampshire men, but this feeling was greatly enhanced when he found himself amongst Hampshire masons. It had been a real personal satisfaction to him to be allowed to take part in the proceedings of that day. Interesting at all times as such a ceremony was, it was doubly interesting to him on this occasion, because the friendship existing between their Prov. G.M. and himself dated back many, many years, and he hoped and believed had grown with each year. (Applause). It was a friendship inaugurated, he might say, under the shadow of masonry, because it was under the council and tutelage of his right worshipful friend that he was induced, to his own satisfaction and comfort and never ceasing gratification, to be enrolled in the ranks of masonry (cheers). He rejoiced, therefore, if it was in his power, in however feeble a degree, to return the obligation that the Provincial Grand Master had imposed upon him in early life. (Cheers.) They would allow him, without ceremony, and without exaggeration, to congratulate them upon having as Prov. G.M., a brother who would devote his time, energy, best thoughts, and attention to the duties of the office, without stint and without fear of trouble to himself. More than this, he held there was no man in England more truly devoted to the interests of the craft, more familiar with its working, or more fitted in every way to be its exponent. (Cheers.) He thought also that he might congratulate his right worshipful friend upon entering on the rule of a province second to none in this country, whether as regards its prosperity, its wealth, the intelligence of its members, or the position which some of them took in Freemasonry. Without for one moment desiring to speak in disparagement of small provinces, he thought there were many advantages connected with large provinces like this one, and he owned he should deeply regret if ever the province of Hants abandoned the advantages which he thought its present size gave it in the Craft, as he desired to see it not only worthily represented by its Grand Master, but also by the number and strength of its lodges, securing that weight and importance, that credit and dignity, that was always due to a large and influential province, and he hoped that when his right worshipful friend had to surrender the charge he had taken that day the prosperity of the craft would be still larger in the province than it now was. (Cheers.) The great and imposing ceremony which had taken place that day ought not, he thought, lightly to pass from their recollection. To his mind it had spoken various morals. In the first place, it pointed a distinct contradiction to those calumnies and misrepresentations which masonry sometimes experienced. Those who followed the course of their proceedings, who carefully weighed all that was said and done, who took in the sense of the obligations, the promises, the professions, and the charges, must have felt that Freemasonry in England at least can never be accused, as it has been accused and vilified sometimes abroad, as the friend of anarchy and disorder—(hear, hear)—but rather that it is the sure, the loyal friend of order, of good government, of social harmony—in a word, of everything that tends to raise, to improve, and even to ennoble man—(loud cheers)—that it is loyal to the great and sacred institutions of this country, and that it is intimately bound up with those great foundations upon which all the peace and happiness, and the prosperity of society depends. (Hear, hear.) In the next place, he thought it must have suggested itself to every brother's mind who attended to the proceedings to-day that the fundamental principle was the admission of the worthiest to the highest positions in the province. That was the principle they desired to recognise, and upon which he hoped they proceeded, and it was one which should be kept steadily in view, because in the administration of a large province it was right that none should be selected but those really competent and worthy to bear rule. And in the administration and management of their individual lodges they should, he thought, diligently and carefully keep in mind that none should be admitted to the Craft unless they are likely in every sense of the word to become good Masons. (Cheers.) He cheerfully recognised the right of every lodge to admit those who might be agreeable companions, and who, from social habits and intercourse, were eligible as members of a society constituted in a great degree upon social considerations, but he also hoped that they would keep steadily before them the fact that there were certain qualities requisite in their opinion—certain principles with which they would not dispense—when they admitted any to the fellowship and membership of a lodge. (Hear, hear.) They laboured under the difficulty that the principles of Freemasonry were in a great degree secret—they were not at liberty to publish them on the housetops, nor to make them the subject of itinerant lecturing, but on the other hand they might, at least, refute the calumnies from time to time thrown out against them by showing that in their daily practice, in their constant, habitual life, they not only put forward a claim to certain great qualities and principles, but were prepared to exercise them at any cost of personal trouble and at any sacrifice, no matter what that sacrifice might be—(cheers)—and that they would act not so much in the letter as the spirit of their laws. Those who thus endeavoured to make Masonry a living reality would have an easy conscience. They would feel that in their own sphere, be it humble or be it high, they had, at least, according to their light, done their best for the promotion of that great order to which they belonged, to the welfare of which they were pledged, and, as he believed, the interests of which they all had most dearly at heart. (Loud cheers.)

"The Deputy Grand Master (Earl de Grey and Ripon) and Grand Officers" was afterwards proposed, and Bros. HERVEY, Grand Secretary, WYNDHAM PORTAL, Past G.W. of England, and J. R. STEBBING, Past G.D. of England, returned thanks. The latter proposed the health of the R.W. Prov. Grand Master of Hampshire, and took the opportunity of explaining, in reference to some annoyance which the Isle of Wight brethren felt at their province having been annexed to Hants, that so far from his having advocated the union—as had been misrepresented concerning him in some of the public papers—he had never ceased to oppose it—(hear, hear)—and as to the Hampshire Masons having exerted themselves to the same end, he ventured to say they knew nothing about it, and had nothing to do with it, and that they only desired, with himself, that nothing should disturb the kindly feeling which had ever existed between the Masons of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight. (Cheers.)

The PROVINCIAL GRAND MASTER, in acknowledgment of the toast, made reference to the same subject, and said that he himself pointed out to the Grand Master certain objections which suggested themselves to him in reference to the amalgamation of the two provinces, but the Grand Master having over-ruled them, he considered he should have been guilty of a great dereliction of duty had he not at once given way. (Hear, hear.) He was anxious to give the Island brethren every facility for exercising the privileges of Freemasonry within the Isle of Wight—(hear, hear)—and if the end would be attained by holding an additional Grand Lodge yearly or by a half-yearly meeting, he should be found heartily co-operating and doing all that he could to give the Island brethren every possible facility. From what he had seen to-day he was not sure that the interests of so important a province were efficiently served by meeting only once a year. (Hear.) If it met with the concurrence of brethren it would be his duty to ask them to meet oftener—(hear, hear)—and as he knew it would be inconvenient to many to come long distances, he should ask advice upon the subject. The right worshipful brother proceeded to dilate at some length upon the many excellent qualities of Freemasonry, and resumed his seat amid loud applause.

"The Deputy Provincial Grand Master" (Br. Deacon) was subsequently given and acknowledged, and the "Wardens and Officers of P.G. Lodge," coupled with the name of Bro. W. Hickman, as P.G. Senior Warden, was similarly honoured, and responded to by Bro. Hickman.

MASONIC FEMALE ORPHAN SCHOOL, DUBLIN.

A general meeting of the Board of Governors of this Institution was held at the School House on Tuesday, the 7th inst., when there was a numerous attendance of those entitled to be present.

The chair was taken by the Deputy Grand Master, in his capacity of Senior Vice President.

The ordinary business having been disposed of the reports from the several committees were submitted, and it was most gratifying to learn that the finances of the Institution were in such a prosperous condition. The receipts for the month were £260 7s. 2d., including £30 from Lodge 59, Belfast, and £30 from Lodge 93. William E. Gumbleton, V.P., handed in a donation of four shares (£20) in the Masonic Hall Company, which with his previous donations, amounted to £70.

The thanks of the Board were voted to Brother Gumbleton.

The Scrutineers of the ballot for the election of three pupils then presented their report, from which it appeared that of the brethren entitled to vote 182 Life Governors, 581 Annual Governors, and 286 Official Governors, had exercised the privilege. The total number of votes recorded was 3,366, as follows:—

Christina Allen	596
Jane S. Andrews	103
Anna Matilda Copeland	252
Louisa Ellis	23
Louisa M'Mullen	332
Margaret Maxwell	428
Mary E. St. P. Orr	918
Helen Mary Perry	159
Catherine Sayers	535

Mary Orr, daughter of the late Samuel Orr, M.D., of Innishannon, county Cork, Christina Allen, daughter of the late Richard Allen, Assistant Engineer, Harbour Office, Belfast, and Catherine Sayers, daughter of the late Michael Sayers, cabinet maker, Dublin, were then declared duly elected as pupils of the school.

The several Honorary Officers and Committees of the School were re-elected for 1870.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—The most beneficial Medicine.—Disease in the multifarious forms in which it assails mankind generally has its origin in some impurity, some irregularity of action, some overstrain of the vital forces or contagious matters. Nothing has yet equalled the efficacy of these balsamic pills in checking disease in, and restoring vigour to the body. They root out all the impurities from the blood, and regulate, and invigorate, every organ. Immense care is taken to secure the genuine preparation to the public, that no disappointment may be caused to all seeking health by Holloway's Pills. Their composition and careful packing prevents the impairment of their virtue by time, sea voyage or climate. They never gripe or cause any inconvenience.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.—A grateful father is desirous of sending by mail, free of charge to all who wish it, a copy of the prescription by which his daughter was restored to perfect health from confirmed Consumption, after having been given up by her physicians and despaired of by her father, a well-known physician, who has now discontinued practice. Sent to any person free.—Address O. P. Brown, Secretary, 2, King-street, Covent-garden, London.—ADV.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE THE GREAT CURE FOR COUGH

Newly-discovered principle residing in Gum Benjamin (Styrax Benzoin), well known and highly valued by medical practitioners. PRICE'S BENZODYNE is stimulant, anodyne, and mechanically astringent, arresting fluxes and hæmorrhages of all kinds both external and internal, possessing singular efficacy in the following diseases:—Bronchitis, Consumption, Colic, Cholera, Cold, Cough, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Debility in all its various forms, Spasms, &c., &c. PRICE'S BENZODYNE has been tried repeatedly in these cases and has never failed to cure.

It immediately relieves all pain, actually sheathing the organs with a protective matter, which defies the action of the most virulent blood-poisons, and thus PRICE'S BEN-ZODYNE acts as the most powerful styptic now known to science, being the only effective external application for cuts, bites of insects, and all open wounds. In Cholera, as in Consumption, its effects are astounding, while Chronic Cough yields to its curative influences in a few hours.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is specially adapted for Naval,
Military or Traveller's medicine chests, and for Hospitals and Dispensaries everywhere.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s. and 22s.,

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.

Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills, are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary Diseases.
Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL.

Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says:—"I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued Cough, Pain, and Irritation of the Chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."

This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers, in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. CROSBY, Chemist, Scarborough.

THE AMERICAN FREEMASON is Monthly, of sixteen double-column quarto pages of entirely original matter, and translations from the French Italian, and German Masonic papers and periodicals of the day. It is devoted to the discussion of the rights of Lodges and individual Freemasons, in contradistinction to the assumptions of Grand Lodges, and the un-Masonic doctrines and arrangements of "high degrees." Its motto is—Belief in the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man. Its price is Five Shillings a year—a sum so small that no Freemason, for pecuniary reasons, need be a non-subscriber to it.
Trans-Atlantic Subscribers to the AMERICAN FREEMASON will receive it Post-paid from the Office of Publication direct, at their respective Post-offices, upon payment of the subscription to with February, 1870.

The AMERICAN FREEMASON is not the organ of any Grand Lodge; but speaking the words of truth, manhood, and independence, advocates freedom for Masonry in America, and the rights of Freemasons in their Lodges—rights which, by our Grand Lodges, in their subservency to high degrees, have been invaded, until at present they are nearly obliterated.

TO THE NERVOUS & DEBILITATED EPILEPTIC SUFFERERS AND OTHERS.

HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA, discovered, introduced, and extensively prescribed by the late eminent Dr. MARSHALL HALL, has proved an infallible remedy (by oxydizing the blood and supplying its saline constituent) for Indigestion, Debility, Coughs, Asthma, Consumption, Skin, Liver, Stomach, and Nervous Affections, more especially Epilepsy, Apoplexy, and Paralysis. The successful results of this new chemical preparation are beyond all precedent, and the extraordinary cures effected by the late discoverer, and by his successor (Dr. Sutton), in the above maladies are without a parallel in the annals of medicine; and it is confidently believed that in no case need the sufferer despair, for practical experience has demonstrated, and signal success warranted the assertion, that in 99 cases out of every 100 complete cures may be relied on.

Sold in Bottles at 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and Cases of £5 each, by

DR. SUTTON, M.D., 15, REGENT SQUARE, LONDON, W.C.,
and in BOLTON by PRIESTLEY, Chemist.

The following are a few Testimonials published by privilege.
Sir Charles Locock, Physician-Acoucher to Her Majesty, stated at a meeting of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society, that in sixteen cases of Epilepsy he had effected permanent cures by the use of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa.
"September 6, 1866.—The Editor of the Bury Gazette returns thanks to Dr. Hall for the great benefit he has received from his Chlorate of Potassa treatment in a severe nervous disease." Sir J. Ferguson, King's College Hospital, London, says—"I have repeatedly prescribed Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa and found it an agreeable and beneficial remedy."

Extract from the Lancet, April 1, 1867.—"In conclusion, we are of opinion that Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is a far superior remedy to the ones in general use for Nervousness, Indigestion, and Liver Complaints, when judiciously prescribed."

Sir Benjamin Brodie says—"What Chloride of Lime is to the foul sewer, Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is to the blood." Professor Syme says—"The effects of Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa in obstinate cases of disease are as astonishing as perplexing."

Dr. Lankester, the eminent coroner, says—"Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa is calculated to entirely supersede iron, mercury, sars-parilla, quinine, and cod liver oil."

Sir Philip Crampton says—"I believe there is no condition of the system that may not be benefited by Dr. Hall's Potassa."

Sir T. Lawrence says—"I have found Dr. Hall's Chlorate an excellent remedy in Skin Diseases. I presume it is by oxydiza-tion."

Sir T. Watson says—"I know that it is an invaluable remedy."
Sir Edward Borough, 9, Fitzwilliam-square, Dublin, certifies
Dr. Hall's Chlorate of Potassa has been of the greatest benefit to a member of his family.

The Earl of Clarendon certifies that Dr. Hall's Chlorate cured a case of indigestion of 15 years' duration.

DR. HALL'S CHLORATE OF POTASSA may be procured by order through any Chemist. Ask for "Dr. Hall's Chlorate," and do not be imposed on with the common article.
It is sold in Bolton by Priestley Chemist, 12, Deansgate; or it may be had direct from Dr. Hall's successor, DR. JOHN SUTTON, M.D., 15, Regent square, London, W.C., who undertakes the positive cure of all chronic diseases before payment.

DR. HALL'S Chlorate is sold in MANCHESTER by JEW-
BURY, Market-street; in LIVERPOOL by PRIESTLEY, Lord-street.

N.B.—Dr. Sutton will shortly repeat his Lecture on this subject.—The Lecture sent for two stamps.

WARD OF ALDERSGATE. ELECTION OF COMMON COUNCILMAN.

TO THE INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE WARD OF ALDERSGATE.

GENTLEMEN,—

IN consequence of the resignation of Mr. William Bishop (one of your representatives), there is a vacancy in the Court of Common Council ; therefore, in conformity with my promise of last year, to a large number of my friends, that I would in that event occurring, offer myself as a candidate to fill the same, I now come forward relying upon your support, being well known and an inhabitant of the Ward upwards of thirty-five years.

The requisition, numerously and influentially signed, which I have lately received with many flattering assurances, and asking me to allow myself to be put in nomination on St. Thomas's Day, affords me great pleasure in acquiescing with the request.

Allow me to add that in the event of my being elected I shall feel it my duty to attend to your interests to the best of my ability, and use my energies to promote the welfare of the Ward, which will have my best attention and independent support, free from party influence.

I am, Gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

J. N. GARROD.

AT a MEETING of the SUPPORTERS of Mr. J. N. GARROD, held at SHAFTESBURY HALL, on the 14th December last, Mr. T. ILLMAN in the Chair,

It was moved by Mr. H. WATSON, seconded by Mr. T. B. FLOYD, and resolved—

“That in the opinion of this meeting, Mr. J. N. Garrod is a fit and proper person to represent this Ward in the Court of Common Council, and that this meeting pledges itself to use every exertion to secure his successful return.”

THE DUTIES, POWERS, PRIVILEGES, AND RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE MASTER OF A LODGE.

BY CIPES.

The Master of a Lodge holds a relation to the lodge similar to that which the Grand Master holds to the whole Masonic body of the country. He has similar powers and prerogatives, subordinate of course to the Grand Lodge and the Grand Master. The Master is elected annually from the body of the Craft, but generally after having served for a year or two in some of the minor offices. According to strict rule, indeed, no one should be elected to the office of Master who has not first filled the office of Warden, although this rule is sometimes dispensed with. The Master may be re-elected year after year, and this may often take place. In Scotland, the Master of a Lodge is always styled the Right Worshipful Master; the installation service is somewhat similar to what is known in Royal Arch Masonry, and in the lodges of other countries, as that of a Past Master. On entering upon the duties of his office, the Right Worshipful is installed according to the rules laid down by the Grand Lodge of Scotland, in the following manner.

The lodge having been opened in the first degree—Entered Apprentices being allowed to be present—and the tenets, &c., of the lodge placed before the retiring Right Worshipful Master, who presides at the installation of the Master-Elect, desires him to step forward to the altar, and addresses him as follows:—

BROTHER.—Having been elected by the members of your lodge to the office of Right Worshipful Master, I have much pleasure in installing you therein; but previous to your installation it is requisite that you assent to some of the charges and regulations which point out the duty of a Master of a lodge:

1. You agree to be a good man and true, and strictly to obey the moral law.

2. You agree to be a peaceable subject, and cheerfully to conform to the laws of the country in which you reside.

3. You promise not to be concerned in plots or conspiracies against Government, but patiently to submit to the decisions of the Supreme Legislature.

4. You agree to pay a proper respect to the Civil Magistrate; to work diligently, live in credit, and act honourably with all men.

5. You agree to hold in veneration the original rulers and patrons of the Order of Masonry, and their regular successors, supreme and subordinate, according to their stations; and to submit to the awards and resolutions of your brethren in Grand Lodge assembled, in every case consistent with the constitutions of the Order; and that you will not, in Scotland, practise or recognise in connection with Lodges of St. John's Masonry, any degrees except those of Apprentice, Fellow-Craft, and Master-Mason.

6. You agree to avoid private quarrels, and to guard against all intemperance and excess.

7. You agree to be cautious in your behaviour, courteous to your brethren, and faithful to your lodge.

8. You promise to respect true and faithful brethren, and to discountenance all impostors and dissenters from the original plan of the institution.

9. You agree to promote the general good of society, to cultivate the social virtues, and to propagate the knowledge of the art of Masonry, so far as your influence and ability can extend.

10. You admit that it is not in the power of any man, or body of men, to make alteration or innovation in Freemasonry.

11. You promise to submit to the M.W. the Grand Master for the time being, and to his officers when duly installed; and strictly to conform to every regulation of the Grand Lodge that is not subversive of the principles of Masonry.

12. You admit that no lodge can be constituted without a charter from a Grand Lodge, or other Supreme Body entitled to grant them, nor any countenance given to an irregular lodge, or to any person clandestinely initiated therein; and that no procession, consecration, or other ceremonial of Masons, clothed with the badges of the Order, can take place without the special licence of the Grand Lodge, or of the Provincial Grand Master of the District, or (in his absence) of his Depute or Substitute.

13. You admit that no person can be regularly made a Mason, or admitted a Mason of any lodge, without previous notice and due inquiry into his character.

14. You promise that no visitors shall be received into your lodge without due examination, or producing proper vouchers of initiation in a regular lodge.

The presiding Brother then addresses the Master Elect thus:—

Do you now, Brother, cheerfully submit to these several Charges and Regulations of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of Scotland, and promise to support them, as all good Masters have done?

The Master-Elect having signified his assent, the presiding Brother then proceeds as follows:—

Then, Brother, in consequence of the recommendation I have received of you, and your cheerful conformity to the Charges and Regulations rehearsed, and since it is the will and pleasure of the brethren of this lodge that you become Master thereof for the usual time, as they confide in your known good behaviour, and think you a fit and proper person to discharge the duties of the said office, I must inform you that you are not only to walk uprightly before God and man, and strictly to follow the rules and constitutions of Freemasonry in general, but also to adhere to the bye-laws of this lodge in particular.

You will now step forward to the Altar and take the oath de fidei, viz.:—

"I in the presence of the G. A. of the U., do solemnly promise to perform the duties of the office of R.W. Master, faithfully, zealously, and impartially, to the best of my ability, during the ensuing twelve months, unless a successor shall have been previously appointed and installed in my stead. That while in the chair, I will not permit or suffer any deviation from the ancient customs and landmarks of the Order recognised by the Grand Lodge of Scotland, nor administer, or cause to be administered, any ceremony contrary to, or subversive of our Constitutions. That I will maintain pure and unsullied the genuine tenets of the Order. That I will observe, and as far as lies in my power, strictly enforce, those Charges and Regulations to which I have now given my assent, and otherwise conscientiously perform my duty as Master of the Craft. So help me God!"

Brother,—You have been elected Master of this lodge. I invest you with this jewel belonging to that office. It consists of the Square and Compasses, an arc of a circle, and a star, representing the Sun. The Square denotes in a moral sense that you are to regulate your actions by rule and line, and to harmonise your conduct by the principles of morality and virtue; and the compasses, that although you have been called to the high position of Right Worshipful Master of this lodge you are not to rule tyrannically, but to behave courteously to the brethren. As the Compasses on the arc of a circle indicate that it is the duty of every Master to lay down plans for his workmen, so they teach that however exalted be your station in society you have certain duties to perform to those who are not so fortunate as yourself, and for the fulfilment of which you must one day give an account to the All-seeing Eye, on which, typified by the sun or star on the jewel, you ought at all times to place your reliance. The Holy Bible, which is never shut in a lodge, teaches us to love God; and unless our motives be founded on that love, and our actions spring from it, all the morality in the world is of no avail.

The Right Worshipful Master having been installed, his duties at once commence. All documents, deeds, and the whole property of the lodge are under the immediate charge of the R.W. Master, and ought to be delivered to him on his installation that he may look after them, and see that every office-bearer has the books and paraphernalia pertaining to his office. He is responsible for them, and bound to hand them over to his successor in the same condition in which he found them; due allowance, however, being made for their use during his term of office, and for any change which may have been made either by a law of the Grand Lodge or by enactment of the lodge itself duly assembled. It is the chief duty of the Right Worshipful Master to direct, govern, and instruct his brethren in all their various parts in the different departments of lodge duties. He opens and closes the lodge, he initiates all candidates on admission into the lodge; he presides in all meetings of the lodge, he represents the lodge in the Grand Lodge assembled. It is his duty also to attend all Committee Meetings of Grand Lodge and meetings of the Benevolent Fund, if in the metropolitan district; to head all deputations from the lodge on visitation to other lodges; to represent the lodge at the annual meeting of St. Andrew's Festival, in the Grand Lodge; to head it at all ceremonials, at the laying of foundation-stone, key-stones of bridges, cope-stones of buildings; to preside at any funeral lodge, and at the interment of any brother who may have given written notice of a desire to be buried with the honours of the Craft. The Master also conducts the ceremonial of installation in his lodge, and the consecration of any hall or lodge-room for the meetings of the lodge, if its place of meeting should be changed during his term of office. It may also become his right and duty to preside in Grand Lodge, at its quarterly meetings, in the absence of the Grand Master and other qualified office-bearers. This right is determined by his number on the roll, the Master having the first number being entitled to preside.

The powers of a Right Worshipful Master may be described as resembling those of the chairman of any well-regulated society; with this important difference, however, that his brethren, if they should happen to have any fault to find with him, are not entitled to become his judges, but must refer the case simpliciter to the Grand Lodge, or Provincial Grand Lodge, who alone have the power to dispose of it. No lodge can try a case as to the conduct of the Master of a lodge; it belongs to the Provincial or Grand Lodge alone to do so.

The powers of a Master of a lodge are regulated by the same landmarks which govern a Grand Master; but those of a Master of a lodge are of course inferior to those of the Grand Master. He may order anything to be done which is in keeping with the rules of the Order, and this he may do without the possibility of a challenge, except by complaint to the Grand Lodge, as already mentioned. No special meeting of the lodge can be called without his consent, although the regular meetings necessarily take place according to the bye-laws at their proper times, and for these no exercise of his authority is required. According to strict rule, a special meeting ought only to be summoned by the authority of the R.W. Master to the Secretary in writing; but in practice, this rule is often dispensed with, and given merely verbally, and the lodge is convened accordingly, which may do well enough so long as it passes unchallenged, although it may be doubted what the result would be if the legality of the meeting were called in question. There is no question, however, that any meeting, except a regular meeting held in accordance with the bye-laws, held without the authority of the Master, is illegal, informal, and unauthoritative; and any member of the brotherhood who takes part in convening such a meeting, or knowingly attends it, is liable to such punishment as the lodge when duly constituted may see fit to impose.

It is one of the privileges and rights of the R.W. Master of a lodge, that he has a seat in the Grand Lodge, and is de facto one of its members. On resignation of his office, also, he becomes a Past Master, and is entitled to be so styled, having many honours, without the actual labour of a R.W. Master. In the absence of the R.W. Master he takes the chair of the lodge, and for the time being has all the rights and privileges of the Master. The Past Master who has last held the chair, is entitled to occupy it in the absence of the Master; but after him the other Past Masters take it according to the order of seniority. In many lodges, when Past Masters have died or left the country, or have become too old ordinarily to attend the lodge, or for other reasons, one is elected who has filled the chair, and the title of Past Master is conferred on him. He is then the Past-Master of the lodge for working purposes. He is entitled to a seat on the left hand of the R.W. Master at all lodge meetings, and to wear a jewel of Past Master on his left breast. To him also the W.M. Master always addresses himself before opening or closing the lodge, to recapitulate the duties of the R.W. Master.

The responsibilities of a R.W. Master are great. To him belongs the care of all the property belonging to the lodge; he is also responsible for the instruction of all its members; he must see that they are taught the genuine principles of the Order, and that no one is allowed to introduce any innovation, that no discussions on politics are held in the lodge, and that nothing takes place contrary to the peace and harmony of the Brotherhood; finally, he is bound to transmit Freemasonry to his successors in the entirety in which he received it. These responsibilities arise necessarily from his relation to the Order and to the lodge which has called him to preside over it. They are fully recognised in all lodges, and their recognition is absolutely necessary to the welfare of the Craft.

The Master of a lodge has no despotic authority. He must observe the ancient landmarks, and the laws of the Grand Lodge and of the lodge itself. Complaint against his conduct may be made to the Grand Lodge, as already mentioned, and such a complaint will, of course, be duly considered there. The judgment pronounced upon it in Grand Lodge is final, the Grand Lodge being the Supreme Court of Freemasonry, and is binding both upon the Master and the lodge. The Master of a lodge is not entitled to overrule the lodge and to give effect to his own opinions or his personal feelings, contrary to the general judgment of the lodge in any question that comes before it. Every question properly brought before the lodge must be fairly discussed, and it is the Master's duty to see that it is so; also that the vote is fairly taken, and the mind of the brethren satisfactorily ascertained. Should the brethren in the minority not be satisfied, the Master of the lodge can in no case forbid or prevent an appeal to the Grand Lodge, if within the period of a month. He must respect and maintain the liberty and brotherly equality of the members of the lodge; and it is his duty to see that in all its meetings they enjoy to the utmost extent their privileges as Freemasons, conforming himself to the landmarks, laws, and bye-laws by which he ought strictly to regulate himself in all his conduct. Deference may possibly be paid and even unduly paid to the opinions or decisions of a Master of high rank and social position, but this is a mere incidental circumstance, and has nothing to do with the question of a Master's duties and prerogatives. It affects chiefly the lodge itself, and not the general well-being of the Order. It is, to a certain extent, natural and right that the qualifications which led to the election of a brother to the office of Master of a Lodge should also lead to the accordance of a certain amount of deference to his judgment. If in any case the members of a lodge err in this respect, the consequence of the error mainly affects themselves, as the fault itself is their own; and although the character and usefulness of the lodge may be impaired, it is probably only for a short time, and the evil may be afterwards redressed without great difficulty, and without appeal to the Grand Lodge. It is natural that deference should be paid to men of high social position, even within the lodge, notwithstanding the acknowledged equality of brotherhood, which is the pride of every Freemason; and it is right that high respect should always be accorded to the opinion of a brother, whether in the position of Master of a Lodge or not, who is notable for his high scientific attainments and mental culture. All this does not in the least degree interfere with the principles of Freemasonry, nor with the liberty and equality of the members of the Order, but is what may belong to the most democratic form of government, and what alone can give to such a form of government a consistency with the maintenance of order in the community, give it stability, and make it advantageous to the welfare of society.

The R.W. Master of a lodge is entitled at all times to reverence from the members of the lodge. Even in opposing him as to any particular question, they must be respectful in the highest degree, accord him all his titles of honour, and in their whole speech and behaviour show that they give him all the honour which these titles imply. There is no exception to this rule, not even in the case of a complaint being made against the Master to the Grand Lodge. His official dignity must all the while be fully recognised, and a constant respect to official dignity is necessary to the comfort and prosperity of every lodge. An undue regard to dignities which are not Masonic is injurious, but a proper respect to official dignity is always advantageous. Every brother when out of the lodge is entitled to all the honour proper in general society to his rank and social position; within the lodge he ought to be regarded merely as a brother, but there is the more reason that Masonic distinctions conferred by the brethren themselves should be constantly borne in mind.

CONSECRATION OF THE STABILITY CHAPTER, No. 217.

This new Chapter was constituted and consecrated on Wednesday, the 15th instant, at Anderson's Hotel, Fleet street. Comp. Henry Muggeridge, P.G.S.B., presided as Consecrating Principal, and was supported by Comps. W. R. G. Key, P.Z., 7, as H.; Rev. D. Shaboe, Z., 554, as J.; R. Wentworth Little, P.Z., 177; J. Sheppard, P.Z., 195; G. A. Taylor, P.Z., 22, M.E.Z. Designate; Wm. B. Heath, H. Designate; E. Sillifant, J. Designate; D. H. Fielder, J., 22; G. Kenning, F. Steib, R. A. Wright, T. B. Yeoman, H. Birdseye, J. Gale, J. Millikin, and J. Stoner, all of 22. The musical arrangements were conducted efficiently by Comp. T. Burdett Yeoman.

The Chapter having been opened and the Companions admitted, the Presiding Officer addressed the brethren on the nature of the meeting. The Chaplain then offered up Prayer. The acting S.E., Comp. Little, addressed the Presiding Officer, who desired him to read the Charter, which was done accordingly. The Presiding Officer then enquired if the Companions approved of the Officers named in the Charter, after which a solemn voluntary was performed on the harmonium.

The Presiding Officer (Comp. Henry Muggeridge) then delivered a splendid Oration.

An Anthem having been sung, the acting S.E. presented the Principals to the Presiding Officer, who placed them on his left.

The first portion of the "Dedication Prayer" was delivered, and was followed by the Sanctus, "Glory be to thee, O Lord," when the Presiding Officer gave the Invocation.

Three P.Z.'s, Comps. Little, Heath, and Sheppard then carried the Corn, Wine, and Oil three times round the Chapter. The Rev. D. Shaboe, acting as Chaplain, swung the censer three times round the Chapter, during solemn Music, and the second portion of the "Dedication Prayer," was given by the Presiding Officer, who then dedicated and constituted the Chapter.

The Ceremony was concluded with the well-known Anthem, commencing

"The spacious firmament on high."

Comp. Muggeridge then in a very able manner installed the three Principals into their respective chairs, and upon the companions being re-admitted, a vote of thanks was unanimously awarded to that E. Companion for the impressive and able manner in which he performed the various ceremonies.

The Chapter was then closed, and about a dozen Companions adjourned to the banquet under the presidency of the three Principals, Comps. Taylor, Heath, and Sillifant, and a very enjoyable evening was spent.

Comp. Shaboe proposed, "Prosperity to the Chapter," which was heartily responded to, and all the usual toasts were duly honoured.

We understand that the superb furniture and fittings of the Chapter were manufactured by Comp. Kenning, upon whose taste and judgment they reflect great credit.

Reports of Masonic Meetings.

THE CRAFT.

METROPOLITAN.

New Concord Lodge, No. 813.—This flourishing lodge held its usual meeting at the Rosemary Branch Tavern, Hoxton, on Friday, the 17th inst. Bro. John Hart, W.M., presided, supported by Bros. Bartlett, S.W.; Atkins, J.W.; Salisbury, S.D.; Blyth, J.D.; Wilson, I.P.M.; Boyd, P.M.; Main, P.M. and Hon. Sec.; Sinclair, D.C.; Davitt, Org.; Absell, I.G. The lodge was opened in due form, the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The ballot was then taken for Mr. Rhein who was unanimously approved. The lodge was then opened in the second degree, and Bro. Cain being a candidate for the third degree, answered the usual questions and retired. The lodge was then opened in the third degree, and Bro. Cain was raised to the sublime degree of a M.M. The lodge was then resumed to the first degree, and Bros. Taylor, Gabb and Hofbauer, being candidates for the second degree, answered the necessary questions and retired, and the lodge being resumed to the second degree, they were severally passed to the degree of F.C. The lodge was again resumed to the first degree, and Mr. Phillips being in attendance, (having been unanimously elected at the previous lodge meeting,) was regularly initiated into the mysteries and privileges of Ancient Freemasonry. Mr. Gallant was proposed and seconded to be initiated, and unanimously approved subject to the ballot next lodge night. The lodge was then closed with solemn prayer, and adjourned to an excellent supper, prepared in Bro. Gabb's usual style, and to which the brethren did ample justice. After the removal of the cloth, the usual Masonic toasts were given, the toast of the visitors being acknowledged by Bros. Bagley, 60, W. Hughes, 101, and Cook, who each expressed their gratitude to the W.M., for the manner in which he had introduced their names, and also for the very admirable manner in which he had performed the whole of the ceremonies. The evening was enlivened by some excellent singing by Bros. Taylor, Hill and Blyth, under the auspices of the Organist, Bro. Davitt who contributed much to the hilarity of the meeting. The next meeting of this lodge will take place on Friday, January 21st, 1870.

Royal Albert Lodge, No. 907.—This lodge assembled on Monday, at the Freemasons' Hall, under the presidency of the W.M., Bro. Henry J. Lewis, who was supported by all his officers, namely, Bros. J. M. Vaughan, S.W.; T. Morton, J.W.; A. E. T. Worley, S.D. and Sec.; C. Vidler, J.D., and J. Dennis, I.G. There was also a goodly array of the P.M.'s, including, Bros. J. Smith, Treas.; T. Lewis, P.G. Purst.; W. H. Farnfield, C. Chard, and J. A. Farnfield. The visitors were Bros. Boston, 90, and Turner, 186. The lodge having been duly opened, a ballot was taken for Mr. J. Pratt, and this proving unanimous, that gentleman was admitted and received the benefits of initiation. Bros. Stevenson, T. Griffiths, and R. J. Webber having shown the requisite amount of proficiency to entitle them to be passed to a F.C.'s degree, the lodge was opened in that degree, and these brethren were advanced to that grade. The other business having been transacted, the lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet table, where after the usual introductory toasts had been disposed of, the W.M. gave the "Masonic Charities," announcing that he had undertaken to represent the Royal Albert Lodge at the forthcoming festival of the Masonic Benevolent Institution, and asking the brethren to support him by their subscriptions. The W.M. nobly headed the list with ten guineas, to be divided between the male and female annuitants. Bro. Turner, of 186, following with five guineas to the females. After the paper had been handed to all the brethren, subscriptions to the amount of nearly £40 were announced.

PROVINCIAL.

ARUNDEL—Howard Lodge, No. 56.—This ancient lodge (revived about twelve years ago, after being in abeyance for a long time) evinced the most healthful vitality on Thursday last week, when, after an initiation in the presence of a goodly number of brethren, the installation ceremony was effectively and instructively performed by the Rev. Bro. George Ross, P.M. and P.G.C., who placed in the chair, according to ancient custom, Bro. G. Light, the W.M.-elect. Bros. Purnell and Adams, P.M.'s, assisted in the ceremony. The newly-installed Master afterwards invested his officers, as follow: Bros. G. Price, I.P.M.; G. S. Evershed, S.W.; Stoner, J.W.; G. Sparks, S.D.; Collins, J.D.; Gardner, Tyler; &c. After the different charges had been most impressively delivered by the installing Master (much to the gratification and instruction of many of the brethren), and the lodge had been closed, the brethren assembled at the Norfolk Hotel, where a most excellent banquet was provided by Bro. Garwood in his best style. The usual toasts were duly honoured, and an evening was spent in the utmost harmony, whilst much interesting conversation was introduced on the grand principles of Freemasonry. A more pleasant day (excepting weather) it was allowed by all the brethren could not have been spent.

SUNDERLAND.—St. John's Lodge, No. 80.—The annual meeting for the purpose of installing the W.M. and officers for the ensuing twelve months was held in the lodge room at the Queen's Hotel, Fawcett-street, Sunderland, on Tuesday, December 14th, when 108 members and visitors attended to greet the W.M.-elect. The ceremony of installation was beautifully gone through by Bro. S. J. Wade (who has for the past two years been W.M.), and he having placed Bro. Robert Dixon in the chair of K.S., that brother appointed and invested the following officers, viz., Bros. S. J. Wade, I.P.M.; M. Werner, S.D.; J. Wilson, J.D.; T. Godfordson, Treas.; R. Hodson, Sec.; J. Davison,

S.D.; T. W. Graham, J.D.; John Bell, I.G.; T. Halliday, Tyler; and Bro. W. Beattie, H. J. Turnbull, and R. Geisick, Stewards. This old and prosperous lodge will shortly remove from its present quarters to the new Masonic Hall in Toward-road, now fast approaching completion.

SCARBOROUGH.—Old Globe Lodge, No. 200.—This old established lodge held its regular meeting at the lodge-room, Old Globe Inn, Globe-street, on Wednesday, the 15th inst., when the following brethren were present:—Bro. W. Peacock, W.M.; R. H. Peacock, S.W.; D. Fletcher, J.W.; J. W. Woodall, J.P., P.M., P.S., P.G.W., Treasurer; J. F. Spurr, P.M.; H. C. Martin, P.M., P.P. G.D.C., Sec.; G. H. Walshaw, S.D.; J. Parker, J.D.; G. Ruddock, I.G.; J. Ash, Tyler; Chapman, Inskip, Grover, Houlgate, Harvey, Garnett, Hardgrove, Milner, Land, Allen, Jay, Westlake, Armitage, Mervin, Verity, and Williamson, P.M.; Visitors, Bro. Wigfield (306), W. H. Smyth, (P.M. 712), D.P.G.M., Lincoln; Prince, late of 200, and Sloman, P.P.G.O., Organist, 1248. The lodge was opened at 7.30 p.m., and the minutes were read and confirmed. Bro. Jay passed an examination in the 2nd degree, and retired, and was re-admitted and raised to the sublime degree of a Master Mason, in that most solemn and impressive manner, for which the Old Globe Lodge, has earned a reputation in the Craft; in fact the P.M.'s of this lodge never allow the 3rd degree to subside into a mere prosaic rendering of sublime language. Bro. Fletcher, J.W., explained the tracing board and working tools in a very efficient manner. The lodge was now worked down to the 1st degree. The election of the W.M. and Treasurer was the next business of the lodge, when Bro. Richard Hopper Peacock, S.W., was unanimously elected to fill the high and important office of W.M., and in making this announcement we feel bound to say that the election was founded on the real worth and personal merits of this very deserving mason, in confirmation of which we beg to give a brief outline of his merits as a citizen of Scarbro'. He has for many years been one of the working churchwardens of this borough, and from the Reverend Vicar to the poorest person, he is justly esteemed as one thoroughly acquainted with all the duties, and never found to lag in the performance thereof. As Hon. Secretary of the National Schools here, numbering about 400 scholars, he is also to be found organizing subscriptions for its benefit, in the summer getting up a trip into the country, free of expense for every scholar whose age admits of going, organizing games and amusements for the children, looking after their refreshment, and getting them all safe home, &c. In the penny savings' bank organized for the saving of the poor, we again find him as managing and general Secretary, in fact where usefulness without gain is required his valuable services are always at command. And last, certainly not least, in helping in the arrangements of concerts, &c., in aid of the Masonic charities, he has ever been untiring and remarkably useful. Thus we hail this worthy man as the W.M.-elect of the Old Globe Lodge. Bro. J. W. Woodall, P.M., &c., was re-elected Treasurer for the sixth time, an office he has always filled with great credit to himself and high satisfaction to the lodge. Hearty good wishes were expressed by the visitors for the welfare of the lodge, when it was closed in due form, and the brethren spent the remainder of the evening at the refreshment board, in their usual fraternal manner. The usual toasts were given, and cordially responded to. The health of the W.M.-elect was most enthusiastically received, and drank with due honours. The healths of the W.M. and officers were drunk, to all of whom high tributes of esteem were accorded. The healths of the visitors, coupling with it the name of Bro. Dr. Sloman, Organist 1248. In returning thanks, Bro. Sloman stated in true fraternal and Masonic language, that he should at all times be most happy to render every assistance in his power with his music, or otherwise, to the members of the lodge. Some excellent songs were sung, and warmly applauded, and the Tyler's toast brought this very enjoyable evening to a close.

BERWICK-ON-TWEED.—Lodge St. David, No. 393.—This lodge held its annual election of office-bearers last Tuesday, when Bro. John S. Macgregor was elected as Master. His appointments are—Bro. G. Moor, S.W.; R. Holmes, J.W.; John Richardson, Sec.; J. Richardson, S.D.; R. Anderson, J.D.; P. G. Muir, W. Gray, and J. Davidson, Stewards; A. Marshall, I.G. The brethren elected Bro. Hopper, Treas., and re-elected Bro. Turnbull, Tyler. The well-known qualities and forgiving disposition of Bro. J. S. Macgregor are much esteemed by the Masonic Craft all along the east coast both in England and Scotland, and the choice the lodge has made may be looked upon as a wise one. Great things may be expected in the workings and prosperity of this lodge.

SCOTLAND.

FISHERROW.—Lodge St. John, No. 112.—This lodge which has been for a number of years very silent as to Masonic workings, met on the evening of Monday 30th November, for the election and installation of office-bearers, and in consequence of a number of brethren expressing a desire to be present at the Festival of Saint Andrew, held by the Grand Lodge, which met on the same evening, determined to postpone their own Festival until Thursday evening the 18th instant. When a large number of the Craft assembled within the Musselburgh Arms Hotel, Musselburgh, where a magnificent dinner was prepared, and about thirty members of the lodge sat down to it. The cloth being removed, the lodge was then opened, and called to refreshment. The Right Worshipful Master, Bro. David Thompson, occupied the Chair, and was supported right and left by Bro. W. Mann, Senior Grand Warden of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and by Bro. Wm. Officer, R.W.M. No. 1, and Junior Grand Deacon, Grand Lodge of Scotland; Bro. A. J. Stewart, Grand Clerk of the Grand Lodge of Scotland; and Bro. Murdoch Mackenzie, Chief Grand Marshal of the Grand Lodge of Scotland; and a number of the other office-bearers and members of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, as also a number of the R.W. Masters of lodges in the surrounding districts. The Wardens of the Lodge, Bro. Thomas Carse and Bro. E. F. Edwards, occupied their own chairs. The lodge was visited during the evening by deputations from the following sister Lodges, Nos. 1, 160, 226, 291, 345, 349, 392, and 429. The R.W. Master proposed a number of routine toasts, which were replied to in a suitable manner. During the evening Bro. W. Mann, Senior Grand Warden of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, in an effective speech, proposed the health of the R.W. Master and prosperity of the Lodge St. John. Referring to its very old date, he said that he hoped all would study those excellent principles which Freemasonry had taught for many centuries, that each member would follow them out in every-day life, and continue in the adherence of them, as had been done by those in days gone by. He was certain from the excellent principles of the R.W. Master and his well known energy, that the management of the Craft and the Lodge in that district might be safely left to him. The R.W. Master replied in a neat speech, saying, that he and his office-bearers would endeavour to the utmost of their power to promote the welfare of Freemasonry in general, and of the lodge over which he had the honour to preside in particular. The healths of the Wardens was proposed by Bro. Paterson, R.W.M., No. 160, and responded to in appropriate terms. A number of toasts and sentiments followed and the evening's harmony was enlivened by numerous songs from the brethren. The lodge was then called from refreshment to labour, and closed in ample form, after an excellent evening spent in harmony, which promised much for the lodge's future success.

We are unable, however, to give the list of Officers, as our correspondent was unavoidably absent. The banquet was held at the Red Lion Hotel, and was a great success. The name of the E.C. being quite sufficient to ensure that result.

Stewart was afterwards admitted to the Princely grade, these gentlemen being about to hold the posts of M.P.S. and V.E. respectively in the St. Andrew's Conclave, No. 15. The inauguration of which is fixed for the 23rd inst. The conclave having been closed a pleasant evening was spent, the usual loyal and chivalric toasts were duly honoured, and several good songs were well rendered by Sir Kts. THE ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE.

IPSWICH.—Victoria Chapter of Rose Croix.—A meeting of the members of the Victoria Chapter of Rose Croix was held on the 13th inst., under the presidency of the M.W.S. Rev. R. N. Sanderson, 80°, sixteen brethren were present. The Chapter on this occasion was honoured by the presence of the following distinguished members of the Supreme Grand Council, viz., The Most Puissant Sovereign Grand Commander, Chas. Jno Vigne, P.G. Commander of Dorset; Lieut. Grand Commander, Henry Chas. Vernon, P.G. Commander of Worcestershire; Grand Treasurer General Capt. Natl. George Philips, P.G. Commander of Suffolk and Cambridge; and Ill. Bro. J. M. P. Montague. There were also present, Bro. John Bowater, of All Souls' Chapter, Weymouth. The Chapter having been opened in ancient form, the members of the S.G. Council were received under the Arch of Steel. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. George Steel Golding having passed the degrees up to the 17th, was admitted in due form, and received the Honour of Knighthood from the Most Puissant Sov. Grand Commander, and was afterwards invested and proclaimed. The illustrious Bro. John Emra Holmes, 31°, was balloted for, and elected a member of the Victoria Chapter. Bro. Chas. Thomas Townsend was elected M.W. Sovereign for the ensuing year. A ballot having been taken for Treasurer, Bro. G. S. Golding, was unanimously elected. A code of by-laws was passed by the brethren. Alms having been collected, the M.P. S. Grand Commander congratulated the members of the Chapter upon the manner the whole of the ceremony and business of the Chapter had been conducted. He said that he was much delighted with the precision of the work, which proved the officers of the Victoria had been well drilled. The beauty of the room, and the admirable arrangement of the whole had highly pleased the members of the Supreme Grand Council, and was far beyond anything he had ever before seen, everything appeared to be so perfectly in order. He had never heard a better code of by-laws than those that had just been passed by the members of the Chapter, and he believed they would pass the S.G. Council as the best. The Ill. Bro. concluded by thanking the members of the Victoria Chapter, in the name of the S.G. Council, for the way in which the whole arrangements had been carried out, and for the kind reception he had then and before received, and hoped he might experience the pleasure many times to come. There being no other business before the Chapter it was solemnly closed.

Multum in Parvo, or Masonic Notes and Queries.

Mr. Chambers, in his Cyclopedia, says: "Free and Accepted Masons are an eminent society or body of men, so called either from some extraordinary knowledge of masonry, or buildings, which they were supposed to be masters of, or because the first founders of this society were of this profession."

In the present time we, as "Masons," are not operative. We are a body, composed of all sects and denominations. We are bound together by a secret and mystic tie. The result is, true friendship and charity in its fullest extent. Even in the ordinary occurrences of life is not secrecy essential? And it ought to be more rigid in excluding those whose character would not bear the strictest investigation. It is very easy to be admitted into the Order, but not, unfortunately, to be so easily excluded. It, therefore, behoves all Masons never to introduce any one whose character is such that the least taint would bring discredit on our ancient and excellent institution.

ST. JOHN'S DAY.

It is well-known that when modern or speculative Freemasonry arose like the dawn of moral and intellectual light from the chaotic elements of the operative system, many of the ancient customs were retained, and many of the traditions cherished in the past were incorporated in the ritual adopted by the revivalists of 1717. All the old Masonic documents now in existence, quaint as they are in language and obscure in style, will yet prove with singular unanimity that the Craftsmen of old were professors of the Christian religion. Hence we find, notwithstanding the new-born universality of the institution, at the date of the formation of the Grand Lodge of England, several usages apparently of a sectarian character still prevailed; amongst others, the dedication of lodges to the "Holy Saint Johns," and the celebration of the St. Johns' anniversaries on the 24th Juno and the 27th December.

The Master of every English Lodge was formerly installed upon one or other of these red-letter days, and even to the present time there are in England many lodges which preserve the traditional veneration for the so-called "patron-saint" by holding their annual festivals upon St. Johns' day. We are well aware that in London the memory of such a celebration has almost died out, but inasmuch as Freemasons in other lands, and notably our Transatlantic brethren, still cling to the ancient system, it may be well to recall the doings of our fathers, and to show that we are not insensible to the proceedings of the Craft, where-soever dispersed or under whatever auspices they may choose to assemble. There cannot be a doubt that the custom of meeting at a stated period, such as one of the days dedicated to St. John, was a salutary one; it is pleasant to know that our distant friends are engaged in the same good cause at the same time with ourselves. It forms an appreciable link in the mystic chain of brotherhood, and causes our thoughts to wander beyond the narrow circle of home and country to the comprehensive sphere of our world-wide fraternity. Still we are bound to recognise, and in a certain sense, applaud the motive which induced the Grand Lodge of England in 1813 to abolish the celebration of the St. Johns' Days, and the curious plea of an ingenious brother, that this honour was paid to the saints, "not as Christians, but as eminent Masons; not as teachers of a religious sect, but as bright exemplars of all those virtues which Masons are taught to reverence and practise," would scarcely pass muster in this advanced age of Masonic scepticism. The origin of the dedication of Masonic lodges to St. John the Baptist, and St. John the Evangelist, is attributed to the circumstances narrated in the following legend:—

"From the building of the first temple at Jerusalem, to the Babylonish captivity, Freemasons' lodges were dedicated to King Solomon; from thence to the coming of the Messiah, they were dedicated to Zerubabel, the builder of the second temple; and from that time to the final destruction of the temple by Titus, in the reign of Vespasian, they were dedicated to St. John the Baptist; but owing to the many massacres and disorders which attended that memorable event, Freemasonry sunk very much into decay; many lodges were entirely broken up, and but few could meet in sufficient numbers to constitute their legality, and at a general meeting of the craft, held in the city of Benjamin, it was observed that the principal reason for the decline of Masonry was the want of a Grand Master to patronize it; they therefore deputed seven of their most eminent members to wait upon St. John the Evangelist, who was at that time Bishop of Ephesus, requesting him to take the office of Grand Master. He returned for answer, that though well-stricken in years (being upwards of ninety), yet having been in the early part of his life initiated into Masonry, he would take upon himself that office! he thereby completed by his learning what the other St. John had completed by his zeal, and thus drew what Freemasons term a line parallel; ever since which Freemasons' lodges in all Christian countries have been dedicated both to St. John the Baptist and St. John the Evangelist."

In Scotland, the Symbolic or Craft degrees are styled "St. John's Masonry;" in Ireland, every brother hails from the "Holy Lodge of St. John;" in Sweden, the "blue" degrees are under the same titular distinction, and one of the higher degrees of the Swedish rite confers upon its possessor the appellation of "Favourite Brother of St. John," while, as we intimated before, American Masons sedulously cherish the old traditions, and dedicate all their lodges to the "St. Johns" whom they consider the "two great parallel lines in Freemasonry." However, at this season of the year no matter what our faith may be, we may safely accept these personages as types of the great covenant into which every member of the Masonic fraternity has entered. Let us regard the Baptist as the type of that moral purity which we should all strive to attain, and view the Evangelist as an exemplar of the love and kindness we should entertain towards our fellow-creatures. Let us remember that another year is about to close, fraught, it may be, with memories of hours mis-spent, of opportunities wasted, or of derelictions from the line of duty; let us at this solemn period review our conduct and principles, let us determine to retrieve the past, by practising the precepts of the Craft, and by evincing to the world that our professions of faith, hope, and charity may be ripened into glorious fruit. Unity amongst the brethren—let that be our prayer—whether they bow the knee before our own altars, or worship the Great Spirit of the Universe after a different fashion—with their conscientious belief we do not, and dare not interfere, but in heart, in soul we are or ought to be one. Living as we do in an age of progress, when each year almost blots out the footsteps of its predecessor, we have, as Freemasons, especial cause to be thankful that however forms have changed, however ceremonies have altered, the great essential objects of our Craft remain unimpaired by the hand of time—and why? because they are in unison with the eternal laws of truth; because they are based upon the foundation of justice and mercy, and are practically developed by acts of charity and goodwill. While the Order is found advancing in this sublime path, all the malice of enemies, or the sneers of sceptics, can effect nothing against its stability, but when we forget the virtues of which the two Saint Johns may be regarded as types, we may fairly tremble for the duration of our venerable institution.

HONOUR TO WHOM HONOUR IS DUE.—In our report last week of Union Lodge, No. 332, Glasgow, we ought to have stated that the R.W.M., D.M., and S.M. were installed by Bro. Thomas Steward, R.W.M. Thistle and Rose Lodge, 73, and the other office-bearers by Bro. Balfour, P.M. Union Lodge, No. 332.

FREEMASONRY AND THE PAPACY.

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

DEAR SIR,—It is a well known that the Papacy as a general rule has ever been adverse to any principle which will not succumb to its dicta, hence Freemasonry has repeatedly had manifest marks of St. Peter's disapprobation, and in some cases his strongest anathemas. The Œcumenical Council includes it amongst the greatest impediments to the progress of the Papacy, and though frequently cursed, it appears, like the Phoenix, to rise from its own ashes, refreshed and clothed with additional strength and vitality. Wherever it has a footing it sups the foundations of slavery, stands foremost to liberate the captive, aims at the overthrow of despotism, is a friend to civil and religious liberty, a sworn opponent to persecution on account of religious or political differences of opinion, encourages philanthropy and brotherly love; it practises heaven-born charity, which, like its sister mercy, blesses him that gives as well as he who receives.

The brethren of France, true to their dignified character, repel the censures of the Papacy, and very properly so; the sentiment of the brethren has been elicited in the answers to a circular letter from the Grand Orient of France, the whole of which will be collected and printed in one volume for circulation amongst the Fraternity.

The Convention Extraordinary, intended to be held on the 8th inst., at Paris, has not taken place; for various reasons it was not thought advisable, but the subject will be one for the Grand Orient to discuss at its next regular meeting.

The Orient will not be true to the honourable character for which we give it credit, if it does not make a bold and unmistakable stand against any innovation, nor will Napoleon be true to those who do him and the Empire honour if he falls short of giving them his gracious countenance and support. The opinions of 201 Lodges, 24 Chapters, and 7 Councils, have been sent in response to the circular. Some not attaching sufficient importance to the Popish manifesto to induce them to meet, others would wait the issue of the Council at Rome, and not a few of the brethren now sitting in that council, who know and admire the principles of the Order, will exert an influence to check a fruitless attempt to tread under foot an institution that Pope Pius dares to assail, without violating a sacred obligation binding on him as long as he shall live.

From a communication received from the Secretary of the Grand Orient—this side of the Channel—there is little doubt but that the honour of the Grand Orient will neither be sullied by cowardice, nor will they be insensible of their rights, and how to maintain them. Napoleon will add lustre to his name by giving it his utmost countenance, and the eagle wing of France will encourage the march of progress by assisting it in every way, whilst every true Mason throughout the globe with additional inspiration will wish well to our glorious Craft.

BRO. FINCH, P.M. (217).

(To the Editor of The Freemason.)

SIR AND BROTHER,—When a student has attained the summit of his ambition in acquiring a certain amount of Masonic knowledge, I am at a loss to discover why it should be "presumption and egotism" on his part to announce his own capabilities of teaching and willingness to share with his brethren the fruits of his labours. Because there are said to be uneasy minds whose possessors never heard such and such remarks drop from A, B, or C, is that a reason why D should not "let his light so shine before men that they may see his good works," &c.? I have known Bro. Finch, P.M. (217), many years as a painstaking, persevering, and successful teacher, and a true Mason would never envy him the possession of his honourable presents, namely, gold watch, purse of sovereigns, and diamond ring.

A pupil in any art or science, when in doubt as to the correct mode of working, instinctively applies to his preceptor for guidance. Bro. Finch kindly invites his Masonic pupils to do the very same, but there he stops. He did not say at the Temperance Festival on the 1st inst., neither did your reporter represent him to have said, "he would give them the correct working," as mis-quoted by P.M., 217, in your last week's number. It would be absurd to attempt it, because impossible to achieve, in our present diversified tutelage. Each and every eminent teacher, both in and out of Masonry, uses his own particular dogma, and, until the forthcoming Grand Council places its veto upon antiquated and useless systems, and legalises modern and appropriate substitutes, Doctors in Masonry will continue to differ.

I remain, Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

P.M. NEPTUNE, 22.

ANCIENT AND MODERN MYSTERIES.

BY BRO. ROBERT WENTWORTH LITTLE,

President of the London Literary Union, Editor of "The Rosicrucian," &c.

"Numa, on ascending the throne, found the citizens divided into various nationalities, derived from the Romans, the Sabines and the inhabitants of neighbouring smaller and weaker towns, who by choice or by compulsion, had removed their residence to the banks of the Tiber. Hence resulted a disaversion of sentiment and feeling, and a constant tendency to disunion. Now, the object of Numa was to obliterate these contending elements and to establish a perfect identity of national feeling so that, to use the language of Plutarch, 'the distribution of the people might become a harmonious mingling of all with all.'

"For this purpose he established one common religion, and divided the citizens into curias and tribes, each curia and tribe being composed of an admixture indifferently of Romans, Sabines and the other denizens of Rome.

"Directed by the same political sagacity, he distributed the artisans into various guilds or corporations, under the name of Collegia, or 'Colleges.' To each collegium was assigned the artisans of a particular profession, and each had its own regulations, both secular and religious. These colleges grew with the growth of the republic, and although Numa had originally established but nine, namely, the College of Musicians, of Goldsmiths, of Carpenters, of Dyers, of Shoemakers, of Tanners, of Smiths, of Pottery, and a ninth composed of all artisans not embraced under either of the preceding heads, they were subsequently greatly increased in number. Eighty years before the Christian era they were, it is true, abolished or sought to be abolished, by a decree of the Senate, who looked with jealousy on their political influence, but twenty years afterwards they were revived and new ones established by a law of the tribune Clodius, which repealed the Senatus Consultum. They continued to exist under the empire, were extended into the provinces, and even outlasted the decline and fall of the Roman power.

"And now let us inquire into the form and organization of these Colleges, and in so doing, trace the analogy between them and the Masonic Lodges, if any such analogy exists.

"The first regulation, which was an indispensable one, was that no College could consist of less than three members. So indispensable was this rule that the expression tres faciunt collegium, 'three make a college,' became a maxim of the civil law. So rigid too was the application of this rule, that the body of Consuls, although calling each other 'colleagues,' and possessing and exercising all collegiate rights, were, because they consisted only of two members, never legally recognised as a college. The reader will very readily be struck with the identity of this regulation of the Colleges and that of Freemasonry, which with equal rigor requires three Masons to constitute a lodge. The college and the lodge each demanded three members to make it legal. A greater number might give it more efficiency, but it could not render it more legitimate. This, then, is the first analogy between the lodges of Freemasons and the Roman Colleges.

"These colleges had their appropriate officers, who very singularly were assimilated in stations and duties to the officers of a Masonic lodge. Each college was presided over by a chief or president, whose title of Magister is exactly translated by the English word 'Master.' The next officers were the Decuriones. They were analogous to the Masonic 'Wardens,' for each Decurio presided over a section or division of the college, just as in the most ancient English and in the present Continental ritual we find the lodge divided into two sections or 'columns,' over each of which one of the Wardens presided, through whom the commands of the Master were extended to 'the brethren of his column.' There was also in the Colleges a Scriba or 'Secretary,' who recorded its proceedings; a thesaurarius or 'Treasurer,' who had charge of the common chest, a tabularius, or keeper of the archives, equivalent to the modern 'Archivist,' and lastly, as these Colleges combined a peculiar religious worship with their operative labors, there was in each of them a sacerdos, or priest, who conducted the religious ceremonies, and was thus exactly equivalent to the 'Chaplain' of a Masonic lodge. In all this we find another analogy between these ancient institutions and our Masonic bodies.

"Another analogy will be found in the distribution or division of classes in the Roman Colleges. As the Masonic lodges have their Master Masons, their Fellow Crafts, and their Apprentices, so the Colleges had their Seniores, 'Elders' or chief men of the trade, and their journeymen and apprentices. The members did not, it is true, like the Freemasons call themselves 'brothers,' because this term, first adopted in the guilds or corporations of the Middle Ages, is the offspring of a Christian sentiment, but as Krause remarks, these colleges were in general conducted after the pattern or model of a family, and hence the appellation of brother would now and then be found among the family appellations.

"The partly religious character of the Roman Colleges of Artificers constitute a very peculiar analogy between them and the Masonic lodges. The history of these colleges shows that an ecclesiastical character was bestowed upon them at the very time of their organization by Numa. Many of the workshops of these artificers were erected in the vicinity of temples, and their curia or place of meeting, was generally in some way connected with a temple. The deity to whom such temple was consecrated, was peculiarly worshipped by the members of the adjacent college, and became the patron god of their trade or art. In time when the pagan religion was abolished and the religious character of these colleges was changed, the pagan gods gave way, through the influences of the new religion, to Christian saints, one of whom was always adopted as the patron of the modern guilds, which in the middle ages took the place of the Roman Colleges, and hence the Freemasons derive the dedication of their lodges to Saint John, from a similar custom among the corporation of Builders.

"These colleges held secret meetings, in which the business transacted consisted of the initiations of neophytes into their fraternity, and of mystical and esoteric instructions to their apprentices and journeymen. They were, in this respect, secret societies like the Masonic lodges.

"There were monthly or other periodical contributions by the members for the support of the college, by which means a common fund was accumulated for the maintenance of indigent members or the relief of destitute strangers belonging to the same society.

"They were permitted by the government to frame a constitution and to enact laws and regulations for their own government. These privileges were gradually enlarged and their provisions extended, so that in the latter days of the empire the Colleges of Architects especially, were invested with extraordinary powers in reference to the control of builders. Even the distinction so well known in Masonic jurisprudence between 'legally constituted' and 'clandestine lodges' seems to find a similitude or analogy here. For the Colleges which had been established by lawful authority and were therefore entitled to the enjoyment of the privileges accorded to those institutions, were said to be collegia licita, or 'lawful colleges,' while those which were voluntary associations, not authorized by the express decree of the Senate or the Emperor, were called collegia illicita, or 'unlawful colleges.' The terms licita, and illicita were exactly equivalent in their import to the legally constituted and the clandestine Lodges of Freemasonry.

"In the Colleges the candidates for admission were elected, as in the Masonic Lodges, by the voice of the members. In connection with this subject, the Latin word which was used to express the art of admission or reception is worthy of consideration. When a person was admitted into the fraternity of a College, he was said to be cooptatus in collegium. Now, the verb cooptare, almost exclusively employed by the Romans to signify an election into a College, comes from the Greek optomai, 'to see, to behold.' This same word gives origin in Greek to epoptes, a spectator or beholder, one who has attained to the last degree in the Eleusinian mysteries, in other words, an initiate. So that without much stretch of etymological ingenuity we might say that cooptatus in collegium meant 'to be initiated into a College.' This is at least singular. But the more general interpretation of cooptatus is, 'admitted or accepted in a fraternity,' and so 'made free of all the privileges of the guild or corporation.' And hence the idea is the same as that conveyed among the Masons by the title 'free and accepted.'

"Finally, it is said by Krause that these colleges of work men made a symbolic use of the implements of their art or profession, in other words, that they cultivated the science of symbolism; and in this respect, therefore, more than in any other, is there a striking analogy between the Collegiate and the Masonic institutions. The statement cannot be doubted, for as the organization of the Colleges partook, as has already been shown, of a religious character, and as it is admitted, then all the religion of paganism was eminently and almost entirely symbolic, it must follow that any association which was based upon or cultivated the religious or mythological sentiment, must cultivate also the principle of symbolism.

"I have thus briefly but succinctly shown that in the form, the organization, the mode of government, and the usages of the Roman Colleges, there is an analogy between them and the modern Masonic lodges, which is evidently more than accidental. It may be that long after the dissolution of the Colleges, Freemasonry in the establishment of its lodges, designedly adopted the collegiate organization as a model after which to frame its own system, or it may be that the resemblance has been the result of a slow but inevitable growth of a succession of associations arising out of each other, at the head of which stands the Roman Colleges.

"This problem can only be determined by an investigation of the history of these colleges, and of the other similar institutions which finally succeeded them in the progress of Architecture in Europe."

The Grand Conclave was opened in ample form, the muster roll was called, and the minutes of the last G. Conclave were read by the G.V.C. and formally confirmed.

The presentation of Sir Knight J. L. Sim, by the Grand Chancellor, on his appointment to the office of Grand Director of Ceremonies took place.

The newly-appointed Provincial Grand Commander for Madras, A. Macdonald Ritchie, B.A., attended and did homage on his appointment.

The Grand Chancellor then read the following report of the Committee:—

MOST EMINENT AND SUPREME GRAND MASTER,

The Committee of Grand Conclave has the honour to report that the progress of the Order, since last May, has been steady and satisfactory, but marked by no salient event out of the common course of business; indeed, the Order now works so regularly, that the Committee has had rarely any but routine business to transact.

It has pleased you, Sir, to appoint Sir Knight Arthur Macdonald Ritchie, B.A. Registrar of Her Majesty's High Court at Madras, to rule that Province as its Grand Commander, vice Colonel Macdonald deceased, and as Sir Knight Ritchie is at present in England, he attends to do his homage. The Very Eminent Knight Colonel Greenlaw, Provincial Grand Commander of British Burmah, now at Madras, will act as his Deputy.

The Very Eminent Knight Benjamin Bond Cabbell has, on account of his advanced age, resigned the Provincial Grand Commandery of Norfolk. That Province is therefore, for the present, in the charge of your Grand Chancellor, awaiting your pleasure.

A Warrant having been issued, as notified in the last report, constituting an Encampment in the University and town of Cambridge, the members have, by resolution, requested that their Province should be amalgamated with Suffolk, under the Very Eminent Provincial Grand Commander Captain Philips, to which petition you have been graciously pleased to assent.

You have also been pleased to constitute South Wales a Province, and place it under the command of the Provincial Grand Commander Theodore Mansel Talbot.

The King Baldwin Encampment of Belleville, in the Dominion of Canada, has been reported as revived; and a Warrant has been granted for a new Encampment at Ballarat, in the Province of Melbourne and Victoria, named the St. George.

It is very satisfactory to your Committee to be in a position to report that the diligence, intelligence, and strict adherence of your Grand Vice-Chancellor to the rules established by your Committee and Grand Conclave, have led to an improvement in the funds, notwithstanding which your Committee find, with so limited an exchequer, great difficulty in making the income meet the expenditure.

The Grand Treasurer reports the gross balance on the General Account to be £274 16s. 9d., less £156 13s. 4d., to the credit of the Almoners' Fund.

Motions for benevolences from this Fund in favour of Sir Knights Philpott, Oates, and Drouet, will be formally moved, pursuant to notice to that effect.

By Order of the Committee of Grand Conclave,
† P. MAC C. DE COLQUHOUN, Grand Chancellor.

Sir Knight M. Costa proposed, and Sir Knight G. Lambert seconded, that the report be received and adopted.

The Grand Treasurer, Sir Knight Tepper, then moved the several grants from the Benevolent Fund, which were seconded and passed.

The D.G.M. then proposed the re-election of Sir Knight Wm. Stuart, as G. Master.

Sir Knight Meymott seconded the proposition.

Sir Knight the Earl of Limerick, suggested that the election should be carried by acclamation.

The D.G.M. formally enquired if any other Knight was proposed.

Sir Knight Wm. Stuart was thereupon re-elected Grand Master by acclamation, and thanked the Grand Conclave.

The Grand Treasurer gave notice of motion for the next Grand Conclave for an alteration in the amount of dues and fees.

The Grand Almoner collected the alms.
Grand Conclave was closed in ample form.

The Rev. J. Huyshe as Grand Prior then opened a Priory of the Order of Malta, under the Banner of the Faith and Fidelity Encampment.

The following Knights then received the Mediterranean Pass and the Order of Malta.

H. W. Williams ...	Palestine Encampment.
J. Dyer	Temple Crossing.
F. W. Ramsay	Faith and Fidelity.

G. A. F. Norris	St. George's.
(G.V.C. China).
E. J. Leveson	United.
J. S. Aufrey	Calpe.
J. Keene	Pembroke.
W. S. Webster	Observance.

The Grand Master then opened the Grand Priory of the Order of Malta in ample form.

The minutes of the last Grand Priory were read and confirmed.

The report of the Committee was read as follows:—

MOST EMINENT AND SUPREME SIR,

Your Committee begs to report that the state of this Order is satisfactory, but no circumstance has arisen which calls for special remark.

By Order of the Committee of Grand Priory,
† P. MAC C. DE COLQUHOUN, Grand Chancellor.

A formal motion was made for the reception and adoption of the report.

The Grand Priory was closed in ample form.

The Banquet took place at the Freemasons' Tavern, G.M. in the chair, supported by the D.G.M.

It is due to the Grand Director of Ceremonies, Sir Knight J. L. Sim, to state that he discharged his somewhat onerous duties in a very able and creditable manner.

It was incidentally mentioned by Sir Knight Tepper, Grand Treasurer, that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales is expected to join the Order after he has been received into Royal Arch Masonry.

The diamond star of intellect; the ruby flush of valour; the snowy pearl of innocence; the sapphire light of truth—these are the jewels sought of a lofty soul.

COD LIVER OIL: ITS VARIETIES AND USES.—To all who have the misfortune either to be afflicted with pulmonary complaints or rheumatic disorders themselves, or who have friends or relations similarly visited, this little work will be especially valuable. It shows in what cases Cod Liver Oil is serviceable, how it is to be applied, and what are its virtues. It then describes the different qualities of the article that are vended, and gives the particulars in which its purity and impurity consist. Medical testimony is added to strengthen the author's positions, which are laid down clearly and precisely. Any person wishing to possess the book can have it forwarded to him by post on sending his address and a postage stamp to Mr. Seaman, 116, Lower Thames-street, London.

PROVINCE OF DURHAM.

PRESENTATION TO BRO. G. H. CROOKES, PROV. G.S.

An interesting gathering of Freemasons took place at Bro. Ramshaw's, Palatine Hotel, Sunderland, on Friday evening, December 17th, for the purpose of presenting a testimonial to Bro. Crookes, recognising in some degree the able and efficient manner in which he has performed for upwards of thirteen years the duties of Prov. Grand Secretary. Prior to the presentation Bro. Crookes was entertained to dinner. There was a large gathering of Masters, Past Masters and members of the four lodges in Sunderland. Gateshead and Bishop Auckland were also represented. The chair was very ably filled by Bro. Matthew Allison, W.M., No. 97 (Palatine), and the vice-chair by Bro. John Bell, I.G., No. 80 (St. John's). The chairman of the testimonial committee, Bro. John Trehwitt, P.M., No. 949 (Williamson), was prevented from taking part in these pleasing proceedings by severe domestic afflictions.

The cloth having been drawn, the CHAIRMAN gave in succession the following three toasts, which were duly honoured, viz., "Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen;" "Bro. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and the Royal Family;" and "The Right Hon. the Earl of Zetland, the M.W. the G.M. of England, and all Masonic powers."

The VICE-CHAIRMAN in giving the toast of the "Army, Navy, Militia, and Volunteer Forces," after referring in glowing terms to the many glorious deeds of both the Army and Navy, said it gave him extreme pleasure to witness the good feeling that now existed between the soldiers and the civil guardians of the peace. He could well remember the time when quite a different feeling existed, the soldiers frequently coming into collision with the police. The present friendly feeling was strikingly shown a week ago, when the efficient band of the borough police force played out a detachment of the 40th Regiment that had been for some months stationed here and had received orders to proceed to Ireland, and played in a detachment of the 12th that had come here to relieve the 40th. Bro. Bell at some length referred to the usefulness of the Militia and Volunteer forces, and coupled with the toast the name of Bro. A. Clay.

Bro. Councillor CLAY, J.W., No. 97 (Palatine), said although he had now ceased to hold a commission in the Militia he had much pleasure in responding to the toast. The Army and Navy would, if again called into action, practically show their foes that they were made of the same good stuff as of old, and would give as good account of the enemy as they had hitherto done. Although the wooden walls of old England were fast becoming superseded by huge armour-clad casemated batteries, the same hearts of oak manned them as did our fleets in the olden times. The Militia was very little known to most people, it was an old constitutional defence force, and supplied the regular army with many well trained men. The Volunteers spoke for themselves in the time and money they spent in preparing themselves to be ready to defend our homes if ever called on; should that time come they would not be found wanting, and he trusted their motto would ever be "Defence, not Defiance," and that of the Royal Naval Reserve "Ready, aye Ready."

The CHAIRMAN in proposing "The Mayor and Corporation of Sunderland," referred to the very efficient manner in which that body performed its various duties, and trusted that they would be successful in their present endeavours to prove to the officials in London that this river was not a creek of the Tyne, and that a town of 100,000 inhabitants, the largest in the county, was of too much importance to have its Post Office, Telegraph and Inland Revenue Offices put into a bye-street. There was, he continued, no more energetic man in the Corporation than Bro. Wiener, and he coupled his name with the toast.

Bro. Councillor WIENER, S.W., No. 80, (St. John's), was sorry the Chairman had not coupled with the toast the name of an older and more experienced member, Bro. Councillor Potts (P.M., No. 94, Phoenix), and he trusted on the next Aldermanic vacancy Bro. Potts' ability would be appreciated by the members of the Town Council and that he would receive the gown. Bro. Wiener spoke very strongly and feelingly of the shabby way in which the Post Office officials were endeavouring to treat this important Port, while they were going to spend £15,000 in a neighbouring town. The Corporation, backed as they were by the feelings of the whole town, would leave no stone unturned to prevent the perpetration of such a piece of injustice.

The Chairman then called upon Bro. S. J. WADE, P.M., No. 80, (St. John's), to make the presentation, which he did as follows:—

Bro. Chairman, Vice-Chairman, and Brethren, the constant worker who toils with brain and hand is the true worshipper of the G.A.O.T.U., and in no organization, society, or confederacy is this more seen than in the Craft where all men meet on the same level—peer and peasant, rich and poor, learned and unlearned in our lodges meet and commingle. No one has done more for the Craft than the friend and brother who is to-night our guest, and you will agree with me that there is a true philosophy of life for those who win their way with manly stroke. We meet with in our brother every good and manly feeling, there is a genuine good ring in all his actions; we may say of him as has been said of the inhabitants of the Emerald Isle—there is that kindliness, cheerfulness, courtesy and manly bearing that we all admire, and which are distinguishing characteristics of every good Mason. In every society much depends upon the Secretary, and when I tell you that since Bro. Crookes was first appointed Prov. G.S., the number of lodges in the province has increased from 12 to 19. The opening of all these additional lodges, except one (when he was abroad), he attended, as well as the opening of two R.A. Chapters, and that he has been present on every important occasion in the province during the past 13 years, as well as in other provinces, I need not tell you the time and money it has cost him. Oft called upon by our Prov. G.M. for his advice, of the value of that advice and of the ability he has brought to bear in the discharge of the important duties of his office, we need no further evidence than his recent appointment for the 14th time. This brilliant assemblage also testifies to the great satisfaction he has given for so long, and how he is respected for his work's sake. A man is a good Mason who knows himself, who can subdue his passions and his will, who stands fast in the liberty that makes him free; such a man is our brother. I have great pleasure, Bro. Crookes, in presenting you, in the name of the subscribers, with this watch and chain; may the watch be a faithful monitor of the moments as they pass, and every time you look upon it may your heart speak faithfully to its maker. I have also pleasure in handing to you the jewel and clothing of a Prov. G.S., and trust that for many years to come you will live to wear them spotless, and when the bright colour of this ribbon shall become faded and the gold tarnished with age, you will still be spared to give us your advice and assistance. I am sure that no act of yours will dim the brightness of this Jewel, and am convinced that in whatever work your hand may be engaged or your brain may dictate, your actions will be nothing but honourable; you will do nothing to sully the clothing we have pleasure in seeing you wear. I further beg your acceptance of this little trinket (a ring) as a present for your only child, whom, I hope, will be a green spot in your life's old age, and a help and assistance in your declining years. May you live long and enjoy every happiness, and when summoned to the Grand Lodge above may we all meet you there and again enjoy your society. Bro. Wade concluded by proposing the health of Bro. Crookes in the following words,

Fill high: for whatsoever the liquor may be
The glasses the brim should run o'er,
Let every true brother take it from me
If he never drank a bumper before.

The toast was received and responded to most enthusiastically and with continued rounds of cheering.

Bro. CROOKES on rising to respond received a complete ovation. After the applause had somewhat subsided he proceeded, with considerable emotion, to say: It has been frequently remarked that out of the fulness of the heart the mouth speaketh, but at times the heart is so full and overflowing that the mouth cannot find words to give utterance to the feelings. Such, brethren, is my case on the present occasion. I never felt so bashful and so timid as I now do, and my earnest wish is that I may ever continue to prove myself worthy of those adornments you have now presented me with, and which, should I live to be as old as Methusalem, I shall always feel great pride in wearing, and will never forget your great kindness. Succeeding as Prov. G.S. an old and esteemed brother, the late Alderman Crossby—at the time of my appointment a young man and a young Mason, the W.M.-elect of St. John's Lodge, although I had only been three years initiated—I from the first endeavoured to satisfactorily fulfil the duties of the office, but without ever expecting that for fourteen times I should receive the appointment from our respected Prov. G.M. No one can but feel proud in holding office under a Prov. G.M. who is second to none in the kingdom, and who is the friend and confidential adviser in Masonic matters of the Grand Master of England. I have ever felt a pride, wherever I might be, in being connected with a province that stands so high in the Masonic world and has contributed so nobly to the different Masonic charities. Much of the praise you have bestowed upon me is due to the harmonious working of the province under the rule of Bro. Fawcett, and to his prompt attention to all matters connected therewith which it has been my duty as Secretary from time to time to bring before his notice. It has ever been with me a work of love to meet brethren, and if my humble efforts to promote the welfare of the Craft have met with your approval it is more than I could hope for, and if at times in attending lodges and other meetings I have neglected the real business of life, I have been amply repaid by the help I have often had from others, and am more than a hundred-fold repaid by your kindness on the present occasion. So long as I live, even should time change the colour of these ornaments, I will endeavour to merit a continuance of the good opinion you have conceived of me, and when this apron is worn out with constant wearing, may I still enjoy your good and kind wishes; and when the G.A.O.T.U. summonses us from this sublimary abode, may we meet above when time shall be no more. You will excuse me saying more, but every time I refer to this beautiful watch I shall remember your kindness, and before sitting down I must say how specially thankful I am that you have remembered a very near and dear relative—my only child. My mother is now, I am sorry to say, in the "sere and yellow leaf," but her grand-daughter (along with myself), will long remember this evening with pleasure, and think of their old Masonic friends, and constantly pray the G.A.O.T.U. to spare you all for many years to come in health, strength, happiness, and prosperity.

Bro. MARK DOUGLASS, P.M., No. 80, (St. John's), proposed "The Testimonial Committee," and expressed the great delight he felt in being present. He coupled with the toast the name of Bro. Hudson, the Secretary of the Committee.

Bro. ROBERT HUDSON, S.W., No. 949, (Williamson), expressed the pleasure he felt at all times in assisting any movement in connection with the Craft, and he felt a special pleasure on this occasion, the recipient being so well worthy of the testimonial.

The CHAIRMAN proposed "The Visitors" from a distance, coupling Br. Garthorne's name with the toast.

Bro. MICHAEL GARTHORNE, No. 1121, (Wear Valley Lodge, Bishop Auckland), spoke of the pleasure he always felt in meeting Bro. Crookes. He knew him well, both as a Mason and a sportsman, and in both he was very good.

Other toasts followed, and the proceedings were agreeably varied by the singing of different brethren. Altogether it was one of the pleasantest reunions there has been in Sunderland for a long time, and that is a great deal in a town so noted for frequent large and harmonious gatherings of the Fraternity.

The New Vade Mecum (invented and manufactured by Charles H. Vincent, optician, of 23, Windsor-street Liverpool) consists of a telescope well adapted for tourists, &c., to which is added an excellent microscope of great power and first-class definition, quite equal to others sold at ten times the price. Wonderful as it may seem, the price of this ingenious combination is only 3s. 6d., and Mr. Vincent sends it (carriage free) anywhere, with printed directions, upon receipt of post-office order or stamps to the amount of 3s. 10d.—ADVT.

BREAKFAST.—EPPE'S COCOA.—Grateful and Comforting.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"The singular success which Mr. Eppe attained by his homoeopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Eppe has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold by the Trade only, in $\frac{1}{2}$ lb., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. and 1 lb. tin-lined packets, labelled JAMES EPPE & CO., Homoeopathic Chemists, London.—ADVT.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Colds, Coughs, Shortness of Breath.—These corrective remedies are infallible for those pectoral complaints, which neglected, often end in asthma, bronchitis, or consumption. The Ointment well rubbed upon the chest and back, penetrates the skin, is carried directly to the lungs, whence it expels all impurities. All the blood in the body constantly passes through the lungs, and there the circulation is subjected to the searching, soothing, and purifying effects of this incomparable unguent, which should be aided by judicious doses of the pills, and assisted by a plain, well regulated diet to be found fully explained in the "directions for use" which are alike intelligible to the learned and the simple.—[ADVT.]

THE BLOOD IN OLD AGE.—As age advances, the blood becomes thin and cloudy—or, in a full habit, thick and cloudy. The failing of the powers of life requires extra nutrition and support, and the blood yielding the excess required is soon overcharged with carbon, which gives to it the cloudy appearance. Being then impure, day by day the vitiated matter increases, and the body suffers from a thousand ailments. "The Blood Purifier"—Old Dr. Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla—supplies the extra nutrition to the blood, and restores to it its florid hue, and then the progress of decay is arrested, and the ailments disappear; man lives out his days, and the sunset of life is unattended with suffering. Testimonials with each bottle from the Hon. the Dean of Lismore, General Wm. Gilbert, of the Indian Army; and Rev. Francis Monck, of "The Gospel Evangelist." Ordered also by the Apothecaries' Hall, London. Sold by all Druggists, in bottles 2s. 6d., 4s., 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 11s. Pills and Ointment each in boxes 1s. 11d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d.—Caution, Get the red and blue wrappers, with the Old Doctor's head in the centre. No other genuine.—ADVT.

THE NECESSITY OF A GOOD MASTER.

FROM THE GERMAN.

It is a question of great importance for the Order of Freemasonry to have excellent Masters; if Masonry shall not vanish entirely, if the educated man shall not pass us with contemptuous sneer, then cast out, without regard to person, usage, vanity, age or independence, all such spiritless, unuseful and pensionable Masters, and choose men of intelligence and eloquence; men of truly moral worth and capacity, to conduct a meeting, to exhort, to exalt, and to excite interest for our Order. A Master of a Lodge must have a fountain of spiritual intellect; he need not have, in the profane world, an important position, but he must be able to talk to mind and heart; he must possess poetical fancy, in order to give the Masonic Ritual that working, fanciful expression of life, which is necessary to make the dead clay a living, breathing being. There are plenty of educated men in the Masonic who keep away entirely from the meetings, for the above-named reason.

But there are yet lodges which have at present smart Masters; and it is easily to be seen, that there the educated people are the best lodge members, as the intellect will attract intelligence. In Prussia, where Freemasonry enjoys a temporary special protection; in Saxony, where the intellect of olden times is blooming yet; in some of the free Hanse towns, Bremen, Hamburg, Lubeck, Frankfort-on-the-Main, where once important men sowed the seed in lodges, whose healthful fruit is gathered yet—there you find intelligent, educated and worthy Masters, by whose writings much good has come into publicity. Around a good Master you will find assembled always the intelligent powers, and the dead clay becomes a living being.

But, I am sorry to say, this is not the case in most lodges. Most of the lodges sicken and die away because they have incompetent officers. The solemn and time-honoured usages of Freemasonry dwindle down in the hands of such people to a solemn play, which thinking people cannot find taste in. Instead, now, that the lodge should teach and awake sparks of moral and virtuous intelligence in the hearts of their members, the deep thinking man passes by sneering; and the middle class of society admires the dead clay as a communicated secret, which they dare not touch, thinking that there is hid behind it the image of Isis, as a promise of higher degree. Or they find their good humour and comfort in the lodge-room, talk to old friends, rest from every-day toil and care, make a nice nap, and the solemn notes of our ceremonies pass their ear like a bell sounding on a quiet Sunday morning in the country, far, far off in the distance.

The Masters of Lodges complain generally, where the attending and visiting of lodges is not influenced by motives from outside, about the cooling down of the Masonic zeal, as after the few first years of new and unimpaired hope the visit diminishes, many an educated man staying away already after the first couple of times, and the large mass of regular attendants are so-called passive members; that is, men who come at the regular hour, and either with a strange solemnity put on their regalia and wait with silent awe the call to open the lodge, or sit down with good ease and talk about the day's news; but those are never able to open their mouths in the lodge, not even to take the place of an absent officer; they become alive and stirring at the lodge-table, without having courage enough to give a toast.

If I visit a lodge, I expect that, like the preacher in the pulpit, the Master shall have prepared himself; or if absent, put other capable men in his place to represent the Masonic spirit. The lodge shall be my Masonic church, where I associate as man with man, and not as believers with those of the same creed, to be exalted and stirred up to better exercise of that noblest of principles, Humanity. I expect in a lodge, by the communion with brethren, by the solemn usage of ancient symbolic ceremonies, by the eloquent word of the orator, to be inspired with higher and purer joy and will to do good, in which I cannot be instructed in the outside world, where I would be disturbed by material influences. These, for the hour spent in my lodge, shall put me in a society of men who have left before the tyled door all small matters of life, as it is our design to be in the same relation to God, as our first parents were before their fall—pure and without soil.

From such a visit to a lodge, I will take home with me something real—a fresher moral power, a purer love, a more ready charity, a purer, better joy of good and human nature. But does it meet my expectation if I enter a lodge-room, and am forced to hear, for hours in succession, old stories of Masonry, antiquated catechising full of stupidity, even very often city and village news and letters to no purpose; or to listen when a young clerk or mechanic is requested to repeat a forced written composition about some Masonic matter. Do I find real interest in it, when I see initiating, passing, and raising where all solemnity is getting lost, because no one knows his ritual. Everywhere is confusion, and each one is getting more confused by being dreadfully afraid of hurting his dignity by a wrongly-pronounced word. A more select choice of officers would be more profitable and forcible to the fame and honour of a lodge.

Its motto is—Belief in the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man. Its price is Five Shillings a year—a sum so small that no Freemason, for pecuniary reasons, need be a non-subscriber to it. CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR.

Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills, are too often invoked to give relief in Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary Diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

SELECT TESTIMONIAL.

Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says:—"I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued Cough, Pain, and Irritation of the Chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment for this disease."

This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold by all respectable Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers, in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, and wholesale by JAS. M. CROSBY, Chemist, Scarborough.

"* Invalids should read Crosby's Prize Treatise on "Diseases of the Lungs and Air-Vessels," a copy of which can be obtained gratis of any respectable Chemist.

THE NEW MUSICAL PITCH.

COLLARD MOUTRIE has just invented, perfected, and secured by Royal Letters Patent, an important improvement in the manufacture of Pianofortes, by which the Pitch is raised to the Philharmonic or lowered to that of the French normal diapason in an instant, at the option of the performer. This invention can be applied to any Pianoforte. The Profession, Amateurs, Musical Critics, Musical Public, and the Trade are invited to witness its utility and effect, between the hours of Eleven and Four, at the Manufactory, 77, Southampton-row, Russell-square. Established 1849.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE—THE GREAT CURE FOR COUGH

A Newly-discovered principle residing in Gum Benjamin (Styrax Benzoin), well known and highly valued by medical practitioners. PRICE'S BENZODYNE is stimulant, anodyne, and mechanically astringent, arresting fluxes and hemorrhages of all kinds both external and internal, possessing singular efficacy in the following diseases:—Brouchitis, Consumption, Colic, Cholera, Cold, Cough, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Debility in all its various forms, Spasms, &c., &c. PRICE'S BENZODYNE has been tried repeatedly in these cases and has never failed to cure.

It immediately relieves all pain, actually sheathing the organs with a protective matter, which defies the action of the most virulent blood poisons, and thus PRICE'S BENZODYNE acts as the most powerful styptic now known to science, being the only effective external application for cuts, bites of insects, and all open wounds. In Cholera, as in Consumption, its effects are astounding, while Chronic Cough yields to its curative influences in a few hours.

PRICE'S BENZODYNE is specially adapted for Naval, Military or Traveller's medicine chests, and for Hospitals and Dispensaries everywhere.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s. and 22s., by all chemists.
